What's o'clock, Francis?

93

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

[Exit.]

Prince. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman! His industry is upstairs and downstairs; his eloquence the parcel of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percy's mind, the Hotspur of the north; he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife 'Fie upon this quiet life! I want work'. 'O my sweet Harry,' says she 'how many hast thou kill'd to-day?' 'Give my roan horse a drench' says he; and answers 'Some fourteen,' an hour after, 'a trifle, a trifle'. I prithee call in Falstaff; I'll play Percy, and that damn'd brawn shall play Dame Mortimer his wife. 'Rivo!' says the drunkard. Call in ribs, call in tallow.

Enter FALSTAFF, GADSHILL, BARDOLPH, and PETO; followed by FRANCIS with wine.

108

Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! Marry and amen! Give me a cup of sack, boy. Ere I lead this life long, I'll sew nether-stocks, and mend them and foot them too. A plague of all cowards! Give me a cup of sack, rogue. Is there no virtue extant? [He drinks. 113]

Prince. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter, pitiful-hearted Titan, that melted at the sweet tale of the sun's? If thou didst, then behold that compound. 116

Fal. You rogue, here's lime in this sack too! There is nothing but roguery to be found in villainous man; yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it. A villainous coward! Go thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt; if manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring. There lives not three good men unhang'd in England, and one of them is fat and grows old. God help the while! A bad world, I say. I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or anything. A plague of all cowards, I say still. 127

Prince. How now, woolsack! What mutter you?

Fal. A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You Prince of Wales! 132

Prince. Why, you whoreson round man, what's the matter?

Fal. Are not you a coward? Answer me to that—and Poin's there? 136

Poins. Zounds, ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, by the Lord, I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee coward! I'll see thee damn'd ere I call thee coward; but I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders—you care not who sees your back. Call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! Give me them that will face me. Give me a cup of sack; I am a rogue if I drunk to-day. 145

Prince. O villain! thy lips are scarce wip'd since thou drunk'st last.

Fal. All is one for that. [He drinks] A plague of all cowards, still say I.

Prince. What's the matter? 150

Fal. What's the matter! There be four of us here have ta'en a thousand pound this day morning.

Prince. Where is it, Jack? Where is it?

Fal. Where is it! taken from us it is: a hundred upon poor four of us. 155

Prince. What, a hundred, man?

Fal. I am a rogue if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have scap'd by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet, four through the hose; my buckler cut through and through; my sword hack'd like a hand-saw—ecce signum! I never dealt better since I was a man—all would not do. A plague of all cowards! Let them speak; if they speak more or less than truth, they are villains and the sons of darkness. 165

Prince. Speak, sirs; how was it?

Gads. We four set upon some dozen—

Fal. Sixteen at least, my lord.

Gads. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound. 170

Fal. You rogue, they were bound, every man of them; or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

Gads. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us—

Fal. And unbound the rest, and then come in the other. 176

Prince. What, fought you with them all?

Fal. All! I know not what you call all, but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of radish. If there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legg'd creature. 181

Prince. Pray God you have not murd'ered some of them.

Fal. Nay, that's past praying for: I have pepper'd two of them; two I am sure I have paid—two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou knowest my old ward: here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me— 189

Prince. What, four? Thou saidst but two even now.

Fal. Four, Hal; I told thee four.

Poins. Ay, ay, he said four.

Fal. These four came all afront, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado but took all their seven points in my target, thus. 195

Prince. Seven? Why, there were but four even now.

Fal. In buckram.

Poins. Ay, four, in buckram suits.

Fal. Seven, by these hilts, or I am a villain else.

Prince. [Aside to Poins] Prithee, let him alone; we shall have more anon. 201

Fal. Dost thou hear me, Hal?

Prince. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

Fal. Do so, for it is worth the list'ning to. These nine in buckram that I told thee of— 205

Prince. So, two more already.

Fal. Their points being broken—

Poins. Down fell their hose.

Fal. Began to give me ground; but I followed me close, came in foot and hand, and with a thought seven of the eleven I paid. 211

Prince. O monstrous! eleven buckram men grown out of two!

Fal. But, as the devil would have it, three misbegotten knaves in Kendal green came at my back and let drive at me—for it was so dark, Hal, that thou couldst not see thy hand. ²¹⁷

Prince. These lies are like their father that begets them—gross as a mountain, open, palpable. Why, thou clay-brain'd guts, thou knotty-pated fool, thou whore-son, obscene, greasy tallow-catch— ²²¹

Fal. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? Is not the truth the truth?

Prince. Why, how couldst thou know these men in Kendal green, when it was so dark thou couldst not see thy hand? Come, tell us your reason; what sayest thou to this? ²²⁷

Poins. Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

Fal. What, upon compulsion? Zounds, an I were at the strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! If reasons were as plentiful as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I. ²³³

Prince. I'll be no longer guilty of this sin; this sanguine coward, this bed-presser, this horse-back-breaker, this huge hill of flesh— ²³⁶

Fal. 'Sblood, you starveling, you eel-skin, you dried neat's-tongue, you bull's pizzle, you stock-fish—O for breath to utter what is like thee!—you tailor's yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing tuck! ²⁴⁰

Prince. Well, breathe awhile, and then to it again; and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, hear me speak but this.

Poins. Mark, Jack. ²⁴⁴

Prince. We two saw you four set on four, and bound them and were masters of their wealth. Mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down. Then did we two set on you four; and, with a word, out-fac'd you from your prize, and have it; yea, and can show it you here in the house. And, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roar'd for mercy, and still run and roar'd, as ever I heard bull-calf. What a slave art thou to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say it was in fight! What trick, what device, what starting-hole, canst thou now find out to hide thee from this open and apparent shame? ²⁵⁶

Poins. Come, let's hear, Jack; what trick hast thou now?

Fal. By the Lord, I knew ye as well as he that made ye. Why, hear you, my masters: was it for me to kill the heir-apparent? Should I turn upon the true prince? Why, thou knowest I am as valiant as Hercules; but beware instinct—the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter: I was now a coward on instinct. I shall think the better of myself and thee during my life—I for a valiant lion, and thou for a true prince. But, by the Lord, lads, I am glad you have the money. Hostess, clap to the doors. Watch to-night, pray to-morrow. Gallants, lads, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellowship come to you! What, shall we be merry? Shall we have a play extempore? ²⁷¹

Prince. Content—and the argument shall be thy running away.

Fal. Ah, no more of that, Hal, an thou lovest me!

Enter Hostess.

Host. O Jesu, my lord the Prince! ²⁷⁵

Prince. How now, my lady the hostess! What say'st thou to me?

Host. Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman of the court at door would speak with you; he says he comes from your father.

Prince. Give him as much as will make him a royal man, and send him back again to my mother.

Fal. What manner of man is he?

Host. An old man.

Fal. What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight? Shall I give him his answer? ²⁸⁶

Prince. Prithee do, Jack.

Fal. Faith, and I'll send him packing.

[Exit.

Prince. Now, sirs: by'r lady, you fought fair; so did you, Peto; so did you, Bardolph. You are lions too: you ran away upon instinct; you will not touch the true prince; no, fie! ²⁹²

Bard. Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

Prince. Faith, tell me now in earnest, how came Falstaff's sword so hack'd? ²⁹⁵

Peto. Why, he hack'd it with his dagger, and said he would swear truth out of England but he would make you believe it was done in fight; and persuaded us to do the like. ²⁹⁹

Bard. Yea, and to tickle our noses with spear-grass to make them bleed, and then to beslobber our garments with it, and swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven year before—I blush'd to hear his monstrous devices. ³⁰⁴

Prince. O villain! Thou stolest a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blush'd extempore. Thou hadst fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou ran'st away; what instinct hadst thou for it? ³⁰⁹

Bard. My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations?

Prince. I do.

Bard. What think you they portend ?

Prince. Hot livers and cold purses.

Bard. Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.

Prince. No, if rightly taken, halter. 316

Re-enter FALSTAFF.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone. How now, my sweet creature of bombast ! How long is't ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knee ? 319

Fal. My own knee ! When I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist : I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring. A plague of sighing and grief ! it blows a man up like a bladder. There's villainous news abroad. Here was Sir John Bracy from your father : you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the north, Percy, and he of Wales that gave Amaimon the bastinado, and made Lucifer cuckold, and swore the devil his true liegeman upon the cross of a Welsh hook—what a plague call you him ?

Poins. O, Glendower. 330

Fal. Owen, Owen—the same ; and his son-in-law Mortimer, and old Northumberland, and that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs o' horseback up a hill perpendicular— 334

Prince. He that rides at high speed and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying ?

Fal. You have hit it.

Prince. So did he never the sparrow.

Fal. Well, that rascal hath good mettle in him ; he will not run. 340

Prince. Why, what a rascal art thou, then, to praise him so for running !

Fal. O' horseback, ye cuckoo ; but afoot he will not budge a foot.

Prince. Yes, Jack, upon instinct. 345

Fal. I grant ye, upon instinct. Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blue-caps more. Worcester is stol'n away to-night ; thy father's beard is turn'd white with the news ; you may buy land now as cheap as stinking mack'el. 350

Prince. Why, then, it is like, if there come a hot June, and this civil buffeting hold, we shall buy maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds. 353

Fal. By the mass, lad, thou sayest true : it is like we shall have good trading that way. But tell me, Hal, art not thou horrible afraid. Thou being heir-apparent, could the world pick thee out three such enemies again as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower ? Art thou not horribly afraid ? Doth not thy blood thrill at it ? 360

Prince. Not a whit, i' faith ; I lack some of thy instinct.

Fal. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid tomorrow when thou comest to thy father. If thou love me, practise an answer. 346

Prince. Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life.

Fal. Shall I ? Content ! This chair shall be my state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown.

Prince. Thy state is taken for a join'd-stool, thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown ! 371

Fal. Well, an the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved. Give me a cup of sack to make my eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept ; for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in King Cambyeses' vein. 376

Prince. Well, here is my leg.

Fal. And here is my speech. Stand aside, nobility.

Host. O Jesu, this is excellent sport, i' faith !

Fal. Weep not, sweet queen, for trickling tears are vain. 380

Host. O, the father, how he holds his countenance !

Fal. For God's sake, iords, convey my tristful queen ;

For tears do stop the floodgates of her eyes.

Host. O Jesu, he doth it as like one of these harlotry players as ever I see ! 385

Fal. Peace, good pint-pot ; peace, good tickle-brain.—Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art accompanied ; for though the camomile, the more it is trodden on the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted the sooner it wears. That thou art my son I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion, but chiefly a villainous trick of thine eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If then thou be son to me, here lies the point : why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at ? Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a micher and eat blackberries ? A question not to be ask'd. Shall the son of England prove a thief and take purses ? A question to be ask'd. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch. This pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile ; so doth the company thou keepest ; for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink, but in tears ; not in pleasure, but in passion ; not in words only, but in woes also. And yet there is a virtuous man whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name. 406

Prince. What manner of man, an it like your Majesty ?

Fal. A goodly portly man, i' faith, and a corpulent ; of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage ; and, as I think, his age some fifty, or, by 'r lady, inclining to three-score. And now I remember me, his name is Falstaff. If that man should be lewdly given, he deceiveth me ; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks. If then the tree may be known by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree, then, peremptorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff : him keep with, the rest banish. And tell me now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month ? ⁴¹⁷

Prince. Dost thou speak like a king ? Do thou stand for me, and I'll play my father.

Fal. Depose me ? If thou dost it half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a rabbit-sucker or a poulter's hare. ⁴²²

Prince. Well, here I am set.

Fal. And here I stand. Judge, my masters.

Prince. Now, Harry, whence come you ?

Fal. My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

Prince. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous.

Fal. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false. Nay, I'll tickle ye for a young prince, i' faith. ⁴²⁹

Prince. Swarest thou, ungracious boy ? Henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace ; there is a devil haunts thee in the likeness of an old fat man ; a tun of man is thy companion. Why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that bolting-hutch of beastliness, that swoll'n parcel of dropsies, that huge bombard of sack, that stuff'd cloak-bag of guts, that roasted Manningtree ox with the pudding in his belly, that reverend vice, that grey iniquity, that father ruffian, that vanity in years ? Wherein is he good, but to taste sack and drink it ? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a capon and eat it ? wherein cunning, but in craft ? wherein crafty, but in villainy ? wherein villainous, but in all things ? wherein worthy, but in nothing ?

Fal. I would your Grace would take me with you ; whom means your Grace ? ⁴⁴⁵

Prince. That villainous abominable misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan.

Fal. My lord, the man I know.

Prince. I know thou dost. ⁴⁴⁹

Fal. But to say I know more harm in him than in myself were to say more than I know. That he is old—the more the pity—his white hairs do witness it ; but that he is—saving your reverence—a whoremaster, that I utterly deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked ! If to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I know is damn'd ; if to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kine are to be loved. No, my good lord : banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poins ; but, for sweet Jack Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff—and therefore more valiant, being, as he is, old Jack Falstaff—banish not him thy Harry's company, banish not him thy Harry's company. Banish plump Jack, and banish all the world. ⁴⁶³

Prince. I do, I will. [A knocking heard.
[Exeunt Hostess, Francis, and Bardolph.]

Re-enter BARDOLPH, running.

Bard. O, my lord, my lord ! the sheriff with a most monstrous watch is at the door.

Fal. Out, ye rogue ! Play out the play : I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

Re-enter the Hostess.

Host. O Jesu, my lord, my lord ! ⁴⁶⁹

Prince. Heigh, heigh ! the devil rides upon a fiddle-stick ; what's the matter ?

Host. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door ; they are come to search the house. Shall I let them in ?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal ? Never call a true piece of gold a counterfeit. Thou art essentially made, without seeming so. ⁴⁷⁶

Prince. And thou a natural coward, without instinct.

Fal. I deny your major. If you will deny the sheriff, so ; if not, let him enter. If I become not a cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up ! I hope I shall as soon be strangled with a halter as another. ⁴⁸¹

Prince. Go, hide thee behind the arras ; the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face and good conscience.

Fal. Both which I have had ; but their date is out, and therefore I'll hide me. ⁴⁸⁶

[Exeunt all but the Prince and Peto.]

Prince. Call in the sheriff.

Enter Sheriff and the Carrier.

Now, master sheriff, what is your will with me ?

Sher. First, pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry

Hath followed certain men unto this house.

Prince. What men ? ⁴⁹¹

Sher. One of them is well known, my gracious lord—

A gross fat man.

Car. As fat as butter.

Prince. The man, I do assure you, is not here,

For I myself at this time have employ'd him. ⁴⁹⁵

And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee That I will, by to-morrow dinner-time, Send him to answer thee, or any man,

For any thing he shall be charg'd withal ;
And so let me entreat you leave the house.

Sher. I will, my lord. There are two gentlemen 501

Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks.

Prince. It may be so ; if he have robb'd these men

He shall be answerable ; and so, farewell.

Sher. Good night, my noble lord. 505

Prince. I think it is good morrow, is it not ?

Sher. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock. [Exeunt Sheriff and Carrier.]

Prince. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's. Go, call him forth. 509

Peto. Falstaff ! Fast asleep behind the arras, and snorting like a horse.

Prince. Hark how hard he fetches breath. Search his pockets. [He searcheth his pocket, and findeth certain papers] What hast thou found ?

Peto. Nothing but papers, my lord. 515

Prince. Let's see what they be : read them.

Peto. [Reads]

Item, A capon - - - 2s. 2d.

Item, Sauce - - - 4d.

Item, Sack, two gallons - - 5s. 8d.

Item, Anchovies and sack after supper - - - 2s. 6d.

Item, Bread - - - ob.

Prince. O monstrous ! but one halfpenny-worth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack ! What there is else, keep close ; we'll read it at more advantage. There let him sleep till day. I'll to the court in the morning. We must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honourable. I'll procure this fat rogue a charge of foot ; and I know his death will be a march of twelve-score. The money shall be paid back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the morning ; and so, good morrow, Peto. 530

Peto. Good morrow, good my lord.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. Wales. Glendower's castle.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, MORTIMER, and GLENDOWER.

Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure,

And our induction full of prosperous hope.

Hot. Lord Mortimer, and cousin Glendower,

Will you sit down ?

And uncle Worcester—a plague upon it ! ; I have forgot the map.

Glend. No, here it is.

Sit, cousin Percy ; sit, good cousin Hotspur,

For by that name as oft as Lancaster

Doth speak of you, his cheek looks pale, and with

A rising sigh he wisheth you in heaven. 10

Hot. And you in hell, as oft as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of.

Glend. I cannot blame him : at my nativity

The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes, Of burning cressets ; and at my birth 15

The frame and huge foundation of the earth Shaked like a coward.

Hot. Why, so it would have done at the same season if your mother's cat had but kitten'd, though yourself had never been born. 20

Glend. I say the earth did shake when I was born.

Hot. And I say the earth was not of my mind,

If you suppose as fearing you it shook.

Glend. The heavens were all on fire, the earth did tremble.

Hot. O, then the earth shook to see the heavens on fire, 25

And not in fear of your nativity.

Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth

In strange eruptions ; oft the teeming earth

Is with a kind of colic pinch'd and vex'd

By the imprisoning of unruly wind 30

Within her womb ; which, for enlargement striving,

Shakes the old beldam earth, and topples down

Steeple and moss-grown towers. At your birth,

Our grandam earth, having this distemp'rance,

In passion shook.

Glend. Cousin, of many men 35
I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave

To tell you once again that at my birth

The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes, The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds Were strangely clamorous to the frightened

fields. 40

These signs have mark'd me extraordinary ; And all the courses of my life do show

I am not in the roll of common men.

Where is he living, clipp'd in with the sea That chides the banks of England, Scotland, Wales, 45

Which calls me pupil or hath read to me ?

And bring him out that is but woman's son Can trace me in the tedious ways of art

And hold me pace in deep experiments.

Hot. I think there's no man speaks better Welsh. I'll to dinner. 50

Mort. Peace, cousin Percy ; you will make him mad.

Glend. I can call spirits from the vasty deep.

Hot. Why, so can I, or so can any man ;

But will they come when you do call for them ?

Glend. Why, I can teach you, cousin, to command

The devil.

Hot. And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil

By telling truth : tell truth, and shame the devil.

If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither,

And I'll be sworn I have power to shame him hence.

O, while you live, tell truth, and shame the devil !

Mort. Come, come, no more of this unprofitable chat.

Glend. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head

Against my power ; thrice from the banks of Wye

And sandy-bottom'd Severn have I sent him

Bootless home and weather-beaten back.

Hot. Home without boots, and in foul weather too !

How scapes he agues, in the devil's name ?

Glend. Come, here is the map ; shall we divide our right

According to our threefold order ta'en ?

Mort. The Archdeacon hath divided it into three limits very equally :

England, from Trent and Severn hitherto,

By south and east is to my part assign'd ;

All westward, Wales beyond the Severn shore,

And all the fertile land within that bound,

To Owen Glendower ; and, dear coz, to you

The remnant northward lying off from Trent.

And our indentures tripartite are drawn ;

Which being sealed interchangeably,

A business that this night may execute,

To-morrow, cousin Percy, you and I

And my good Lord of Worcester will set forth

To meet your father and the Scottish power,

As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury.

My father Glendower is not ready yet,

Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days.

[To Glendower] Within that space you may have drawn together

Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentlemen.

Glend. A shorter time shall send me to you, lords ;

And in my conduct shall your ladies come,

From whom you now must steal and take no leave ;

For there will be a world of water shed

Upon the parting of your wives and you.

Hot. Methinks my moiety, north from Burton here,

In quantity equals not one of yours.

See how this river comes me cranking in,

And cuts me from the best of all my land

A huge half-moon, a monstrous cantle out.

I'll have the current in this place damm'd up,

And here the smug and silver Trent shall run

In a new channel, fair and evenly ;

It shall not wind with such a deep indent

To rob me of so rich a bottom here.

Glend. Not wind ! It shall, it must ; you see it doth.

Mort. Yea, but

Mark how he bears his course and runs me up

With like advantage on the other side,

Galding the opposed continent as much

As on the other side it takes from you.

Wor. Yea, but a little charge will trench him here,

And on this north side win this cape of land,

And then he runs straight and even.

Hot. I'll have it so ; a little charge will do it.

Glend. I'll not have it alt'red.

Hot. Will not you ?

Glend. No, nor you shall not.

Hot. Who shall say me nay ?

Glend. Why, that will I.

Hot. Let me not understand you, then ; speak it in Welsh.

Glend. I can speak English, lord, as well as you,

For I was train'd up in the English court ;

Where, being but young, I framed to the harp

Many an English ditty lovely well,

And gave the tongue a helpful ornament—

A virtue that was never seen in you.

Hot. Marry,

And I am glad of it with all my heart !

I had rather be a kitten and cry mew

Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers ;

I had rather hear a brazen canstick turn'd,

Or a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree ;

And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,

Nothing so much as mincing poetry.

'Tis like the forc'd gait of a shuffling nag.

Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.

Hot. I do not care ; I'll give thrice so much land

To any well-deserving friend ;

But in the way of bargain, mark ye me,

I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair.

Are the indentures drawn ? Shall we be gone ?

Glend. The moon shines fair ; you may away by night ;

I'll haste the writer, and withal

Break with your wives of your departure hence.

I am afraid my daughter will run mad, ¹⁴⁵
So much she doteth on her Mortimer. [Exit.

Mort. Fie, cousin Percy ! how you cross my father !

Hot. I cannot choose. Sometime he angers me

With telling me of the moldwarp and the ant,

Of the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies, And of a dragon and a finless fish, ¹⁵¹

A clip-wing'd griffin and a moulten raven, A couching lion and a ramping cat,

And such a deal of skimble-skamble stuff As puts me from my faith. I tell you what :

He held me last night at least nine hours In reckoning up the several devils' names

That were his lackeys. I cried 'hum' and 'well, go to'

But mark'd him not a word. O, he is as tedious

As a tired horse, a railing wife ; ¹⁶⁰
Worse than a smoky house ; I had rather live

With cheese and garlic in a windmill, far, Than feed on cates and have him talk to me

In any summer house in Christendom.

Mort. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman, Exceedingly well read, and profited ¹⁶⁶

In strange concealments ; valiant as a lion,

And wondrous affable ; and as bountiful As mines of India. Shall I tell you, cousin ?

He holds your temper in a high respect, ¹⁷⁰
And curbs himself even of his natural scope When you come 'cross his humour ; faith, he does.

I warrant you that man is not alive Might so have tempted him as you have done ¹⁷⁴

Without the taste of danger and reproof ; But do not use it oft, let me entreat you.

Wor. In faith, my lord, you are too wilful-blame ;

And since your coming hither have done enough

To put him quite besides his patience. You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault ; ¹⁸⁰

Though sometimes it show greatness, courage, blood—

And that's the dearest grace it renders you—

Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage, Defect of manners, want of government,

Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain ; The least of which, haunting a nobleman,

Loseth men's hearts, and leaves behind a stain

Upon the beauty of all parts besides, Beguiling them of commendation. ¹⁸⁹

Hot. Well, I am school'd : good manners be your speed !

Here come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Re-enter GLENDOWER, with LADY MORTIMER and LADY PERCY.

Mort. This is the deadly spite that angers me :

My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh. Glend. My daughter weeps : she'll not part with you ; ¹⁹⁴

She'll be a soldier too, she'll to the wars.

Mort. Good father, tell her that she and my aunt Percy Shall follow in your conduct speedily. [Glendower speaks to her in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.

Glend. She is desperate here ; a peevish, self-will'd harlotry, one that no persuasion can do good upon.

[The Lady speaks in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy looks : that pretty Welsh ²⁰⁰

Which thou pourest down from these swelling heavens

I am too perfect in ; and, but for shame, In such a parley should I answer thee.

[The Lady speaks again in Welsh. I understand thy kisses, and thou mine,

And that's a feeling disputation ; ²⁰⁵
But I will never be a truant, love,

Till I have learnt thy language ; for thy tongue

Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly penn'd,

Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bow'r, With ravishing division, to her lute. ²¹⁰

Glend. Nay, if you melt, then will she run mad.

[The Lady speaks again in Welsh. Mort. O, I am ignorance itself in this !

Glend. She bids you on the wanton rushes lay you down,

And rest your gentle head upon her lap, And she will sing the song that pleaseth you, ²¹⁵

And on your eyelids crown the god of sleep, Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness,

Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep

As is the difference betwixt day and night The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team ²²⁰

Begins his golden progress in the east.

Mort. With all my heart I'll sit and hear her sing ;

By that time will our book, I think, be drawn.

Glend. Do so ;

And those musicians that shall play to you Hang in the air a thousand leagues from hence, ²²⁶

And straight they shall be here ; sit, and attend.

Hot. Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down. Come, quick, quick, that I may lay my head in thy lap.

Lady P. Go, ye giddy goose. 230
[The music plays.]

Hot. Now I perceive the devil understands Welsh;

And 'tis no marvel he is so humorous. By'r lady, he is a good musician.

Lady P. Then should you be nothing but musical, for you are altogether govern'd by humours. Lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing in Welsh. 236

Hot. I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in Irish.

Lady P. Wouldst thou have thy head broken?

Hot. No.

Lady P. Then be still. 240

Hot. Neither; 'tis a woman's fault.

Lady P. Now God help thee!

Hot. To the Welsh lady's bed.

Lady P. What's that?

Hot. Peace! she sings. 245

[Here the Lady sings a Welsh song.]

Hot. Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.

Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth.

Hot. Not yours, in good sooth! Heart! you swear like a comfit-maker's wife. 'Not you, in good sooth' and 'As true as I live' and 'As God shall mend me' and 'As sure as day'. 251

And givest such sarcenet surety for thy oaths

As if thou never walk'st further than Finsbury.

Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art, A good mouth-filling oath; and leave 'in sooth'. 255

And such protest of pepper-gingerbread To velvet-guards and Sunday-citizens.

Come, sing.

Lady P. I will not sing. 259

Hot. 'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or be redbreast teacher. An the indentures be drawn, I'll away within these two hours; and so come in when ye will. [Exit.]

Glend. Come, come, Lord Mortimer; you are as slow

As hot Lord Percy is on fire to go. 264

By this our book is drawn; we'll but seal, And then to horse immediately.

Mort. With all my heart.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. The palace.

Enter the KING, the PRINCE OF WALES, and Lords.

King. Lords, give us leave; the Prince of Wales and I Must have some private conference; but be near at hand,

For we shall presently have need of you.

[Exeunt Lords.]

I know not whether God will have it so, For some displeasing service I have done, 5 That, in his secret doom, out of my blood He'll breed revengement and a scourge for me;

But thou dost in thy passages of life Make me believe that thou art only mark'd For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven 10

To punish my mistreadings. Tell me else, Could such inordinate and low desires, Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts,

Such barren pleasures, rude society, As thou art match'd withal and grafted to, Accompany the greatness of thy blood 16 And hold their level with thy princely heart?

Prince. So please your Majesty, I would I could

Quit all offences with as clear excuse, As well as I am doubtless I can purge 20 Myself of many I am charg'd withal;

Yet such extenuation let me beg, As, in reproof of many tales devis'd, Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear,

By smiling pick-thanks and base news-mongers, 25

I may, for some things true, wherein my youth

Hath faulty wand'red and irregular, Find pardon on my true submission.

King. God pardon thee! Yet let me wonder, Harry,

At thy affections, which do hold a wing 30 Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.

Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost, Which by thy younger brother is supplied, And art almost an alien to the hearts Of all the court and princes of my blood. 35

The hope and expectation of thy time

Is ruin'd, and the soul of every man

Prophetically do forethink thy fall.

Had I so lavish of my presence been,

So common-hackney'd in the eyes of men, 40 So stale and cheap to vulgar company,

Opinion, that did help me to the crown,

Had still kept loyal to possession

And left me in reputeless banishment

A fellow of no mark nor likelihood. 45

By being seldom seen, I could not stir

But, like a comet, I was wond'ring at;

That men would tell their children 'This is he';

Others would say 'Where, which is Bolingbroke?'

And then I stole all courtesy from heaven, And dress'd myself in such humility 51

That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts,

Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,

Even in the presence of the crowned King.

Thus did I keep my person fresh and new,
My presence, like a robe pontifical, 56 Ne'er seen but wond'ring at, and so my
state,

Seldom but sumptuous, show'd like a feast
And won by rareness such solemnity.

The skipping King, he ambled up and down
With shallow jesters and rash bavin wits, Soon kindled and soon burnt; carded his
state,

Mingled his royalty with cap'ring fools;
Had his great name profaned with their scorns,

And gave his countenance, against his
name, 65

To laugh at gibing boys and stand the push
Of every beardless vain comparative;
Grew a companion to the common streets,
Enfeoff'd himself to popularity;

That, being daily swallowed by men's
eyes, 70

They surfeited with honey and began To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little

More than a little is by much too much.

So, when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the cuckoo is in June, 75 Heard, not regarded, seen, but with such
eyes

As, sick and blunted with community,
Afford no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on sun-like majesty
When it shines seldom in admiring eyes; 80
But rather drowz'd and hung their eyelids
down,

Slept in his face, and rend'ring such aspect
As cloudy men use to their adversaries, Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full. 84

And in that very line, Harry, standest thou;
For thou hast lost thy princely privilege
With vile participation. Not an eye
But is aweary of thy common sight, Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee
more;

Which now doth that I would not have it do— 90

Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.

Prince. I shall hereafter, my thricegracious lord,
Be more myself.

King. For all the world
As thou art to this hour was Richard then When I from France set foot at Ravens-purgh; 95

And even as I was then is Percy now.
Now, by my sceptre and my soul to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the state
Than thou the shadow of succession;
For of no right, nor colour like to right, 100
He doth fill fields with harness in the realm;
Turns head against the lion's armed jaws;
And, being no more in debt to years than
thou,

Leads ancient lords and reverend bishops
on

To bloody battles and to bruising arms. 105
What never-dying honour hath he got Against renowned Douglas! whose high deeds,

Whose hot incursions, and great name in
arms,

Holds from all soldiers chief majority
And military title capital 110

Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge Christ.

Thrice hath this Hotspur, Mars in swathling clothes,

This infant warrior, in his enterprises Discomfited great Douglas; ta'en him
once,

Enlarged him and made a friend of him, 115
To fill the mouth of deep defiance up And shake the peace and safety of our throne.

And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland,

The Archbishop's Grace of York, Douglas, Mortimer,

Capitulate against us and are up. 120

But wherefore do I tell these news to thee?
Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes,
Which art my nearest and dearest enemy?
Thou that art like enough, through vassal
fear,

Base inclination, and the start of spleen, 125
To fight against me under Percy's pay,
To dog his heels, and curtsy at his frowns,
To show how much thou art degenerate.

Prince. Do not think so; you shall not find it so;

And God forgive them that so much have
sway'd 130

Your Majesty's good thoughts away from
me!

I will redeem all this on Percy's head,
And in the closing of some glorious day
Be bold to tell you that I am your son,
When I will wear a garment all of blood, 135
And stain my favours in a bloody mask,
Which, wash'd away, shall scour my shame
with it;

And that shall be the day, whene'er it lights,

That this same child of honour and renown,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight, 140

And your unthought-of Harry chance to meet.

For every honour sitting on his helm,
Would they were multitudes, and on my
head

My shames redoubled! For the time will come

That I shall make this northern youth exchange 145

His glorious deeds for my indignities.
Percy is but my factor, good my lord,

To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf ;
And I will call him to so strict account
That he shall render every glory up, ¹⁵⁰
Yea, even the slightest worship of his time,
Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart.
This, in the name of God, I promise here ;
The which if He be pleas'd I shall perform,
I do beseech your Majesty may salve ¹⁵⁵
The long-grown wounds of my intemper-ature.

If not, the end of life cancels all bands ;
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths
Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow.
King. A hundred thousand rebels die in this : ¹⁶⁰

Thou shalt have charge and sovereign trust herein.

Enter SIR WALTER BLUNT.

How now, good Blunt ! Thy looks are full of speed.

Blunt. So hath the business that I come to speak of.

Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word
That Douglas and the English rebels met
The eleventh of this month at Shrewsbury.
A mighty and a fearful head they are, ¹⁶⁷
If promises be kept on every hand,
As ever off'red foul play in a state.

King. The Earl of Westmoreland set forth to-day,

With him my son, Lord John of Lancaster ;
For this advertisement is five days old.

On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set forward ; ¹⁷³

On Thursday we ourselves will march. Our meeting

at Bridgenorth. And, Harry, you shall march Through Gloucestershire ; by which account,

Our business valued, some twelve days
hence

Our general forces at Bridgenorth shall meet. ¹⁷⁹

Our hands are full of business. Let's away.
Advantage feeds him fat while men delay.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Eastcheap. The Boar's Head Tavern.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, am I not fall'n away sensibly since this last action ? Do I not waste ? Do I not dwindle ? Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown ; I am withered like an old appletree. Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking ; I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten that the inside of a church is made of, I in a peppercorn, a brewer's horse. The inside of a church ! Company, villainous company, hath been the spoil of me. ¹⁰

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful you cannot live long.

Fal. Why, there is it ; come, sing me a bawdy song, make me merry. I was as virtuously given as a gentleman need to be ; virtuous enough : swore little, dic'd not above seven times a week, went to a bawdyhouse not above once in a quarter—of an hour, paid money that I borrowed—three or four times, lived well, and in good compass ; and now I live out of all order, out of all compass. ²⁰

Bard. Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass—out of all reasonable compass, Sir John.

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life. Thou art our admiral, thou bearest the lantern in the poop, but 'tis in the nose of thee ; thou art the Knight of the Burning Lamp. ²⁷

Bard. Why, Sir John, my face does you
no harm.

Fal. No, I'll be sworn ; I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a death's head or a memento mori : I never see thy face but I think upon hell-fire, and Dives that lived in purple ; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face : my oath should be 'By this fire, that's God's angel'. But thou art altogether given over, and wert indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou ran'st up Gadshill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus or a ball of wildfire, there's no purchase in money. O, thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire light ! Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern ; but the sack that thou hast drunk me would have bought me lights as good cheap at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two and thirty years ; God reward me for it ! ⁴⁷

Bard. 'Sblood, I would my face were in your belly !

Fal. God-a-mercy ! so should I be sure to be heart-burnt. ⁵⁰

Enter Hostess.

How now, Dame Partlet the hen ! Have you inquir'd yet who pick'd my pocket ?

Host. Why, Sir John, what do you think, Sir John ? Do you think I keep thieves in my house ? I have search'd, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant by servant. The tithe of a hair was never lost in my house before.

Fal. Ye lie, hostess : Bardolph was shav'd and lost many a hair, and I'll be sworn my pocket was pick'd. Go to, you are a woman, go. ⁶⁰

Host. Who, I ? No, I defy thee. God's light, I was never call'd so in mine own house before.

Fal. Go to, I know you well enough. ⁶³

Host. No, Sir John, you do not know me, Sir John. I know you, Sir John : you owe me money, Sir John ; and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it. I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back. ⁶⁷

Fal. Dowlas, filthy dowlas ! I have given them away to bakers' wives ; they have made bolters of them.

Host. Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, Sir John, for your diet and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four and twenty pound.

Fal. He had his part of it ; let him pay.

Host. He ? Alas, he is poor ; he hath nothing. ⁷⁵

Fal. How ! poor ? Look upon his face : what call you rich ? Let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks. I'll not pay a denier. What, will you make a younker of me ? Shall I not take mine ease in mine inn but I shall have my pocket pick'd ? I have lost a seal-ring of my grandfather's worth forty mark. ⁸¹

Host. O Jesu, I have heard the Prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that ring was copper !

Fal. How ! the Prince is a Jack, a sneak-cup. 'Sblood, an he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog if he would say so. ⁸⁶

Enter the PRINCE marching, with PETO ; and Falstaff meets him, playing upon his truncheon like a fife.

Fal. How now, lad ! Is the wind in that door, i' faith ? Must we all march ?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate fashion.

Host. My lord, I pray you hear me. ⁹⁰

Prince. What say'st thou, Mistress Quickly ? How doth thy husband ? I love him well ; he is an honest man.

Host. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Prithee, let her alone, and list to me.

Prince. What say'st thou, Jack ? ⁹⁶

Fal. The other night I fell asleep here behind the arras and had my pocket pick'd ; this house is turn'd bawdy-house ; they pick pockets.

Prince. What didst thou lose, Jack ? ¹⁰⁰

Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal ? Three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece and a seal-ring of my grandfather's.

Prince. A trifle, some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my lord ; and I said I heard your Grace say so ; and, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foulmouth'd man as he is, and said he would cudgel you.

Prince. What ! he did not ?

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood, in me else. ¹¹¹

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune ; nor no more truth in thee than in a drawn fox ; and for womanhood, Maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go. ¹¹⁵

Host. Say, what thing ? what thing ?

Fal. What thing ! Why, a thing to thank God on.

Host. I am no thing to thank God on, I would thou shouldst know it ; I am an honest man's wife ; and setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so. ¹²¹

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave, thou ?

Fal. What beast ! Why, an otter. ¹²⁵

Prince. An otter, Sir John ! Why an otter ?

Fal. Why, she's neither fish nor flesh : a man knows not where to have her. ¹²⁸

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so : thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave, thou !

Prince. Thou say'st true, hostess ; and he slanders thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord ; and said this other day you ought him a thousand pound. ¹³⁴

Prince. Sirrah, do I owe you a thousand pound ?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal ! A million. Thy love is worth a million : thou owest me thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he call'd you Jack, and said he would cudgel you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph ? ¹⁴⁰

Bard. Indeed, Sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea, if he said my ring was copper.

Prince. I say 'tis copper. Darest thou be as good as thy word now ? ¹⁴⁴

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man, I dare ; but as thou art prince, I fear thee as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp.

Prince. And why not as the lion ?

Fal. The King himself is to be feared as the lion. Dost thou think I'll fear thee as I fear thy father ? Nay, an I do, I pray God my girdle break. ¹⁵¹

Prince. O, if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees ! But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine—it is all fill'd up with guts and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket ! Why, thou whoreson, impudent, emboss'd rascal, if there were anything in thy pocket but tavern-reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor penny-worth of sugar-candy to make thee long-winded—if thy pocket were enrich'd with any other injuries but these, I am a villain. And yet you will stand to it, you will not pocket-up wrong. Art thou not ashamed ? 163

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal ? Thou knowest in the state of innocency Adam fell ; and what should poor Jack Falstaff do in the days of villainy ? Thou seest I have more flesh than another man, and therefore more frailty. You confess, then, you pick'd my pocket ?

Prince. It appears so by the story. 169

Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee. Go make ready breakfast, love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests. Thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason. Thou seest I am pacified still. Nay, prithee, be gone. [Exit Hostess] Now, Hal, to the news at court : for the robbery, lad, how is that answered ? 175

Prince. O, my sweet beef, I must still be good angel to thee : the money is paid back again.

Fal. O, I do not like that paying back ; 'tis a double labour. 179

Prince. I am good friends with my father, and may do anything.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou doest, and do it with unwash'd hands too.

Bard. Do, my lord. 184

Prince. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

Fal. I would it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well ? O for a fine thief, of the age of two and twenty or thereabouts ! I am heinously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels—they offend none but the virtuous ; I laud them, I praise them. 191

Prince. Bardolph !

Bard. My lord ?

Prince. Go bear this letter to Lord John of Lancaster, to my brother John ; this to my Lord of Westmoreland. [Exit Bardolph.]

Go, Peto, to horse, to horse ; for thou and I have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner-time. [Exit Peto.]

Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple Hall

At two o'clock in the afternoon ; 199
There shalt thou know thy charge, and there receive

Money and order for their furniture.
The land is burning ; Percy stands on high ;
And either we or they must lower lie.

[Exit.]

Fal. Rare words ! brave world ! Hostess, my breakfast, come ! 204

O, I could wish this tavern were my drum !

[Exit.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. The rebel camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, and DOUGLAS.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot. If speaking truth

In this fine age were not thought flattery, Such attribution should the Douglas have As not a soldier of this season's stamp Should go so general current through the world. 5

By God, I cannot flatter ; I do defy The tongues of soothers ; but a braver place

In my heart's love hath no man than yourself.

Nay, task me to my word ; approve me, lord.

Doug. Thou art the king of honour : 10
No man so potent breathes upon the ground But I will beard him.

Hot. Do so, and 'tis well.

Enter a Messenger with letters.

What letters hast thou there ?—I can but thank you.

Mess. These letters come from your father.

Hot. Letters from him ! Why comes he not himself ? 15

Mess. He cannot come, my lord, he is grievous sick.

Hot. Zounds ! how has he the leisure to be sick

In such a justling time ? Who leads his power ?

Under whose government come they along ?

Mess. His letters bears his mind, not I, my lord. 20

Wor. I prithee tell me, doth he keep his bed ?

Mess. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth ;

And at the time of my departure thence He was much fear'd by his physicians.

Wor. I would the state of time had first been whole 25

Ere he by sickness had been visited : His health was never better worth than now.

Hot. Sick now ! droop now ! This sickness doth infect

The very life-blood of our enterprise ; 'Tis catching hither, even to our camp. 30

He writes me here that inward sickness— And that his friends by deputation could not

So soon be drawn ; nor did he think it meet

To lay so dangerous and dear a trust On any soul remov'd, but on his own. 35

Yet doth he give us bold advertisement

That with our small conjunction we should
on,

To see how fortune is dispos'd to us ;
For, as he writes, there is no quailing now,
Because the King is certainly possess'd 40
Of all our purposes. What say you to it ?

Wor. Your father's sickness is a maim
to us.

Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lopp'd off.

And yet, in faith, it is not. His present want Seems more than we shall find it. Were it good 45

To set the exact wealth of all our states
All at one cast ? To set so rich a main
On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour ?
It were not good ; for therein should we
read

The very bottom and the soul of hope, 50
The very list, the very utmost bound
Of all our fortunes.

Doug. Faith, and so we should ;
Where now remains a sweet reversion.
We may boldly spend upon the hope of what

Is to come in. 55
A comfort of retirement lives in this.

Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto,
If that the devil and mischance look big
Upon the maidenhead of our affairs.

Wor. But yet I would your father had been here. 60

The quality and hair of our attempt Brooks no division. It will be thought
By some, that know not why he is away,
That wisdom, loyalty, and mere dislike Of our proceedings, kept the earl from
hence ; 65

And think how such an apprehension
May turn the tide of fearful faction
And breed a kind of question in our cause ;
For well you know we of the off'ring-side
Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement, 70
And stop all sight-holes, every loop from whence

The eye of reason may pry in upon us.
This absence of your father's draws a curtain

That shows the ignorant a kind of fear
Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far. 75
I rather of his absence make this use :
It lends a lustre and more great opinion,
A larger dare to our great enterprise,
Than if the earl were here ; for men must think,

If we, without his help, can make a head 80
To push against a kingdom, with his help
We shall o'erturn it topsy-turvy down.
Yet all goes well, yet all our joints are whole.

Doug. As heart can think ; there is not such a word

Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear. 85

Enter SIR RICHARD VERNON.

Hot. My cousin Vernon ! welcome, by my soul.

Ver. Pray God my news be worth a welcome, lord.

The Earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,
Is marching hitherwards ; with him Prince
John. 8

Hot. No harm ; what more ?

Ver. And further, I have learn'd
The King himself in person is set forth,
Or hitherwards intended speedily,
With strong and mighty preparation.

Hot. He shall be welcome too. Where is his son, 94

The nimble-footed madcap Prince of Wales,
And his comrades that daff'd the world aside
And bid it pass ?

Ver. All furnish'd, all in arms ;
All plum'd like estridges, that with the wind

Bated like eagles having lately bath'd ;
Glittering in golden coats, like images ; 100
As full of spirit as the month of May
And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer ;
Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.

I saw young Harry with his beaver on,
His cushions on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,
Rise from the ground like feathered
Mercury, 106

And vaulted with such ease into his seat
As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
And witch the world with noble horsemanship. 110

Hot. No more, no more ; worse than the sun in March,
This praise doth nourish agues. Let them
come.

They come like sacrifices in their trim,
And to the fire-ey'd maid of smoky war
All hot and bleeding will we offer them. 115
The mailed Mars shall on his altar sit Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire
To hear this rich reprisal is so nigh And yet not ours. Come, let me taste my horse,

Who is to bear me like a thunderbolt 120
Against the bosom of the Prince of Wales.
Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse,
Meet, and ne'er part till one drop down a corse.

O that Glendower were come !

Ver. There is more news.
I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along, 125
He cannot draw his power this fourteen days.

Doug. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.

Wor. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.

Hot. What may the King's whole battle reach unto?

Ver. To thirty thousand.

Hot. Forty let it be: ¹³⁰
My father and Glendower being both away,
The powers of us may serve so great a day.
Come, let us take a muster speedily.

Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.

Doug. Talk not of dying; I am out of fear ¹³⁵

Of death or death's hand for this one half year. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A public road near Coventry.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry; fill me a bottle of sack. Our soldiers shall march through; we'll to Sutton Co'il' to-night.

Bard. Will you give me money, Captain?

Fal. Lay out, lay out. ⁵

Bard. This bottle makes an angel.

Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all; I'll answer the coinage. Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at town's end. ⁹

Bard. I will, Captain; farewell. [Exit.]

Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a sous'd gurnet. I have misused the King's press damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I press me none but good householders, yeomen's sons; inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been ask'd twice on the banns; such a commodity of warm slaves as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caliver worse than a struck fowl or a hurt wild-duck. I press'd me none but such toasts-and-butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins' heads, and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies—slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the Glutton's dogs licked his sores; and such as indeed were never soldiers, but discarded unjust serving-men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted tapsters, and ostlers trade-fall'n; the cankers of a calm world and a long peace; ten times more dishonourable ragged than an old-fac'd ancient. And such have I, to fill up the rooms of them as have bought out their services, that you would think that I had a hundred and fifty tattered Prodigals lately come from swine-keeping, from eating draff and husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me I had unloaded all the gibbets and press'd the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scarecrows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat. Nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyves on; for indeed I had the most of them out of prison. There's not a shirt and a half in all my company; and the half shirt is two napkins tack'd together and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stol'n from my host at Saint Albans, or the red-nose innkeeper of Daventry. But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge.

Enter the PRINCE OF WALES and WESTMORELAND.

Prince. How now, blown Jack! how now, quilt! ⁴⁷

Fal. What, Hal! how now, mad wag! What a devil dost thou in Warwickshire? My good Lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy; I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury. ⁵¹

West. Faith, Sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there, and you too; but my powers are there already. The King, I can tell you, looks for us all; we must away all night. ⁵⁵

Fal. Tut, never fear me; I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.

Prince. I think, to steal cream indeed; for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack, whose fellows are these that come after? ⁶⁰

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine.

Prince. I did never see such pitiful rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut; good enough to toss; food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit as well as better: tush, man, mortal men, mortal men. ⁶⁵

West. Ay, but, Sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare—too beggarly.

Fal. Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that; and for their bareness, I am sure they never learn'd that of me. ⁷⁰

Prince. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers in the ribs bare. But, sirrah, make haste; Percy is already in the field. [Exit.]

Fal. What, is the King encamp'd?

West. He is, Sir John: I fear we shall stay too long. [Exit.]

Fal. Well, ⁷⁶
To the latter end of a fray and the beginning of a feast
Fits a dull fighter and a keen guest. [Exit.]

SCENE III. The rebel camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, DOUGLAS, and VERNON.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.

Wor. It may not be.

- Doug.* You give him, then, advantage.
Ver. Not a whit.
Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?
Ver. So do we.
Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful.
Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd, stir not to-night. 5
Ver. Do not, my lord.
Doug. You do not counsel well; You speak it out of fear and cold heart.
Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas; by my life,
 And I dare well maintain it with my life, If well-respected honour bid me on, 10
 I hold as little counsel with weak fear As you, my lord, or any Scot that this day lives;
 Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle Which of us fears.
Doug. Yea, or to-night.
Ver. Content.
Hot. To-night, say I. 15
Ver. Come, come, it may not be. I wonder much,
 Being men of such great leading as you are,
 That you foresee not what impediments Drag back our expedition: certain horse Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up; Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day; 21
 And now their pride and mettle is asleep, Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,
 That not a horse is half the half of himself.
Hot. So are the horses of the enemy 25
 In general, journey-bated and brought low; The better part of ours are full of rest.
Wor. The number of the King exceedeth ours.
 For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in.
[The trumpet sounds a parley.]
Enter SIR WALTER BLUNT.
Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the King, 30
 If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect.
Hot. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt; and would to God
 You were of our determination!
 Some of us love you well; and even those some Envy your great deservings and good name, Because you are not of our quality, 36
 But stand against us like an enemy.
Blunt. And God defend but still I should stand so,
 So long as out of limit and true rule You stand against anointed majesty! 40
 But, to my charge. The King hath sent to know
 The nature of your griefs; and whereupon You conjure from the breast of civil peace
- Such bold hostility, teaching his duteous land
 Audacious cruelty. If that the King 45
 Have any way your good deserts forgot, Which he confesseth to be manifold,
 He bids you name your griefs, and with all speed
 You shall have your desires with interest, And pardon absolute for yourself and these Herein misled by your suggestion. 51
Hot. The King is kind; and well we know the King Knows at what time to promise, when to pay.
 My father and my uncle and myself Did give him that same royalty he wears; And when he was not six and twenty strong, 56
 Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low,
 A poor unminded outlaw sneaking home, My father gave him welcome to the shore; And when he heard him swear and vow to God 60
 He came but to be Duke of Lancaster, To sue his livery and beg his peace,
 With tears of innocence and terms of zeal, My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd, Swore him assistance, and perform'd it too. Now when the lords and barons of the realm Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him, The more and less came in with cap and knee;
 Met him in boroughs, cities, villages; 69
 Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes, Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their oaths, Gave him their heirs as pages, followed him
 Even at the heels in golden multitudes. He presently—as greatness knows itself—Steps me a little higher than his vow 75
 Made to my father, while his blood was poor,
 Upon the naked shore at Ravenspurgh; And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform
 Some certain edicts, and some strait decrees
 That lie too heavy on the commonwealth; Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep 81
 Over his country's wrongs; and by this face,
 This seeming brow of justice, did he win The hearts of all that he did angle for; Proceeded further: cut me off the heads 85
 Of all the favourites that the absent King In deputation left behind him here,
 When he was personal in the Irish war.
Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this.
Hot. Then to the point.
 In short time after, he depos'd the King; Soon after that depriv'd him of his life; And in the neck of that, task'd the whole state; 92

To make that worse, suff'ed his kinsman
 March—
 Who is, if every owner were well plac'd,
 Indeed his king—to be engag'd in Wales, ⁹⁵
 There without ransom to lie forfeited ;
 Disgrac'd me in my happy victories ;
 Sought to entrap me by intelligence ;
 Rated mine uncle from the council-board ;
 In rage dismiss'd my father from the court ;
 Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong ; ¹⁰¹
 And in conclusion drove us to seek out
 This head of safety, and withal to pry
 Into his title, the which we find Too indirect for long continuance. ¹⁰⁵ Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the King ?
Hot. Not so, Sir Walter ; we'll withdraw awhile.
 Go to the King ; and let there be impawn'd
 Some surety for a safe return again, ¹⁰⁹
 And in the morning early shall mine uncle
 Bring him our purposes. And so, farewell.
Blunt. I would you would accept of grace and love.
Hot. And may be so we shall.
Blunt. Pray God you do.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. York. The Archbishop's palace.
Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, and SIR
MICHAEL.

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michael ; bear this sealed brief
 With winged haste to the Lord Marshal ;
 This to my cousin Scroop ; and all the rest
 To whom they are directed. If you knew How much they do import, you would make haste. ⁵
Sir M. My good lord,
 I guess their tenour.
Arch. Like enough you do.
 To-morrow, good Sir Michael, is a day
 Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men Must bide the touch ; for, sir, at Shrewsbury, ¹⁰
 As I am truly going to understand,
 The King with mighty and quick-raised
 power
 Meets with Lord Harry ; and I fear, Sir
 Michael,
 What with the sickness of Northumberland,
 Whose power was in the first proportion, ¹⁵
 And what with Owen Glendower's absence thence,
 Who with them was a rated sinew too
 And comes not in, o'errul'd by prophecies,
 I fear the power of Percy is too weak
 To wage an instant trial with the King. ²⁰ Sir M. Why, my good lord, you need not
 fear ;
 There is Douglas and Lord Mortimer.
Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.

Sir M. But there is Mordake, Vernon, Lord Harry Percy,
 And there is my Lord of Worcester, and a head ²⁵
 Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.
Arch. And so there is ; but yet the King hath drawn
 The special head of all the land together :
 The Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster,
 The noble Westmoreland, and warlike
 Blunt ; ³⁰
 And many moe corrivals and dear men
 Of estimation and command in arms.
Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well oppos'd.
Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to
 fear ;
 And, to prevent the worst, Sir Michael,
 speed ; ³⁵
 For if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the King
 Dismiss his power, he means to visit us—
 For he hath heard of our confederacy—
 And 'tis but wisdom to make strong against
 him ;
 Therefore make haste. I must go write again ⁴⁰
 To other friends ; and so farewell, Sir
 Michael. [Exeunt severally.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. The King's camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter the KING, the PRINCE OF WALES, PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, SIR WALTER
BLUNT, and SIR JOHN FALSTAFF.

King. How bloodily the sun begins to peer Above yon busky hill ! The day looks pale
 At his distemp'rature.

Prince. The southern wind
 Doth play the trumpet to his purposes,
 And by his hollow whistling in the leaves ⁵
 Foretells a tempest and a blust'ring day.

King. Then with the losers let it sympathize,
 For nothing can seem foul to those that win.
 [The trumpet sounds.]

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

How now, my Lord of Worcester ! 'Tis not
 well
 That you and I should meet upon such terms ¹⁰
 As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust,
 And made us doff our easy robes of peace
 To crush our old limbs in ungente stel ;
 This is not well, my lord, this is not well.
 What say you to it ? Will you again unknit
 This churlish knot of all-abhorred war, ¹⁶
 And move in that obedient orb again
 Where you did give a fair and natural light,

And be no more an exhal'd meteor,
A prodigy of fear, and a portent 20
Of broached mischief to the unborn times ?

Wor. Hear me, my liege :

For mine own part, I could be well content
To entertain the lag-end of my life
With quiet hours ; for I protest 25
I have not sought the day of this dislike.

King. You have not sought it ! How comes it then ?

Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.

Prince. Peace, chewet, peace !

Wor. It pleas'd your Majesty to turn your looks 30

Of favour from myself and all our house ;
And yet I must remember you, my lord,
We were the first and dearest of your friends.

For you my staff of office did I break In Richard's time, and posted day and
night 35

To meet you on the way and kiss your hand,
When yet you were in place and in account
Nothing so strong and fortunate as I.

It was myself, my brother, and his son,
That brought you home, and boldly did outdare 40

The dangers of the time. You swore to us—
And you did swear that oath at Doncaster—
That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the
state,

Nor claim no further than your new-fall'n
right, 44

The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster ;
To this we swore our aid. But in short space

It rain'd down fortune show'ring on your
head ;

And such a flood of greatness fell on you,
What with our help, what with the absent
King,

What with the injuries of a wanton time, 50
The seeming sufferances that you had borne,
And the contrarious winds that held the
King

So long in his unlucky Irish wars
That all in England did repute him dead ;
And from this swarm of fair advantages 55
You took occasion to be quickly woo'd
To gripe the general sway into your hand ;
Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster ;
And being fed by us you us'd us so
As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird, 60
Useth the sparrow—did oppress our nest,
Grew by our feeding to so great a bulk That even our love durst not come near your sight

For fear of swallowing ; but with nimble wing

We were enforc'd, for safety sake, to fly 65
Out of your sight, and raise this present
head ;

Whereby we stand opposed by such means

As you yourself have forg'd against yourself,

By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth 70
Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.

King. These things, indeed, you have articulate,

Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches,

To face the garment of rebellion
With some fine colour that may please the eye 75

Of fickle changelings and poor discontents,
Which gape and rub the elbow at the news
Of hurlyburly innovation ;
And never yet did insurrection want
Such water-colours to impaint his cause, 80
Nor moody beggars, starving for a time.
Of pellmell havoc and confusion.

Prince. In both your armies there is many a soul

Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew
The Prince of Wales doth join with all the
world 86

In praise of Henry Percy. By my hopes,
This present enterprise set off his head,
I do not think a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant or more valiant-young,
More daring or more bold, is now alive 91
To grace this latter age with noble deeds.
For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
I have a truant been to chivalry ;

And so I hear he doth account me too. 95
Yet this before my father's majesty—

I am content that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to save the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him in a single fight. 100

King. And, Prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee,

Albeit considerations infinite
Do make against it. No, good Worcester,
no,

We love our people well ; even those we
love 104

That are misled upon your cousin's part ;
And will they take the offer of our grace,
Both he and they and you, yea, every man Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his.

So tell your cousin, and bring me word 109
What he will do. But if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,
And they shall do their office. So, be gone ;
We will not now be troubled with reply.
We offer fair ; take it advisedly.

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon.]

Prince. It will not be accepted, on my life : 115

The Douglas and the Hotspur both together
Are confident against the world in arms.

King. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge ;

For, on their answer, will we set on them ;

And God befriend us, as our cause is just !

[Exeunt all but the Prince and Falstaff.]

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so ; 'tis a point of friendship. 122

Prince. Nothing but a colossus can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would 'twere bed-time, Hal, and all well. 125

Prince. Why, thou owest God a death. [Exit.]

Fal. 'Tis not due yet ; I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me ? Well, 'tis no matter ; honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on ? How then ? Can honour set to a leg ? No. Or an arm ? No. Or take away the grief of a wound ? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery, then ? No. What is honour ? A word. What is in that word ? Honour. What is that honour ? Air. A trim reckoning ! Who hath it ? He that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it ? No. Doth he hear it ? No. 'Tis insensible, then ? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living ? No. Why ? Detraction will not suffer it. Therefore I'll none of it. Honour is a mere scutcheon. And so ends my catechism. [Exit.] 140

SCENE II. The rebel camp.

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

Wor. O, no, my nephew must not know, Sir Richard,

The liberal and kind offer of the King.

Ver. 'Twere best he did.

Wor. Then are we all undone.

It is not possible, it cannot be, 4
The King should keep his word in loving us ;
He will suspect us still, and find a time
To punish this offence in other faults ; Supposition all our lives shall be stuck full of eyes,

For treason is but trusted like the fox,
Who, never so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up, 10

Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.
Look how we can, or sad or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our looks,
And we shall feed like oxen at a stall, 14
The better cherish'd still the nearer death.
My nephew's trespass may be well forgot ;
It hath the excuse of youth and heat of
blood,

And an adopted name of privilege—
A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen.

All his offences live upon my head 20
And on his father's : we did train him on ;
And, his corruption being ta'en from us,
We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all.

Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know,
In any case, the offer of the King. 25

Ver. Deliver what you will, I'll say 'tis so.
Here comes your cousin.

Enter HOTSPUR and DOUGLAS.

Hot. My uncle is return'd :
Deliver up my Lord of Westmoreland.

Uncle, what news ? 30

Wor. The King will bid you battle presently.

Doug. Defy him by the Lord of Westmoreland.

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him
so.

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly. [Exit.]

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the
King. 35

Hot. Did you beg any ? God forbid !

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances,
Of his oath-breaking ; which he mended
thus,

By now forswearing that he is forsworn. 39
He calls us rebels, traitors, and will scourge
With haughty arms this hateful name in us.

Re-enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen, to arms ! for I have thrown

A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth—
And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear it—

Which cannot choose but bring him quickly
on. 45

Wor. The Prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the King,

And, nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O, would the quarrel lay upon our heads ;

And that no man might draw short breath
to-day

But I and Harry Monmouth ! Tell me, tell
me, 50

How show'd his tasking ? Seem'd it in contempt ?

Ver. No, by my soul, I never in my life
Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly,

Unless a brother should a brother dare
To gentle exercise and proof of arms. 55

He gave you all the duties of a man ;
Trimm'd up your praises with a princely
tongue ;

Spoke your deservings like a chronicle ;
Making you ever better than his praise,

By still dispraising praise valued with you ;
And, which became him like a prince indeed,

He made a blushing cital of himself, 62
And chid his truant youth with such a
grace

As if he mast'rd there a double spirit,
Of teaching and of learning instantly.

There did he pause ; but let me tell the
world—

If he outlive the envy of this day, 67
 England did never owe so sweet a hope,
 So much misconstrued in his wantonness.

Hot. Cousin, I think thou art enamoured
 On his follies. Never did I hear 71
 Of any prince so wild a liberty.

But be he as he will, yet once ere night
 I will embrace him with a soldier's arm,
 That he shall shrink under my courtesy. 75
 Arm, arm with speed! and, fellows, soldiers, friends,

Better consider what you have to do Than I, that have not well the gift of
 tongue,

Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you. 80

Hot. I cannot read them now.

O gentlemen, the time of life is short!
 To spend that shortness basely were too
 long,

If life did ride upon a dial's point,
 Still ending at the arrival of an hour. 85
 An if we live, we live to tread on kings;
 If die, brave death, when princes die with
 us!

Now, for our consciences, the arms are fair,
 When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My lord, prepare; the King comes on apace. 90

Hot. I thank him that he cuts me from my tale,

For I profess not talking; only this—Let each man do his best. And here draw I
 A sword, whose temper I intend to stain
 With the best blood that I can meet withal
 In the adventure of this perilous day. 96
 Now, Esperance! Percy! and set on.
 Sound all the lofty instruments of war,
 And by that music let us all embrace;
 For, heaven to earth, some of us never shall
 A second time do such a courtesy. 101

[They embrace. The trumpets sound.
Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A plain between the camps.

The KING passes across with his power.
Alarum to the battle. Then enter DOUGLAS and SIR WALTER BLUNT.

Blunt. What is thy name, that in battle
 thus

Thou crossest me? What honour dost thou seek

Upon my head?

Doug. Know, then, my name is Douglas;
 And I do haunt thee in the battle thus Because some tell me that thou art a king.

Blunt. They tell thee true. 6

Doug. The Lord of Stafford dear to-day hath bought

Thy likeness; for instead of thee, King
 Harry,

This sword hath ended him. So shall it
 thee,

Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner. 10

Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot;

And thou shalt find a king that will revenge
 Lord Stafford's death.

[They fight. Douglas kills Blunt.]

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. O Douglas, hadst thou fought at Holmedon thus,

I never had triumph'd upon a Scot. 15

Doug. All's done, all's won; here breathless lies the King.

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here.

Hot. This, Douglas? No: I know this face full well;

A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt; 20

Semblably furnish'd like the King himself.

Doug. A fool go with thy soul whither it goes!

A borrowed title hast thou bought too dear;
 Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a
 king?

Hot. The King hath many marching in his coats.

Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all
 his coats; 25

I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece,
 Until I meet the King.

Hot. Up, and away!

Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day.

[Exeunt.]

Alarum. Enter FALSTAFF, solus.

Fal. Though I could scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here: here's no scoring but upon the pate. Soft! who are you? Sir Walter Blunt. There's honour for you! Here's no vanity! I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too. God keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than mine own bowels. I have led my ragamuffins where they are pepper'd;
 there's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive, and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here?

Enter the PRINCE OF WALES.

Prince. What, stand'st thou idle here?
 Lend me thy sword.

Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff 40
 Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies, Whose deaths are yet unreveng'd. I prithee lend me thy sword.

Fal. O Hal, I prithee give me leave to breathe awhile. Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms as I have done this day.
 I have paid Percy, I have made him sure.

Prince. He is, indeed, and living to kill thee. I prithee lend me thy sword. ⁴⁷

Fal. Nay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou get'st not my sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt.

Prince. Give it me. What, is it in the case? ⁵⁰

Fal. Ay, Hal; 'tis hot, 'tis hot; there's that will sack a city. [The Prince draws it out, and finds it to be a bottle of sack.]

Prince. What, is it a time to jest and dally now? [He throws the bottle at him. Exit.]

Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pierce him. If he do come in my way, so; if he do not, if I come in his willingly, let him make a carbonado of me. I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath. Give me life, which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlook'd for, and there's an end. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter the KING, the PRINCE OF WALES, PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, and WESTMORELAND.

King. I prithee, Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleedest too much;

Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

P. John. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.

Prince. I beseech your Majesty, make up, ⁵ lest your retirement do amaze your friends.

King. I will do so.

My Lord of Westmoreland, lead him to his tent.

West. Come, my lord, I'll lead you to your tent.

Prince. Lead me, my lord? I do not need your help; ¹⁰

And God forbid a shallow scratch should drive

The Prince of Wales from such a field as this,

Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on, And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

P. John. We breathe too long. Come, cousin Westmoreland, ¹⁵

Our duty this way lies; for God's sake, come.

[Exeunt Prince John and Westmoreland.]

Prince. By God, thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster!

I did not think thee lord of such a spirit; Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John,

But now I do respect thee as my soul. ²⁰

King. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point

With lustier maintenance than I did look for Of such an ungrown warrior.

Prince. O, this boy lends mettle to us all! [Exit.]

Enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Another king! They grow like Hydra's heads. ²⁵

I am the Douglas, fatal to all those That wear those colours on them. What art thou,

That counterfeit'st the person of a king?

King. The King himself, who, Douglas, grieves at heart

So many of his shadows thou hast met, ³⁰

And not the very King. I have two boys

Seek Percy and thyself about the field;

But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,

I will assay thee; so, defend thyself.

Doug. I fear thou art another counterfeit; ³⁵

And yet, in faith, thou bearest thee like a king;

But mine I am sure thou art, who'er thou be,

And thus I win thee.

[They fight, the King being in danger.]

Re-enter the PRINCE.

Prince. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like Never to hold it up again. The spirits ⁴⁰

Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms;

It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee, Who never promiseth but he means to pay.

[They fight; Douglas flies.]

Cheerly, my lord: how fares your Grace? Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent,

And so hath Clifton. I'll to Clifton straight.

King. Stay, and breathe awhile. ⁴⁷

Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion; And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my life,

In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

Prince. O God, they did me too much injury

That ever said I heark'ned for your death! If it were so, I might have let alone

The insulting hand of Douglas over you, Which would have been as speedy in your end ⁵⁵

As all the poisonous potions in the world, And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

King. Make up to Clifton, I'll to Sir Nicholas Gawsey. [Exit.]

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

Prince. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name. ⁶⁰

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

Prince. Why, then I see A very valiant rebel of the name.

I am the Prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,

To share with me in glory any more.
Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere, 65
Nor can one England brook a double reign
Of Harry Percy and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the hour is
come

To end the one of us ; and would to God Thy name in arms were now as great as mine ! 70

Prince. I'll make it greater ere I part
from thee,
And all the budding honours on thy crest
I'll crop to make a garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities.
[They fight.]

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Well said, Hal ! to it, Hal ! Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you.

Re-enter DOUGLAS ; he fights with Falstaff, who falls down as if he were dead ; Douglas withdraws. Hotspur is wounded, and falls.

Hot. O, Harry, thou hast robb'd me of my youth ! 77

I better brook the loss of brittle life Than those proud titles thou hast won of
me :

They would my thoughts worse than thy sword my flesh ;

But thoughts, the slaves of life, and life,
time's fool, 81

And time, that takes survey of all the world,
Must have a stop. O, I could prophesy,
But that the earthy and cold hand of death Lies on my tongue. No, Percy, thou art dust 85

And food for— [Dies.]

Prince. For worms, brave Percy. Fare thee well, great heart !

Ill-weav'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk !

When that this body did contain a spirit,
A kingdom for it was too small a bound ; 90
But now two paces of the vilest earth
Is room enough. This earth that bears thee
dead

Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.

If thou wert sensible of courtesy, 94

I should not make so dear a show of zeal ;

But let my favours hide thy mangled face,

And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself

For doing these fair rites of tenderness.

Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to

heaven !

Thy ignominy sleep with thee in the grave,

But not rememb'rd in thy epitaph ! 101

[He spieth Falstaff on the ground.]
What, old acquaintance ! Could not all this flesh

Keep in a little life ? Poor Jack, farewell !

I could have better spar'd a better man.

O, I should have a heavy miss of thee, 105

If I were much in love with vanity !
Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day
Though many dearer, in this bloody fray
Embowell'd will I see thee by and by ; 109
Till then in blood by noble Percy lie. [Exit]

Fal. [Rising up] Embowell'd ! If thou embowel me to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me and eat me too to-morrow.
'Sblood, 'twas time to counterfeit, or that hot termagant Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit ? I lie, I am not counterfeit : to die is to be a counterfeit for he is but the counterfeit of a man who hath not the life of a man ; but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part of valour is discretion ; in the which better part I have saved my life. Zounds, I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy, though he be dead ; how if he should counterfeit too and rise ? By my faith, I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make him sure ; yea, and I'll swear
I kill'd him. Why may not he rise as well as I ? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me. Therefore, sirrah [stabbing him], with a new wound in your thigh come you along with me. 120

[He takes up Hotspur on his back]

*Re-enter the PRINCE OF WALES and PRINCE

Prince. Come, brother John, full bravely hast thou flesh'd
Thy maiden sword.

P. John. But, soft ! whom have we here ?
Did you not tell me this fat man was dead ?

Prince. I did ; I saw him dead, Breathless and bleeding on the ground. Art thou alive ?

Or is it fantasy that plays upon our eye
sight ? 130

I prithee speak ; we will not trust our eyes
Without our ears : thou art not what thou seem'st.

Fal. No, that's certain : I am not a double man ; but if I be not Jack Falstaff then am I a Jack. There is Percy [throwing the body down] ; if your father will do me any honour, so ; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you. 14

Prince. Why, Percy I kill'd myself, and saw thee dead.

Fal. Didst thou ? Lord, Lord, how this world is given to lying ! I grant you I was down and out of breath, and so was he,
but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believ'd, so ; if not, let them that should reward valour bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh ; if the mar-

were alive, and would deny it, zounds,
I would make him eat a piece of my sword.

P. John. This is the strangest tale that ever I heard.

Prince. This is the strangest fellow, brother John.

Come, bring your luggage nobly on your
back. 155

For my part, if a lie may do thee grace,
I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.

[A retreat is sounded.

The trumpet sounds retreat; the day is ours.

Come, brother, let us to the highest of the
field, 159

To see what friends are living, who are dead.
[Exeunt the Prince and Prince

John of Lancaster.

Fal. I'll follow, as they say, for reward.
He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do. [Exit.

SCENE V. Another part of the field.

The Trumpets sound. Enter the KING, the PRINCE OF WALES, PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, with WOR-CESTER and VERNON prisoners.

King. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.
Ill-spirited Worcester! did not we send
grace,

Pardon and terms of love to all of you?
And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary?
Misuse the tenour of thy kinsman's trust?
Three knights upon our party slain to-day,
A noble earl, and many a creature else,
Had been alive this hour,
If like a Christian thou hadst truly borne Betwixt our armies true intelligence. 10

Wor. What I have done my safety urg'd me to;

And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be avoided it falls on me.

King. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too;

Other offenders we will pause upon. 15

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon guarded.

How goes the field?

Prince. The noble Scot, Lord Douglas, when he saw

The fortune of the day quite turn'd from
him,

The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear, fled with the rest;
And falling from a hill, he was so bruised
That the pursuers took him. At my tent
The Douglas is; and I beseech your Grace
I may dispose of him.

King. With all my heart.

Prince. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you 25

This honourable bounty shall belong:
Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless and free;
His valours shown upon our crests to-day
Have taught us how to cherish such high deeds 30

Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

P. John. I thank your Grace for this high courtesy,

Which I shall give away immediately.

King. Then this remains—that we divide our power.

You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland, 35

Towards York shall bend you with your dearest speed

To meet Northumberland and the prelate Scroop,

Who, as we hear, are busily in arms.

Myself, and you, son Harry, will towards Wales

To fight with Glendower and the Earl of March. 40

Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway,
Meeting the check of such another day;
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won.

[Exeunt.

THE SCENE : England.

INDUCTION

Warkworth. Before Northumberland's castle.

Enter RUMOUR, painted full of tongues.

Rum. Open your ears ; for which of you will stop

The vent of hearing when loud Rumour speaks ?

I, from the orient to the drooping west,
Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
The acts commenced on this ball of earth. 5
Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,
The which in every language I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.
I speak of peace while covert enmity,
Under the smile of safety, wounds the world ; 10

And who but Rumour, who but only I,
Make fearful musters and prepar'd defence, Whiles the big year, swoln with some other
grief,

Is thought with child by the stern tyrant
war,

And no such matter ? Rumour is a pipe 15

Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures,
And of so easy and so plain a stop
That the blunt monster with uncounted
heads,

The still-discordant wav'ring multitude,
Can play upon it. But what need I thus 20
My well-known body to anatomize Among my household ? Why is Rumour
here ?

I run before King Harry's victory,
Who, in a bloody field by Shrewsbury, Hath beaten down young Hotspur and his troops, 25

Quenching the flame of bold rebellion Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I

To speak so true at first ? My office is 28
To noise abroad that Harry Monmouth fell
Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword,
And that the King before the Douglas' rage
Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.
This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns

Between that royal field of Shrewsbury 34
And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,

Where Hotspur's father, old Northumber-
land,
Lies crafty-sick. The posts come tiring on,
And not a man of them brings other news Than they have learnt of me. From Rumour's tongues 39
They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs. [Exit.]

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Warkworth. Before Northumberland's castle.

Enter LORD BARDOLPH.

L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here, ho ?

The Porter opens the gate.

Where is the Earl ?

Port. What shall I say you are ?

L. Bard. Tell thou the Earl
That the Lord Bardolph doth attend him
here.

Port. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard.

Please it your honour knock but at the gate, 5

And he himself will answer.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

L. Bard. Here comes the Earl.

[Exit Porter.]

North. What news, Lord Bardolph ?
Every minute now

Should be the father of some stratagem.
The times are wild ; contention, like a horse

Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose 10

And bears down all before him.

L. Bard. Noble Earl,
I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.

North. Good, an God will !

L. Bard. As good as heart can wish.
The King is almost wounded to the death ;

And, in the fortune of my lord your son, 15
Prince Harry slain outright ; and both the Blunts

Kill'd by the hand of Douglas ; young Prince John,

And Westmoreland, and Stafford, fled the
field ;

And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk
Sir John,

Is prisoner to your son. O, such a day, 20
So fought, so followed, and so fairly won,

Came not till now to dignify the times,
Since Cæsar's fortunes !

North. How is this deriv'd ?
Saw you the field ? Came you from Shrewsbury ?

L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence ; 25

A gentleman well bred and of good name,
That freely rend'red me these news for true.

Enter TRAVERS.

North. Here comes my servant Travers, whom I sent

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

L. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way ; 30

And he is furnish'd with no certainties

More than he haply may retail from me.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings comes with you ?

Tra. My lord, Sir John Umfreville turn'd me back

With joyful tidings ; and, being better
hors'd, 35

Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard

A gentleman, almost spent with speed,
That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied
horse.

He ask'd the way to Chester ; and of him
I did demand what news from Shrewsbury.

He told me that rebellion had bad luck, 41
And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.

With that he gave his able horse the head
And, bending forward, struck his armed heels

Against the panting sides of his poor jade
Up to the rowel-head ; and starting so, 46

He seem'd in running to devour the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha ! Again : Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold ?

Of Hotspur, Coldspur ? that rebellion 50
Had met ill luck ?

L. Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what :
If my young lord your son have not the
day,

Upon mine honour, for a silken point
I'll give my barony. Never talk of it.

North. Why should that gentleman that rode by Travers 55

Give then such instances of loss ?

L. Bard. Whc—he ?
He was some hilding fellow that had stol'n
The horse he rode on and, upon my life, Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter MORTON.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf, 60

Foretells the nature of a tragic volume.
So looks the strand whereon the imperious flood

Hath left a witness'd usurpation.
Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury ?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble
lord ; 65

Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask

To fright our party.

North. How doth my son and brother ?
Thou tremblest ; and the whiteness in thy cheek

Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.
Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless, 70
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night
And would have told him half his Troy was burnt ;

But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death ere thou report'st it. 75

This thou wouldst say : ' Your son did thus and thus ;

Your brother thus ; so fought the noble Douglas '—

Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds ;

But in the end, to stop my ear indeed,
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise,
Ending with ' Brother, son, and all, are dead '. 81

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet ;

But for my lord your son—

North. Why, he is dead.
See what a ready tongue suspicion hath !
He that but fears the thing he would not know 85

Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes

That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak, Morton ;

Tell thou an earl his divination lies,
And I will take it as a sweet disgrace
And make thee rich for doing me such wrong. 90

Mor. You are too great to be by me gainsaid ;

Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's dead.

I see a strange confession in thine eye ;
Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear or sin 95

To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so :
The tongue offends not that reports his death ;

And he doth sin that doth belie the dead,
Not he which says the dead is not alive.

Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news 100
Hath but a losing office, and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,
Rememb'ed tolling a departing friend.

L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe 105
That which I would to God I had not seen ;

But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state,

Rend'ring faint quittance, wearied and out breath'd,

To Harry Monmouth, whose swift wrath beat down

The never-daunted Percy to the earth, 110
From whence with life he never more sprung up.

In few, his death—whose spirit lent a fit
Even to the dullest peasant in his camp—
Being bruited once, took fire and heat away

From the best-temper'd courage in his troops ; 115

For from his metal was his party steeled
Which once in him abated, all the rest

Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead.

And as the thing that's heavy in itself 120
Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed

So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss,
Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear

That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim

Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety,

Fly from the field. Then was that noble Worcester 125

Too soon ta'en prisoner ; and that furious Scot,

The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword

Had three times slain th' appearance of the King,

Gan vail his stomach and did grace the shame

Of those that turn'd their backs, and in his flight, 130

Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all
Is that the King hath won, and hath sent out

A speedy power to encounter you, my lord
Under the conduct of young Lancaster
And Westmoreland. This is the news at full. 135

North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn.

In poison there is physic ; and these news
Having been well, that would have made me sick,

Being sick, have in some measure made me well ;

And as the wretch whose fever-weak'n'd joints, 140

Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life
Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire

Out of his keeper's arms, even so my limbs
Weak'n'd with grief, being now enrag'd with grief,

Are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch ! 145

A scaly gauntlet now with joints of steel

Must glove this hand ; and hence, thou sickly coif !
Thou art a guard too wanton for the head
Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit.
Now bind my brows with iron ; and approach 150
The ragged'st hour that time and spite dare
bring
To frown upon th' enrag'd Northumber-
land !
Let heaven kiss earth ! Now let not Nature's hand
Keep the wild flood confin'd ! Let order
die !
And let this world no longer be a stage 155
To feed contention in a ling'ring act ;
But let one spirit of the first-born Cain Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set
On bloody courses, the rude scene may end
And darkness be the burier of the dead ! 160
L. Bard. This strained passion doth you wrong, my lord.
Mor. Sweet Earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.
The lives of all your loving complices
Lean on your health ; the which, if you give o'er
To stormy passion, must perforce decay. 165
You cast th' event of war, my noble lord,
And summ'd the account of chance before you said
'Let us make head'. It was your presumise
That in the dole of blows your son might drop.
You knew he walk'd o'er perils on an edge, 170
More likely to fall in than to get o'er ;
You were advis'd his flesh was capable Of wounds and scars, and that his forward
spirit
Would lift him where most trade of danger
rang'd ;
Yet did you say 'Go forth' ; and none
of this, 175
Though strongly apprehended, could restrain
The stiff-borne action. What hath then befall'n,
Or what hath this bold enterprise brought
forth
More than that being which was like to be ?
L. Bard. We all that are engaged to this loss 180
Knew that we ventured on such dangerous
seas
That if we wrought out life 'twas ten to
one ;
And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd
Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd ;
And since we are o'erset, venture again. 185
Come, we will all put forth, body and goods.

Mor. 'Tis more than time. And, my most noble lord,
I hear for certain, and dare speak the truth :
The gentle Archbishop of York is up
With well-appointed pow'rs. He is a man Who with a double surety binds his followers. 191
My lord your son had only but the corpse,
But shadows and the shows of men, to fight ;
For that same word 'rebellion' did divide
The action of their bodies from their souls ;
And they did fight with queasiness, con-strain'd, 196
As men drink potions ; that their weapons
only Seem'd on our side, but for their spirits and souls
This word 'rebellion'—it had froze them
up,
As fish are in a pond. But now the Bishop Turns insurrection to religion. 201
Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts, He's follow'd both with body and with
mind ;
And doth enlarge his rising with the blood
Of fair King Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones ; 205
Derives from heaven his quarrel and his cause ;
Tells them he doth bestride a bleeding land,
Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke ;
And more and less do flock to follow him.
North. I knew of this before ; but, to speak truth, 210
This present grief had wip'd it from my
mind.
Go in with me ; and counsel every man
The aptest way for safety and revenge.
Get posts and letters, and make friends
with speed—
Never so few, and never yet more need. 215
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. A street.

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, with his Page bearing his sword and buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water ?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water ; but for the party that owed it, he might have moe diseases than he knew for. 5

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me. The brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent anything that intends to laughter, more than I invent or is invented on me. I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath over-whelm'd all her litter but one. If the Prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment. Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap than to wait at my heels. I was never mann'd with an agate till now; but I will inset you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel—the juvenal, the Prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledge. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand than he shall get one off his cheek; and yet he will not stick to say his face is a face-royal. God may finish it when he will, 'tis not a hair amiss yet. He may keep it still at a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it; and yet he'll be crowing as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he's almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said Master Dommelton about the satin for my short cloak and my slops? 28

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph. He would not take his band and yours; he liked not the security. 31

Fal. Let him be damn'd, like the Glutton; pray God his tongue be hotter! A whoreson Achitophel! A rascal-yea-forsooth knave, to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security! The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is through with them in honest taking-up, then they must stand upon security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth as offer to stop it with security. I look'd 'a should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it; and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lanthorn to light him. Where's Bardolph? 45

Page. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield. An I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were mann'd, hors'd, and wiv'd. 50

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE and Servant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the Prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him.

Ch. Justice. What's he that goes there?

Serv. Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robb'ry? 56

Serv. He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the Lord John of Lancaster.

Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back again. 60

Serv. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder; my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of anything good. Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him. 6

Serv. Sir John!

Fal. What! a young knave, and begging! Is there not wars? Is there not employment? Doth not the King lack subjects? Do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Serv. You mistake me, sir. 74

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? Setting my knighthood and my soldiership aside, I had lied in my throat if I had said so. 77

Serv. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiership aside; and give me leave to tell you you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man. 81

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou get'st any leave of me, hang me; if thou tak'st leave, thou wert better be hang'd. You hunt counter. Hence! Avaunt! 83

Serv. Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord! God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad. I heard say your lordship was sick; I hope your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury. 96

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his Majesty is return'd with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his Majesty. You would not come when I sent for you. 100

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his Highness is fall'n into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, God mend him! I pray you let me speak with you. 104

Fal. This apoplexy, as I take it, is a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship, a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling. 107

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? Be it as it is.

Fal. It hath it original from much grief, from study, and perturbation of the brain. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen; it is a kind of deafness. 111

Ch. Just. I think you are fall'n into the disease, for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well. Rather an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal. 116

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not if I do become your physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient. Your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or indeed a scruple itself. 124

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advis'd by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy. 130

Fal. He that buckles himself in my belt cannot live in less.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater and my waist slenderer. 135

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful Prince.

Fal. The young Prince hath misled me. I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog. 138

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gall a new-heal'd wound. Your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill. You may thank th' unquiet time for your quiet o'erposting that action. 142

Fal. My lord—

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf. 145

Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A wassail candle, my lord—all tallow; if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth. 150

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair in your face but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravity, gravity, gravity.

Ch. Just. You follow the young Prince up and down, like his ill angel. 155

Fal. Not so, my lord. Your ill angel is light; but I hope he that looks upon me will take me without weighing. And yet in some respects, I grant, I cannot go—I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these costermongers' times that true valour is turn'd berod; pregnancy is made a tapster, and his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings; all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you do measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls; and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye, a dry hand, a yellow cheek, a white beard, a decreasing leg, an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken, your wind short, your chin double, your wit single, and every part about you blasted with antiquity? And will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, Sir John! 175

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head and something a round belly. For my voice—I have lost it with hallooing and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not. The truth is, I am only old in judgement and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him. For the box of the ear that the Prince gave you—he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have check'd him for it; and the young lion repents—marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack. 186

Ch. Just. Well, God send the Prince a better companion!

Fal. God send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him. 190

Ch. Just. Well, the King hath sever'd you. I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster against the Archbishop and the Earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yea; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my Lady Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily. If it be a hot day, and I brandish anything but a bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head but I am thrust upon it. Well, I cannot last ever; but it was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If ye will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is. I were better to be eaten to death with a rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion. 207

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest;
and God bless your expedition!

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth? 211

Ch. Just. Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well. Commend me to my cousin Westmoreland. [Exeunt Chief Justice and Servant.]

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle. A man can no more separate age and covetousness than 'a can part young limbs and lechery; but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other; and so both the degrees prevent my curses.
Boy!

Page. Sir?

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats and two pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse; borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster; this to the Prince;
this to the Earl of Westmoreland; and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceiv'd the first white hair of my chin. About it; you know where to find me. [Exit Page] A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pox! for the one or the other plays the rogue with my great toe. 'Tis no matter if I do halt;
I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of anything. I will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit.]

SCENE III. York. The Archbishop's palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP, THOMAS MOWBRAY
the Earl Marshal, LORD HASTINGS and LORD BARDOLPH.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause and known our means;

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes—
And first, Lord Marshal, what say you to it?

Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our
arms;

But gladly would be better satisfied
How, in our means, we should advance ourselves

To look with forehead bold and big enough
Upon the power and puissance of the King.

Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file 10

To five and twenty thousand men of choice;
And our supplies live largely in the hope Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns

With an incensed fire of injuries.

L. Bard. The question then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus: 15

Whether our present five and twenty thousand

May hold up head without Northumber-
land?

Hast. With him, we may.

L. Bard. Yea, marry, there's the point
But if without him we be thought too feeble,

My judgment is we should not step too far

Till we had his assistance by the hand;
For, in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this,
Conjecture, expectation, and surmise
Of aids incertain, should not be admitted

Arch. 'Tis very true, Lord Bardolph; fo-
indeed 2

It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury

L. Bard. It was, my lord; who lin'd himself with hope,

Eating the air and promise of supply,
Flatt'ring himself in project of a power Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts; 3

And so, with great imagination
Proper to madmen, led his powers to death
And, winking, leapt into destruction.

Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt

To lay down likelihoods and forms of hope

L. Bard. Yes, if this present quality of
war— 3

Indeed the instant action, a cause on foot—
Lives so in hope, as in an early spring
We see th' appearing buds; which to prove fruit

Hope gives not so much warrant, as despair
That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,

We first survey the plot, then draw the model;

And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection
Which if we find outweighs ability,

What do we then but draw anew the model
In fewer offices, or at least desist

To build at all? Much more, in this great work—

Which is almost to pluck a kingdom down
And set another up—should we survey 5

The plot of situation and the model,
Consent upon a sure foundation,

Question surveyors, know our own estate
How able such a work to undergo—

To weigh against his opposite; or else 5

We fortify in paper and in figures,
Using the names of men instead of men

Like one that draws the model of a house
Beyond his power to build it; who, half

through, 5

Gives o'er and leaves his part-created cost
A naked subject to the weeping clouds

And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant that our hopes—yet likely of fair birth—

Should be still-born, and that we now possess'd
The utmost man of expectation, 65
I think we are so a body strong enough,
Even as we are, to equal with the King.
L. Bard. What, is the King but five and twenty thousand?
Hast. To us no more; nay, not so much,
Lord Bardolph;
For his divisions, as the times do brawl, 70
Are in three heads: one power against the French,
And one against Glendower; perforce a third
Must take up us. So is the unfirm King
In three divided; and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness. 75 Arch. That he should draw his several strengths together
And come against us in full puissance
Need not be dreaded.
Hast. If he should do so,
He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh 79
Baying him at the heels. Never fear that.
L. Bard. Who is it like should lead his forces hither?
Hast. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmoreland;
Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Monmouth;
But who is substituted against the French
I have no certain notice.
Arch. Let us on, 85
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own
choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited.
An habitation giddy and unsure 89
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O thou fond many, with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing
Bolingbroke
Before he was what thou wouldst have him
be!
And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him 95
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him
up.
So, so, thou common dog, didst thou
disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard;
And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit
up,
And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times? 100
They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him die
Are now become enamour'd on his grave.
Thou that threw'st dust upon his goodly
head,
When through proud London he came sighing on

After th' admired heels of Bolingbroke, 105
Criest now 'O earth, yield us that king
again,
And take thou this!' O thoughts of men
accurs'd!
Past and to come seems best; things present, worst.
Mowb. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set on?
Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt.]

ACT TWO

SCENE I. London. A street.

Enter Hostess with two officers, FANG and SNARE.

Host. Master Fang, have you ent'red the action?
Fang. It is ent'red.
Host. Where's your yeoman? Is't a lusty yeoman? Will 'a stand to't?
Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare? 5
Host. O Lord, ay! good Master Snare.
Snare. Here, here.
Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Falstaff.
Host. Yea, good Master Snare; I have ent'red him and all. 10 Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab.
Host. Alas the day! take heed of him;
he stabb'd me in mine own house, and that most beastly. In good faith, 'a cares not what mischief he does, if his weapon be out; he will foil like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child. 17 Fang. If I can close with him, I care not for his thrust.
Host. No, nor I neither; I'll be at your elbow.
Fang. An I but fist him once; an 'a come but within my vice! 21 Host. I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score. Good Master Fang, hold him sure. Good Master Snare, let him not escape. 'A comes continually to Pie-corner—saving your manhoods—to buy a saddle; and he is indited to dinner to the Lubber's Head in Lumbert Street, to Master Smooth's the silkman. I pray you, since my exion is ent'red, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear;
and I have borne, and borne, and borne;
and have been fubb'd off, and fubb'd off,
and fubb'd off, from this day to that day,
that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing; unless a woman should be made an ass and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong. 36

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, Page, and BARDOLPH.

Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmsey-nose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, Master Fang and Master Snare; do me, do me, do me your offices.

Fal. How now! whose mare's dead? What's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets! Draw, Bardolph. Cut me off the villain's head. Throw the quean in the channel.

Host. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardy rogue! Murder, murder! Ah, thou honeysuckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the King's? Ah, thou honey-seed rogue! thou art a honey-seed; a man-queller and a woman-queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two. Thou wot, wot thou! thou wot, wot ta? Do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Page. Away, you scullion! you rumpallian! you fustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE and his Men.

Ch. Just. What is the matter? Keep the peace here, ho!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me. I beseech you, stand to me.

Ch. Just. How now, Sir John! what, are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time, and business?

You should have been well on your way to York.

Stand from him, fellow; wherefore hang'st thou upon him?

Host. O my most worshipful lord, an't please your Grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum?

Host. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all—all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his. But I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee a nights like the mare.

Fal. I think I am as like to ride the mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fie! What man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Wheeson week, when the Prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor—thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then and call me gossip Quickly? Coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar, telling us she had a good dish of prawns, whereby thou didst desire to eat some, whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarity with such poor people, saying that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath. Deny it, if thou canst.

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul, and she says up and down the town that her eldest son is like you. She hath been in good case, and, the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you I may have redress against them.

Ch. Just. Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration. You have, as it appears to me, practis'd upon the easy yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and in person.

Host. Yea, in truth, my lord.

Ch. Just. Pray thee, peace. Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villainy you have done with her; the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this snep without reply. You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness; if a man will make curtsy and say nothing, he is virtuous. No, my lord, my humble duty rememb'red, I will not be your suitor. I say to you I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the King's affairs.

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong; but answer in th' effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither hostess.

Enter GOWER.

Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower, what news?

Gow. The King, my lord, and Harry Prince of Wales
Are near at hand. The rest the paper tells.
[Gives a letter.]
Fal. As I am a gentleman!
Host. Faith, you said so before.
Fal. As I am a gentleman! Come, no more words of it.
Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.
Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking; and for thy walls, a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting, in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangers and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound, if thou canst. Come, an 'twere not for thy humours, there's not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw the action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to this.
Host. Pray thee, Sir John, let it be but twenty nobles; i' faith, I am loath to pawn my plate, so God save me, la!
Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift. You'll be a fool still.
Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper. You'll pay me all together?
Fal. Will I live? [To Bardolph] Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on.
Host. Will you have Doll Tearsheet meet you at supper?
Fal. No more words; let's have her.
[Exeunt Hostess, Bardolph, and Officers.]
Ch. Just. I have heard better news.
Fal. What's the news, my lord?
Ch. Just. Where lay the King to-night?
Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.
Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well. What is the news, my lord?
Ch. Just. Come all his forces back?
Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse,
Are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster,
Against Northumberland and the Archbishop.
Fal. Comes the King back from Wales, my noble lord?
Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently.
Come, go along with me, good Master Gower.
Fal. My lord!
Ch. Just. What's the matter?
Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?
Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here, I thank you, good Sir John.
Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gower?
Ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?
Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me. This is the right fencing grace, my lord: tap for tap, and so part fair.
Ch. Just. Now, the Lord lighten thee! Thou art a great fool.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. Another street.

Enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS.

Prince. Before God, I am exceeding weary.
Poins. Is't come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attach'd one of so high blood.
Prince. Faith, it does me; though it discolours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?
Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition.
Prince. Belike then my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But indeed these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name, or to know thy face to-morrow, or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast—viz., these, and those that were thy peach-colour'd ones—or to bear the inventory of thy shirts—as, one for superfluity, and another for use! But that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I; for it is a low ebb of linen with thee when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland. And God knows whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom; but the midwives say the children are not in the fault; whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.
Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?
Prince. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?
Poins. Yes, faith; and let it be an excellent good thing.
Prince. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.
Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.
Prince. Marry, I tell thee it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick ; albeit I could tell to thee—as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend—I could be sad and sad indeed too.

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.

Prince. By this hand, thou thinkest me as far in the devil's book as thou and Falstaff for obduracy and persistency : let the end try the man. But I tell thee my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick ; and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow. 47

Poins. The reason ?

Prince. What wouldst thou think of me if I should weep ? 50

Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.

Prince. It would be every man's thought ; and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks. Never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine. Every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so ? 57

Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd and so much engrafted to Falstaff.

Prince. And to thee. 60

Poins. By this light, I am well spoke on ; I can hear it with mine own ears. The worst that they can say of me is that I am a second brother and that I am a proper fellow of my hands ; and those two things, I confess, I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph. 66

Enter BARDOLPH and Page.

Prince. And the boy that I gave Falstaff. 'A had him from me Christian ; and look if the fat villain have not transform'd him ape.

Bard. God save your Grace ! 70

Prince. And yours, most noble Bardolph!

Poins. Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing ? Wherefore blush you now ? What a maidenly man-at-arms are you become ! Is't such a matter to get a pottle-pot's maidenhead ? 75

Page. 'A calls me e'en now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window. At last I spied his eyes ; and methought he had made two holes in the alwife's new petticoat, and so peep'd through. 80

Prince. Has not the boy profited ?

Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away !

Page. Away, you rascally Althæa's dream, away !

Prince. Instruct us, boy ; what dream, boy ? 84

Page. Marry, my lord, Althæa dreamt she was delivered of a fire-brand ; and therefore I call him her dream. 87

Prince. A crown's worth of good interpretation. There 'tis, boy. [Giving a crown.]

Poins. O that this blossom could be kept from cankers ! Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bard. An you do not make him be hang'd among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

Prince. And how doth thy master, Bardolph ? 94

Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your Grace's coming to town. There's a letter for you.

Poins. Deliver'd with good respect. And how doth the martlemas, your master ?

Bard. In bodily health, sir. 99

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician ; but that moves not him. Though that be sick, it dies not.

Prince. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog ; and he holds his place, for look you how he writes. 104

Poins. [Reads] ' John Falstaff, knight '—Every man must know that as oft as he has occasion to name himself, even like those that are kin to the King ; for they never prick their finger but they say ' There's some of the King's blood spilt '. ' How comes that ? ' says he that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer is as ready as a borrower's cap : ' I am the King's poor cousin, sir '. 111

Prince. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But the letter : [Reads] ' Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the King nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting '. 116

Poins. Why, this is a certificate.

Prince. Peace ! [Reads] ' I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity. '—

Poins. He sure means brevity in breath, short-winded.

Prince. [Reads] ' I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins ; for he misuses thy favours so much that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayst, and so farewell. 123

Thine, by yea and no—which is as much as to say as thou usest him—JACK FALSTAFF with my familiars, JOHN with my brothers and sisters, and SIR JOHN with all Europe.'

Poins. My lord, I'll steep this letter in sack and make him eat it. 129

Prince. That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned ? Must I marry your sister ?

Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune ! But I never said so. 134

Prince. Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. Is your master here in London ?

Bard. Yea, my lord.

Prince. Where sups he? Doth the old boar feed in the old frank? 140

Bard. At the old place, my lord, in Eastcheap.

Prince. What company?

Prince. Sup any women with him? 144

Page. None, my lord, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet.

Prince. What pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's. 149

Prince. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull. Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

Prince. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph, no word to your master that I am yet come to town. There's for your silence. 156

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it.

Prince. Fare you well; go. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page] This Doll Tearsheet should be some road. 160

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Albans and London.

Prince. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two leathern jerkins and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers. 166

Prince. From a god to a bull? A heavy descension! It was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice? A low transformation! That shall be mine; for in everything the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Warkworth. Before the castle.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, LADY NORTHUMBERLAND, and LADY PERCY.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,

Give even way unto my rough affairs; Put not you on the visage of the times And be, like them, to Percy troublesome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no more. 5

Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas, sweet wife, my honour is at pawn;

And but my going nothing can redeem it.

Lady P. O, yet, for God's sake, go not to these wars!

The time was, father, that you broke your word, 10

When you were more endear'd to it than now;

When your own Percy, when my heart's dear Harry,

Threw many a northward look to see his father

Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain.

Who then persuaded you to stay at home? There were two honours lost, yours and your son's. 16

For yours, the God of heaven brighten it! For his, it stuck upon him as the sun

In the grey vault of heaven; and by his light

Did all the chivalry of England move 20

To do brave acts. He was indeed the glass

Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves.

He had no legs that practis'd not his gait; And speaking thick, which nature made his blemish,

Became the accents of the valiant; 25

For those that could speak low and tardily Would turn their own perfection to abuse

To seem like him: so that in speech, in gait,

In diet, in affections of delight,

In military rules, humours of blood, 30

He was the mark and glass, copy and book, That fashion'd others. And him—O wondrous him!

O miracle of men!—him did you leave—Second to none, unseconded by you—

To look upon the hideous god of war 35

In disadvantage, to abide a field

Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name

Did seem defensible. So you left him.

Never, O never, do his ghost the wrong To hold your honour more precise and nice

With others than with him! Let them alone. 41

The Marshal and the Archbishop are strong. Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,

To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck, Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

North. Beshrew your heart, 45

Fair daughter, you do draw my spirits from me

With new lamenting ancient oversights. But I must go and meet with danger there,

Or it will seek me in another place, And find me worse provided.

Lady N. O, fly to Scotland 50

Till that the nobles and the armed commons Have of their puissance made a little taste.

Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the King,

Then join you with them, like a rib of steel, To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves, 55

First let them try themselves. So did your son;

He was so suff' red ; so came I a widow ;
And never shall have length of life enough
To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes, That it may grow and sprout as high as
heaven, 60

For recordation to my noble husband.

North. Come, come, go in with me. 'Tis with my mind

As with the tide swell'd up unto his height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither
way.

Fain would I go to meet the Archbishop, 65
But many thousand reasons hold me back.
I will resolve for Scotland. There am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The Boar's Head Tavern in Eastcheap.

Enter FRANCIS and another Drawer.

Francis. What the devil hast thou brought there—appie-johns ? Thou knowest Sir John cannot endure an apple-john. 3

2 Draw. Mass, thou say'st true. The Prince once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns ; and, putting off his hat, said
' I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights '. It ang' red him to the heart ; but he hath forgot that.

Francis. Why, then, cover and set them down ; and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise ; Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music.

Enter third Drawer.

3 Draw. Dispatch ! The room where they supp'd is too hot ; they'll come in straight. 14

Francis. Sirrah, here will be the Prince and Master Poin's anon ; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons ; and Sir John must not know of it. Bardolph hath brought word.

3 Draw. By the mass, here will be old utis ; it will be an excellent stratagem. 20

2 Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak.

Exeunt second and third Drawers.

Enter Hostess and DOLL TEARSHEET.

Host. I'faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality.
Your pulsidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire ; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose, in good truth, la ! But, i' faith, you have drunk too much canaries ; and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say ' What's this ? '
How do you now ?

Doll. Better than I was—hem. 30

Host. Why, that's well said ; a good heart's worth gold. Lo, here comes Sir John.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. [Singing] ' When Arthur first in court '—Empty the jordan. [Exit Francis] —[Singing] ' And was a worthy king '—
How now, Mistress Doll ! 35

Host. Sick of a calm ; yea, good faith.

Fal. So is all her sect ; an they be once in a calm, they are sick.

Doll. A pox damn you, you muddy rascal !
Is that all the comfort you give me ? 40

Fal. You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll.

Doll. I make them ! Gluttony and diseases make them : I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll. We catch of you, Doll, we catch of you ; grant that, my poor virtue, grant
that. 46

Doll. Yea, joy, our chains and our jewels.

Fal. ' Your brooches, pearls, and ouches.'
For to serve bravely is to come halting off ;
you know, to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely ;
to venture upon the charg'd chambers bravely— 51

Doll. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself !

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion ;
you two never meet but you fall to some discord. You are both, i' good truth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts ; you cannot one bear with another's confirmities. What the good-year ! one must bear, and that must be you. You are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel. 58

Doll. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshead ? There's a whole merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him ; you have not seen a hulk better stuff'd in the hold. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack. Thou art going to the wars ; and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares. 64

Re-enter FRANCIS.

Francis. Sir, Ancient Pistol's below and would speak with you.

Doll. Hang him, swaggering rascal ! Let him not come hither ; it is the foulmouth'dst rogue in England. 68

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here. No, by my faith ! I must live among my neighbours ; I'll no swaggerers. I am in good name and fame with the very best.
Shut the door. There comes no swaggerers here ; I have not liv'd all this while to have swaggering now. Shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess ? 75

Host. Pray ye, pacify yourself, Sir John ;
there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear ? It is mine ancient.

Host. Tilly-fally, Sir John, ne'er tell me ; and your ancient swagg'rer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the deputy, t' other day ; and, as he said to me—'twas no longer ago than Wednesday last, 'i good faith !—' Neighbour Quickly,' says he—Master Dumbe, our minister, was by then—' Neighbour Quickly,' says he 'receive those that are civil, for' said he 'you are in an ill name.' Now 'a said so, I can tell whereupon. 'For' says he 'you are an honest woman and well thought on, therefore take heed what guests you receive. Receive' says he 'no swaggering companions.' There comes none here. You would bless you to hear what he said. No, I'll no swagg'rs. 91

Fal. He's no swagg'rer, hostess ; a tame cheater, i' faith ; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound. He'll not swagger with a Barbary hen, if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance. Call him up, drawer. [Exit Francis.]

Host. Cheater, call you him ? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater ; but I do not love swaggering, by my troth. I am the worse when one says 'swagger'. Feel, masters, how I shake ; look you, I warrant you. 100

Doll. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I ? Yea, in very truth, do I, an 'twere an aspen leaf. I cannot abide swagg'rs.

Enter PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and PAGE.

Pist. God save you, Sir John ! 104

Fal. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack ; do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets. 109

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir ; you shall not hardly offend her.

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs nor no bullets. I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I. 113

Pist. Then to you, Mistress Dorothy ; I will charge you.

Doll. Charge me ! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What ! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate ! Away, you mouldy rogue, away ! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy. 119

Doll. Away, you cut-purse rascal ! you filthy bung, away ! By this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal ! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you ! Since when, I pray you, sir ? God's light, with two points on your shoulder ? Much ! 125

Pist. God let me not live but I will murder your ruff for this.

Fal. No more, Pistol ; I would not have you go off here. Discharge yourself of our company, Pistol. 129

Host. No, good Captain Pistol ; not here, sweet captain.

Doll. Captain ! Thou abominable damn'd cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain ? An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out, for taking their names upon you before you have earn'd them. You a captain ! you slave, for what ? For tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-house ? He a captain ! hang him, rogue ! He lives upon mouldy stew'd prunes and dried cakes. A captain ! God's light, these villains will make the word as odious as the word 'occupy' ; which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted. Therefore captains had need look to't. 141

Bard. Pray thee go down, good ancient.

Fal. Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I ! I tell thee what, Corporal Bardolph, I could tear her ; I'll be reveng'd of her. 145

Pist. I'll see her damn'd first ; to Pluto's damn'd lake, by this hand, to th' infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dogs ! down, fators ! Have we not Hiren here ? 151

Host. Good Captain Peesel, be quiet ; 'tis very late, i' faith ; I beseech you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed !

Shall packhorses,

And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia, 155

Which cannot go but thirty mile a day,

Compare with Cæsars, and with Cannibals,

And Troiant Greeks ? Nay, rather damn them with King Cerberus ; and let the welkin roar.

Shall we fall foul for toys ? 160

Host. By my troth, Captain, these are very bitter words.

Bard. Be gone, good ancient ; this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men like dogs ! Give crowns like pins ! Have we not Hiren here ? 165

Host. O' my word, Captain, there's none such here. What the good-year ! do you think I would deny her ? For God's sake, be quiet.

Pist. Then feed and be fat, my fair Calipolis.

Come, give's some sack. 170

'Si fortune me tormente sperato me contento.'

Fear we broadsides ? No, let the fiend give fire.

Give me some sack ; and, sweetheart, lie thou there. [Laying down his sword.]

Come we to full points here, and are etceteras nothings?

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet. 175

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neaf. What!
we have seen the seven stars.

Doll. For God's sake thrust him down stairs; I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. Thrust him down stairs! Know we not Galloway nags? 181

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shove-groat shilling. Nay, an 'a do nothing but speak nothing, 'a shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs. 185

Pist. What! shall we have incision?
Shall we imbrue?

[Snatching up his sword.

Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!

Why, then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping
wounds

Untwine the Sisters Three! Come, Atropos, I say!

Host. Here's goodly stuff toward! 190

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Doll. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw.

Fal. Get you down stairs.

[Drawing and driving Pistol out.

Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll for-swear keeping house afore I'll be in these tirrits and frights. So; murder, I warrant now. Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons, put up your naked weapons. 197

[Exeunt Pistol and Bardolph.

Doll. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal's gone. Ah, you whoreson little valiant villain, you!

Host. Are you not hurt i' th' groin?
Methought 'a made a shrewd thrust at your belly. 201

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

Fal. Have you turn'd him out a doors?

Bard. Yea, sir. The rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, i' th' shoulder.

Fal. A rascal! to brave me! 205

Doll. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you!
Alas, poor ape, how thou sweat'st! Come, let me wipe thy face. Come on, you whoreson chops. Ah, rogue! i' faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the Nine Worthies. Ah, villain! 211

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Doll. Do, an thou dar'st for thy heart.
An thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets. 215

Enter Musicians.

Page. The music is come, sir.

Fal. Let them play. Play, sirs. Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging slave!

The rogue fled from me like quicksilver. 219

Doll. I'faith, and thou follow'dst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting a days and foining a nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for
heaven? 223

Enter, behind, PRINCE HENRY and POINS disguised as drawers.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! Do not speak like a death's-head; do not bid me remember mine end. 225

Doll. Sirrah, what humour 's the Prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow. 'A would have made a good pantler; 'a would ha' chipp'd bread well.

Doll. They say Poins has a good wit. 229

Fal. He a good wit! hang him, baboon!
His wit's as thick as Tewksbury mustard;
there's no more conceit in him than is in a mallet.

Doll. Why does the Prince love him so,
then? 233

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness, and 'a plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fennel, and drinks off candles' ends for flap-dragons, and rides the wild mare with the boys, and jumps upon join'd-stools, and swears with a good grace, and wears his boots very smooth, like unto the sign of the Leg, and breeds
no bate with telling of discreet stories;
and such other gambol faculties 'a has,
that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the Prince admits him. For the Prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoidsdupois. 244

Prince. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him before his whore.

Prince. Look whe'er the wither'd elder hath not his poll claw'd like a parrot. 249

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! What says th' almanac to
that? 254

Poins. And look whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lipping to his master's old tabies, his note-book, his counsel-keeper. 257

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses.

Doll. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart. 260

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Doll. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of?
I shall receive money a Thursday. Shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song, come. 'A grows late; we'll to bed. Thou't forget me when I am gone. 267

Doll. By my troth, thou't set me a-weeping, an thou say'st so. Prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return. Well, hearken a' th' end. 270

Fal. Some sack, Francis.

Prince. } Anon, anon, sir. [Advancing.
Poins. }

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the King's? And art thou not Poins his brother?

Prince. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead! 276

Fal. A better than thou. I am a gentleman: thou art a drawer.

Prince. Very true, sir, and I come to draw you out by the ears. 280

Host. O, the Lord preserve thy Grace! By my troth, welcome to London. Now the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu, are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty, by this light flesh and corrupt blood, thou art welcome. 285

[Leaning his hand upon Doll.

Doll. How, you fat fool! I scorn you.

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman! 291

Host. God's blessing of your good heart! and so she is, by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

Prince. Yea; and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gadshill. You knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience. 297

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

Prince. I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse, and then I know how to handle you. 301

Fal. No abuse, Hal, o' mine honour; no abuse.

Prince. Not—to dispraise me, and call me pantler, and bread-chipper, and I know not what!

Fal. No abuse, Hal. 305

Poins. No abuse!

Fal. No abuse, Ned, i' th' world; honest Ned, none. I disprais'd him before the wicked—that the wicked might not fall in love with thee; in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject; and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal; none, Ned, none; no, faith, boys, none. 312

Prince. See now, whether pure fear and entire cowardice doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us?

Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked? 318

Poins. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath prick'd down Bardolph irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy—there is a good angel about him; but the devil outbids him too.

Prince. For the women? 325

Fal. For one of them—she's in hell already, and burns poor souls. For th' other—I owe her money; and whether she be damn'd for that, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you. 329

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which I think thou wilt howl.

Host. All vict'lers do so. What's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent? 335

Prince. You, gentlewoman—

Doll. What says your Grace?

Fal. His Grace says that which his flesh rebels against. [Knocking within.

Host. Who knocks so loud at door? Look to th' door there, Francis. 340

Enter PETO.

Prince. Peto, how now! What news?

Pet. The King your father is at Westminster;

And there are twenty weak and wearied posts

Come from the north; and as I came along

I met and overtook a dozen captains, 345
Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns,

And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

Prince. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame

So idly to profane the precious time,
When tempest of commotion, like the south, 350

Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt

And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.

Give me my sword and cloak. Falstaff, good night.

[Exeunt Prince, Poins, Peto, and Bardolph.

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence, and leave it unpick'd. [Knocking within] More knocking at the door! 356

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now! What's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently;

A dozen captains stay at door for you. 359

Fal. [To the Page] Pay the musicians, sirrah.—Farewell, hostess; farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after; the undeserver may sleep, when the man of action is call'd on. Farewell, good wenches. If I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go. 365

Doll. I cannot speak. If my heart be not ready to burst! Well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Fal. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt Falstaff and Bardolph.]

Host. Well, fare thee well. I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peascod-time; but an honest and truer-hearted man—well, fare thee well. 371

Bard. [Within] Mistress Tearsheet!

Host. What's the matter?

Bard. [Within] Bid Mistress Tearsheet come to my master. 375

Host. O, run Doll, run, run, good Doll. Come. [To Bardolph] She comes blubber'd.—Yea, will you come, Doll? [Exeunt.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. Westminster. The palace.

Enter the KING in his nightgown, with a Page.

King. Go call the Earls of Surrey and of Warwick;

But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters

And well consider of them. Make good speed. [Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects Are at this hour asleep! O sleep, O gentle sleep, 5

Nature's soft nurse, how have I frightened thee,

That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down,

And steep my senses in forgetfulness? Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,

Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee, 10

And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber,

Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great,

Under the canopies of costly state,

And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody? O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile 15

In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch

A watch-case or a common 'larum-bell? Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast

Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains

In cradle of the rude imperious surge, 20

And in the visitation of the winds, Who take the ruffian billows by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them

With deafing clamour in the slippery clouds,

That with the hurly death itself awakes? 25

Canst thou, O partial sleep, give thy repose To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude;

And in the calmest and most stillest night, With all appliances and means to boot,

Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, lie down! 30

Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter WARWICK and SURREY.

War. Many good morrows to your Majesty!

King. Is it good morrow, lords?

War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past.

King. Why then, good morrow to you all, my lords. 35

Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

War. We have, my liege.

King. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom

How foul it is; what rank diseases grow, And with what danger, near the heart of it.

War. It is but as a body yet distempered; Which to his former strength may be restored

With good advice and little medicine. My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd. King. O God! that one might read the book of fate, 45

And see the revolution of the times Make mountains level, and the continent,

Weary of solid firmness, melt itself Into the sea; and other times to see

The beaky girdle of the ocean 50

Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,

And changes fill the cup of alteration With divers liquors! O, if this were seen,

The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,

What perils past, what crosses to ensue, 55

Would shut the book and sit him down and die.

'Tis not ten years gone Since Richard and Northumberland, great

friends,

Did feast together, and in two years after Were they at wars. It is but eight years

since 60

This Percy was the man nearest my soul; Who like a brother toil'd in my affairs

And laid his love and life under my foot; Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard Gave him defiance. But which of you was by— 65

[To Warwick] You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember—
 When Richard, with his eye brim full of tears,
 Then check'd and rated by Northumberland,
 Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy?
 'Northumberland, thou ladder by the which My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne'—
 Though then, God knows, I had no such intent
 But that necessity so bow'd the state
 That I and greatness were compell'd to kiss—
 'The time shall come'—thus did he follow it—
 'The time will come that foul sin, gathering head, Shall break into corruption' so went on,
 Foretelling this same time's condition
 And the divison of our amity.
 War. There is a history in all men's lives,
 Figuring the natures of the times deceas'd;
 The which observ'd, a man may prophesy,
 With a near aim, of the main chance of things
 As yet not come to life, who in their seeds
 And weak beginning lie intreasur'd.
 Such things become the hatch and brood of time;
 And, by the necessary form of this,
 King Richard might create a perfect guess
 That great Northumberland, then false to him,
 Would of that seed grow to a greater falsehood;
 Which should not find a ground to root upon Unless on you.
 King. Are these things then necessities?
 Then let us meet them like necessities;
 And that same word even now cries out on us.
 They say the Bishop and Northumberland
 Are fifty thousand strong.
 War. It cannot be, my lord.
 Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
 The numbers of the feared. Please it your Grace
 To go to bed. Upon my soul, my lord,
 The powers that you already have sent forth
 Shall bring this prize in very easily.
 To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
 A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
 Your Majesty hath been this fortnight ill;
 And these unseasoned hours perforce must add Unto your sickness.

King. I will take your counsel.

And, were these inward wars once out of hand,
 We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Gloucestershire. Before Justice Shallow's house.

Enter SHALLOW and SILENCE, meeting;
 MOULDY, SHADOW, WART, FEEBLE,
 BULLCALF, and Servants, behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on; give me your hand, sir; give me your hand, sir. An early stirrer, by the rood! And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bed-fellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas, a black ousel, cousin Shallow!

Shal. By yea and no, sir. I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar; he is at Oxford still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost.

Shal. 'A must, then, to the Inns o' Court shortly. I was once of Clement's Inn; where I think they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were call'd 'lusty Shallow' then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was call'd anything; and I would have done anything indeed too, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele a Cotsole man—you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the Inns o' Court again. And I may say to you we knew where the bona-robas were, and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same. I see him break Scoggin's head at the court gate, when 'a was a crack not thus high; and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's Inn. Jesu, Jesu, the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of my old acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure. Death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. By my troth, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Jesu, Jesu, dead! 'A drew a good bow; and dead! 'A shot a fine shoot.

John a Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead ! 'A would have clapp'd i' th' clout at twelve score, and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. How a score of ewes now ?

Sil. Thereafter as they be—a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds. 50

Shal. And is old Double dead ?

Enter BARDOLPH and One with him.

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Shal. Good morrow, honest gentlemen.

Bard. I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow ? 55

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir, a poor esquire of this county, and one of the King's justices of the peace. What is your good pleasure with me ?

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you ; my captain, Sir John Falstaff—a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader. 61

Shal. He greets me well, sir ; I knew him a good backsword man. How doth the good knight ? May I ask how my lady his wife doth ?

Bard. Sir, pardon ; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife. 66

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir ; and it is well said indeed too. ' Better accommodated ' ! It is good ; yea, indeed, is it. Good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. ' Accommodated ' ! It comes of accommodo. Very good ; a good phrase. 71

Bard. Pardon, sir ; I have heard the word. ' Phrase ' call you it ? By this day, I know not the phrase ; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated : that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated ; or, when a man is being—whereby 'a may be thought to be accommodated ; which is an excellent thing. 79

Enter FALSTAFF.

Shal. It is very just. Look, here comes good Sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my troth, you like well and bear your years very well. Welcome, good Sir John. 84

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow. Master Surecard, as I think ?

Shal. No, Sir John ; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace. 90

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fie ! this is hot weather. Gentlemen, have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men ?

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit ?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you. 93

Shal. Where's the roll ? Where's the roll ? Where's the roll ? Let me see, let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so, so—so, so—yea, marry, sir. Rafe Mouldy ! Let them appear as I call ; let them do so, let them do so. Let me see ; where is Mouldy ?

Moul. Here, an't please you. 101

Shal. What think you, Sir John ? A good limb'd fellow ; young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy ?

Moul. Yea, an't please you. 105

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert us'd.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha ! most excellent, i' faith ! Things that are mouldy lack use. Very singular good ! In faith, well said, Sir John ; very well said.

Fal. Prick him. 110

Moul. I was prick'd well enough before, an you could have let me alone. My old dame will be undone now for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery. You need not to have prick'd me ; there are other men fitter to go out than I. 115

Fal. Go to ; peace, Mouldy ; you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent !

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace ; stand aside ; know you where you are ? For th' other, Sir John—let me see. Simon Shadow ! 121

Fal. Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under. He's like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow ?

Shad. Here, sir. 125

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou ?

Shad. My mother's son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother's son ! Like enough ; and thy father's shadow. So the son of the female is the shadow of the male. It is often so indeed ; but much of the father's substance ! 131

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John ?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer. Prick him ; for we have a number of shadows fill up the muster-book.

Shal. Thomas Wart ! 135

Fal. Where's he ?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart ?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart. 140

Shal. Shall I prick him, Sir John ?

Fal. It were superfluous ; for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins. Prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha ! You can do it, sir ; you can do it. I commend you well. Francis Feeble ! 146

Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble ?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir? 150

Fal. You may; but if he had been a man's tailor, he'd ha' prick'd you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat? 154

Fee. I will do my good will, sir; you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse. Prick the woman's tailor—well, Master Shallow, deep, Master Shallow. 159

Fee. I would Wart might have gone, sir.

Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou mightst mend him and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier, that is the leader of so many thousands. Let that suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Fee. It shall suffice, sir. 165

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble. Who is next?

Shal. Peter Bullcalf o' th' green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let's see Bullcalf.

Bull. Here, sir. 170

Fal. Fore God, a likely fellow! Come, prick me Bullcalf till he roar again.

Bull. O Lord! good my lord captain—

Fal. What, dost thou roar before thou art prick'd? 174

Bull. O Lord, sir! I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir, a cough, sir, which I caught with ringing in the King's affairs upon his coronation day, sir. 179

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown. We will have away thy cold; and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is here all? 182

Shal. Here is two more call'd than your number. You must have but four here, sir; and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O, Sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's Field? 190

Fal. No more of that, Master Shallow, no more of that.

Shal. Ha, 'twas a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive?

Fal. She lives, Master Shallow. 195

Shal. She never could away with me.

Fal. Never, never; she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow.

Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to th' heart. She was then a bona-roba. Doth she hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow. 201

Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain she's old; and had Robin Nightwork, by old Nightwork, before I came to Clement's Inn.

Sil. That's fifty-five year ago. 205

Shal. Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that that this knight and I have seen! Ha, Sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow. 210

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have. Our watchword was 'Hem, boys!' Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner. Jesus, the days that we have seen! Come, come.

[Exeunt Falstaff and the Justices.]

Bull. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend; and here's four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hang'd, sir, as go. And yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather because I am unwilling and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends; else, sir, I did not care for mine own part so much.

Bard. Go to; stand aside. 222

Moul. And, good Master Corporal Captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend. She has nobody to do anything about her when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself. You shall have forty, sir. 226

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Fee. By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once; we owe God a death. I'll ne'er bear a base mind. An't be my destiny, so; an't be not, so. No man's too good to serve's Prince; and, let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next. 234

Bard. Well said; th'art a good fellow.

Fee. Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

Re-enter FALSTAFF and the Justices.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four of which you please. 236

Bard. Sir, a word with you. I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullcalf.

Fal. Go to; well.

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have? 240

Fal. Do you choose for me.

Shal. Marry, then—Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble, and Shadow.

Fal. Mouldy and Bullcalf: for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service; and for your part, Bullcalf, grow till you come unto it. I will none of you. 246

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong. They are your likeliest men, and I would have you serv'd with the best. 249

Fal. Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thews, the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man! Give me the spirit,

Master Shallow. Here's Wart; you see what a ragged appearance it is. 'A shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer, come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-fac'd fellow, Shadow—give me this man. He presents no mark to the enemy; the foe-man may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreat—how swiftly will this Feeble, the woman's tailor, run off! O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph. ²⁶³

Bard. Hold, Wart. Traverse—thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So—very well. Go to; very good; exceeding good. O, give me always a little, lean, old, chopt, bald shot. Well said, i' faith, Wart; th'art a good scab. Hold, there's a tester for thee. ²⁶⁹

Shal. He is not his craft's master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end Green, when I lay at Clement's Inn—I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's show—there was a little quiver fellow, and 'a would manage you his piece thus; and 'a would about and about, and come you in and come you in. 'Rah, tah, tah!' would 'a say; 'Bounce!' would 'a say; and away again would 'a go, and again would 'a come. I shall ne'er see such a fellow. ²⁷⁶

Fal. These fellows will do well. Master Shallow, God keep you! Master Silence, I will not use many words with you: Fare you well! Gentlemen both, I thank you. I must a dozen mile to-night. Bardolph, give the soldiers coats. ²⁸³

Shal. Sir John, the Lord bless you; God prosper your affairs; God send us peace! At your return, visit our house; let our old acquaintance be renewed. Peradventure I will with ye to the court. ²⁸⁷

Fal. Fore God, would you would.

Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. God keep you. ²⁹⁰

Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. [Exeunt Justices] On, Bardolph; lead the men away. [Exeunt all but Falstaff] As I return, I will fetch off these justices. I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. Lord, Lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying! This same starv'd justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth and the feats he hath done about Turnbull Street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's Inn, like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring. When 'a was naked, he was for all the world like a fork'd radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife. 'A was so forlorn that his dimensions to any thick sight were invisible. 'A was the very genius of famine; yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores call'd him mandrake. 'A came ever in the rearward of the fashion, and sung those tunes to the overscutch'd huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John a Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn 'a ne'er saw him but once in the Tilt-yard; and then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it, and told John a Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have thrust him and all his apparel into an eel-skin; the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court—and now has he land and beeves. Well, I'll be acquainted with him if I return; and't shall go hard but I'll make him a philosopher's two stones to me. If the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Yorkshire. Within the Forest of Gaultree.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, MOWBRAY, HASTINGS, and Others.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree Forest, an't shall please your Grace.

Arch. Here stand, my lords, and send discoverers forth

To know the numbers of our enemies. ⁴

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done. My friends and brethren in these great affairs,

I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd New-dated letters from Northumberland; Their cold intent, tenour, and substance, thus:

Here doth he wish his person, with such powers ¹⁰

As might hold sortance with his quality, The which he could not levy; where-upon

He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes, To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers

That your attempts may overlive the hazard ¹⁵

And fearful meeting of their opposite.

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground

And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news?

Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,

In goodly form comes on the enemy; 20

And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number

Upon or near the rate of thirty thousand.

Mowb. The just proportion that we gave them out.

Let us sway on and face them in the field.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here? 25

Mowb. I think it is my Lord of Westmoreland.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general,

The Prince, Lord John and Duke of Lancaster.

Arch. Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland, in peace,

What doth concern your coming.

West. Then, my lord,

Unto your Grace do I in chief address 31
The substance of my speech. If that rebellion

Came like itself, in base and abject routs,
Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,

And countenanc'd by boys and beggary—I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd

In his true, native, and most proper shape,
You, reverend father, and these noble lords,

Had not been here to dress the ugly form
Of base and bloody insurrection 40

With your fair honours. You, Lord Archbishop,

Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd, Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath

touch'd,

Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd, 44

Whose white investments figure innocence,
The dove, and very blessed spirit of peace—

Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself
Out of the speech of peace, that bears such

grace,
Into the harsh and boist'rous tongue of

war;
Turning your books to graves, your ink to

blood, 50
Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine

To a loud trumpet and a point of war?

Arch. Wherefore do I this? So the question stands.

Briefly to this end: we are all diseas'd
And with our surfeiting and wanton hours

Have brought ourselves into a burning fever, 54

And we must bleed for it; of which disease
Our late King, Richard, being infected, died.

But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician; 60

Nor do I as an enemy to peace

Troop in the throngs of military men;

But rather show awhile like fearful war

To diet rank minds sick of happiness,

And purge th' obstructions which begin to 65

stop

Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly.

I have in equal balance justly weigh'd

What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer,

And find our griefs heavier than our offences.

We see which way the stream of time doth 70

run

And are enforc'd from our most quiet there

By the rough torrent of occasion;

And have the summary of all our griefs,

When time shall serve, to show in articles;

Which long ere this we offer'd to the King,

And might by no suit gain our audience:

When we are wrong'd, and would unfold 75

our griefs,

We are denied access unto his person,

Even by those men that most have done us wrong.

The dangers of the days but newly gone, 80

Whose memory is written on the earth

With yet appearing blood, and the examples

Of every minute's instance, present now,

Hath put us in these ill-beseeming arms;

Not to break peace, or any branch of it, 85

But to establish here a peace indeed,

Concurring both in name and quality.

West. When ever yet was your appeal denied;

Wherein have you been galled by the King;

What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on

you 90

That you should seal this lawless bloody

book

Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine,

And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?

Arch. My brother general, the commonwealth,

To brother born an household cruelty, 95

I make my quarrel in particular.

West. There is no need of any such redress;

Or if there were, it not belongs to you.

Mowb. Why not to him in part, and to us

all

That feel the bruises of the days before, 100

And suffer the condition of these times

To lay a heavy and unequal hand

Upon our honours?

West. O my good Lord Mowbray,

Construe the times to their necessities,

And you shall say, indeed, it is the time, 105

And not the King, that doth you injuries.

Yet, for your part, it not appears to me,

Either from the King or in the present time,
That you should have an inch of any ground
To build a grief on. Were you not restor'd
To all the Duke of Norfolk's signiories, ¹¹¹
Your noble and right well-rememb'rd father's?

Mowb. What thing, in honour, had my father lost

That need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me?
The King that lov'd him, as the state stood then, ¹¹⁵

Was force perforce compell'd to banish him,
And then that Henry Bolingbroke and he,
Being mounted and both roused in their seats,

Their neighing coursers daring of the spur,
Their armed staves in charge, their beavers down, ¹²⁰

Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel,

And the loud trumpet blowing them together—

Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd

My father from the breast of Bolingbroke, O, when the King did throw his warder down— ¹²⁵

His own life hung upon the staff he threw—Then threw he down himself, and all their lives

That by indictment and by dint of sword
Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.

West. You speak, Lord Mowbray, now you know not what. ¹³⁰

The Earl of Hereford was reputed then
In England the most valiant gentleman.
Who knows on whom fortune would then have smil'd?

But if your father had been victor there,
He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry; ¹³⁵
For all the country, in a general voice, Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers
and love

Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on,
And bless'd and grac'd indeed more than the King.

But this is mere digression from my purpose. ¹⁴⁰

Here come I from our princely general
To know your griefs; to tell you from his
Grace

That he will give you audience; and wherein

It shall appear that your demands are just,
You shall enjoy them, everything set off ¹⁴⁵
That might so much as think you enemies.

Mowb. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer;

And it proceeds from policy, not love.

West. Mowbray, you overween to take it so. ¹⁴⁹

This offer comes from mercy, not from fear;
For, lo! within a ken our army lies—
Upon mine honour, all too confident

536

To give admittance to a thought of fear.
Our battle is more full of names than yours,
Our men more perfect in the use of arms, ¹⁵⁵
Our armour all as strong, our cause the best;

Then reason will our hearts should be as
good.

Say you not, then, our offer is compell'd.

Mowb. Well, by my will we shall admit no parley.

West. That argues but the shame of your offence: ¹⁶⁰

A rotten case abides no handling.

Hast. Hath the Prince John a full commission,

In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon?

West. That is intended in the general's name. ¹⁶⁶

I muse you make so slight a question.

Arch. Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland, this schedule,

For this contains our general grievances.
Each several article herein redress'd, ¹⁷⁰

All members of our cause, both here and
hence,

That are insinewed to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form,
And present execution of our wills

To us and to our purposes confin'd— ¹⁷⁵
We come within our awful banks again,
And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords,

In sight of both our battles we may meet;
And either end in peace—which God so frame!— ¹⁸⁰

Or to the place of diff'rence call the swords'
Which must decide it.

Arch. My lord, we will do so.
[Exit Westmoreland.]

Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me

That no conditions of our peace can stand.

Hast. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace ¹⁸⁵

Upon such large terms and so absolute
As our conditions shall consist upon,
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.

Mowb. Yea, but our valuation shall be such ¹⁸⁹

That every slight and false-derived cause,
Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason,
Shall to the King taste of this action;

That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff, ¹⁹⁵

And good from bad find no partition.

Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this: the King is weary

Of dainty and such picking grievances;

For he hath found to end one doubt by death

Revives that greater in the heirs of life ; 200
And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,
And keep no tell-tale to his memory
That may repeat and history his loss
To new remembrance. For full well he knows

He cannot so precisely weed this land 205
As his misdoubts present occasion :
His foes are so enrooted with his friends
That, plucking to unfix an enemy,
He doth unfasten so and shake a friend.
So that this land, like an offensive wife 210
That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up,
And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution.

Hast. Besides, the King hath wasted all his rods 215

On late offenders, that he now doth lack
The very instruments of chastisement ;
So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold.

Arch. 'Tis very true ;
And therefore be assur'd, my good Lord Marshal, 220

If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowb. Be it so.
Here is return'd my Lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

West. The Prince is here at hand.
Pleaseth your lordship 225
To meet his Grace just distance 'tween our armies ?

Mowb. Your Grace of York, in God's name then, set forward.

Arch. Before, and greet his Grace. My lord, we come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Another part of the forest.

Enter, from one side, MOWBRAY, attended ; afterwards, the ARCHBISHOP, HASTINGS, and Others : from the other side, PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, Officers and Others.

P. John. You are well encount' red here, my cousin Mowbray.

Good day to you, gentle Lord Archbishop ;
And so to you, Lord Hastings, and to all.
My Lord of York, it better show'd with you

When that your flock, assembled by the bell, 5

Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text
Than now to see you here an iron man,
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword, and life to death. 10

That man that sits within a monarch's heart

And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,
Would he abuse the countenance of the king,

Alack, what mischiefs might be set abroad
In shadow of such greatness ! With you, Lord Bishop, 15

It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken
How deep you were within the books of God ?

To us the speaker in His parliament,
To us th' imagin'd voice of God himself,
The very opener and intelligencer 20
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
And our dull workings. O, who shall believe
But you misuse the reverence of your place,
Employ the countenance and grace of heav'n

As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable ? You have ta'en up, 26

Under the counterfeited zeal of God,
The subjects of His substitute, my father,
And both against the peace of heaven and him 29

Have here up-swarm'd them.

Arch. Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace ;
But, as I told my Lord of Westmoreland,
The time misord' red doth, in common sense,

Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous form

To hold our safety up. I sent your Grace 35
The parcels and particulars of our grief,
The which hath been with scorn shov'd from the court,

Whereon this hydra son of war is born ;
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep

With grant of our most just and right desires ; 40

And true obedience, of this madness cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes

To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down,
We have supplies to second our attempt. 45
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them ;
And so success of mischief shall be born,
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up
While England shall have generation.

P. John. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow, 50

To sound the bottom of the after-times.

West. Pleaseth your Grace to answer them directly

How far forth you do like their articles.

P. John. I like them all and do allow them well ; 54

And swear here, by the honour of my blood,
My father's purposes have been mistook ;

And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning and authority.
My lord, these griefs shall be with speed
redress'd ;

Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please you, ⁶⁰

Discharge your powers unto their several counties,

As we will ours ; and here, between the armies,

Let's drink together friendly and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those tokens
home

Of our restored love and amity. ⁶⁵

Arch. I take your princely word for these redresses.

P. John. I give it you, and will maintain my word ;

And thereupon I drink unto your Grace.

Hast. Go, Captain, and deliver to the army

This news of peace. Let them have pay, and part. ⁷⁰

I know it will well please them. Hie thee, Captain. [Exit Officer.

Arch. To you, my noble Lord of Westmoreland.

West. I pledge your Grace ; and if you knew what pains

I have bestow'd to breed this present
peace,

You would drink freely ; but my love to ye shall show itself more openly hereafter. ⁷⁶

Arch. I do not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it.

Health to my lord and gentle cousin,
Mowbray.

Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season,

For I am on the sudden something ill. ⁸⁰

Arch. Against ill chances men are ever merry ;

But heaviness foreruns the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz ; since sudden sorrow

Serves to say thus, ' Some good thing comes to-morrow '.

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit. ⁸⁵

Mowb. So much the worse, if your own rule be true. [Shouts within.

P. John. The word of peace is rend'red.
Hark, how they shout !

Mowb. This had been cheerful after victory.

Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest ;

For then both parties nobly are subdu'd, ⁹⁰
And neither party loser.

P. Jo'm. Go, my lord,
And let our army be discharged too.

[Exit Westmoreland.

And, good my lord, so please you let our trains

March by us, that we may peruse the men
We should have cop'd withal.

Arch. Go, good Lord Hastings,
And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march
by. [Exit Hastings.

P. John. I trust, lords, we shall lie tonight together.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army
still ?

West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand, ⁹⁹

Will not go off until they hear you speak.

P. John. They know their duties.

Re-enter HASTINGS.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already.

Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses

East, west, north, south ; or like a school broke up,

Each hurries toward his home and sporting-place. ¹⁰⁵

West. Good tidings, my Lord Hastings ; for the which

I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason ;
And you, Lord Archbishop, and you, Lord

Mowbray,

Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable ? ¹¹⁰

West. Is your assembly so ?

Arch. Will you thus break your faith ?

P. John. I pawn'd thee none :
I promis'd you redress of these same grievances

Whereof you did complain ; which, by mine honour, ¹¹⁴

I will perform with a most Christian care.
But for you, rebels—look to taste the due

Meet for rebellion and such acts as yours.
Most shallowly did you these arms commence,

Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent
hence.

Strike up our drums, pursue the scatt' red stray. ¹²⁰

God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.
Some guard these traitors to the block of

death,

Treason's true bed and yielder-up of breath.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III. Another part of the forest.

Alarum ; excursions. Enter FALSTAFF and COLVILLE, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir ? Of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray ?

Col. I am a knight sir ; and my name is Colville of the Dale. ⁴

Fal. Well then, Colville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the Dale. Colville shall be still your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place—a place deep enough; so shall you be still Colville of the Dale.

Col. Are not you Sir John Falstaff? 10

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whoe'er I am. Do ye yield, sir, or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death; therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy. 15

Col. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine; and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe. My womb, my womb, my womb undoes me. Here comes our general. 23

Enter PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, BLUNT, and Others.

P. John. The heat is past; follow no further now.

Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland. [Exit Westmoreland.]

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?

When everything is ended, then you come. These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life, One time or other break some gallows' back.

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? Have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility; I have found'red nine score and odd posts; and here, travel tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Colville of the Dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that? He saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say with the hook-nos'd fellow of Rome—I came, saw, and overcame. 41

P. John. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Fal. I know not. Here he is, and here I yield him; and I beseech your Grace, let it be book'd with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on't, Colville kissing my foot; to the which course if I be enforc'd, if you do not all show like gilt twopences to me, and I, in the clear sky of fame, o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble. Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

P. John. Thine's too heavy to mount. 55

Fal. Let it shine, then.

P. John. Thine's too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

P. John. Is thy name Colville? 60

Col. It is, my lord.

P. John. A famous rebel art thou, Colville.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him.

Col. I am, my lord, but as my beaters are That led me hither. Had they been rul'd by me, 65

You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I know not how they sold themselves; but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis; and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

P. John. Now, have you left pursuit? 70

West. Retreat is made, and execution stay'd.

P. John. Send Colville, with his confederates,

To York, to present execution.

Blunt, lead him hence; and see you guard him sure. [Exeunt Blunt and others.]

And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords. 75

I hear the King my father is sore sick.

Our news shall go before us to his Majesty, Which, cousin, you shall bear to comfort him;

And we with sober speed will follow you. 79

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go through Gloucestershire; and, when you come to court, stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

P. John. Fare you well, Falstaff. I, in my condition, 83

Shall better speak of you than you deserve.

[Exeunt all but Falstaff.]

Fal. I would you had but the wit; 'twere better than your dukedom. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh—but that's no marvel; he drinks no wine. There's never none of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches. They are generally fools and cowards—which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a twofold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish and dull and crudy vapours which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes ; which delivered o'er to the voice, the tongue, which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is the warming of the blood ; which before, cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice ; but the sherris warms it, and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extremes. It illumineth the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm ; and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great and puff'd up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage—and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work ; and learning, a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil till sack commences it and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valiant ; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and till'd, with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first humane principle I would teach them should be to forswear thin potations, and to addict themselves to sack.

Enter BARDOLPH.

How now, Bardolph !

Bard. The army is discharged all and gone.

Fal. Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire, and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, Esquire. I have him already temp'ring between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Westminster. The Jerusalem Chamber.

Enter the KING, PRINCE THOMAS OF CLARENCE, PRINCE HUMPHREY OF GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and Others.

King. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end

To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields,
And draw no swords but what are sanctified.
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested, 6
And everything lies level to our wish.
Only we want a little personal strength ;
And pause us till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government.

War. Both which we doubt not but your Majesty Shall soon enjoy.

540

King. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester,
Where is the Prince your brother ?

P. Humph. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

King. And how accompanied ?

P. Humph. I do not know, my lord.

King. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him ? 16

P. Humph. No, my good lord, he is in presence here.

Cl. What would my lord and father ?

King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the Prince thy brother ? 20

He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas.

Thou hast a better place in his affection
Than all thy brothers ; cherish it, my boy,
And noble offices thou mayst effect
Of mediation, after I am dead, 25
Between his greatness and thy other brethren.

Therefore omit him not ; blunt not his love,
Nor lose the good advantage of his grace
By seeming cold or careless of his will ;
For he is gracious if he be observ'd. 30
He hath a tear for pity and a hand
Open as day for melting charity ;
Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he is flint ;

As humorous as winter, and as sudden
As flaws congealed in the spring of day. 35
His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd.

Chide him for faults, and do it reverently,
When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth ;

But, being moody, give him line and scope
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground, 40

Confound themselves with working. Learn this, Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,

A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in,
That the united vessel of their blood,
Mingled with venom of suggestion— 45
As, force perforce, the age will pour it in—Shall never leak, though it do work as strong
As aconitum or rash gunpowder.

Cl. I shall observe him with all care and love.

King. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas ? 50

Cl. He is not there to-day ; he dines in London.

King. And how accompanied ? Canst thou tell that ?

Cl. With Poins, and other his continual followers.

King. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds ;

And he, the noble image of my youth, 55

Is overspread with them ; therefore my
grief

Stretches itself beyond the hour of death.
The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape,

In forms imaginary, th' unguided days 59
And rotten times that you shall look upon
When I am sleeping with my ancestors.

For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,
When rage and hot blood are his counsellors,

When means and lavish manners meet
together,

O, with what wings shall his affections fly 65
Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay !

Wor. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite.

The Prince but studies his companions Like a strange tongue, wherein, to gain the language,

'Tis needful that the most immodest word
Be look'd upon and learnt ; which once attain'd, 71

Your Highness knows, comes to no further use

But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms,

The Prince will, in the perfectness of time,
Cast off his followers ; and their memory 75

Shall as a pattern or a measure live
By which his Grace must mete the lives of other,

Turning past evils to advantages.

King. 'Tis seldom when the bee doth leave her comb

In the dead carrion.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Who's here ? Westmoreland ?

West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness 81

Added to that that I am to deliver !

Prince John, your son, doth kiss your Grace's hand.

Mowbray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings, and
all,

Are brought to the correction of your law.
There is not now a rebel's sword unsheath'd, 86

But Peace puts forth her olive everywhere.
The manner how this action hath been borne

Here at more leisure may your Highness
read,

With every course in his particular. 90

King. O Westmoreland, thou art a summer bird,

Which ever in the haunch of winter sings
The lifting up of day.

Enter HARCOURT.

Look here's more news.

Har. From enemies heaven keep your
Majesty ;

And, when they stand against you, may they fall 95

As those that I am come to tell you of !
The Earl Northumberland and the Lord
Bardolph,

With a great power of English and of Scots,

Are by the shrieve of Yorkshire overthrown.
The manner and true order of the fight 100

This packet, please it you, contains at large.

King. And wherefore should these good news make me sick ?

Will Fortune never come with both hands
full,

But write her fair words still in foulest
letters ? 104

She either gives a stomach and no food—
Such are the poor, in health—or else a feast,

And takes away the stomach—such are the rich

That have abundance and enjoy it not.
I should rejoice now at this happy news ;

And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy. 110

O me ! come near me now I am much ill.

P. Humph. Comfort, your Majesty !
Cla. O my royal father !

West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself, look up.

War. Be patient, Princes ; you do know these fits

Are with his Highness very ordinary. 115 Stand from him, give him air ; he'll straight be well.

Cla. No, no ; he cannot long hold out these pangs.

Th' incessant care and labour of his mind Hath wrought the mure that should confine it in

So thin that life looks through, and will break out. 120

P. Humph. The people fear me ; for they do observe

Unfather'd heirs and loathly births of nature.

The seasons change their manners, as the year

Had found some months asleep, and leapt them over.

Cla. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between ; 125

And the old folk, Time's doting chronicles,
Say it did so a little time before

That our great grandsire, Edward, sick'd and died.

War. Speak lower, Princes, for the King recovers.

P. Humph. This apoplexy will certain be his end. 130

King. I pray you take me up, and bear me hence

Into some other chamber. Softly, pray.

SCENE V. Westminster. Another chamber.

The KING lying on a bed; CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and Others in attendance.

King. Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends ;
Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room.

King. Set me the crown upon my pillow here. 5

Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

War. Less noise, less noise !

Enter PRINCE HENRY.

Prince. Who saw the Duke of Clarence ?

Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

Prince. How now ! Rain within doors, and none abroad !

How doth the King ? 10

P. Humph. Exceeding ill.

Prince. Heard he the good news yet ?
Tell it him.

P. Humph. He alt'ed much upon the hearing it.

Prince. If he be sick with joy, he'll recover without physic. 15

War. Not so much noise, my lords.
Sweet Prince, speak low ;

The King your father is dispos'd to sleep.

Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room.

War. Will't please your Grace to go along with us ?

Prince. No ; I will sit and watch here by the King.

[Exeunt all but the Prince.]

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow, 21

Being so troublesome a bedfellow ?

O polish'd perturbation ! golden care !

*That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide
To many a watchful night ! Sleep with it now !* 25

*Yet not so sound and half so deeply sweet
As he whose brow with homely biggen bound*

*Snores out the watch of night. O majesty !
When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit*

Like a rich armour worn in heat of day 30
That scald'st with safety. By his gates of breath

*There lies a downy feather which stirs not.
Did he suspire, that light and weightless down*

*Perforce must move. My gracious lord !
my father !* 34

*This sleep is sound indeed ; this is a sleep
That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd
So many English kings. Thy due from me
Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood*

*Which nature, love, and filial tenderness, Shall, O dear father, pay thee plenteously.
My due from thee is this imperial crown, 41
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,*

*Derives itself to me. [Putting on the crown]
Lo where it sits—*

Which God shall guard ; and put the world's whole strength

Into one giant arm, it shall not force 45

*This lineal honour from me. This from thee
Will I to mine leave as 'tis left to me.*

[Exit.]

King. Warwick ! Gloucester ! Clarence !

Re-enter WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE.

Cla. Doth the King call ?

War. What would your Majesty ? How fares your Grace ? 50

King. Why did you leave me here alone,
my lords ?

Cla. We left the Prince my brother here,
my liege,

Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

King. The Prince of Wales ! Where is he ?
Let me see him.

He is not here. 55

War. This door is open ; he is gone this way.

P. Humph. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.

King. Where is the crown ? Who took it from my pillow ?

War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.

King. The Prince hath ta'en it hence.
Go, seek him out. 60

Is he so hasty that he doth suppose

My sleep my death ?

*Find him, my Lord of Warwick ; chide him
hither. [Exit Warwick.]*

This part of his conjoins with my disease And helps to end me. See, sons, what things you are ! 65

How quickly nature falls into revolt

When gold becomes her object !

*For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleep with thoughts,*

Their brains with care, their bones with industry ; 70

*For this they have engrossed and pil'd up
The cank'r'd heaps of strange-achieved*

gold ;

*For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their sons with arts and martial exercises ;*

When, like the bee, tolling from every flower 75

*The virtuous sweets,
Our thighs with wax, our mouths with*

*honey pack'd,
We bring it to the hive, and, like the bees,
Are murd'ed for our pains. This bitter* taste

Yields his engrossments to the ending
father. 80

Re-enter WARWICK.

Now where is he that will not stay so long
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?

War. My lord, I found the Prince in the next room,

Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks,
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow, 85

That tyranny, which never quaff'd but
blood,

Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife

With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

King. But wherefore did he take away
the crown?

Re-enter PRINCE HENRY.

Lo where he comes. Come hither to me,
Harry. 90

Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.

[Exeunt all but the King and the Prince.]

Prince. I never thought to hear you speak
again.

King. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought.

I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.

Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair
That thou wilt needs invest thee with my honours 96

Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!
Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee.

Stay but a little, for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind
That it will quickly drop; my day is dim.
Thou hast stol'n that which, after some few hours, 102

Were thine without offence; and at my
death

Thou hast seal'd up my expectation.
Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.

Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy
thoughts, 107

Which thou hast whetted on thy stony
heart,

To stab at half an hour of my life.
What, canst thou not forbear me half an hour? 110

Then get thee gone, and dig my grave
thyself;

And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear
That thou art crowned, not that I am dead.
Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse

Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head; 115
Only compound me with forgotten dust; Give that which gave thee life unto the worms.

Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;
For now a time is come to mock at form—
Harry the Fifth is crown'd. Up, vanity: 120 Down, royal state. All you sage counsellors, hence.

And to the English court assemble now,
From every region, apes of idleness.

Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum.

Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink,
dance, 125

Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit
The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?

Be happy, he will trouble you no more.

England shall double gild his treble guilt;
England shall give him office, honour,

might; 130

For the fifth Harry from curb'd license plucks

The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog
Shall flesh his tooth on every innocent.

O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!
When that my care could not withhold thy riots, 135

What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?

O, thou wilt be a wilderness again,
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants!

Prince. O, pardon me, my liege! But for my tears,

The moist impediments unto my speech, 140
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke

Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard

The course of it so far. There is your crown,

And He that wears the crown immortally Long guard it yours! [Kneeling] If I affect it more 145

Than as your honour and as your renown,
Let me no more from this obedience rise,

Which my most inward true and duteous
spirit

Teacheth this prostrate and exterior bending! 149

God witness with me, when I here came in
And found no course of breath within your
Majesty,

How cold it struck my heart! If I do feign,
O, let me in my present wildness die,

And never live to show th' incredulous
world

The noble change that I have purposed! 155
Coming to look on you, thinking you

dead—

And dead almost, my liege, to think you were—

I spake unto this crown as having sense,
And thus upbraided it: 'The care on thee depending

Hath fed upon the body of my father; 160 Therefore thou best of gold art worst of

gold.

Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,
Preserving life in medicine potable;

But thou, most fine, most honour'd, most renown'd,
Hast eat thy bearer up'. Thus, my most royal liege,
Accusing it, I put it on my head, 166
To try with it—as with an enemy That had before my face murd'ed my
father—
The quarrel of a true inheritor.
But if it did infect my blood with joy, 170
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did with the least affection of a welcome
Give entertainment to the might of it,
Let God for ever keep it from my head, 175
And make me as the poorest vassal is,
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!
King. O my son,
God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou mightst win the more thy father's love, 180
Pleading so wisely in excuse of it!
Come hither, Harry; sit thou by my bed,
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my
son,
By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways 185
I met this crown; and I myself know well
How troublesome it sat upon my head:
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
Better opinion, better confirmation;
For all the soil of the achievement goes 190
With me into the earth. It seem'd in me
But as an honour snatch'd with boist'rous
hand;
And I had many living to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances;
Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed, 195
Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears
Thou seest with peril I have answered;
For all my reign hath been but as a scene
Acting that argument. And now my death Changes the mood; for what in me was purchas'd 200
Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
So thou the garland wear'st successively.
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than
I could do,
Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are
green;
And all my friends, which thou must make thy friends, 205
Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en
out;
By whose fell working I was first advanc'd,
And by whose power I well might lodge a
fear
To be again displac'd; which to avoid,
I cut them off; and had a purpose now 210
To lead out many to the Holy Land,

Lest rest and lying still might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
Be it thy course to busy giddy minds
With foreign quarrels, that action, hence borne out, 215
May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so That strength of speech is utterly denied
me.
How I came by the crown, O God, forgive;
And grant it may with thee in true peace
live! 220
Prince. My gracious liege,
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
Then plain and right must my possession
be;
Which I with more than with a common pain
'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain. 225

Enter PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WAR-WICK, Lords, and Others.

King. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.

P. John. Health, peace, and happiness, to my royal father!

King. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John;

But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown

From this bare wither'd trunk. Upon thy sight 230

My worldly business makes a period.

Where is my Lord of Warwick?

Prince. My Lord of Warwick!

King. Doth any name particular belong
Unto the lodging where I first did swoon?

War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble
lord. 235

King. Laud be to God! Even there my life must end.

It hath been prophesied to me many years,
I should not die but in Jerusalem;

Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land.

But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie; 240

In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Gloucestershire. Shallow's house.

Enter SHALLOW, FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night. What, Davy, I say!

Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow.

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excus'd; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excus'd. Why, Davy! 6

Enter DAVY.

Davy. Here, sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy; let me see, Davy; let me see, Davy; let me see—yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither. Sir John, you shall not be excus'd.

Davy. Marry, sir, thus: those precepts cannot be served; and, again, sir—shall we sow the headland with wheat? 14

Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook—are there no young pigeons?

Davy. Yes, sir. Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons.

Shal. Let it be cast, and paid. Sir John, you shall not be excused. 20

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had; and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?

Shal. 'A shall answer it. Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legg'd hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kick-shaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir? 28

Shal. Yea, Davy; I will use him well. A friend i' th' court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves and will backbite.

Davy. No worse than they are back-bitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen. 34

Shal. Well conceited, Davy—about thy business, Davy.

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Woncot against Clement Perkes o' th' hill.

Shal. There is many complaints, Davy, against that Visor. That Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge. 39

Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have serv'd your worship truly, sir, this eight years; an I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech you, let him be countenanc'd. 49

Shal. Go to; I say he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy] Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, come, off with your boots. Give me your hand, Master Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship. 54

Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph. [To the Page] And welcome, my tall fellow. Come, Sir John.

Fal. I'll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. [Exit Shallow] Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page] If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermits' staves as Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his. They, by observing of him, do bear themselves like foolish justices: he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man. Their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild geese. If I had a suit to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master; if to his men, I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants. It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another; therefore let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions, which is four terms, or two actions; and 'a shall laugh without intervallums. O, it is much that a lie with a slight oath, and a jest with a sad brow, will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders! O, you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up! 82

Shal. [Within] Sir John!

Fal. I come, Master Shallow; I come, Master Shallow. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Westminster. The palace.

Enter, severally, WARWICK and the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE.

War. How now, my Lord Chief Justice; whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the King?

War. Exceeding well; his cares are now all ended.

Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature; And to our purposes he lives no more. 3

Ch. Just. I would his Majesty had call'd me with him.

The service that I truly did his life Hath left me open to all injuries.

War. Indeed I think the young King loves you not.

Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do arm myself

To welcome the condition of the time, 11 Which cannot look more hideously upon me Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter LANCASTER, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WESTMORELAND, and Others.

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry.

O that the living Harry had the temper 15

Of he, the worst of these three gentlemen !
How many nobles then should hold their places

That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort !

Ch. Just. O God, I fear all will be over-turn'd.

P. John. Good morrow, cousin Warwick,
good morrow. 20

Glou. } Good morrow, cousin.
Clar. }

P. John. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember ; but our argument

Is all too heavy to admit much talk.

P. John. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy ! 25

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier !

P. Humph. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed ;

And I dare swear you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow—it is sure your own.

P. John. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find, 30

You stand in coldest expectation.

I am the sorrier ; would 'twere otherwise.

Cl. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair ;

Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet Princes, what I did, I did in honour, 35

Led by th' impartial conduct of my soul ;

And never shall you see that I will beg

A ragged and forestall'd remission.

If truth and upright innocency fail me,

I'll to the King my master that is dead, 40

And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the Prince.

Enter KING HENRY THE FIFTH, attended.

Ch. Just. Good morrow, and God save your Majesty !

King. This new and gorgeous garment,
majesty,

Sits not so easy on me as you think. 45

Brothers, you mix your sadness with some
fear.

This is the English, not the Turkish court ;

Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,

But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,

For, by my faith, it very well becomes you.

Sorrow so royally in you appears 51

That I will deeply put the fashion on,

And wear it in my heart. Why, then, be sad ;

But entertain no more of it, good brothers,

Than a joint burden laid upon us all. 55

For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd,

I'll be your father and your brother too ;

Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares.

Yet weep that Harry's dead, and so will I ;
But Harry lives that shall convert those
tears 60

By number into hours of happiness.

Brothers. We hope no otherwise from your Majesty.

King. You all look strangely on me ; and you most.

You are, I think, assur'd I love you not.

Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd
rightly, 65

Your Majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

King. No ?

How might a prince of my great hopes forget

So great indignities you laid upon me ?

What, rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison, 70

Th' immediate heir of England ! Was this easy ?

May this be wash'd in Lethe and forgotten ?

Ch. Just. I th n did use the person of your father ;

The image of his power lay then in me ;

And in th' administration of his law, 75

Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth,

Your Highness pleased to forget my place,

The majesty and power of law and justice,

The image of the King whom I presented,

And struck me in my very seat of judgment ; 80

Whereon, as an offender to your father,

I gave bold way to my authority

And did commit you. If the deed were ill,

Be you contented, wearing now the garland,

To have a son set your decrees at nought, 85

To pluck down justice from your awful bench,

To trip the course of law, and blunt the
sword

That guards the peace and safety of your person ;

Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image,

And mock your workings in a second body.

Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours ; 91

Be now the father, and propose a son ;

Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,

See your most dreadful laws so loosely
slighted,

Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd ; 95

And then imagine me taking your part

And, in your power, soft silencing your son.

After this cold consideration, sentence me ;

And, as you are a king, speak in your state

What I have done that misbecame my
place, 100

My person, or my liege's sovereignty.

King. You are right, Justice, and you weigh this well ;

Therefore still bear the balance and the
sword ;

And I do wish your honours may increase

Till you do live to see a son of mine 105
 Offend you, and obey you, as I did.
 So shall I live to speak my father's words :
 'Happy am I that have a man so bold
 That dares do justice on my proper son ;
 And not less happy, having such a son 110
 That would deliver up his greatness so Into the hands of justice '. You did commit
 me ;
 For which I do commit into your hand
 Th' unstained sword that you have us'd to bear ;
 With this remembrance—that you use the same 115
 With the like bold, just, and impartial
 spirit
 As you have done 'gainst me. There is my
 hand.
 You shall be as a father to my youth ;
 My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear ;
 And I will stoop and humble my intents 120
 To your well-practis'd wise directions.
 And, Princes all, believe me, I beseech you,
 My father is gone wild into his grave,
 For in his tomb lie my affections ;
 And with his spirits sadly I survive, 125
 To mock the expectation of the world,
 To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
 Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
 After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
 Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now. 130
 Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea,
 Where it shall mingle with the state of floods,
 And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
 Now call we our high court of parliament ;
 And let us choose such limbs of noble
 counsel, 135
 That the great body of our state may go
 In equal rank with the best govern'd nation ;
 That war, or peace, or both at once, may be
 As things acquainted and familiar to us ;
 In which you, father, shall have foremost
 hand. 140
 Our coronation done, we will accite,
 As I before rememb'ed, all our state ;
 And—God consigning to my good intents—No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say, 144
 God shorten Harry's happy life one day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Gloucestershire. Shallow's orchard.

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, SILENCE, BARDOLPH, the Page, and DAVY.

Shal. Nay, you shall see my orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of mine own grafting, with a dish of caraways, and so forth. Come, cousin Silence. And tnen to bed.

Fal. Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling and rich. 6

Shal. Barren, barren, barren ; beggars all, beggars all, Sir John—marry, good air.
 Spread, Davy, spread, Davy ; well said,
 Davy. 9

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses ;
 he is your serving-man and your husband.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John. By the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper. A good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down ; come,
 cousin. 15

Sil. Ah, sirrah ! quoth-a—we shall [Singing.]

Do nothing but eat and make good cheer,
 And praise God for the merry year ;
 When flesh is cheap and females dear,
 And lusty lads roam here and there, 20
 So merrily,

And ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart ! Good Master Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon.

Shal. Give Master Bardolph some wine,
 Davy. 25

Davy. Sweet sir, sit ; I'll be with you anon ; most sweet sir, sit. Master Page, good Master Page, sit. Proface ! What you want in meat, we'll have in drink. But you must bear ; the heart's all. [Exit.]

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolph ; and, my little soldier there, be merry. 31

Sil. [Singing]
 Be merry, be merry, my wife has all ;
 For women are shrews, both short and tall ;
 'Tis merry in hall when beards wag all ;

And welcome merry Shrove-tide. 35
 Be merry, be merry.

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who, I ? I have been merry twice and once ere now. 40

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. [To Bardolph] There's a dish of leather-coats for you.

Shal. Davy !

Davy. Your workshop ! I'll be with you straight. [To Bardolph] A cup of wine, sir ?

Sil. [Singing]
 A cup of wine that's brisk and fine, 45
 And drink unto the leman mine ;

And a merry heart lives long-a.

Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. An we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet o' th' night. 50

Fal. Health and long life to you, Master
 Silence !

Sil. [Singing]

Fill the cup, and let it come,
 I'll pledge you a mile to th' bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome ; if thou want'st anything and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart. Welcome, my little tiny thief and welcome indeed too. I'll drink to Master Bardolph, and to all the cabileros about London. ⁵⁸

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy!

Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together—ha! will you not, Master Bardolph?

Bard. Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot.

Shal. By God's liggens, I thank thee. The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that. 'A will not out, 'a; 'tis true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir. ⁶⁷

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing; be merry. [One knocks at door] Look who's at door there, ho! Who knocks? [Exit Davy.]

Fal. [To Silence, who has drunk a bumper] Why, now you have done me right.

Sil. [Singing] Do me right,
And dub me knight.
Samingo.

Is't not so? ⁷⁵

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't so? Why then, say an old man can do somewhat.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. An't please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court? Let him come in.

Enter PISTOL.

How now, Pistol?

Pist. Sir John, God save you! ⁸³

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good. Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm.

Sil. By'r lady, I think 'a be, but Goodman Puff of Barson.

Pist. Puff! ⁹⁰

Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!

Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend,
And helter-skelter have I rode to thee;
And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys, ⁹⁴
And golden times, and happy news of price.

Fal. I pray thee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A fourra for the world and worldlings base!

I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news? ¹⁰⁰

Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Sil. [Singing] And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John.

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons?

And shall good news be baffled?

Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap. ¹⁰⁵

Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why, then, lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir. If, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there's but two ways—either to utter them or conceal them. I am, sir, under the King, in some authority. ¹¹¹

Pist. Under which king, Bezonian?
Speak, or die.

Shal. Under King Harry.

Pist. Harry the Fourth—or Fifth?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

Pist. A fourra for thine office!
Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is King;
Harry the Fifth's the man. I speak the truth. ¹¹⁶

When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What, is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in door. The things I speak are just. ¹²⁰

Fal. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse. Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities.

Bard. O joyful day! ¹²⁵

I would not take a knighthood for my fortune.

Pist. What, I do bring good news?

Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed. Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt—I am Fortune's steward. Get on thy boots; we'll ride all night. O sweet Pistol! Away, Bardolph! [Exit Bardolph] Come, Pistol, utter more to me; and withal devise something to do thyself good. Boot, boot, Master Shallow! I know the young King is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses: the laws of England are at my commandment. Blessed are they that have been my friends; and woe to my Lord Chief Justice! ¹³⁷ Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also!

'Where is the life that late I led?' say they.

Why, here it is; welcome these pleasant days! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. A street.

Enter Beadles, dragging in HOSTESS QUICKLY and DOLL TEARSHEET.

Host. No, thou arrant knave; I would to God that I might die, that I might have thee hang'd. Thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

1 Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me; and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her. There hath been a man or two lately kill'd about her.

Doll. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on ; I'll tell thee what, thou damn'd tripe-visag'd rascal, an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou wert better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-fac'd villain.

Host. O the Lord, that Sir John were come ! He would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry ! 14

1 Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions again ; you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me ; for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat amongst you. 18

Doll. I'll tell you what, you thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swing'd for this—you blue-bottle rogue, you filthy famish'd correctioner, if you be not swing'd, I'll forswear half-kirtles.

1 Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.

Host. O God, that right should thus overcome might ! Well, of sufferance comes ease. 25

Doll. Come, you rogue, come ; bring me to a justice.

Host. Ay, come, you starv'd bloodhound.

Doll. Goodman death, goodman bones !

Host. Thou atomy, thou !

Doll. Come, you thin thing ! come, you rascal ! 30

1 Bead. Very well. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Westminster. Near the Abbey.

Enter Grooms, strewing rushes.

1 Groom. More rushes, more rushes !

2 Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.

3 Groom. 'Twill be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation. Dispatch, dispatch. [Exeunt.]

Trumpets sound, and the KING and his Train pass over the stage. After them enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow ; I will make the King do you grace. I will leer upon him, as 'a comes by ; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight ! 9

Fal. Come here, Pistol ; stand behind me. [To Shallow] O, if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter ; this poor show doth better ; this doth infer the zeal I had to see him.

Shal. It doth so. 15

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection—

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion—

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth. 19

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night ; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me—

Shal. It is best, certain. 23

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him ; thinking of nothing else, putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis 'semper idem' for 'obsque hoc nihil est'. 'Tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed. 30

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver

And make thee rage.

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, Is in base durance and contagious prison ; Hal'd thither 35

By most mechanical and dirty hand.

Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell Alecto's snake,

For Doll is in. Pistol speaks nought but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her. 39

[Shouts within, and the trumpets sound.]

Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangor sounds.

Enter the KING and his Train, the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE among them.

Fal. God save thy Grace, King Hal ; my royal Hal !

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame !

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy ! 44

King. My Lord Chief Justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits ? Know you what 'tis you speak ?

Fal. My king ! my Jove ! I speak to thee, my heart !

King. I know thee not, old man. Fall to thy prayers. 48

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester ! I have long dreamt of such a kind of man, So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane ; But, being awak'd, I do despise my dream. Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace ;

Leave gormandizing ; know the grave doth gape 54

For thee thrice wider than for other men—Reply not to me with a fool-born jest ; Presume not that I am the thing I was, For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,

That I have turn'd away my former self ; So will I those that kept me company. 60

When thou dost hear I am as I have been, Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,

The tutor and the feeder of my riots.

13933

Till then I banish thee, on pain of death, 64
As I have done the rest of my misleaders,
Not to come near our person by ten mile.
For competence of life I will allow you,
That lack of means enforce you not to evils;

And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,
We will, according to your strengths and qualities, 70

Give you advancement. Be 't your charge,
my lord,

To see perform'd the tenour of our word.
Set on. [Exeunt the King and his train.

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound. 74

Shal. Yea, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow.
Do not you grieve at this; I shall be sent for in private to him. Look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancements; I will be the man yet that shall make you great. 81

Shal. I cannot perceive how, unless you give me your doublet, and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand. 85

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word.
This that you heard was but a colour.

Shal. A colour that I fear you will die in,
Sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours; go with me to dinner. Come, Lieutenant Pistol; come, Bardolph. I shall be sent for soon at night.

Re-enter PRINCE JOHN, the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE, with Officers.

Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet; 92

Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord—

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak. I will hear you soon.

Take them away. 96

Pist. Si fortuna me tormenta, spero me contenta.

[Exeunt all but Prince John and the Lord Chief Justice.

P. John. I like this fair proceeding of the King's.

He hath intent his wonted followers
Shall all be very well provided for; 100

But all are banish'd till their conversations Appear more wise and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

P. John. The King hath call'd his parliament, my lord.

Ch. Just. He hath. 105

P. John. I will lay odds that, ere this year expire,

We bear our civil swords and native fire
As far as France. I heard a bird so sing, Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the
King.

Come, will you hence? [Exeunt.

EPILOGUE

First my fear, then my curtsy, last my speech. My fear, is your displeasure; my curtsy, my duty; and my speech, to beg your pardons. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me; for what I have to say is of mine own making; and what, indeed, I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture. Be it known to you, as it is very well, I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it and to promise you a better. I meant, indeed, to pay you with this; which if like an ill venture it come unluckily home,
I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose.
Here I promis'd you I would be, and here
I commit my body to your mercies. Bate me some, and I will pay you some, and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely;
and so I kneel down before you—but,
indeed, to pray for the Queen. 16

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? And yet that were but light payment —to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so would I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me. If the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly. 24

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloy'd with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France; where, for anything I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already 'a be kill'd with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr and this is not the man. My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night. 33

THE SCENE : England and France.

PROLOGUE

Enter CHORUS.

Chor. O for a Muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention,
A kingdom for a stage, princes to act,
And monarchs to behold the swelling scene!
Then should the warlike Harry, like himself, 5
Assume the port of Mars; and at his heels, Leash'd in like hounds, should famine,
sword, and fire,
Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentles all,
The flat unraised spirits that hath dar'd
On this unworthy scaffold to bring forth 10
So great an object. Can this cockpit hold The vasty fields of France? Or may we cram
Within this wooden O the very casques
That did affright the air at Agincourt?
O, pardon! since a crooked figure may 15
Attest in little place a million;
And let us, ciphers to this great accompt,
On your imaginary forces work.
Suppose within the girdle of these walls 19
Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies,
Whose high upreared and abutting fronts

The perilous narrow ocean parts asunder.
Piece out our imperfections with your
thoughts:
Into a thousand parts divide one man,
And make imaginary puissance; 25
Think, when we talk of horses, that you see
them
Printing their proud hoofs i' th' receiving earth;
For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck
our kings,
Carry them here and there, jumping o'er times, 29
Turning th' accomplishment of many years
Into an hour-glass; for the which supply,
Admit me Chorus to this history;
Who, prologue-like, your humble patience
pray
Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play.
[Exit.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. London. An ante-chamber in the King's palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and the BISHOP OF ELY.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you: that self bill is urg'd

Which in th' eleventh year of the last king's reign

Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd
But that the scrambling and unquiet time
Did push it out of farther question. 5

Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?

Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,
We lose the better half of our possession;
For all the temporal lands which men devout

By testament have given to the church 10
Would they strip from us; being valu'd
thus—

As much as would maintain, to the King's honour,

Full fifteen earls and fifteen hundred
knights,

Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;

And, to relief of lazars and weak age, 15
Of indigent faint souls, past corporal toil,
A hundred alms-houses right well supplied;
And to the coifers of the King, beside,
A thousand pounds by th' year: thus runs the bill.

Ely. This would drink deep.

Cant. 'Twould drink the cup and all.

Ely. But what prevention? 21

Cant. The King is full of grace and fair regard.

Ely. And a true lover of the holy Church.

Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd
it not.

The breath no sooner left his father's body
But that his wildness, mortified in him, 26 Seem'd to die too; yea, at that very moment,

Consideration like an angel came And whipp'd th' offending Adam out of
him,

Leaving his body as a paradise 30
T' envelop and contain celestial spirits.

Never was such a sudden scholar made;
Never came reformation in a flood,
With such a heady currance, scouring
faults;

Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness 35
So soon did lose his seat, and all at once,
As in this king.

Ely. We are blessed in the change.

Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And, all-admiring, with an inward wish You would desire the King were made a prelate; 40

Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,
You would say it hath been all in all his study;

List his discourse of war, and you shall hear

A fearful battle rend'red you in music.
Turn him to any cause of policy, 45
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,

Familiar as his garter; that, when he
speaks,

The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears

To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences;
So that the art and practic part of life 51
Must be the mistress to this theoric;
Which is a wonder how his Grace should glean it,

Since his addiction was to courses vain,
His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow,
His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets,
sports; 56

And never noted in him any study,
Any retirement, any sequestration
From open haunts and popularity.

Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle, 60

And wholesome berries thrive and ripen
best

Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality;
And so the Prince obscur'd his contemplation

Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt,

Grew like the summer grass, fastest by
night, 65

Unseen, yet crescive in his faculty.

Cant. It must be so; for miracles are
ceas'd;

And therefore we must needs admit the means

How things are perfected.

Ely. But, my good lord,

How now for mitigation of this bill 70
Urg'd by the Commons? Doth his Majesty
Incline to it, or no?

Cant. He seems indifferent;
Or rather swaying more upon our part

Than cherishing th' exhibitors against us;
For I have made an offer to his Majesty—

Upon our spiritual convocation 76
And in regard of causes now in hand,

Which I have open'd to his Grace at large,
As touching France—to give a greater sum

Than ever at one time the clergy yet 80
Did to his predecessors part withal.

Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd,
my lord?

Cant. With good acceptance of his Majesty;

Save that there was not time enough to
hear,

As I perceiv'd his Grace would fain have
done, 85

The severals and unhidden passages
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms,

And generally to the crown and seat of
France,

Deriv'd from Edward, his great-grand-
father.

Ely. What was th' impediment that broke this off? 90

Cant. The French ambassador upon that instant
Crav'd audience; and the hour, I think, is come
 To give him hearing: is it four o'clock?
Ely. It is.
Cant. Then go we in, to know his embassy;
 Which I could with a ready guess declare,
 Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.
Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. The Presence Chamber in the King's palace.

Enter the KING, GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and Attendants.

King. Where is my gracious Lord of Canterbury?

Exe. Not here in presence.

King. Send for him, good uncle.

West. Shall we call in th' ambassador, my liege?

King. Not yet, my cousin; we would be resolv'd,

Before we hear him, of some things of weight

That task our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and the BISHOP OF ELY.

Cant. God and his angels guard your sacred throne,

And make you long become it!

King. Sure, we thank you.

My learned lord, we pray you to proceed,
 And justly and religiously unfold

Why the law Salique, that they have in France,

Or should or should not bar us in our claim;
 And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,
 That you should fashion, wrest, or bow
 your reading,

Or nicely charge your understanding soul
 With opening titles miscreate whose right
 Suits not in native colours with the truth;
 For God doth know how many, now in health,

Shall drop their blood in approbation
 Of what your reverence shall incite us to.
 Therefore take heed how you impawn our
 person,

How you awake our sleeping sword of war—
 We charge you, in the name of God, take heed;

For never two such kingdoms did contend Without much fall of blood; whose guilt-less drops

Are every one a woe, a sore complaint,
 'Gainst him whose wrongs gives edge unto the swords

That makes such waste in brief mortality.
 Under this conjuration speak, my lord;
 For we will hear, note, and believe in heart,
 That what you speak is in your conscience
 wash'd

As pure as sin with baptism.

Cant. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, and you peers,

That owe yourselves, your lives, and services,

To this imperial throne. There is no bar
 To make against your Highness' claim to
 France

But this, which they produce from Pharamond:

'In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant'—

'No woman shall succeed in Salique land';
 Which Salique land the French unjustly gloze

To be the realm of France, and Pharamond
 The founder of this law and female bar.

Yet their own authors faithfully affirm

That the land Salique is in Germany,
 Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe;

Where Charles the Great, having subdu'd
 the Saxons,

There left behind and settled certain
 French;

Who, holding in disdain the German
 women

For some dishonest manners of their life, Establish'd then this law: to wit, no
 female

Should be inheritor in Salique land;
 Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,

Is at this day in Germany call'd Meisen.

Then doth it well appear the Salique law
 Was not devised for the realm of France;

Nor did the French possess the Salique land
 Until four hundred one and twenty years

After defunction of King Pharamond,
 Idly suppos'd the founder of this law;

Who died within the year of our redemption
 Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the

Great Subdu'd the Saxons, and did seat the French

Beyond the river Sala, in the year Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers
 say,

King Pepin, which deposed Childeric,
 Did, as heir general, being descended

Of Blithild, which was daughter to King
 Clothair,

Make claim and title to the crown of France.

Hugh Capet also, who usurp'd the crown
 Of Charles the Duke of Lorraine, sole heir male

Of the true line and stock of Charles the Great,

To find his title with some shows of truth—

Though in pure truth it was corrupt and naught—

Convey'd himself as th' heir to th' Lady Lingare, ⁷⁴

Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son
To Lewis the Emperor, and Lewis the son Of Charles the Great. Also King Lewis the Tenth,

Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience, ⁷⁹
Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied
That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother,
Was lineal of the Lady Ermengare, Daughter to Charles the foresaid Duke of Lorraine;

By the which marriage the line of Charles the Great

Was re-united to the Crown of France. ⁸⁵
So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,
King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim,
King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear
To hold in right and title of the female;
So do the kings of France unto this day, ⁹⁰
Howbeit they would hold up this Salique
law

To bar your Highness claiming from the female;

And rather choose to hide them in a net
Than amply to imbar their crooked titles
Usurp'd from you and your progenitors. ⁹⁵

King. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

Cant. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!

For in the book of Numbers is it writ,
When the man dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord, Stand for your own, unwind your bloody flag, ¹⁰¹

Look back into your mighty ancestors.
Go, my dread lord, to your great-grand-sire's tomb,

From whom you claim; invoke his warlike
spirit,

And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black Prince, ¹⁰⁵

Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,

Making defeat on the full power of France,
Whiles his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling to behold his lion's whelp
Forage in blood of French nobility. ¹¹⁰

O noble English, that could entertain With half their forces the full pride of
France,

And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work and cold for action!

Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead, ¹¹⁵

And with your puissant arm renew their feats.

You are their heir; you sit upon their
throne;

The blood and courage that renowned them

Runs in your veins; and my thricepuissant liege

Is in the very May-morn of his youth, ¹²⁰
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises.

Exe. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth

Do all expect that you should rouse
yourself,

As did the former lions of your blood.

West. They know your Grace hath cause and means and might— ¹²⁵

So hath your Highness; never King of England

Had nobles richer and more loyal subjects, Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England

And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Cant. O, let their bodies follow, my dear
liege, ¹³⁰

With blood and sword and fire to win your right!

In aid whereof we of the spirituality
Will raise your Highness such a mighty sum

As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors. ¹³⁵

King. We must not only arm t' invade the French,

But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot, who will make road upon us

With all advantages.

Cant. They of those marches, gracious sovereign, ¹⁴⁰

Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.

King. We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,

But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us; ¹⁴⁵

For you shall read that my great-grand-
father

Never went with his forces into France
But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom

Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fulness of his force, ¹⁵⁰

Galling the gleaned land with hot assays, Girding with grievous siege castles and
towns;

That England, being empty of defence,
Hath shook and trembled at th' ill neighbourhood.

Cant. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege; ¹⁵⁵

For hear her but exampled by herself:
When all her chivalry hath been in France,

And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended

But taken and impounded as a stray ¹⁶⁰
The King of Scots; whom she did send to
France,

To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings,

And make her chronicle as rich with praise
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea ¹⁶⁴
With sunken wreck and sumless treasures.

West. But there's a saying, very old and true :

' If that you will France win,
Then with Scotland first begin '.

For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot ¹⁷⁰
Comes sneaking, and so sucks her princely eggs,

Playing the mouse in absence of the cat,
To tear and havoc more than she can eat.

Exe. It follows, then, the cat must stay
at home ;

Yet that is but a crush'd necessity, ¹⁷⁵
Since we have locks to safeguard necessities
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight
abroad,

Th' advised head defends itself at home ;
For government, though high, and low, and lower, ¹⁸⁰

Put into parts, doth keep in one consent,
Congreeing in a full and natural close,
Like music.

Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion ; ¹⁸⁵
To which is fixed as an aim or butt
Obedience ; for so work the honey bees,
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.

They have a king, and officers of sorts, ¹⁹⁰ Where some like magistrates correct at
home ;

Others like merchants venture trade
abroad ;

Others like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds,
Which pillage they with merry march bring home ¹⁹⁵

To the tent-royal of their emperor ;
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold,
The civil citizens kneading up the honey,
The poor mechanic porters crowding in ²⁰⁰
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate,
The sad-ey'd justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale

The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,
That many things, having full reference ²⁰⁵
To one consent, may work contrariously ;
As many arrows loosed several ways Come to one mark, as many ways meet in one town,

As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea,
As many lines close in the dial's centre ; ²¹⁰
So many a thousand actions, once afoot,
End in one purpose, and be all well borne Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege.

Divide your happy England into four ; ²¹⁴
Whereof take you one quarter into France,
And you withal shall make all Gallia shake.
If we, with thrice such powers left at
home,

Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried, and our nation lose
The name of hardiness and policy. ²²⁰

King. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin.

[Exeunt some Attendants.]

Now are we well resolv'd ; and, by God's help

And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe,
Or break it all to pieces ; or there we'll sit,
Ruling in large and ample empery ²²⁶
O'er France and all her almost kingly
dukedom,

Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
Tombless, with no remembrance over them.
Either our history shall with full mouth
Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth, ²³²

Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure

Of our fair cousin Dauphin ; for we hear ²³⁵
Your greeting is from him, not from the King.

1 Amb. May't please your Majesty to give us leave

Freely to render what we have in charge ;
Or shall we sparingly show you far off ²³⁹
The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy ?

King. We are no tyrant, but a Christian
king,

Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
As are our wretches fett' red in our prisons ;
Therefore with frank and with uncurbed
plainness

Tell us the Dauphin's mind.

1 Amb. Thus then, in few. ²⁴⁵
Your Highness, lately sending into France, Did claim some certain dukedom in the right

Of your great predecessor, King Edward the Third.

In answer of which claim, the Prince our master

Says that you savour too much of your youth, ²⁵⁰

And bids you be advis'd there's nought in
France

That can be with a nimble galliard won ;
You cannot revel into dukedom there.

He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit, ²⁵⁴

This tun of treasure ; and, in lieu of this,
Desires you let the dukedom that you claim

Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks.

King. What treasure, uncle ?

Exe. Tennis-balls, my liege.

King. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us ;

His present and your pains we thank you for. 260

When we have match'd our rackets to these balls,

We will in France, by God's grace, play a set

Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.

Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler

That all the courts of France will be disturb'd 265

With chaces. And we understand him well, How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,

Not measuring what use we made of them. We never valu'd this poor seat of England ;

And therefore, living hence, did give ourself To barbarous licence ; as 'tis ever common

That men are merriest when they are from home.

But tell the Dauphin I will keep my state, Be like a king, and show my sail of greatness,

When I do rouse me in my throne of France ; 275

For that I have laid by my majesty And plodded like a man for working-days ;

But I will rise there with so full a glory That I will dazzle all the eyes of France,

Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us. And tell the pleasant Prince this mock

of his 281

Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones, and his soul

Shall stand sore charged for the wasteful vengeance

That shall fly with them ; for many a thousand widows

Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands ; 285

Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles down ;

And some are yet ungotten and unborn That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's scorn.

But this lies all within the will of God, 289

To whom I do appeal ; and in whose name, Tell you the Dauphin, I am coming on,

To venge me as I may and to put forth My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause.

So get you hence in peace ; and tell the Dauphin

His jest will savour but of shallow wit, 295

When thousands weep more than did laugh at it.

Convey them with safe conduct. Fare you well. [Exeunt Ambassadors.]

Exe. This was a merry message.

King. We hope to make the sender blush at it.

Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour 300

That may give furth'rance to our expedition ;

For we have now no thought in us but France,

Save those to God, that run before our business.

Therefore let our proportions for these wars Be soon collected, and all things thought upon 305

That may with reasonable swiftmess add More feathers to our wings ; for, God before,

We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door.

Therefore let every man now task his thought 309

That this fair action may on foot be brought. [Exeunt.]

ACT TWO

PROLOGUE

Flourish. Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Now all the youth of Engiand are on fire,

And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lies ; Now thrive the armourers, and honour's

thought

Reigns solely in the breast of every man ; They sell the pasture now to buy the horse,

Following the mirror of all Christian kings With winged heels, as English Mercuries. 7

For now sits Expectation in the air, And hides a sword from hilts unto the point

With crowns imperial, crowns, and coronets, Promis'd to Harry and his followers. 11

The French, advis'd by good intelligence Of this most dreadful preparation,

Shake in their fear and with pale policy Seek to divert the English purposes. 15

O England ! model to thy inward greatness, Like little body with a mighty heart,

What mightst thou do that honour would thee do,

Were all thy children kind and natural ! But see thy fault ! France hath in thee found out 20

A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills With treacherous crowns ; and three corrupted men—

One, Richard Earl of Cambridge, and the second,

Henry Lord Scroop of Masham, and the third,

Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland, 23

Have, for the gilt of France—O guilt indeed !—

Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France ; And by their hands this grace of kings must die—

If hell and treason hold their promises, Ere he take ship for France—and in Southampton. 30

Linger your patience on, and we'll digest
Th' abuse of distance, force a play.
The sum is paid, the traitors are agreed,
The King is set from London, and the scene

Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton; 35

There is the play-house now, there must you sit,

And thence to France shall we convey you safe

And bring you back, charming the narrow
seas

To give you gentle pass; for, if we may,
We'll not offend one stomach with our play.
But, till the King come forth, and not till
then, 41

Unto Southampton do we shift our scene.
[Exit.

SCENE I. London. Before the Boar's Head Tavern, Eastcheap.

Enter Corporal NYM and Lieutenant
BARDOLPH.

Bard. Well met, Corporal Nym.

Nym. Good morrow, Lieutenant Bar-dolph.

Bard. What, are Ancient Pistol and you friends yet?

Nym. For my part, I care not; I say little, but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles—but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight; but I will wink and hold out mine iron. It is a simple one; but what though? It will toast cheese, and it will endure cold as another man's sword will; and there's an end. 9

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends; and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France. Let't be so, good Corporal Nym. 12

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may. That is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it. 16

Bard. It is certain, Corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly; and certainly she did you wrong, for you were trothplight to her. 19

Nym. I cannot tell; things must be as they may. Men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time; and some say knives have edges. It must be as it may; though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell. 25

Enter PISTOL and Hostess.

Bard. Here comes Ancient Pistol and his wife. Good Corporal, be patient here.

Nym. How now, mine host Pistol!

Pist. Base tike, call'st thou me host?

Now, by this hand, I swear I scorn the term;

Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers. 30

Host. No, by my troth, not long; for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy-house straight.

[Nym draws] O well-a-day, Lady, if he be not drawn! Now we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed. 36

Bard. Good Lieutenant, good Corporal, offer nothing here.

Nym. Pish!

Pist. Pish for thee, Iceland dog! thou prick-ear'd cur of Iceland! 40

Host. Good Corporal Nym, show thy valour, and put up your sword.

Nym. Will you shog off? I would have you solus.

Pist. 'Solus' egregious dog? O viper vile! 44

The 'solus' in thy most mervailous face;
The 'solus' in thy teeth, and in thy throat,
And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw,
perdy;

And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth!

I do retort the 'solus' in thy bowels;
For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up, 50
And flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not Barbason: you cannot conjure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferently well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms; if you would walk off I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may, and that's the humour of it.

Pist. O braggart vile and damned furious wight!

The grave doth gape and doting death is near; 59

Therefore exhale. [Pistol draws.

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say: he that strikes the first stroke I'll run him up to the hilt, as I am a soldier. [Draws.

Pist. An oath of mickle might; and fury shall abate. 64

[Pistol and Nym sheathe their swords.
Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give;
Thy spirits are most tall.

Nym. I will cut thy throat one time or other, in fair terms; that is the humour
of it.

Pist. 'Couple a gorge!'

That is the word. I thee defy again. 70
O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get?

No; to the spital go,
And from the powd'ring tub of infamy
Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind,

Doll Tearsheet she by name, and her spouse.⁷⁵
 I have, and I will hold, the quondam
 Quickly
 For the only she; and—pauca, there's enough.
 Go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master; and your hostess—he is very sick, and would to bed. Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan. Faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue.⁸³

Host. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days: the King has kill'd his heart. Good husband, come home presently. [Exeunt Hostess and Boy.]

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together; why the devil should we keep knives to cut
 one another's throats?⁸⁹

Pist. Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food howl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

Nym. That now I will have; that's the humour of it.⁹⁴

Pist. As manhood shall compound: push home. [Pistol and Nym draw.]

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust I'll kill him; by this sword, I will.

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

[Sheathes his sword.]

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends; an thou wilt not, why then be enemies with me too. Prithee put up.¹⁰¹

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay;
 And liquor likewise will I give to thee,¹⁰⁵
 And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood.

I'll live by Nym and Nym shall live by
 me.

Is not this just? For I shall sutler be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.
 Give me thy hand.¹¹⁰

Nym. [Sheathing his sword] I shall have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid.

Nym. [Shaking hands] Well, then, that's the humour of't.¹¹³

Re-enter Hostess.

Host. As ever you come of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah, poor heart!
 he is so shak'd of a burning quotidian

tertian that it is most lamentable to behold.
 Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The King hath run bad humours on the knight; that's the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right;¹²⁰
 His heart is fracted and corroborate.

Nym. The King is a good king, but it must be as it may; he passes some humours and careers.

Pist. Let us condole the knight; for, lambkins, we will live. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Southampton. A council-chamber.

Enter EXETER, BEDFORD, and WESTMORE-LAND.

Bed. Fore God, his Grace is bold, to trust these traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves,

As if allegiance in their bosoms sat,
 Crowned with faith and constant loyalty!⁵

Bed. The King hath note of all that they intend,

By interception which they dream not of.
 Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow,

Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious favours—⁹

That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell
 His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

Trumpets sound. Enter the KING, SCROOP, CAMBRIDGE, GREY, and Attendants.

King. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard.

My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord
 of Masham,

And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts.

Think you not that the pow'rs we bear with us¹⁵

Will cut their passage through the force of France,

Doing the execution and the act
 For which we have in head assembled them?

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best.

King. I doubt not that, since we are well persuaded²⁰

We carry not a heart with us from hence
 That grows not in a fair consent with ours;
 Nor leave not one behind that doth not wish

Success and conquest to attend on us.
 Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd²⁵
 and lov'd

Than is your Majesty. There's not, I think, a subject

That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness
 Under the sweet shade of your government.

Grey. True: those that were your father's enemies

Have steep'd their galls in honey, and do serve you 30

With hearts create of duty and of zeal.

King. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness,

And shall forget the office of our hand
Sooner than quittance of desert and merit
According to the weight and worthiness. 35

Scroop. So service shall with steeled sinews toil,

And labour shall refresh itself with hope,
To do your Grace incessant services.

King. We judge no less. Uncle of Exeter,
Enlarge the man committed yesterday 40

That rail'd against our person. We consider
It was excess of wine that set him on;

And on his more advice we pardon him.

Scroop. That's mercy, but too much security.

Let him be punish'd, sovereign, lest example 45

Breed, by his sufferance, more of such a kind.

King. O, let us yet be merciful!

Cam. So may your Highness, and yet punish too.

Grey. Sir, 49

You show great mercy if you give him life,
After the taste of much correction.

King. Alas, your too much love and care of me

Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wretch!
If little faults proceeding on distemper

Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch
our eye 55

When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd,
and digested,

Appear before us? We'll yet enlarge that
man,

Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear care

And tender preservation of our person,
Would have him punish'd. And now to our

French causes: 60

Who are the late commissioners?

Cam. I one, my lord.

Your Highness bade me ask for it to-day.

Scroop. So did you me, my liege.

Grey. And I, my royal sovereign. 65

King. Then, Richard Earl of Cambridge,
there is yours;

There yours, Lord Scroop of Masham; and,
Sir Knight,

Grey of Northumberland, this same is
yours.

Read them, and know I know your worthiness.

My Lord of Westmoreland, and uncle
Exeter, 70

We will aboard to-night. Why, how now, gentlemen?

What see you in those papers, that you lose

So much complexion? Look ye how they change!

Their cheeks are paper. Why, what read you there

That have so cowarded and chas'd your
blood 75

Out of appearance?

Cam.

I do confess my fault,
And do submit me to your Highness' mercy.

Grey, Scroop. To which we all appeal.

King. The mercy that was quick in us but late

By your own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd. 80

You must not dare, for shame, to talk of
mercy;

For your own reasons turn into your bosoms

As dogs upon their masters, worrying you.
See you, my princes and my noble peers,

These English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge here— 85

You know how apt our love was to accord
To furnish him with all appertinents

Belonging to his honour; and this man Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly

conspir'd,

And sworn unto the practices of France 90
To kill us here in Hampton; to the which

This knight, no less for bounty bound to us Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn.

But, O,

What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop, thou cruel,

Ingrateful, savage, and inhuman creature?
Thou that didst bear the key of all my

counsels, 96

That knew'st the very bottom of my soul,
That almost mightst have coin'd me into

gold,

Wouldst thou have practis'd on me for thy use—

May it be possible that foreign hire 100 Could out of thee extract one spark of evil

That might annoy my finger? 'Tis so strange

That, though the truth of it stands off as gross

As black and white, my eye will scarcely see it.

Treason and murder ever kept together, 105
As two yoke-devils sworn to either's
purpose,

Working so grossly in a natural cause
That admiration did not whoop at them;

But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst
bring in 109

Wonder to wait on treason and on murder;
And whatsoever cunning fiend it was

That wrought upon thee so preposterously
Hath got the voice in hell for excellence;

And other devils that suggest by treasons
Do botch and bungle up damnation 115

With patches, colours, and with forms, being fetch'd
 From glist'ring semblances of piety;
 But he that temper'd thee bade thee stand
 up,
 Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst
 do treason,
 Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor. ¹²⁰
 If that same demon that hath gull'd thee
 thus Should with his lion gait walk the whole
 world,
 He might return to vasty Tartar back,
 And tell the legions 'I can never win
 A soul so easy as that Englishman's'. ¹²⁵
 O, how hast thou with jealousy infected
 The sweetness of affiance! Show men dutiful?
 Why, so didst thou. Seem they grave and learned?
 Why, so didst thou. Come they of noble family?
 Why, so didst thou. Seem they religious?
 Why, so didst thou. Or are they spare in diet, ¹³¹
 Free from gross passion or of mirth or anger,
 Constant in spirit, not swerving with the
 blood,
 Garnish'd and deck'd in modest comple-
 ment,
 Not working with the eye without the ear,
 And but in purged judgment trusting neither? ¹³⁶
 Such and so finely bolted didst thou seem;
 And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot
 To mark the full-fraught man and best indued ¹³⁹
 With some suspicion. I will weep for thee;
 For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like Another fall of man. Their faults are open.
 Arrest them to the answer of the law;
 And God acquit them of their practices!
Exe. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge. ¹⁴⁶
 I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry Lord Scroop of Masham.
 I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland.
Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath discover'd, ¹⁵¹
 And I repent my fault more than my death;
 Which I beseech your Highness to forgive,
 Although my body pay the price of it.
Cam. For me, the gold of France did not seduce, ¹⁵⁵
 Although I did admit it as a motive
 The sooner to effect what I intended;
 But God be thanked for prevention,
 Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice,
 Beseeching God and you to pardon me. ¹⁶⁰ Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice

At the discovery of most dangerous treason
 Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself,
 Prevented from a damned enterprise.
 My fault, but not my body, pardon,
 sovereign. ¹⁶⁵
King. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence.
 You have conspir'd against our royal
 person,
 Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers
 Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death; Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter, ¹⁷⁰
 His princes and his peers to servitude,
 His subjects to oppression and contempt,
 And his whole kingdom into desolation.
 Touching our person seek we no revenge;
 But we our kingdom's safety must so tender, ¹⁷⁵
 Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws
 We do deliver you. Get you therefore
 hence,
 Poor miserable wretches, to your death;
 The taste whereof God of his mercy give You patience to endure, and true repentance ¹⁸⁰
 Of all your dear offences. Bear them hence.
 [Exeunt Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, guarded.]
 Now, lords, for France; the enterprise whereof
 Shall be to you as us like glorious.
 We doubt not of a fair and lucky war, Since God so graciously hath brought to light ¹⁸⁵
 This dangerous treason, lurking in our way
 To hinder our beginnings; we doubt not
 now
 But every rub is smoothed on our way.
 Then, forth, dear countrymen; let us deliver
 Our puissance into the hand of God, ¹⁹⁰
 Putting it straight in expedition.
 Cheerly to sea; the signs of war advance;
 No king of England, if not king of France!
 [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Eastcheap. Before the Boar's Head tavern.

Enter PISTOL, Hostess, NYM, BARDOLPH, and Boy.

Host. Prithee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.
Pist. No; for my manly heart doth earn.
 Bardolph, be blithe; Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins;
 Boy, bristle thy courage up. For Falstaff
 he is dead, ⁵
 And we must earn therefore.
Bard. Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven or in hell! ⁸

Host. Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. 'A made a finer end, and went away an it had been any christom child; 'a parted ev'n just between twelve and one, ev'n at the turning o' th' tide; for after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his fingers' end, I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and 'a babbl'd of green fields. 'How now, Sir John!' quoth I 'What, man, be o' good cheer.' So 'a cried out 'God, God, God!' three or four times. Now I, to comfort him, bid him 'a should not think of God; I hop'd there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. So 'a bade me lay more clothes on his feet; I put my hand into the bed and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, and so upward and upward, and all was as cold as any stone. 26

Nym. They say he cried out of sack.

Host. Ay, that 'a did.

Bard. And of women.

Host. Nay, that 'a did not. 30

Boy. Yes, that 'a did, and said they were devils incarnate.

Host. 'A could never abide carnation; 'twas a colour he never lik'd. 34

Boy. 'A said once the devil would have him about women.

Host. 'A did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatic, and talk'd of the Whore of Babylon. 39

Boy. Do you not remember 'a saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose, and 'a said it was a black soul burning in hell?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintain'd that fire: that's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shog? The King will be gone from Southampton. 46

Pist. Come, let's away. My love, give me thy lips.

Look to my chattels and my moveables;
Let senses rule. The word is 'Pitch and Pay'.

Trust none; 50
For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes,

And Holdfast is the only dog, my duck.

Therefore, Caveto be thy counsellor.

Go, clear thy crystals. Yoke-fellows in arms,

Let us to France, like horse-leeches, my boys, 55

To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck.

Boy. And that's but unwholesome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing her.

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it; but, adieu. 61

Pist. Let housewifery appear; keep close, I thee command.

Host. Farewell; adieu. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. France. The King's palace.

Flourish. Enter the FRENCH KING, the DAUPHIN, the DUKES OF BERRI and BRITAINNE, the CONSTABLE, and Others.

Fr. King. Thus comes the English with full power upon us;

And more than carefully it us concerns

To answer royally in our defences.

Therefore the Dukes of Berri and of Britainne,

Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make forth, 5

And you, Prince Dauphin, with all swift dispatch,

To line and new repair our towns of war
With men of courage and with means defendant;

For England his approaches makes as fierce
As waters to the sucking of a gulf. 10

It fits us, then, to be as provident

As fear may teach us, out of late examples
Left by the fatal and neglected English
Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father,
It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe;
For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom, 16

Though war nor no known quarrel were in question,

But that defences, musters, preparations,
Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected,

As were a war in expectation. 20

Therefore, I say, 'tis meet we all go forth
To view the sick and feeble parts of France;
And let us do it with no show of fear—

No, with no more than if we heard that
England 24

Were busied with a Whitsun morris-dance;
For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd,

Her sceptre so fantastically borne

By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth,
That fear attends her not.

Con. O peace, Prince Dauphin!
You are too much mistaken in this king. 30

Question your Grace the late ambassadors
With what great state he heard their embassy,

How well supplied with noble counsellors,
How modest in exception, and withal

How terrible in constant resolution, 35
And you shall find his vanities forespent

Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus, Covering discretion with a coat of folly;

As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots

That shall first spring and be most delicate.

Dau. Well, 'tis not so, my Lord High Constable; 41

KING HENRY THE FIFTH

But though we think it so, it is no matter.
In cases of defence 'tis best to weigh
The enemy more mighty than he seems ;
So the proportions of defence are fill'd ; 45
Which of a weak and niggardly projection Doth like a miser spoil his coat with scant-
ing
A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we King Harry strong ;
And, Princes, look you strongly arm to meet him.

The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon
us ; 50

And he is bred out of that bloody strain
That haunted us in our familiar paths.
Witness our too much memorable shame
When Cressy battle fatally was struck,
And all our princes captiv'd by the hand 55
Of that black name, Edward, Black Prince of Wales ;

Whiles that his mountain sire—on mountain standing,

Up in the air, crown'd with the golden
sun—

Saw his heroical seed, and smil'd to see him,
Mangle the work of nature, and deface 60
The patterns that by God and by French
fathers

Had twenty years been made. This is a stem

Of that victorious stock ; and let us fear
The native mightiness and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Harry King of
England 65
Do crave admittance to your Majesty.

Fr. King. We'll give them present audience. Go and bring them.

[Exeunt Messenger and certain Lords.
You see this chase is hotly followed,
friends.

Dau. Turn head and stop pursuit ; for coward dogs

Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten 70

Runs far before them. Good my sovereign, Take up the English short, and let them
know

Of what a monarchy you are the head.
Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with EXETER and Train.

Fr. King. From our brother of England ?

Exe. From him, and thus he greets your
Majesty ; 76

He wills you, in the name of God Almighty,
That you divest yourself, and lay apart
The borrowed glories that by gift of
heaven,

By law of nature and of nations, 'longs 80
To him and to his heirs—namely, the
crown,

And all wide-stretched honours that pertain,

By custom and the ordinance of times, Unto the crown of France. That you may know

'Tis no sinister nor no awkward claim, 85
Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd days,

Nor from the dust of old oblivion rak'd,
He sends you this most memorable line,

[Gives a paper.

In every branch truly demonstrative ;
Willing you overlook this pedigree. 90

And when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his most fam'd of famous ancestors,
Edward the Third, he bids you then resign
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
From him, the native and true challenger.

Fr. King. Or else what follows ? 96

Exe. Bloody constraint ; for if you hide
the crown

Even in your hearts, there will he rake
for it.

Therefore in fierce tempest is he coming,
In thunder and in earthquake, like a Jove,
That if requiring fail, he will compel ; 100
And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the crown ; and to take mercy
On the poor souls for whom this hungry war
Opens his vasty jaws ; and on your head
Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' 106
cries,

The dead men's blood, the privy maidens'
groans,

For husbands, fathers, and betrothed
lovers,

That shall be swallowed in this controversy.
This is his claim, his threat'ning, and my message ; 110

Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further ;

To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our brother of England.

Dau. For the Dauphin : 115

I stand here for him. What to him from England ?

Exe. Scorn and defiance, slight regard
contempt,

And anything that may not misbecome
The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus says my king : an if your father's Highness 120

Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his
Majesty,

He'll call you to so hot an answer of it
That caves and womby vaultages of France Shall chide your trespass and return you mock 125

In second accent of his ordinance.

Dau. Say, if my father render fair return,

It is against my will ; for I desire Nothing but odds with England. To that end,
 As matching to his youth and vanity, ¹³⁰
 I did present him with the Paris balls.
Exe. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake
 for it,
 Were it the mistress court of mighty Europe ;
 And be assur'd you'll find a difference, ¹³⁴
 As we his subjects have in wonder found,
 Between the promise of his greener days
 And these he masters now. Now he weighs
 time
 Even to the utmost grain ; that you shall
 read
 In your own losses, if he stay in France.
Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full. ¹⁴⁰
Exe. Dispatch us with all speed, lest that our king
 Come here himself to question our delay ;
 For he is footed in this land already.
Fr. King. You shall be soon dispatch'd with fair conditions. ¹⁴⁴
 A night is but small breath and little pause
 To answer matters of this consequence.
 [Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT THREE

PROLOGUE

Flourish. Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies,
 In motion of no less celerity
 Than that of thought. Suppose that you have seen
 The well-appointed King at Hampton pier
 Embark his royalty ; and his brave fleet ⁵
 With silken streamers the young Phœbus fanning.
 Play with your fancies ; and in them behold
 Upon the hempen tackle ship-boys climb-
 ing ;
 Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give
 To sounds confus'd ; behold the threaden sails, ¹⁰
 Borne with th' invisible and creeping wind, Draw the huge bottoms through the furrowed sea,
 Breasting the lofty surge. O, do but think
 You stand upon the rivage and behold
 A city on th' inconstant billows dancing ; ¹⁵
 For so appears this fleet majestic, Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow !
 Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy
 And leave your England as dead midnight
 still,
 Guarded with grandsires, babies, and old women, ²⁰

Either past or not arriv'd to pith and puissance ;
 For who is he whose chin is but enrich'd
 With one appearing hair that will not follow
 These cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France ?
 Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege ; ²⁵
 Behold the ordnance on their carriages,
 With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur.
 Suppose th' ambassador from the French comes back ;
 Tells Harry that the King doth offer him Katharine his daughter, and with her to dowry ³⁰
 Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms.
 The offer likes not ; and the nimble gunner
 With linstock now the devilish cannon touches,
 [Alarum, and chambers go off.
 And down goes all before them. Still be kind, ³⁴
 And eke out our performance with your mind. [Exit.

SCENE I. France. Before Harfleur.

Alarum. Enter the KING, EXETER, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers with scaling-ladders.

King. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more ;
 Or close the wall up with our English dead.
 In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
 As modest stillness and humility ; ⁴
 But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
 Then imitate the action of the tiger :
 Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood, Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd
 rage ;
 Then lend the eye a terrible aspect ;
 Let it pry through the portage of the head
 Like the brass cannon ; let the brow
 o'erwhelm it ¹¹
 As fearfully as doth a galled rock
 O'erhang and jutty his confounded base,
 Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean.
 Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide ; ¹⁵
 Hold hard the breath, and bend up every
 spirit
 To his full height. On, on, you noblest English,
 Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof—
 Fathers that like so many Alexanders Have in these parts from morn till even fought, ²⁰
 And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument.
 Dishonour not your mothers ; now attest
 That those whom you call'd fathers did beget you.

Be copy now to men of grosser blood,
And teach them how to war. And you,
good yeomen,
Whose limbs were made in England, show us here
The mettle of your pasture; let us swear
That you are worth your breeding—which I doubt not;
For there is none of you so mean and base
That hath not noble lustre in your eyes. 30
I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
Straining upon the start. The game's afoot:
Follow your spirit; and upon this charge
Cry 'God for Harry, England, and Saint
George!'

[Exeunt. Alarum, and chambers go off.]

SCENE II. Before Harfleur.

Enter NYM, BARDOLPH, PISTOL, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, on! to the breach,
to the breach!

Nym. Pray thee, Corporal, stay; the knocks are too hot, and for mine own part I have not a case of lives. The humour of it is too hot; that is the very plain-song
of it. 5

Pist. The plain-song is most just; for humours do abound.

Knocks go and come; God's vassals drop and die;

*And sword and shield
In bloody field*

Doth win immortal fame. 10

Boy. Would I were in an alehouse in London! I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety.

Pist. And I:

*If wishes would prevail with me,
My purpose should not fail with me, 15
But thither would I hie.*

Boy. As duly, but not as truly,
As bird doth sing on bough.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Up to the breach, you dogs!
Avaunt, you cullions! 20

[Driving them forward.]

Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould.

*Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage;
Abate thy rage, great duke.*

Good hawcock, bate thy rage. Use lenity, sweet chuck.

Nym. These be good humours. Your honour wins bad humours. 26

[Exeunt all but Boy.]

Boy. As young as I am, I have observ'd these three swashers. I am boy to them all three; but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me;
for indeed three such antics do not amount to a man. For Bardolph, he is whiteliver'd and red-fac'd; by the means whereof 'a faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol, he hath a killing tongue and a quiet sword; by the means whereof 'a breaks words and keeps whole weapons.

For Nym, he hath heard that men of few words are the best men, and therefore he scorns to say his prayers lest 'a should be thought a coward; but his few bad words are match'd with as few good deeds; for 'a never broke any man's head but his own and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal anything, and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case, hore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three halfpence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching, and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel; I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets as their gloves or their handkerchers; which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket to put into mine; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them and seek some better service; their villainy goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up. [Exit.]

Re-enter FLUELLEN, GOWER following.

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines; the Duke of Gloucester would speak with you. 35

Flu. To the mines! Tell you the Duke it is not so good to come to the mines; for look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war; the concavities of it is not sufficient. For, look you, the adversary—you may discuss unto the Duke, look you—is digt himself four yards under the countermines; by Cheshu, think 'a will plow up all, if there is no better directions. 6

Gow. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman—a very valiant gentleman, i' faith.

Flu. It is Captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gow. I think it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world: I will verify as much in his beard
he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter MACMORRIS and Captain JAMY.

Gow. Here 'a comes; and the Scotch captain, Captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous famous gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in the ancient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions. By Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans. 77

Jamy. I say gud day, Captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, good Captain James.

Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris! Have you quit the mines? Have the pioneers given o'er? 81

Mac. By Chrish, la, tish ill done! The work ish give over, the trompet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over; I would have blowed up the town, so Chrish save me, la, in an hour. O, tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done! 87

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I beseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly to satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline, that is the point. 95

Jamy. It sall be vary gud, gud feith, gud captains bath; and I sall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion; that sall I, marry. 98

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me. The day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the King, and the Dukes; it is no time to discourse. The town is beseech'd, and the trumpet call us to the breach; and we talk and, be Chrish, do nothing. 'Tis shame for us all, so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand; and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done; and there ish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la. 107

Jamy. By the mess, ere theise eyes of mine take themselves to slomber, ay'll de gud service, or I'll lig i' th' grund for it; ay, or go to death. And I'll pay't as valorously as I may, that sall I suerly do, that is the breff and the long. Marry, I wad full fain heard some question 'tween you tway.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation— 115

Mac. Of my nation? What ish my nation? Ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal. What ish my nation? Who talks of my nation? 118

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of war and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities. 124

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself; so Chrish save me, I will cut off your head.

Gow. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jamy. Ah! that's a foul fault.

[A parley sounded.

Gow. The town sounds a parley. 129

Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you I know the disciplines of war; and there is an end. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Before the gates of Harfleur.

Enter the Governor and some Citizens on the walls. Enter the KING and all his Train before the gates.

King. How yet resolves the Governor of the town?

This is the latest parle we will admit; Therefore to our best mercy give yourselves

Or, like to men proud of destruction, Defy us to our worst; for, as I am a soldier, 5

A name that in my thoughts becomes me best,

If I begin the batt'ry once again, I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur Till in her ashes she lie buried.

The gates of mercy shall be all shut up, 10 And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart,

In liberty of bloody hand shall range With conscience wide as hell, mowing like grass

Your fresh fair virgins and your flow'ring infants.

What is it then to me if impious war, 15 Array'd in flames, like to the prince of fiends,

Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats

Enlink'd to waste and desolation?

What is't to me when you yourselves are cause,

If your pure maidens fall into the hand 20 Of hot and forcing violation?

What rein can hold licentious wickedness When down the hill he holds his fierce career?

We may as bootless spend our vain command

Upon th' enraged soldiers in their spoil, 25 As send precepts to the Leviathan

To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur,

Take pity of your town and of your people Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command; Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace 30

O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds

KING HENRY THE FIFTH

Of heady murder, spoil, and villainy.
If not—why, in a moment look to see
The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters ; 35

Your fathers taken by the silver beards,
And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls ;

Your naked infants spitted upon pikes, Whiles the mad mothers with their howls
confus'd

Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry 40

At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen.
What say you ? Will you yield, and this avoid ?

Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd ?

Gov. Our expectation hath this day an
end :

The Dauphin, whom of succours we entreated, 45

Returns us that his powers are yet not ready

To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great
King,

We yield our town and lives to thy soft
mercy.

Enter our gates ; dispose of us and ours ;
For we no longer are defensible. 50

King. Open your gates. [Exit Governor.
Come, uncle Exeter,

Go you and enter Harfleur ; there remain,
And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French ;
Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle,
The winter coming on, and sickness growing
Upon our soldiers, we will retire to Calais.
To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest ;
To-morrow for the march are we address'd.

[Flourish. The King and his train enter the town.

SCENE IV. Rouen. The French King's palace.

Enter KATHERINE and ALICE.

Kath. Alice, tu as été en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame.

Kath. Je te prie, m'enseigne ; il faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appelez-vous la main en Anglais ? 5

Alice. La main ? Elle est appelée de hand.

Kath. De hand. Et les doigts ?

Alice. Les doigts ? Ma foi, j'oublie les doigts ; mais je me souviendrai. Les doigts ? Je pense qu'ils sont appelés de fingres ; oui, de fingres. 10

Kath. La main, de hand ; les doigts, de fingres. Je pense que je suis le bon écolier ; j'ai gagné deux mots d'Anglais vivement. Comment appelez-vous les ongles ?

Alice. Les ongles ? Nous les appelons de nails.

Kath. De nails. Ecoutez ; dites-moi si je parle bien : de hand, de fingres, et de nails. 16

Alice. C'est bien dit, madame ; il est fort bon Anglais.

Kath. Dites-moi l'Anglais pour le bras.

Alice. De arm, madame.

Kath. Et le coude ? 20

Alice. D'elbow.

Kath. D'elbow. Je m'en fais la répétition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris dès à présent.

Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame,
comme je pense.

Kath. Excusez-moi, Alice ; écoutez :
d'hand, de fingre, de nails, d'arma, de bilbow. 26

Alice. D'elbow, madame.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu, je m'en oublie !
D'elbow. Comment appelez-vous le col ?

Alice. De nick, madame. 30

Kath. De nick. Et le menton ?

Alice. De chin.

Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick ; le menton, de sin.

Alice. Oui. Sauf votre honneur, en vérité, vous prononcez les mots aussi droit que les natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre, par la grace de Dieu, et en peu de temps. 37

Alice. N'avez-vous pas déjà oublié ce que je vous ai enseigné ?

Kath. Non, je reciterai à vous promptement : d'hand, de fingre, de mails—

Alice. De nails, madame. 42

Kath. De nails, de arm, de ilbow.

Alice. Sauf votre honneur, d'elbow.

Kath. Ainsi dis-je ; d'elbow, de nick, et de sin. Comment appelez-vous le pied et la robe ? 46

Alice. Le foot, madame ; et le count.

Kath. Le foot et le count. O Seigneur Dieu ! ils sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, gros, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user : je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France pour tout le monde.
Foh ! le foot et le count ! Néanmoins, je reciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble : d'hand, de fingre, de nails, d'arm, d'elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, le count. 55

Alice. Excellent, madame !

Kath. C'est assez pour une fois : allonsnous à dîner. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The French King's palace.

Enter the KING OF FRANCE, the DAUPHIN, DUKE OF BRITAIN, the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, and Others.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain he hath pass'd the river Somme.

Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord,

Let us not live in France ; let us quit all,
And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.

Dau. O Dieu vivant ! Shall a few sprays of us, 5

The emptying of our fathers' luxury,
Our scions, put in wild and savage stock,
Spirt up so suddenly into the clouds,
And overlook their grafters ?

Brit. Normans, but bastard Normans,
Norman bastards ! 10

Mort Dieu, ma vie ! if they march along Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom

To buy a slobb'ry and a dirty farm
In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.

Con. Dieu de batailles ! where have they this mettle ? 15

Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull ;
On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale,
Killing their fruit with frowns ? Can sodden water,

A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barley-broth,

Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat ? 20

And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine,

Seem frosty ? O, for honour of our land,
Let us not hang like roping icicles

Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people

Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields— 25

Poor we call them in their native lords !

Dau. By faith and honour,

Our madams mock at us and plainly say
Our mettle is bred out, and they will give Their bodies to the lust of English youth 30
To new-store France with bastard warriors.

Brit. They bid us to the English dancing-schools

And teach lavoltas high and swift corantos,
Saying our grace is only in our heels

And that we are most lofty runaways. 35

Fr. King. Where is Montjoy the herald ?
Speed him hence ;

Let him greet England with our sharp defiance.

Up, Princes, and, with spirit of honour edged

More sharper than your swords, hie to the field :

Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France ; 40

You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berri,

Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy ;
Jaques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont,

Beaumont, Grandpié, Roussi, and Faucon-bridge,

Foix, Lestlake, Bouciqualt, and Charolois ;

High dukes, great princes, barons, lords,
and knights, 46

For your great seats now quit you of great shames.

Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land

With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur.

Rush on his host as doth the melted snow 50
Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat

The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon ;

Go down upon him, you have power enough,

And in a captive chariot into Rouen
Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great. 55
Sorry am I his numbers are so few,

His soldiers sick and famish'd in their march ;

For I am sure, when he shall see our army,
He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear,

And for achievement offer us his ransom. 60

Fr. King. Therefore, Lord Constable, haste on Montjoy,

And let him say to England that we send
To know what willing ransom he will give.

Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.

Dau. Not so, I do beseech your Majesty.
Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us. 66

Now forth, Lord Constable and Princes all,
And quickly bring us word of England's fall. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. The English camp in Picardy.

Enter Captains, English and Welsh, GOWER and FLUELLEN.

Gow. How now, Captain Fluellen ! Come you from the bridge ?

Flu. I assure you there is very excellent services committed at the bridge.

Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe ? 5

Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon ; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my live, and my living, and my uttermost power. He is not—God be praised and blessed !—any hurt in the world, but keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an aunchient Lieutenant there at the bridge—I think in my very conscience he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony ; and he is a man of no estimation in the world ; but I did see him do as gallant service. 15

Gow. What do you call him ?

Flu. He is call'd Aunchient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not.

Enter PISTOL.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours. 20

The Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, I praise God; and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier, firm and sound of heart, 24

And of buxom valour, hath by cruel fate
And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel,
That goddess blind,
That stands upon the rolling restless
stone—

Flu. By your patience, Aunchient Pistol. Fortune is painted blind, with a muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is blind; and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and variation; and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls. In good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent moral. 37

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him;
For he hath stol'n a pax, and hanged must 'a be—

A damned death! 40
Let gallows gape for dog; let man go free,
And let not hemp his windpipe suffocate.
But Exeter hath given the doom of death
For pax of little price.

Therefore, go speak—the Duke will hear thy voice; 45

And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut
With edge of penny cord and vile reproach.
Speak, Captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Aunchient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning. 50

Pist. Why then, rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, Aunchient, it is not a thing to rejoice at; for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the Duke to use his good pleasure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damn'd! and figo for thy friendship! 56

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain! [Exit. 57

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal; I remember him now—a bawd, a cutpurse. 61

Flu. I'll assure you, 'a utt'red as prave words at the pridge as you shall see in a summer's day. But it is very well; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve. 65

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then goes to the wars to grace himself, at his return into London, under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names; and they will learn you by rote where services were done—at such and such a sconce, at such a breach, at such a convoy; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgrac'd, what terms the enemy stood on; and this they can perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths; and what a beard of the General's cut and a horrid suit of the camp will do among foaming bottles and ale-wash'd wits is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook. 79

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower, I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is; if I find a hole in his coat I will tell him my mind. [Drum within] Hark you, the King is coming; and I must speak with him from the pridge.

Drum and colours. Enter the KING and his poor Soldiers, and GLOUCESTER.

God pless your Majesty! 85

King. How now, Fluellen! Cam'st thou from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your Majesty. The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintain'd the pridge; the French is gone off, look you, and there is gallant and most prave passages. Marry, th' athversary was have possession of the pridge; but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the pridge; I can tell your Majesty the Duke is a prave man. 93

King. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th' athversary hath been very great, reasonable great; marry, for my part, I think the Duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church—one Bardolph, if your Majesty know the man; his face is all bubukles, and whelks, and knobs, and flames o' fire; and his lip blows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plue and sometimes red; but his nose is executed and his fire's out.

King. We would have all such offenders so cut off. And we give express charge that in our marches through the country there be nothing compell'd from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainful language; for when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. You know me by my habit. 110
King. Well then, I know thee; what shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

King. Unfold it. 113

Mont. Thus says my king. Say thou to Harry of England: Though we seem'd dead we did but sleep; advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him we could have rebuk'd him at Harfleur, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe. Now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his ransom, which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which, in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses his exchequer is too poor; for th' effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person kneeling at our feet but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add defiance; and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounc'd. So far my king and master; so much my office. 131

King. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mont. Montjoy.

King. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee back, 134

And tell thy king I do not seek him now, But could be willing to march on to Calais Without impeachment; for, to say the sooth—

Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much Unto an enemy of craft and vantage—

My people are with sickness much enfeebled; 140

My numbers lessen'd; and those few I have Almost no better than so many French; Who when they were in health, I tell thee, herald,

I thought upon one pair of English legs Did march three Frenchmen. Yet forgive me, God, 145

That I do brag thus; this your air of France

Hath blown that vice in me; I must repent.

Go, therefore, tell thy master here I am; My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk; My army but a weak and sickly guard; 150 Yet, God before, tell him we will come on, Though France himself and such another neighbour

Stand in our way. There's for thy labour, Montjoy.

Go, bid thy master well advise himself.

If we may pass, we will; if we be hind' red, We shall your tawny ground with your red blood 156

Discolour; and so, Montjoy, fare you well. The sum of all our answer is but this:

We would not seek a battle as we are;

Nor as we are, we say, we will not shun it.

So tell your master. 161

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your Highness. [Exit.]

Glo. I hope they will not come upon us now.

King. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.

March to the bridge, it now draws toward night; 165

Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves, And on to-morrow bid them march away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. The French camp near Agincourt.

Enter the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, the LORD RAMBURES, the DUKE OF ORLEANS, the DAUPHIN, with Others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armour of the world. Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due.

Con. It is the best horse of Europe. 5

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dau. My Lord of Orleans and my Lord High Constable, you talk of horse and armour?

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world. 10

Dau. What a long night is this! I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ça, ha! he bounds from the earth as if his entrails were hairs; le cheval volant, the Pegasus, chez les narines de feu! When I bestride him I soar, I am a hawk. He trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg. 19

Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus: he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness while his rider mounts him; he is indeed a horse, and all other jades you may call beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse. 26

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch, and his countenance enforces homage.

Orl. No more, cousin. 30

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey. It is a theme as fluent as the sea; turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all; 'tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world—familiar to us and unknown—to lay apart their particular functions and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise and began thus: 'Wonder of nature'—

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress.

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my courser; for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress.

Con. Nay, for methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So perhaps did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dau. O, then belike she was old and gentle; and you rode like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off and in your strait strossers.

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Dau. Be warn'd by me, then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs. I had rather have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Dau. I tell thee, Constable, my mistress wears his own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a sow to my mistress.

Dau. 'Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, et la truie lavée au boubier.' Thou mak'st use of anything.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress, or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My Lord Constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night—are those stars or suns upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honour some were away.

Con. Ev'n as your horse bears your praises, who would trot as well were some of your brags dismounted.

Dau. Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.

Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be fac'd out of my way; but I would it were morning, for I would fain be about the ears of the English.

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard ere you have them.

Dau. 'Tis midnight; I'll go arm myself. [Exit.]

Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.

Orl. He is simply the most active gentleman of France.

Con. Doing is activity, and he will still be doing.

Orl. He never did harm that I heard of.

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow; he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that by one that knows him better than you.

Orl. What's he?

Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said he car'd not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not; it is no hidden virtue in him.

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never anybody saw it but his lackey. 'Tis a hooded valour, and when it appears it will bate.

Orl. Ill-will never said well.

Con. I will cap that proverb with 'There is flattery in friendship'.

Orl. And I will take up that with 'Give the devil his due'.

Con. Well plac'd! There stands your friend for the devil; have at the very eye of that proverb with 'A pox of the devil!'

Orl. You are the better at proverbs by how much 'A fool's bolt is soon shot'.

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My Lord High Constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents.

Con. Who hath measur'd the ground?

Mess. The Lord Grandpré.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman. Would it were day! Alas, poor Harry of England! he longs not for the dawning as we do.

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brain'd followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour, they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures; their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.

Orl. Foolish curs, that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crush'd like rotten apples! You may as well say that's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just! and the men do sympathise with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives; and then give them great meals of beef and iron and steel; they will eat like wolves and fight like devils. ¹⁴⁷

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.

Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat, and none to fight. Now is it time to arm. Come, shall we about it? ¹⁵¹

Orl. It is now two o'clock; but let me see—by ten

We shall have each a hundred Englishmen. ^[Exeunt.]

ACT FOUR

PROLOGUE

Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Now entertain conjecture of a time When creeping murmur and the poring
dark

Fills the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night,

The hum of either army stilly sounds, ⁵
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch.
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames

Each battle sees the other's umber'd face;
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful
neighs ¹⁰

Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents

The armourers accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.

The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll, ¹⁵

And the third hour of drowsy morning
name.

Proud of their numbers and secure in soul,
The confident and over-lusty French
Do the low-rated English play at dice;

And chide the cripple tardy-gaited night ²⁰
Who like a foul and ugly witch doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned
English,

Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently and inly ruminate

The morning's danger; and their gesture sad ²⁵

Investing lank-lean cheeks and war-worn coats

Presenteth them unto the gazing moon
So many horrid ghosts. O, now, who will behold

The royal captain of this ruin'd band Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent, ³⁰

Let him cry 'Praise and glory on his
head!'

For forth he goes and visits all his host;
Bids them good morrow with a modest smile,

And calls them brothers, friends, and countrymen.

Upon his royal face there is no note ³⁵
How dread an army hath enrounded him;
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour

Unto the weary and all-watched night;
But freshly looks, and over-bears attaint

With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty; ⁴⁰

That every wretch, pining and pale before, Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks;

A largess universal, like the sun,
His liberal eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear, that mean and gentle all Behold, as may unworthiness define, ⁴⁶

A little touch of Harry in the night.
And so our scene must to the battle fly;
Where—O for pity!—we shall much disgrace

With four or five most vile and ragged foils,
Right ill-dispos'd in brawl ridiculous, ⁵¹
The name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see, Minding true things by what their meek'ries
be. ^[Exit.]

SCENE I. France. The English camp at Agincourt.

Enter the KING, BEDFORD, and GLOUCESTER.

King. Gloucester, 'tis true that we are in great danger;

The greater therefore should our courage be.
Good morrow, brother Bedford. God Almighty!

There is some soul of goodness in things
evil,

Would men observingly distil it out; ⁵
For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers,

Which is both healthful and good husbandry.

Besides, they are our outward consciences
And preachers to us all, admonishing ⁹

That we should dress us fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself.

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham:
A good soft pillow for that good white head
Were better than a churlish turf of France.

KING HENRY THE FIFTH

Erp. Not so, my liege ; this lodging likes me better, 16

Since I may say ' Now lie I like a king '.
King. 'Tis good for men to love their present pains

Upon example ; so the spirit is eased ;
And when the mind is quick'ned, out of doubt 20

The organs, though defunct and dead before,

Break up their drowsy grave and newly move

With casted slough and fresh legerity.
Lend me thy cloak, Sir Thomas. Brothers both, 24

Commend me to the princes in our camp ;
Do my good morrow to them, and anon
Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glo. We shall, my liege.

Erp. Shall I attend your Grace ?

King. No, my good knight :

Go with my brothers to my lords of England ; 30

I and my bosom must debate awhile,
And then I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble Harry ! [Exeunt all but the King.]

King. God-a-mercy, old heart ! thou speak'st cheerfully.

Enter PISTOL.

Pist. Qui va là ? 35

King. A friend.

Pist. Discuss unto me : art thou officer,
Or art thou base, common, and popular ?

King. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Trail'st thou the puissant pike ? 40

King. Even so. What are you ?

Pist. As good a gentleman as the Emperor.

King. Then you are a better than the King.

Pist. The King's a bawcock and a heart of gold,

A lad of life, an imp of fame ; 45
Of parents good, of fist most valiant.

I kiss his dirty shoe, and from heart-string
I love the lovely bully. What is thy name ?

King. Harry le Roy.

Pist. Le Roy ! a Cornish name ; art thou of Cornish crew ? 50

King. No, I am a Welshman.

Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen ?

King. Yes.

Pist. Tell him I'll knock his leek about his pate

Upon Saint Davy's day. 55

King. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about yours.

Pist. Art thou his friend ?

King. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The figo for thee, then ! 60

King. I thank you ; God be with you !

Pist. My name is Pistol call'd. [Exit.]
King. It sorts well with your fierceness.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Gow. Captain Fluellen !

Flu. So ! in the name of Jesu Christ, speak fewer. It is the greatest admiration in the universal world, when the true and aunchient prerogatives and laws of the wars is not kept ; if you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle-taddle nor pibble-pabble in Pompey's camp ; I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise. 74

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud ; you hear him all night.

Flu. If the enemy is an ass, and a fool, and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass, and a fool, and a prating coxcomb ? In your own conscience, now ? 80

Gow. I will speak lower.

Flu. I pray you and beseech you that you will. [Exeunt Gower and Fluellen.]

King. Though it appear a little out of fashion,

There is much care and valour in this Welshman.

Enter three soldiers : JOHN BATES, ALEXANDER COURT, and MICHAEL WILLIAMS.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder ? 86

Bates. I think it be ; but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it. Who goes there ? 91

King. A friend.

Will. Under what captain serve you ?

King. Under Sir Thomas Erpingham.

Will. A good old commander and a most kind gentleman. I pray you, what thinks he of our estate ? 96

King. Even as men wreck'd upon a sand, that look to be wash'd off the next tide.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the King ?

King. No ; nor it is not meet he should. For though I speak it to you, I think the King is but a man as I am : the violet smells to him as it doth to me ; the element shows to him as it doth to me ; all his senses have but human conditions ; his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man ; and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet, when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore, when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are ; yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army. 111

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will ; but I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck ; and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here. 116

King. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the King : I think he would not wish himself anywhere but where he is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alone ; so should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved. 122

King. I dare say you love him not so ill to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this, to feel other men's minds ; methinks I could not die anywhere so contented as in the King's company, his cause being just and his quarrel honourable. 127

Will. That's more than we know.

Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after ; for we know enough if we know we are the King's subjects. If his cause be wrong, our obedience to the King wipes the crime of it out of us. 132

Will. But if the cause be not good, the King himself hath a heavy reckoning to make when all those legs and arms and heads, chopp'd off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day and cry all 'We died at such a place'—some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon their debts they owe, some upon their children rawly left. I am afraid there are few die well that die in a battle ; for how can they charitably dispose of anything when blood is their argument ? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the King that led them to it ; who to disobey were against all proportion of subjection. 145

King. So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him ; or if a servant, under his master's command transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers and die in many irreconcil'd iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation. But this is not so : the King is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant ; for they purpose not their death when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unsport'd soldiers : some peradventure have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder ; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury ; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men they have no wings to fly from God : war is His beadle, war is His vengeance ; so that here men are punish'd for before-breach of the King's laws in now the King's quarrel. Where they feared the death they have borne life away ; and where they would be safe they perish. Then if they die unprovided, no more is the King guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the King's ; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed—wash every mote out of his conscience ; and dying so, death is to him advantage ; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained ; and in him that escapes it were not sin to think that, making God so free an offer, He let him outlive that day to see His greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare. 183

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head—the King is not to answer for it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me, and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

King. I myself heard the King say he would not be ransom'd. 189

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully ; but when our throats are cut he may be ransom'd, and we ne'er the wiser.

King. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after. 194

Will. You pay him then ! That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch ! You may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after ! Come, 'tis a foolish saying. 200

King. Your reproof is something too round ; I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us if you live.

King. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again ? 205

King. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet ; then if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove ; give me another of thine.

King. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap ; if ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, 'This is my glove', by this hand I will take thee a box on the ear.

King. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hang'd.

King. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the King's company.

Will. Keep thy word. Fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends ; we have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon.

King. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one they will beat us, for they bear them on their shoulders ; but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and to-morrow the King himself will be a clipper.

[Exeunt Soldiers.

Upon the King ! Let us our lives, our souls, Our debts, our careful wives, Our children, and our sins, lay on the King ! We must bear all. O hard condition, Twin-born with greatness, subject to the breath

Of every fool, whose sense no more can feel But his own wringing ! What infinite heart's ease

Must kings neglect that private men enjoy ! And what have kings that privates have not too,

Save ceremony—save general ceremony ? And what art thou, thou idol Ceremony ? What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more

Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers ? What are thy rents ? What are thy comings-in ?

O Ceremony, show me but thy worth ! What is thy soul of adoration ?

Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form,

Creating awe and fear in other men ?

Wherein thou art less happy being fear'd Than thou art in fearing.

What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet,

But poison'd flattery ? O, be sick, great greatness,

And bid thy ceremony give thee cure !

Thinks thou the fiery fever will go out With titles blown from adulation ?

Will it give place to flexure and low bending ?

Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee,

Command the health of it ? No, thou proud dream,

That play'st so subtly with a king's repose. I am a king that find thee ; and I know

'Tis not the balm, the sceptre, and the ball,

The sword, the mace, the crown imperial, The intertissued robe of gold and pearl, The farced title running fore the king, The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp That beats upon the high shore of this world—

No, not all these, thrice gorgeous ceremony, Not all these, laid in bed majestical,

Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave Who, with a body fill'd and vacant mind,

Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread ;

Never sees horrid night, the child of hell ; But, like a lackey, from the rise to set

Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night Sleeps in Elysium ; next day, after dawn,

Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse ; And follows so the ever-running year

With profitable labour, to his grave. And but for ceremony, such a wretch,

Winding up days with toil and nights with sleep,

Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king. The slave, a member of the country's peace,

Enjoys it ; but in gross brain little wots What watch the king keeps to maintain the peace Whose hours the peasant best advantages.

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,

Seek through your camp to find you.

King. Good old knight, Collect them all together at my tent ; I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my lord. [Exit.

King. O God of battles, steel my soldiers' hearts,

Possess them not with fear ! Take from them now

The sense of reck'ning, if th' opposed numbers

Pluck their hearts from them ! Not to-day, O Lord,

O, not to-day, think not upon the fault My father made in compassing the crown !

I Richard's body have interred new, And on it have bestowed more contrite tears Than from it issued forced drops of blood ;

Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay, Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up Toward heaven, to pardon blood ; and I have built Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do ;

Though all that I can do is nothing worth, Since that my penitence comes after all,

Imploping pardon.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. My liege !
King. My brother Gloucester's voice ?
 Ay ;
 I know thy errand, I will go with thee ;
 The day, my friends, and all things, stay for me. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The French camp.

Enter the DAUPHIN, ORLEANS, RAMBURES, and Others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour ; up,
 my lords !
Dau. Montez à cheval ! My horse !
 Varlet, laquais ! Ha !
Orl. O brave spirit !
Dau. Via ! Les eaux et la terre—Orl. Rien puis ? L'air et le feu. 5
Dau. Ciel ! cousin Orleans.

Enter CONSTABLE.

Now, my Lord Constable !
Con. Hark how our steeds for present service neigh !
Dau. Mount them, and make incision in their hides,
 That their hot blood may spin in English
 eyes, 10
 And dout them with superfluous courage,
 ha !
Ram. What, will you have them weep
 our horses' blood ?
 How shall we then behold their natural
 tears ?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattl'd, you
 French peers.
Con. To horse, you gallant Princes !
 straight to horse ! 15
 Do but behold yon poor and starved band,
 And your fair show shall suck away their
 souls,
 Leaving them but the shales and husks of
 men.
 There is not work enough for all our hands ;
 Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins
 To give each naked curtle-axe a stain 21
 That our French gallants shall to-day draw
 out,
 And sheathe for lack of sport. Let us but blow on them,
 The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them.
 'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords, 25
 That our superfluous lackeys and our peasants—
 Who in unnecessary action swarm
 About our squares of battle—were enow
 To purge this field of such a hilding foe ;
 Though we upon this mountain's basis by 30
 Took stand for idle speculation—
 But that our honours must not. What's to say ?
 A very little little let us do,

And all is done. Then let the trumpets
 sound
 The tucket sonance and the note to mount ;
 For our approach shall so much dare the
 field 36
 That England shall couch down in fear and yield.

Enter GRANDPRÉ.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France ?
 Yond island carrions, desperate of their bones,
 Ill-favouredly become the morning field ; 40
 Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose,
 And our air shakes them passing scornfully ;
 Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd
 host,
 And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps.
 The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks 45
 With torch-staves in their hand ; and their poor jades
 Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hips,
 The gum down-rope from their pale-dead
 eyes,
 And in their pale dull mouths the gimmal'd bit Lies foul with chaw'd grass, still and motionless ; 50
 And their executors, the knavish crows,
 Fly o'er them, all impatient for their hour.
 Description cannot suit itself in words
 To demonstrate the life of such a battle
 In life so lifeless as it shows itself. 55 Con. They have said their prayers and they stay for death.
Dau. Shall we go send them dinners and fresh suits,
 And give their fasting horses provender,
 And after fight with them ?
Con. I stay but for my guidon. To the
 field ! 60
 I will the banner from a trumpet take,
 And use it for my haste. Come, come,
 away !
 The sun is high, and we outwear the day.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. The English camp.

Enter GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, ERPINGHAM, with all his Host; SALISBURY and WESTMORELAND.

Glo. Where is the King ?
Bed. The King himself is rode to view their battle.
West. Of fighting men they have full three-score thousand.
Exe. There's five to one ; besides, they all are fresh.
Sal. God's arm strike with us ! 'tis a fearful odds. 5
 God bye you, Princes all ; I'll to my charge.

If we no more meet till we meet in heaven,
Then joyfully, my noble Lord of Bedford,
My dear Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord Exeter,

And my kind kinsman—warriors all, adieu!

Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee!

Exe. Farewell, kind lord. Fight valiantly
to-day;

And yet I do thee wrong to mind thee of it,
For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour. [Exit Salisbury.]

Bed. He is as full of valour as of kindness;
Princely in both.

Enter the KING.

West. O that we now had here
But one ten thousand of those men in England

That do no work to-day!

King. What's he that wishes so?
My cousin Westmoreland? No, my fair
cousin;

If we are mark'd to die, we are enow
To do our country loss; and if to live,
The fewer men, the greater share of honour.
God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man
more.

By Jove, I am not covetous for gold,
Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost;
It yearns me not if men my garments wear;
Such outward things dwell not in my desires.

But if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.
No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England.

God's peace! I would not lose so great an honour

As one man more methinks would share
from me

For the best hope I have. O, do not wish one more!

Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,

That he which hath no stomach to this
fight,

Let him depart; his passport shall be made,
And crowns for convoy put into his purse;
We would not die in that man's company
That fears his fellowship to die with us.

This day is call'd the feast of Crispian.
He that outlives this day, and comes safe
home,

Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.

He that shall live this day, and see old age,
Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours,
And say 'To-morrow is Saint Crispian'.

Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,

And say 'These wounds I had on Crispian's
day'.

Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot,

But he'll remember, with advantages,
What feats he did that day. Then shall our names,

Familiar in his mouth as household words—
Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter, Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester—

Be in their flowing cups freshly rememb'ed.

This story shall the good man teach his son;
And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by,
From this day to the ending of the world,
But we in it shall be remembered—

We few, we happy few, we band of
brothers;

For he to-day that sheds his blood with me
Shall be my brother; be he re'er so vile,
This day shall gentle his condition;
And gentlemen in England now a-bed Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here,

And hold their manhoods cheap whiles any
speaks

That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's
day.

Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. My soveriegn lord, bestow yourself
with speed:

The French are bravely in their battles set,
And will with all expedience charge on us.

King. All things are ready, if our minds be so.

West. Perish the man whose mind is backward now!

King. Thou dost not wish more help from England, coz?

West. God's will, my liege! would you and I alone,

Without more help, could fight this royal battle!

King. Why, now thou hast unwish'd five thousand men;

Which likes me better than to wish us one.
You know your places. God be with you all!

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee,
King Harry,

If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound,
Before thy most assured overthrow;

For certainly thou art so near the gulf Thou needs must be englutted. Besides, in
mercy,

The Constable desires thee thou wilt mind
Thy followers of repentance, that their souls

May make a peaceful and a sweet retire From off these fields, where, wretches, their poor bodies

Must lie and fester.

King. Who hath sent thee now?
Mont. The Constable of France.

King. I pray thee bear my former answer
back:

Bid them achieve me, and then sell my bones. 91

Good God! why should they mock poor fellows thus?

The man that once did sell the lion's skin
While the beast liv'd was kill'd with hunting him.

A many of our bodies shall no doubt 95
Find native graves; upon the which, I trust,

Shall witness live in brass of this day's work.

And those that leave their valiant bones in France,

Dying like men, though buried in your dunghills,

They shall be fam'd; for there the sun shall greet them

And draw their honours reeking up to heaven, 101

Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime,

The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.

Mark then abounding valour in our English,
That, being dead, like to the bullet's grazing 105

Break out into a second course of mischief,
Killing in relapse of mortality.

Let me speak proudly: tell the Constable
We are but warriors for the working-day;

Our gayness and our gilt are all besmirch'd
With rainy marching in the painful field;

There's not a piece of feather in our host—
Good argument, I hope, we will not fly—

And time hath worn us into slovenry.
But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim; 115

And my poor soldiers tell me yet ere night
They'll be in fresher robes, or they will pluck

The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' heads

And turn them out of service. If they do this—

As, if God please, they shall—my ransom then 120

Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour;

Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald;

They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints;

Which if they have, as I will leave 'em them,
Shall yield them little, tell the Constable.

Mont. I shall, King Harry. And so fare thee well: 126

Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.

King. I fear thou wilt once more come again for a ransom.

Enter the DUKE OF YORK.

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg

The leading of the vaward. 130

King. Take it, brave York. Now, soldiers, march away;

And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day! [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. The field of battle.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter French Soldier, PISTOL, and Boy.

Pist. Yield, cur!

Fr. Sol. Je pense que vous êtes le gentil-homme de bonne qualité.

Pist. Cality! Calen o custure me! Art thou a gentleman? What is thy name? Discuss. 5

Fr. Sol. O Seigneur Dieu!

Pist. O, Signieur Dew should be a gentleman.

Perpend my words, O Signieur Dew, and mark:

O Signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox, Except, O Signieur, thou do give to me 10

Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O, prenez miséricorde; ayez pitié de moi!

Pist. Moy shall not serve; I will have forty moys;

Or I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat In drops of crimson blood. 15

Fr. Sol. Est-il impossible d' échapper la force de ton bras?

Pist. Brass, cur!

Thou damned and luxurious mountain-goat, Offer'st me brass? 20

Fr. Sol. O, pardonnez-moi!

Pist. Say'st thou me so? Is that a ton of moys?

Come hither, boy; ask me this slave in French

What is his name.

Boy. Ecoutez: comment êtes-vous appelé? 25

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says his name is Master Fer.

Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and fir him, and ferret him—discuss the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and fir.

Pist. Bid him prepare; for I will cut his throat. 31

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande à vous dire que vous faites vous prêt; car ce soldat ici est disposé tout à cette heure de couper votre gorge. 36

Pist. Owy, cuppele gorge, permafoy! Peasant, unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns;

Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O, je vous supplie, pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner! Je suis gentilhomme de bonne maison. Gardez ma vie, et je vous donnerai deux cents écus. 42

Pist. What are his words ?

Boy. He prays you to save his life ; he is a gentleman of a good house, and for his ransom he will give you two hundred crowns. 46

Pist. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I
The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il ? 49

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier, néanmoins, pour les écus que vous l'avez promis, il est content à vous donner la liberté, le franchisement. 53

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux je vous donne mille remerciemens ; et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy. 58

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks ; and he esteems himself happy that he hath fall'n into the hands of one—as he thinks—the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signieur of
England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show. 63

Follow me. [Exit.

Boy. Suivez-vous le grand capitaine.
[Exit French Soldier] I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart ;
but the saying is true—the empty vessel makes the greatest sound. Bardolph and Nym had ten times more valour than this roaring devil i' th' old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger ;
and they are both hang'd ; and so would this be, if he durst steal anything adven-turally. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp. The French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it ; for there is none to guard it but boys.

[Exit.

SCENE V. Another part of the field of battle.

Enter CONSTABLE, ORLEANS, BOURBON, DAUPHIN, and RAMBURES.

Con. O diable !

Orl. O Seigneur ! le jour est perdu, tout est perdu !

Dau. Mort Dieu, ma vie ! all is confounded, all !

Reproach and everlasting shame

Sits mocking in our plumes.

[A short alarum.

O méchante fortune ! Do not run away. 5

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Dau. O perdurable shame ! Let's stab ourselves.

Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for ?

Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom ?

Bour. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame ! 10

Let us die in honour : once more back
again ;

And he that will not follow Bourbon now,
Let him go hence and, with his cap in hand
Like a base pander, hold the chamber-door
Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog
His fairest daughter is contaminated. 16

Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us now !

Let us on heaps go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enow yet living in the field
To smother up the English in our throngs,
If any order might be thought upon. 21

Bour. The devil take order now ! I'll to the throng.

Let life be short, else shame will be too long.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter the KING and his Train, with Prisoners ; EXETER, and Others.

King. Well have we done, thrice-valiant countrymen ;

But all's not done—yet keep the French
the field.

Exe. The Duke of York commends him to your Majesty.

King. Lives he, good uncle ? Thrice within this hour

I saw him down ; thrice up again, and fighting ; 5

From helmet to the spur all blood he was.

Exe. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie

Larding the plain ; and by his bloody side,
Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds,
The noble Earl of Suffolk also lies. 10

Suffolk first died ; and York, all haggled over,

Comes to him, where in gore he lay in-steeped,

And takes him by the beard, kisses the gashes

That bloodily did yawn upon his face,
He cries aloud ' Tarry, my cousin Suffolk.

My soul shall thine keep company to
heaven ; 16

Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly abreast ;

As in this glorious and well-foughten field
We kept together in our chivalry'.

Upon these words I came and cheer'd him
up ; 20

He smil'd me in the face, raught me his
hand,

And, with a feeble grip, says ' Dear my
lord,

Commend my service to my sovereign'.
So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck

He threw his wounded arm and kiss'd his lips ;

And so, espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd

A testament of noble-ending love.

The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd Those waters from me which I would have stopp'd ;

But I had not so much of man in me, 30
And all my mother came into mine eyes
And gave me up to tears.

King. I blame you not ;
For, hearing this, I must perforce compound
With mistful eyes, or they will issue too.

[Alarum.
But, hark ! what new alarum is this same ?
The French have reinforc'd their scatter'd
men. 36

Then every soldier kill his prisoners ;
Give the word through. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII. Another part of the field.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Flu. Kill the poys and the luggage ! 'Tis expressly against the law of arms ; 'tis as arrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offert ; in your conscience, now,
is it not ? 4

Gow. 'Tis certain there's not a boy left alive ; and the cowardly rascals that ran from the battle ha' done this slaughter ;
besides, they have burned and carried away
all that was in the King's tent ; wherefore the King most worthily hath caus'd every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O, 'tis a gallant King ! 10

Flu. Ay, he was porn at Monmouth, Captain Gower. What call you the town's name where Alexander the Pig was born ?

Gow. Alexander the Great. 14

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not ' pig ' great ?
The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations. 18

Gow. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon ; his father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is porn. I tell you, Captain, if you look in the maps of the 'orld, I warrant you sall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon ; and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth ; it is call'd Wye at Monmouth, but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other river ; but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Mon-mouth's life is come after it indifferent well ;
for there is figures in all things. Alexander

—God knows, and you know—in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his cholers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his best friend, Cleitus.

Gow. Our king is not like him in that :
he never kill'd any of his friends. 39

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it ; as Alexander kill'd his friend Cleitus, being in his ales and his cups, so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his good judgments, turn'd away the fat knight with the great belly doublet ; he was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks ; I have forgot his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he. I'll tell you there is good men porn at Monmouth. 50

Gow. Here comes his Majesty.

Alarum. Enter the KING, WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, and Others, with Prisoners. Flourish.

King. I was not angry since I came to
France

Until this instant. Take a trumpet, herald ;
Ride thou unto the horsemen on yond
hill ;

If they will fight with us, bid them come
down 55

Or void the field ; they do offend our sight.
If they'll do neither, we will come to them
And make them skirr away as swift as stones

Enforced from the old Assyrian slings ; Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have, 60

And not a man of them that we shall take Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter MONTJOY.

Exe. Here comes the herald of the French,
my liege.

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.

King. How now ! What means this, herald ? know'st thou not 65

That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom ?

Com'st thou again for ransom ?

Mont. No, great King ;
I come to thee for charitable licence, 68

That we may wander o'er this bloody field
To book our dead, and then to bury them ;
To sort our nobles from our common men ;
For many of our princes—woe the while !— Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary
blood ;

So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs

In blood of princes ; and their wounded
steeds 75

Fret fetlock deep in gore, and with wild rage
Yerk out their armed heels at their dead
masters,

Killing them twice. O, give us leave, great
King,

To view the field in safety, and dispose
Of their dead bodies !

King. I tell thee truly, herald, 80
I know not if the day be ours or no ;
For yet a many of your horsemen peer
And gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours.

King. Praised be God, and not our strength, for it !

What is this castle call'd that stands hard
by ? 85

Mont. They call it Agincourt.

King. Then call we this the field of Agincourt,

Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your Majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the Plack Prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave pattle here in France.

King. They did, Fluellen. 93

Flu. Your Majesty says very true ; if your Majesties is rememb'ed of it, the Welshmen did good service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps ; which your Majesty know to this hour is an honourable badge of the service ; and I do believe your Majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day. 100

King. I wear it for a memorable honour ;
For I am Welsh, you know, good country-
man.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your Majesty's Welsh plood out of your pody, I can tell you that. Got pless it and preserve it as long as it pleases his Grace and his Majesty too ! 106

King. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. By Jeshu, I am your Majesty's countryman, I care not who know it ; I will confess it to all the 'orld : I need not be asham'd of your Majesty, praised be Got, so long as your Majesty is an honest
man. 111

Enter WILLIAMS.

King. God keep me so ! Our heralds go
with him :

Bring me just notice of the numbers dead
On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

[Exeunt Herald with Montjoy.]

Exe. Soldier, you must come to the King.

King. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap ? 117

Will. An't please your Majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

King. An Englishman ? 120

Will. An't please your Majesty, a rascal that swagger'd with me last night ; who, if
'a live and ever dare to challenge this glove,
I have sworn to take him a box o' th' ear ;
or if I can see my glove in his cap—which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear if alive—I will strike it out soundly.

King. What think you, Captain Fluellen, is it fit this soldier keep his oath ? 121

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else an't please your Majesty, in my conscience.

King. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree. 123

Flu. Though he be as good a gentleman as the Devil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your Grace that he keep his vow and his oath ; if he be perjurd, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jacksauce as ever his black shoe trod upon God's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la.

King. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow. 124

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

King. Who serv'st thou under ?

Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege.

Flu. Gower is a good captain, and a good knowledge and literated in the wars.

King. Call him hither to me, soldier. 124

Will. I will, my liege. [Exit]

King. Here, Fluellen ; wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy cap when Alerçon and myself were down together, I pluck'd this glove from his helm.
If any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alerçon and an enemy to our person if thou encounter any such, apprehend him an thou dost me love. 125

Flu. Your Grace does me as great honours as can be desir'd in the hearts of his subjects. I would fain see the man that has but two legs that shall find himse aggriev'd at this glove, that is all ; but would fain see it once, an please God his grace that I might see.

King. Know'st thou Gower ? 126

Flu. He is my dear friend, an please yo

King. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.

Flu. I will fetch him. [Exit]

King. My Lord of Warwick and my brother Gloucester,

Follow Fluellen closely at the heels ;
The glove which I have given him for favour

May haply purchase him a box o' th' ear.
It is the soldier's : I, by bargain, should Wear it myself. Follow, good couns

Warwick ;

If that the soldier strike him, as I judge

By his blunt bearing he will keep his word,
Some sudden mischief may arise of it ;
For I do know Fluellen valiant,
And touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder,
And quickly will return an injury ; ¹⁷⁶
Follow, and see there be no harm between
them.

Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII. Before King Henry's pavilion.

Enter GOWER and WILLIAMS.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you, Captain.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. God's will and his pleasure, Captain,
I beseech you now, come apace to the King : there is more good toward you peradventure than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this glove ? ⁵

Flu. Know the glove ? I know the glove is a glove.

Will. I know this ; and thus I challenge
it. [Strikes him.]

Flu. 'Sblood, an arrant traitor as any's in the universal world, or in France, or in England !

Gow. How now, sir ! you villain ! ¹⁰

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn ?

Flu. Stand away, Captain Gower ; I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor. ¹⁴

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat. I charge you in his Majesty's name, apprehend him :
he's a friend of the Duke Alençon's.

Enter WARWICK and GLOUCESTER.

War. How now, how now ! what's the matter ?

Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is—praised be God for it !—a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his Majesty. ²²

Enter the KING and EXETER.

King. How now ! what's the matter ?

Flu. My liege, here is a villain and a traitor, that, look your Grace, has struck the glove which your Majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon. ²⁶

Will. My liege, this was my glove : here is the fellow of it ; and he that I gave it to in change promis'd to wear it in his cap ;
I promis'd to strike him if he did ; I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word. ³¹

Flu. Your Majesty hear now, saving your Majesty's manhood, what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is ; I hope your Majesty is pear me testimony and witness, and will avouchment, that this is the glove of Alençon that your Majesty is give me ; in your conscience,

now.

King. Give me thy glove, soldier ; look,
here is the fellow of it. ³⁹

'Twas I, indeed, thou promis'd'st to strike,
And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. An please your Majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the world.

King. How canst thou make me satisfaction ? ⁴⁴

Will. All offences, my lord, come from the heart : never came any from mine that might offend your Majesty.

King. It was ourself thou didst abuse. ⁴⁸

Will. Your Majesty came not like yourself : you appear'd to me but as a common man ; witness the night, your garments, your lowliness ; and what your Highness suffer'd under that shape I beseech you take it for your own fault, and not mine ; for had you been as I took you for, I made no offence ; therefore, I beseech your Highness pardon me. ⁵⁵

King. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns,

And give it to this fellow. Keep it,
fellow ;

And wear it for an honour in thy cap
Till I do challenge it. Give him the crowns ;
And, Captain, you must needs be friends with him. ⁶⁰

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his belly :
hold, there is twelve pence for you ; and I pray you to serve God, and keep you out of prawls, and prabbles, and quarrels, and dissensions, and, I warrant you, it is the better for you. ⁶⁵

Will. I will none of your money.

Flu. It is with a good will ; I can tell you it will serve you to mend your shoes.
Come, wherefore should you be so pashful ?
your shoes is not so good, 'tis a good silling, I warrant you, or I will change it. ⁷⁰

Enter an English Herald.

King. Now, herald, are the dead numb' red ?

Her. Here is the number of the slaught' red French. [Gives a paper.]

King. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle ?

Exe. Charles Duke of Orleans, nephew to
the King ;

John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Bouciqualt ; ⁷⁵

Of other lords and barons, knights and
squires,

Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

King. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French

That in the field lie slain ; of princes, in this number, 79
And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead
One hundred twenty-six ; added to these,
Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen, Eight thousand and four hundred ; of the
which Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd
knights.
So that, in these ten thousand they have lost, 85
There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries ;
The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights,
squires,
And gentlemen of blood and quality.
The names of those their nobles that lie
dead :
Charles Delabreth, High Constable of
France ; 90
Jaques of Chatillon, Admiral of France ;
The master of the cross-bows, Lord
Rambures ;
Great Master of France, the brave Sir
Guichard Dolphin ;
John Duke of Alençon ; Antony Duke of Brabant,
The brother to the Duke of Burgundy ; 95
And Edward Duke of Bar. Of lusty earls, Grandpré and Roussi, Fauconbridge and Foix,
Beaumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Lestrange.
Here was a royal fellowship of death ! 99
Where is the number of our English dead ?
[Herald presents another paper.
Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk,
Sir Richard Kikely, Davy Gam, Esquire ;
None else of name ; and of all other men But five and twenty. O God, thy arm was
here !
And not to us, but to thy arm alone, 105
Ascribe we all. When, without stratagem,
But in plain shock and even play of battle,
Was ever known so great and little loss
On one part and on th' other ? Take it,
God,
For it is none but thine.

Exe. 'Tis wonderful ! 110

King. Come, go we in procession to the village ;

And be it death proclaimed through our host
To boast of this or take that praise from God
Which is his only.

Flu. Is it not lawful, an please your Majesty, to tell how many is kill'd ? 116

King. Yes, Captain ; but with this acknowledgment,

That God fought for us.

Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did us great
good.

King. Do we all holy rites : 122
Let there be sung 'Non nobis' and 'Te Deum' ;
The dead with charity enclos'd in clay—
And then to Calais ; and to England then Where ne'er from France arriv'd more happy men. [Exeunt

ACT FIVE

PROLOGUE

Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Vouchsafe to those that have no
read the story
That I may prompt them ; and of such a
have,
I humbly pray them to admit th' excuse
Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper
life
Be here presented. Now we bear the King Toward Calais. Grant him there. There
seen,
Heave him away upon your winged
thoughts
Athwart the sea. Behold, the English beach
Pales in the flood with men, with wives and boys, 1
Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep mouth'd sea,
Which, like a mighty whiffler, foretells
King
Seems to prepare his way. So let him land
And solemnly see him set on to London.
So swift a pace hath thought that even now
You may imagine him upon Blackheath ;
Where that his lords desire him to have borne
His bruised helmet and his bended sword
Before him through the city. He forbids it Being free from vainness and self-glorious
pride ;
Giving full trophy, signal, and ostent,
Quite from himself to God. But now behold
In the quick forge and working-house of
thought,
How London doth pour out her citizens !
The mayor and all his brethren in beseech sort— 2
Like to the senators of th' antique Rome
With the plebeians swarming at their heels—
Go forth and fetch their conqu'ring
Caesar in ;
As, by a lower but loving likelihood,
Were now the General of our gracious Empress—
As in good time he may—from Ireland
coming,
Bringing rebellion broached on his sword
How many would the peaceful city quit

To welcome him! Much more, and much more cause, Did they this Harry. Now in London place him— 35
 As yet the lamentation of the French invites the King of England's stay at home; the Emperor's coming in behalf of France To order peace between them; and omit All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd, 40
 Till Harry's back-return again to France. There must we bring him; and myself have play'd
 The interim, by rememb'ring you 'tis past. Then brook abridgment; and your eyes advance, 44
 After your thoughts, straight back again to France. [Exit.

SCENE I. France. The English camp.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Gow. Nay, that's right; but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's day's past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things. I will tell you, ass my friend, Captain Gower: the rascally, scald, beggarly, lousy, pragging knave, Pistol—which you and yourself and all the world know to be no petter than a fellow, look you now, of no merits—he is come to me, and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek; it was in a place where I could not breed no contention with him; but I will be so bold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires. 13

Enter PISTOL.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings nor his turkey-cocks. God pless you, Aunchient Pistol! you scurvy, lousy knave, God pless you!

Pist. Ha! art thou bedlam? Dost thou thirst, base Troyan,

To have me fold up Parca's fatal web? 19
 Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurvy, lousy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek; because, look you, you do not love it, nor your zfections, and your appetites, and your digestions, does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his goats. 26

Flu. There is one goat for you. [Strikes him] Will you be so good, scald knave, as eat it?

Pist. Base Troyan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scald knave—

when God's will is. I will desire you to live in the meantime, and eat your victuals; come, there is sauce for it. [Striking him again] You call'd me yesterday mountain-squire; but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you fall to; if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek. 35

Gow. Enough, Captain, you have astonish'd him.

Flu. I say I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days. Bite, I pray you, it is good for your green wound and your bloody coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite? 40

Flu. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt, and out of question too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge—I eat and eat, I swear—

Flu. Eat, I pray you; will you have some more sauce to your leek? There is not enough leek to swear by. 46

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel: thou dost see I eat.

Flu. Much good do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, pray you throw none away; the skin is good for your broken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you mock at 'em; that is all. 51

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is good. Hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat! 55

Flu. Yes, verily and in truth, you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you anything I will pay you in cudgels; you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God bye you, and keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.

Pist. All hell shall stir for this. 63

Gow. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel; you find it otherwise, and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well. [Exit.

Pist. Doth Fortune play the huswife with me now?

News have I that my Nell is dead i' th' spital 75

Of malady of France;

And there my rendezvous is quite cut off.

Old I do wax ; and from my weary limbs Honour is cudgell'd. Well, bawd I'll turn,
And something lean to cutpurse of quick
hand.

To England will I steal, and there I'll steal ;
And patches will I get unto these cudgell'd
scars,

And swear I got them in the Gallia wars.
[Exit.

SCENE II. France. The French King's palace.

*Enter at one door, KING HENRY, EXETER, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and other Lords ; at another, the FRENCH KING, QUEEN
ISABEL, the PRINCESS KATHERINE, ALICE, and other Ladies ; the DUKE OF BURGUNDY, and his Train.*

King. Peace to this meeting, wherefore
we are met !

Unto our brother France, and to our sister,
Health and fair time of day ; joy and good wishes

To our most fair and princely cousin Katherine.

And, as a branch and member of this royalty,

By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,
We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy.

And, princes French, and peers, health to you all !

Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face,

Most worthy brother England ; fairly met !
So are you, princes English, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother
England,

Of this good day and of this gracious
meeting

As we are now glad to behold your eyes—
Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in
them,

Against the French that met them in their bent,

The fatal balls of murdering basilisks ;
The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality ; and that this day Shall change all griefs and quarrels into
love.

King. To cry amen to that, thus we appear.

Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you.

Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love, Great Kings of France and England ! That I have labour'd

With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavours,

To bring your most imperial Majesties
Unto this bar and royal interview,
Your mightiness on both parts best can witness.

Since then my office hath so far prevail'd
That face to face and royal eye to eye
You have congreeted, let it not disgrace me
If I demand, before this royal view,
What rub or what impediment there is Why that the naked, poor, and mangled

Peace,
Dear nurse of arts, plenties, and joyful
births,

Should not in this best garden of the world
Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage !
Alas, she hath from France too long been chas'd !

And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,
Corrupting in it own fertility.

Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned dies ; her hedges even-pleach'd,

Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd twigs ; her fallow leas

The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory, Doth root upon, while that the coulter rusts

That should deracinate such savagery ;
The even mead, that erst brought sweetly
forth

The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover,

Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank
Conceives by idleness, and nothing teems

But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies
burs,

Losing both beauty and utility.
And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges,

Defective in their natures, grow to wildness Even so our houses and ourselves and children

Have lost, or do not learn for want of time
The sciences that should become our country ;

But grow, like savages—as soldiers will,
That nothing do but meditate on blood—

To swearing and stern looks, diffus'd attire
And everything that seems unnatural.

Which to reduce into our former favour
You are assembled ; and my speech entreats

That I may know the let why gentle Peace
Should not expel these inconveniences

And bless us with her former qualities.
King. If, Duke of Burgundy, you would the peace

Whose want gives growth to th' imperfec-tions

Which you have cited, you must buy the
peace

With full accord to all our just demands ;
Whose tenours and particular effects

You have, enschedul'd briefly, in your hands.

Bur. The King hath heard them ; to tell which as yet

There is no answer made.
King. Well then, the peace,

Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer.

Fr. King. I have but with a cursory eye D'erglanced the articles; pleaseth your Grace

To appoint some of your council presently To sit with us once more, with better heed To re-survey them, we will suddenly ⁸¹ Pass our accept and peremptory answer.

King. Brother, we shall. Go, uncle Exeter,

And brother Clarence, and you, brother Gloucester,

Warwick, and Huntington, go with the King; ⁸⁵

And take with you free power to ratify, Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best Shall see advantageable for our dignity, Any thing in or out of our demands;

And we'll consign thereto. Will you, fair sister, ⁹⁰

Go with the princes or stay here with us?

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with them;

Haply a woman's voice may do some good, When articles too nicely urg'd be stood on.

King. Yet leave our cousin Katherine here with us;

She is our capital demand, compris'd ⁹⁶ Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.

[Exeunt all but the King, Katherine, and Alice.]

King. Fair Katherine, and most fair, Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms such as will enter at a lady's ear, ¹⁰⁰ And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your Majesty shall mock at me; cannot speak your England.

King. O fair Katherine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonnez-moi, I cannot tell vat s like me.

King. An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel. ¹¹⁰

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable les anges?

Alice. Oui, vraiment, sauf votre grace, insi dit-il.

King. I said so, dear Katherine, and I must not blush to affirm it.

Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines de tromperies. ¹¹⁶

King. What says she, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Alice. Oui, dat de tongues of de mans is e full of deceits—dat is de Princess. ¹²⁰

King. The Princess is the better English-woman. I'faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding: I am glad thou canst speak no better English; for if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say 'I love you'. Then, if you urge me farther than to say 'Do you in faith?' I wear out my suit. Give me your answer; i'faith, do; and so clap hands and a bargain. How say you, lady? ¹³⁰

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, me understand well.

King. Marry, if you would put me to verses or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me; for the one I have neither words nor measure, and for the other I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength. If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armour on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife. Or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours, I could lay on like a butcher, and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off. But, before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly, nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation; only downright oaths, which I never use till urg'd, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sun-burning, that never looks in his glass for love of anything he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier. If thou canst love me for this, take me; if not, to say to thee that I shall die is true—but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet I love thee too. And while thou liv'st, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy; for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places; for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out again. What! a speaker is but a prater: a rhyme is but a ballad. A good leg will fall; a straight back will stoop; a black beard will turn white; a curl'd pate will grow bald; a fair face will wither; a full eye will wax hollow. But a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon; or, rather, the sun, and not the moon—for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me; and take me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king. And what say'st thou, then, to my love? Speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee. ¹⁶⁷

Kath. Is it possible dat I sould love de enemy of France?

King. No, it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate, but in loving me you should love the friend of France; for I love France so well that I will not part with a village of it ; I will have it all mine. And, Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine. 175

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

King. No, Kate ? I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. Je quand sur le possession de France, et quand vous avez le possession de moi—let me see, what then ? Saint Denis be my speed !—donc votre est France et vous êtes mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom as to speak so much more French : I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me. 186

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, le Français que vous parlez, il est meilleur que l'Anglais lequél je parle.

King. No, faith, is't not, Kate ; but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English—Canst thou love me ?

Kath. I cannot tell. 193

King. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate ? I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me ; and at night, when you come into your closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me ; and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart. But, good Kate, mock me mercifully ; the rather, gentle Princess, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou beest mine, Kate, as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt, I get thee with scrambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder. Shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard ? Shall we not ? What say'st thou, my fair flower-de-luce ?

Kath. I do not know dat. 209

King. No : 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise ; do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy ; and for my English moiety take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katherine du monde, mon tres chér et divin déesse ? 215

Kath. Your Majestee ave fausse French enough to deceive de most sage damoiselle dat is en France.

King. Now, fie upon my false French ! By mine honour, in true English, I love thee, Kate ; by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me ; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now beshrew my father's ambition ! He was thinking of civil wars when he got me ; therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that when I come to woo ladies I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax, the better I shall appear : my comfort is, that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face ; thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst ; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better. And therefore tell me, most fair Katherine, will you have me ? Put off your maiden blushes ; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress ; take me by the hand and say ' Harry of England, I am thine '. Which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal but I will tell thee aloud ' England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine ' ; who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music—for thy voice is music and thy English broken ; therefore, Queen of all, Katherine, break thy mind to me in broken English, wilt thou have me ? 243

Kath. Dat is as it shall please de roi mon père.

King. Nay, it will please him well, Kate—it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Den it sall also content me.

King. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen. 249

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez ! Ma foi, je ne veux point que vous abaissiez votre grandeur en baisant la main d'une, notre seigneur, indigne serviteur ; excusez-moi, je vous supplie, mon très puissant seigneur.

King. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate. 253

Kath. Les dames et demoiselles pour être baisées devant leur noces, il n'est pas la coutume de France.

King. Madam my interpreter, what says she ?

Alice. Dat it is not be de fashion pour le ladies of France—I cannot tell vat is baiser en English. 260

King. To kiss.

Alice. Your Majestee entendre better que moi.

King. It is not a fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say ?

Alice. Oui, vraiment. 263

King. O Kate, nice customs curtsy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confin'd within the weak list of a country's fashion : we are the makers of manners, Kate ; and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouth of all find-faults—as I will do yours for upholding the nice fashion of your country in denying me a kiss; therefore, patiently and yielding. [Kissing her] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner persuade Henry of England than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father. 277

Enter the FRENCH POWER and the ENGLISH LORDS.

Bur. God save your Majesty! My royal cousin,

Teach you our princess English?

King. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English. 281

Bur. Is she not apt?

King. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my condition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her that he will appear in his true likeness. 286

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you must make a circle; if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked and blind. Can you blame her, then, being a maid yet ros'd over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to. 294

King. Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and enforces.

Bur. They are then excus'd, my lord, when they see not what they do.

King. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking. 300

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning; for maids well summer'd and warm kept are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on. 306

King. This moral ties me over to time and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too. 309

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

King. It is so; and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French city for one fair French maid that stands in my way.

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them perspectively, the cities turned into a maid; for they are all girdled with maiden walls that war hath never ent'red. 316

King. Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr. King. So please you.

King. I am content, so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her; so the maid that stood in the way for my wish shall show me the way to my will. 321

Fr. King. We have consented to all terms of reason.

King. Is't so, my lords of England?

West. The king hath granted every article:

His daughter first; and then in sequel, all, 325
According to their firm proposed natures.

Exe. Only he hath not yet subscribed this:

Where your Majesty demands that the King of France, having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your Highness in this form and with this addition, in French, Notre très cher fils Henri, Roi d'Angleterre, l'écritier de France; and thus in Latin, Præclarissimus filius noster Henricus, Rex Angliæ et Hæres Franciæ. 333

Fr. King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied

But your request shall make me let it pass.

King. I pray you, then, in love and dear alliance,

Let that one article rank with the rest;
And thereupon give me your daughter.

Fr. King. Take her, fair son, and from her blood raise up

Issue to me; that the contending kingdoms 340

Of France and England, whose very shores look pale

With envy of each other's happiness,

May cease their hatred; and this dear conjunction

Plant neighbourhood and Christian-like accord

In their sweet bosoms, that never war advance 345

His bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair France.

Lords. Amen!

King. Now, welcome, Kate; and bear me witness all,

That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen. [Flourish.]

Q. Isa. God, the best maker of all marriages, 350

Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one!

As man and wife, being two, are one in love,
So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal

That never may ill office or fell jealousy,
Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage, 355

Thrust in between the paction of these kingdoms,

To make divorce of their incorporate league;

That English may as French, French
Englishmen,
Receive each other. God speak this Amen !
All. Amen ! ³⁶⁰
King. Prepare we for our marriage ; on which day,
My Lord of Burgundy, we'll take your
oath,
And all the peers', for surety of our leagues.
Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me, ³⁶⁴
And may our oaths well kept and pros-p'rous be ! [Sennet. Exeunt.

Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Thus far, with rough and all-unable pen,
Our bending author hath pursu'd the
story,
In little room confining mighty men,

Mangling by starts the full course of their glory.
Small time, but, in that small, most greatly lived ⁵
This star of England. Fortune made his
sword ;
By which the world's best garden he achieved,
And of it left his son imperial lord.
Henry the Sixth, in infant bands crown'd
king
Of France and England, did this king succeed ; ¹⁰
Whose state so many had the managing That they lost France and made his England bleed ;
Which oft our stage hath shown ; and, for their sake,
In your fair minds let this acceptance take.

THE SCENE : England and France.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Westminster Abbey.

Dead March. Enter the funeral of King Henry the Fifth, attended on by the DUKE OF BEDFORD, Regent of France, the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, Protector, the DUKE OF EXETER, the EARL OF WARWICK, the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER.

Bed. Hung be the heavens with black,
yield day to night !

Comets, importing change of times and states,

*Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky
And with them scourge the bad revolting stars*

*That have consented unto Henry's death !
King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long !* 6

*England ne'er lost a king of so much worth.
Glo.* England ne'er had a king until his time.

Virtue he had, deserving to command ;

His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams ; 10

His arms spread wider than a dragon's
wings ;

His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful
fire,

More dazzled and drove back his enemies Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces.

What should I say ? His deeds exceed all speech : 15

He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered.

Exe. We mourn in black ; why mourn we not in blood ?

Henry is dead and never shall revive.

Upon a wooden coffin we attend ;

And death's dishonourable victory 20

We with our stately presence glorify,

Like captives bound to a triumphant car.

What ! shall we curse the planets of mishap

That plotted thus our glory's overthrow ?

Or shall we think the subtle-witted French

Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,

By magic verses have contriv'd his end ?

Win. He was a king bless'd of the King of kings ;
Unto the French the dreadful judgment-
day

So dreadful will not be as was his sight. 30
The battles of the Lord of Hosts he fought ;
The Church's prayers made him so prosperous.

Glo. The Church ! Where is it ? Had not churchmen pray'd,

His thread of life had not so soon decay'd.
None do you like but an effeminate prince,
Whom like a school-boy you may overawe.

Win. Gloucester, whate'er we like, thou art Protector 37
And lookest to command the Prince and realm.

Thy wife is proud ; she holdeth thee in awe
More than God or religious churchmen may.

Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st
the flesh ; 41

And ne'er throughout the year to church
thou go'st,

Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cease, cease these jars and rest your minds in peace ;

Let's to the altar. Heralds, wait on us. 45
Instead of gold, we'll offer up our arms, Since arms avail not, now that Henry's
dead.

Posterity, await for wretched years,
When at their mothers' moist'ned eyes
babes shall suck,

Our isle be made a nourish of salt tears, 50
And none but women left to wail the dead.
Henry the Fifth, thy ghost I invoke :
Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils, Combat with adverse planets in the heavens.

A far more glorious star thy soul will make
Than Julius Cæsar or bright— 56

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honourable lords, health to you
all !

Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture :
Guienne, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans, 60
Paris, Guysors, Poictiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What say'st thou, man, before dead
Henry's corse ?

Speak softly, or the loss of those great
towns

Will make him burst his lead and rise from
death.

Glo. Is Paris lost ? Is Rouen yielded up ?
If Henry were recall'd to life again, 66
These news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Exe. How were they lost ? What treach-ery was us'd ?

Mess. No treachery, but want of men and money.

Amongst the soldiers this is muttered— 70

That here you maintain several factions ;
And whilst a field should be dispatch'd and fought,

You are disputing of your generals :
One would have ling'ring wars, with little cost ;

Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings ;
A third thinks, without expense at all, 76
By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.

Awake, awake, English nobility !
Let not sloth dim your honours, new-begot.
Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your
arms ; 80

Of England's coat one half is cut away.
Exe. Were our tears wanting to this funeral,

These tidings would call forth their flowing tides.

Bed. Me they concern ; Regent I am of
France.

Give me my steeled coat ; I'll fight for
France. 85

Away with these disgraceful wailing robes !
Wounds will I lend the French instead of
eyes,

To weep their intermissive miseries.

Enter a second Messenger.

2 Mess. Lords, view these letters full of bad mischance.

France is revolted from the English quite.
Except some petty towns of no import. 90
The Dauphin Charles is crowned king in Rheims ;

The Bastard of Orleans with him is join'd ; Reignier, Duke of Anjou, doth take his part ;

The Duke of Alençon flieth to his side. 95
Exe. The Dauphin crowned king ! all fly
to him !

O, whither shall we fly from this reproach ?
Glo. We will not fly but to our enemies'
throats.

Bedford, if thou be slack I'll fight it out.
Bed. Gloucester, why doubt'st thou of my forwardness ? 100

An army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is overrun.

Enter a third Messenger.

3 Mess. My gracious lords, to add to your laments,

Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's
hearse,

I must inform you of a dismal fight 105
Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot and the French.

Win. What ! Wherein Talbot overcame ?
Is't so ?

3 Mess. O, no ; wherein Lord Talbot was o'erthrown.

The circumstance I'll tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last this dreadful lord,

Retiring from the siege of Orleans, 111
 Having full scarce six thousand in his troop,
 By three and twenty thousand of the French

Was round encompassed and set upon.
 No leisure had he to enrank his men; 115
 He wanted pikes to set before his archers;
 Instead whereof sharp stakes pluck'd out of hedges

They pitched in the ground confusedly
 To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.
 More than three hours the fight continued;
 Where valiant Talbot, above human
 thought, 121
 Enacted wonders with his sword and lance:
 Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand him;

Here, there, and everywhere, enrag'd he slew—

The French exclaim'd the devil was in
 arms; 125

All the whole army stood agaz'd on him.
 His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit,
 'A Talbot! a Talbot!' cried out amain,
 And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.
 Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up If Sir John Fastolfe had not play'd the coward. 131

He, being in the vaward—plac'd behind
 With purpose to relieve and follow them—
 Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke;

Hence grew the general wreck and massacre.
 Enclosed were they with their enemies. 136
 A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin's
 grace,

Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back;
 Whom all France, with their chief assembled strength, 139
 Durst not presume to look once in the face.

Bed. Is Talbot slain? Then I will slay
 myself,

For living idly here in pomp and ease,
 Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
 Unto his dastard foemen is betray'd.

3 Mess. O no, he lives, but is took prisoner, 145

And Lord Scales with him, and Lord
 Hungerford;

Most of the rest slaughter'd or took likewise.

Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall pay.

'I'll hale the Dauphin headlong from his throne; 149

His crown shall be the ransom of my friend;
 Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours.

Farewell, my masters; to my task will I;
 Confires in France forthwith I am to make
 To keep our great Saint George's feast
 withal. 154

Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take,

Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe
 quake.

3 Mess. So you had need; for Orleans is besieg'd;

The English army is grown weak and faint;
 The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply
 And hardly keeps his men from mutiny, 160
 Since they, so few, watch such a multitude.

Exe. Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn,

Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,
 Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it, and here take my leave 165

To go about my preparation. [Exit.

Glo. I'll to the Tower with all the haste
 I can

To view th' artillery and munition;
 And then I will proclaim young Henry king.

Exe. To Eltham will I, where the young King is, 170

Being ordain'd his special governor;
 And for his safety there I'll best devise.

[Exit.

Win. [Aside] Each hath his place and function to attend:

I am left out; for me nothing remains.
 But long I will not be Jack out of office. 175
 The King from Eltham I intend to steal,
 And sit at chiefest stern of public weal.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. France. Before Orleans.

Sound a flourish. Enter CHARLES THE DAUPHIN, ALENÇON, and REIGNIER, marching with drum and Soldiers.

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens

So in the earth, to this day is not known.
 Late did he shine upon the English side;
 Now we are victors, upon us he smiles.

What towns of any moment but we have? 5
 At pleasure here we lie near Orleans;

Otherwhiles the famish'd English, like pale ghosts,

Faintly besiege us one hour in a month.

Alen. They want their porridge and their fat bull-beeves.

Either they must be dieted like mules 10
 And have their provender tied to their mouths,

Or piteous they will look, like drowned mice.

Reig. Let's raise the siege. Why live we idly here?

Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear;
 Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury, 15

And he may well in fretting spend his gall—
 Nor men nor money hath he to make war.

Char. Sound, sound alarum; we will rush on them.

Now for the honour of the forlorn French !
Him I forgive my death that killeth me, 20
When he sees me go back one foot or flee.

[Exeunt.]

Here alarum. They are beaten back by the English, with great loss. Re-enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, and REIGNIER.

Char. Who ever saw the like ? What men have I !
Dogs ! cowards ! dastards ! I would ne'er have fled

But that they left me midst my enemies.
Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide ;
He fighteth as one weary of his life. 26
The other lords, like lions wanting food,
Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Alen. Froissart, a countryman of ours, records
England all Olivers and Rowlands bred 30
During the time Edward the Third did
reign.

More truly now may this be verified ;
For none but Samsons and Goliases It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten !

Lean raw-bon'd rascals ! Who would e'er
suppose 35
They had such courage and audacity ?

Char. Let's leave this town ; for they are hare-brain'd slaves,
And hunger will enforce them to be more eager.

Of old I know them ; rather with their teeth
The walls they'll tear down than forsake the siege. 40

Reig. I think by some odd gimmers or device
Their arms are set, like clocks, still to strike
on ;

Else ne'er could they hold out so as they do.
By my consent, we'll even let them alone.

Alen. Be it so. 45

Enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS.

Bast. Where's the Prince Dauphin ? I have news for him.

Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome
to us.

Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer appall'd.

Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence ?

Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand. 50
A holy maid hither with me I bring,
Which, by a vision sent to her from heaven,
O'dained is to raise this tedious siege
And drive the English forth the bounds of France.

The spirit of deep prophecy she hath, 55
Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome :
What's past and what's to come she can descrie.

Speak, shall I call her in ? Believe my
words,

For they are certain and unfaillible.

Char. Go, call her in. [Exit Bastard] But first, to try her skill, 60

Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my
place ;

Question her proudly ; let thy looks be stern ;

By this means shall we sound what skill she hath.

Re-enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, with JOAN LA PUCELLE.

Reig. Fair maid, is 't thou wilt do these wondrous feats ?

Puc. Reignier, is 't thou that thinkest to beguile me ? 65

Where is the Dauphin ? Come, come from behind ;

I know thee well, though never seen before.
Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me.
In private will I talk with thee apart.
Stand back, you lords, and give us leave
awhile. 70

Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.

Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter,

My wit untrain'd in any kind of art.
Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it
pleas'd

To shine on my contemptible estate. 75
Lo, whilst I waited on my tender lambs
And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,

God's Mother deign'd to appear to me,
And in a vision full of majesty
Will'd me to leave my base vocation 80
And free my country from calamity—

Her aid she promis'd and assur'd success.
In complete glory she reveal'd herself ;
And whereas I was black and swart before,
With those clear rays which she infus'd on
me 85

That beauty am I bless'd with which you may see.

Ask me what question thou canst possible,
And I will answer unpremeditated.

My courage try by combat if thou dar'st,
And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex. 90
Resolve on this : thou shalt be fortunate
If thou receive me for thy warlike mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms.

Only this proof I'll of thy valour make—
In single combat thou shalt buckle with me ;
And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true ; 95

Otherwise I renounce all confidence.

Puc. I am prepar'd ; here is my keen-edg'd sword,

Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each side,

The which at Touraine, in Saint Katherine's churchyard, 100

Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth.
Char. Then come, o' God's name; I fear no woman.

Puc. And while I live I'll ne'er fly from a man. [Here they fight and Joan la Pucelle overcomes.]

Char. Stay, stay thy hands; thou art an Amazon, 104

And fightest with the sword of Deborah.

Puc. Christ's Mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Char. Whoe'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must help me.

Impatiently I burn with thy desire;

My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd.

Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so, 110

Let me thy servant and not sovereign be.

'Tis the French Dauphin sueth to thee thus.

Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love, For my profession's sacred from above.

When I have chased all thy foes from hence, Then will I think upon a recompense. 116

Char. Meantime look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.

Alen. Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock;

Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech. 120

Reig. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean?

Alen. He may mean more than we poor men do know;

These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reig. My lord, where are you? What devise you on?

Shall we give o'er Orleans, or no? 125

Puc. Why, no, I say; distrustful recreants!

Fight till the last gasp; I will be your guard.

Char. What she says I'll confirm; we'll fight it out.

Puc. Assign'd am I to be the English scourge.

His night the siege assuredly I'll raise. 130

Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days,

Since I have entered into these wars.

Glorious is like a circle in the water,

Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself

Still by broad spreading it disperse to nought. 135

With Henry's death the English circle ends; dispersed are the glories it included.

Now am I like that proud insulting ship

Which Cæsar and his fortune bare at once.

Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove? 140

Thou with an eagle art inspired then.

Helen, the mother of great Constantine, Nor yet Saint Philip's daughters were like thee.

Bright star of Venus, fall'n down on the earth,

How may I reverently worship thee enough? 145

Alen. Leave off delays, and let us raise the siege.

Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours;

Drive them from Orleans, and be immortaliz'd.

Char. Presently we'll try. Come, let's away about it.

No prophet will I trust if she prove false. 150
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. London. Before the Tower gates.

Enter the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, with his Serving-men in blue coats.

Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day;

Since Henry's death, I fear, there is conveyance.

Where be these warders that they wait not here?

Open the gates; 'tis Gloucester that calls.

1 Ward. [Within] Who's there that knocks so imperiously? 5

1 Serv. It is the noble Duke of Gloucester.

2 Ward. [Within] Whoe'er he be, you may not be let in.

1 Serv. Villains, answer you so the Lord Protector?

1 Ward. [Within] The Lord protect him! so we answer him.

We do no otherwise than we are will'd. 10

Glo. Who willed you, or whose will stands but mine?

There's none Protector of the realm but I. Break up the gates, I'll be your warrantize.

Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms?

[Gloucester's men rush at the Tower gates, and Woodville, the Lieutenant speaks within.]

Wood. [Within] What noise is this? What traitors have we here? 15

Glo. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear?

Open the gates; here's Gloucester that would enter.

Wood. [Within] Have patience, noble Duke, I may not open;

The Cardinal of Winchester forbids.

From him I have express commandment 20

That thou nor none of thine shall be let in.

Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him fore me?

Arrogant Winchester, that haughty prelate

Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could brook!

Thou art no friend to God or to the King. ²⁵
Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly.

Serving-men. Open the gates unto the Lord Protector,
Or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter to the Protector at the Tower gates
WINCHESTER and his Men in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphry !
What means this ?

Glo. Peel'd priest, dost thou command me to be shut out ? ³⁰

Win. I do, thou most usurping proditor,
And not Protector of the King or realm.

Glo. Stand back, thou manifest con-spirator,
Thou that contriv'd'st to murder our dead
lord ; ³⁴

Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin.
I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat,
If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Win. Nay, stand thou back ; I will not budge a foot.

This be Damascus ; be thou cursed Cain,
To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt. ⁴⁰

Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back.

Thy scarlet robes as a child's bearing-cloth
I'll use to carry thee out of this place.

Win. Do what thou dar'st ; I beard thee to thy face.

Glo. What ! am I dar'd and bearded to my face ? ⁴⁵

Draw, men, for all this privileged place—Blue-coats to tawny-coats. Priest, beware your beard ;

I mean to tug it, and to cuff you soundly ;
Under my foot I stamp thy cardinal's hat ;
In spite of Pope or dignities of church, ⁵⁰ Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and
down.

Win. Gloucester, thou wilt answer this before the Pope.

Glo. Winchester goose ! I cry 'A rope, a rope !'

Now beat them hence ; why do you let them stay ?

Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array. ⁵⁵

Out, tawny-coats ! Out, scarlet hypocrite !

Here Gloucester's men beat out the Cardinal's men ; and enter in the hurly-burly the MAYOR of London, and his Officers.

May. Fie, lords ! that you, being supreme magistrates,
Thus contumeliously should break the
peace !

Glo. Peace, Mayor ! thou know'st little of my wrongs :

Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor King, ⁶⁰

Hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use.

Win. Here's Gloucester, a foe to citizens ;
One that still motions war and never peace, O'ercharging your free purses with large fines ;

That seeks to overthrow religion, ⁶⁵
Because he is Protector of the realm,
And would have armour here out of the Tower,

To crown himself King and suppress the Prince.

Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows.

[Here they skirmish again.

May. Nought rests for me in this tumultuous strife ⁷⁰

But to make open proclamation.

Come, officer, as loud as e'er thou canst,
Cry.

Off. [Cries] All manner of men assembled here in arms this day against God's peace and the King's, we charge and command you, in his Highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places ; and not to wear, handle, or use, any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of
death.

Glo. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law ;

But we shall meet and break our minds at large. ⁸⁰

Win. Gloucester, we'll meet to thy cost, be sure ;

Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's
work.

May. I'll call for clubs if you will not
away.

This Cardinal's more haughty than the devil.

Glo. Mayor, farewell ; thou dost but what thou mayst. ⁸⁵

Win. Abominable Gloucester, guard thy
head,

For I intend to have it ere long.

[Exeunt, severally, Gloucester and Winchester with their Servants.

May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart.

Good God, these nobles should such stomachs bear ! ⁸⁹

I myself fight not once in forty year.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. France. Before Orleans.

Enter, on the walls, the Master-Gunner of Orleans and his Boy.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd,

And how the English have the suburbs won Boy. Father, I know ; and oft have shot at them,

Howe'er unfortunate I miss'd my aim.

M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be-thou rul'd by me.

Chief master-gunner am I of this town ;
 Something I must do to procure me grace.
 The Prince's espials have informed me
 How the English, in the suburbs close intrench'd,
 Wont, through a secret grate of iron bars 10
 In yonder tower, to overpeer the city,
 And thence discover how with most advantage

They may vex us with shot or with assault.
 To intercept this inconvenience, 14
 A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd ;
 And even these three days have I watch'd
 If I could see them. Now do thou watch,
 For I can stay no longer.

If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word ;
 And thou shalt find me at the Governor's. 20

[Exit.]

Boy. Father, I warrant you ; take you no care ;

I'll never trouble you, if I may spy them.

[Exit.]

Enter SALISBURY and TALBOT on the turrets, with SIR WILLIAM GLANDSDALE, SIR THOMAS GARGRAVE, and Others.

Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy, again
 return'd !

How wert thou handled being prisoner ?
 Or by what means got'st thou to be releas'd ? 25

Discourse, I prithee, on this turret's top.
 Tal. The Earl of Bedford had a prisoner
 Call'd the brave Lord Ponton de Santraillies ;
 For him was I exchang'd and ransomed.

But with a baser man of arms by far 30
 Once, in contempt, they would have barter'd me ;

Which I disdain'd scorn'd, and craved
 death

Rather than I would be so vile esteem'd.
 In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd.

But, O ! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds
 my heart ; 35

Whom with my bare fists I would execute,
 If I now had him brought into my power.

Sal. Yet tell'st thou not how thou wert entertain'd.

Tal. With scoffs, and scorns, and contemnelious taunts.

In open market-place produc'd they me 40
 To be a public spectacle to all ;

Here, said they, is the terror of the French,
 The scarecrow that affrights our children so.
 Then broke I from the officers that led me,
 And with my nails digg'd stones out of the
 ground 45

To hurl at the beholders of my shame ;
 My grisly countenance made others fly ;
 None durst come near for fear of sudden
 death.

In iron walls they deem'd me not secure ;
 So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread 50

That they suppos'd I could rend bars of steel

And spurn in pieces posts of adamant ;
 Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had
 That walk'd about me every minute-while ;
 And if I did but stir out of my bed, 55
 Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Enter the Boy with a linstock.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you
 endur'd ;

But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.

Now it is supper-time in Orleans : 59
 Here, through this grate, I count each one
 And view the Frenchmen how they fortify.
 Let us look in ; the sight will much delight
 thee.

Sir Thomas Gargrave and Sir William Glansdale,

Let me have your express opinions

Where is best place to make our batt'ry
 next. 65

Gar. I think at the North Gate ; for there stand lords.

Glan. And I here, at the bulwark of the bridge.

Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd,

Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[Here they sho! and Salisbury and Gargrave fall down.]

Sal. O Lord, have mercy on us, wretched sinners ! 70

Gar. O Lord, have mercy on me, woeful
 man !

Tal. What chance is this that suddenly hath cross'd us ?

Speak, Salisbury ; at least, if thou canst
 speak.

How far'st thou, mirror of all martial men ?
 One of thy eyes and thy cheek's side struck
 off ! 75

Accurs'd tower ! accurs'd fatal hand
 That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy !

In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame ;
 Henry the Fifth he first train'd to the wars ;

Whilst any trump did sound or drum struck
 up, 80

His sword did ne'er leave striking in the field.

Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury ? Though thy speech doth fail,

One eye thou hast to look to heaven for
 grace ;

The sun with one eye vieweth all the world.
 Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive 85

If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands !

Bear hence his body : I will help to bury it.

Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life ?

Speak unto Talbot ; nay, look up to him.

Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort, 90

Thou shalt not die whiles—

He beckons with his hand and smiles on me,

As who should say 'When I am dead and gone,

Remember to avenge me on the French'.
Plantagenet, I will; and like thee, Nero, 95
Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn.
Wretched shall France be only in my name.

[Here an alarum, and it thunders and lightens.

What stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens?

Whence cometh this alarum and the noise?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord, the French have gather'd head. 100

The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd,

A holy prophetess new risen up,
Is come with a great power to raise the siege. [Here Salisbury lifteth himself up and groans.

Tal. Hear, hear how dying Salisbury doth groan.

It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd. 105
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you.

Pucelle or puzzel, dolphin or dogfish,
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels

And make a quagmire of your mingled brains.

Convey me Salisbury into his tent, 110
And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare. [Alarum. Exeunt.

SCENE V. Before Orleans.

Here an alarum again, and TALBOT pursueth the DAUPHIN and driveth him. Then enter JOAN LA PUCELLE driving Englishmen before her. Then enter TALBOT.

Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?

Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;

A woman clad in armour chaseth them.

Enter LA PUCELLE.

Here, here she comes. I'll have a bout with thee.

Devil or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee; 5
Blood will I draw on thee—thou art a witch—

And straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.

Puc. Come, come, 'tis only I that must disgrace thee. [Here they fight.

Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?

My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage, 10

And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,

But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet. [They fight again.

Puc. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come.

I must go victual Orleans forthwith.

[A short alarum; then enter the town with soldiers.

O'ertake me if thou canst; I scorn thy strength. 15

Go, go, cheer up thy hungry starved men;

Help Salisbury to make his testament.
This day is ours, as many more shall be.

[Exit.

Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel;

I know not where I am nor what I do. 20
A witch by fear, not force, like Hannibal,

Drives back our troops and conquers as she lists.

So bees with smoke and doves with noisome stench

Are from their hives and houses driven away.

They call'd us, for our fierceness, English dogs; 25

Now like to whelps we crying run away.
[A short alarum.

Hark, countrymen! Either renew the fight
Or tear the lions out of England's coat;

Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:

Sheep run not half so treacherous from the wolf, 30

Or horse or oxen from the leopard,
As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.

[Alarum. Here another skirmish.

It will not be—retire into your trenches.
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,

For none would strike a stroke in his revenge. 35

Pucelle is ent'rd into Orleans

In spite of us or aught that we could do.
O, would I were to die with Salisbury!

The shame hereof will make me hide my head. [Exit Talbot. Alarum; retreat.

SCENE VI. Orleans.

Flourish. Enter on the walls, LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, REIGNIER, ALENÇON, and Soldiers.

Puc. Advance our waving colours on the walls;

Rescu'd is Orleans from the English.
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.

Char. Divinest creature, Astræa's daughter,

How shall I honour thee for this success? 5
Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,

That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next.

France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess.
Recover'd is the town of Orleans.

More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.

Reig. Why ring not out the bells aloud throughout the town ?¹¹ Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires
And feast and banquet in the open streets
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.
Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy¹⁵
When they shall hear how we have play'd
the men.
Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won ;
For which I will divide my crown with her ;
And all the priests and friars in my realm
Shall in procession sing her endless praise.
A statelier pyramis to her I'll rear²¹ Than Rhodope's of Memphis ever was.
In memory of her, when she is dead,
Her ashes, in an urn more precious
Than the rich jewell'd coffer of Darius,²⁵
Transported shall be at high festivals
Before the kings and queens of France.
No longer on Saint Denis will we cry,
But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.
Come in, and let us banquet royally³⁰
After this golden day of victory.
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Before Orleans.

Enter a French Sergeant and two Sentinels.

Sergt. Sirs, take your places and be vigilant.

If any noise or soldier you perceive
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

1 Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergt.]
Thus are poor servitors,⁵
When others sleep upon their quiet beds, Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, and Forces, with scaling-ladders ; their drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubted Burgundy,
By whose approach the regions of Artois,
Wallon, and Picardy, are friends to us,¹⁰
This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous'd and banqueted ;
Embrace we then this opportunity,
As fitting best to quittance their deceit,
Contriv'd by art and baleful sorcery.¹⁵

Bed. Coward of France, how much he wrongs his fame,
Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,
To join with witches and the help of hell !

Bur. Traitors have never other company.
But what's that Pucelle whom they term so pure ?²⁰

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid ! and be so martial !

Bur. Pray God she prove not masculine ere long,

If underneath the standard of the French
She carry armour as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits :²⁵

God is our fortress, in whose conquering
name

Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot ; we will follow thee.

Tal. Not all together ; better far, I guess,
That we do make our entrance several ways ;
That if it chance the one of us do fail³¹
The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed ; I'll to yond corner.

Bur. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount or make his grave.³⁴

Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear
How much in duty I am bound to both.

[The English scale the walls and cry ' Saint George ! a Talbot ! '

Sent. Arm ! arm ! The enemy doth make assault.

The French leap o'er the walls in their shirts.
Enter, several ways, BASTARD, ALENÇON,
REIGNIER, half ready and half unready.

Alen. How now, my lords ? What, all unready so ?

Bast. Unready ! Ay, and glad we 'scap'd so well.⁴⁰

Reig. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds,

Hearing alarms at our chamber doors.

Alen. Of all exploits since first I follow'd
arms

Ne'er heard I of a warlike enterprise
More venturous or desperate than this.⁴⁵

Bast. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure,
favour him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles ; I marvel how he sped.

Enter CHARLES and LA PUCELLE.

Bast. Tut ! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame ?⁵⁰

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,
Make us partakers of a little gain
That now our loss might be ten times so much ?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend ?⁵⁴

At all times will you have my power alike ?
Sleeping or waking, must I still prevail,
Or will you blame and lay the fault on me ?

Improvident soldiers! Had your watch been good
This sudden mischief never could have fall'n.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default

That, being captain of the watch to-night,
Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept

As that whereof I had the government, 64
We had not been thus shamefully surpris'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reig. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And, for myself, most part of all this night,

Within her quarter and mine own precinct
I was employ'd in passing to and fro

About relieving of the sentinels. 70

Then how or which way should they first break in?

Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the case,

How or which way; 'tis sure they found some place

But weakly guarded, where the breach was made.

And now there rests no other shift but
this— 75

To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and
dispers'd,

And lay new platforms to endamage them.

Alarum. Enter an English Soldier, crying
'A Talbot! A Talbot!' They fly, leaving their clothes behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have left.

The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword;
For I have loaden me with many spoils, 80
Using no other weapon but his name.

[Exit.

SCENE II. Orleans. Within the town.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, a Captain, and Others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled

Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.
Here sound retreat and cease our hot pursuit. [Retreat sounded.

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury
And here advance it in the market-place, 5
The middle centre of this cursed town.
Now have I paid my vow unto his soul;
For every drop of blood was drawn from
him

There hath at least five Frenchmen died
to-night.

And that hereafter ages may behold 10
What ruin happened in revenge of him,
Within their chiefest temple I'll erect
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be interr'd;

Upon the which, that every one may read,
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans, 15
The treacherous manner of his mournful
death,

And what a terror he had been to France.
But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,
I muse we met not with the Dauphin's
grace,

His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc, 20

Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began,

Rous'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds,

They did amongst the troops of armed men
Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field. 25

Bur. Myself, as far as I could well discern
For smoke and dusky vapours of the night,
Am sure I scar'd the Dauphin and his trull,
When arm in arm they both came swiftly running,

Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves 30
That could not live asunder day or night.
After that things are set in order here,
We'll follow them with all the power we
have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! Which of this princely train

Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his acts 35
So much applauded through the realm of France?

Tal. Here is the Talbot; who would speak with him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, Countess of Auvergne,

With modesty admiring thy renown,
By me entreats, great lord, thou wouldst vouchsafe 40

To visit her poor castle where she lies,
That she may boast she hath beheld the
man

Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then I see our wars

Will turn unto a peaceful comic sport, 45
When ladies crave to be encount'ed with.
You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for when a world of men

Could not prevail with all their oratory,
Yet hath a woman's kindness overrul'd; 50
And therefore tell her I return great thanks
And in submission will attend on her.

Will not your honours bear me company?

Bed. No, truly; 'tis more than manners
will; 54

And I have heard it said unbidden guests
Are often welcomest when they are gone.

Tal. Well then, alone, since there's no remedy,

I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.
Come hither, Captain. [Whispers] You perceive my mind ? 59

Capt. I do, my lord, and mean accordingly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Auvergne. The castle.

Enter the COUNTESS and her Porter.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge ;

And when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

Port. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Count. The plot is laid ; if all things fall out right,

I shall as famous be by this exploit 5

As Scythian Tomyris by Cyrus' death.

Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight,

And his achievements of no less account.

Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine ears 9

To give their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and TALBOT.

Mess. Madam, according as your ladyship desir'd,

By message crav'd, so is Lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome. What ! is this the man ?

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France ? 15

Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad

That with his name the mothers still their babes ?

I see report is fabulous and false.

I thought I should have seen some Hercules,

A second Hector, for his grim aspect 20

And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.

Alas, this is a child, a silly dwarf !

It cannot be this weak and writhled shrimp

Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you ; 25

But since your ladyship is not at leisure,

I'll sort some other time to visit you.

[Going.]

Count. What means he now ? Go ask him whither he goes.

Mess. Stay, my Lord Talbot ; for my lady craves

To know the cause of your abrupt departure. 30

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,

I go to certify her Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter with keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner ! To whom ?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord ;

And for that cause I train'd thee to my house. 35

Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me,

For in my gallery thy picture hangs ;

But now the substance shall endure the like

And I will chain these legs and arms of thine

That hast by tyranny these many years 40

Wasted our country, slain our citizens,

And sent our sons and husbands captivate.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha !

Count. Laughest thou, wretch ? Thy mirth shall turn to moan. 44

Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond

To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow

Whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man ?

Tal. I am indeed.

Count. Then have I substance too. 49

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself.

You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here ;

For what you see is but the smallest part

And least proportion of humanity.

I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,

It is of such a spacious lofty pitch 55

Your roof were not sufficient to contain 't.

Count. This is a riddling merchant for the nonce ;

He will be here, and yet he is not here.

How can these contrarieties agree ?

Tal. That will I show you presently. 60

Winds his horn ; drums strike up ; a peal of ordnance. Enter Soldiers.

How say you, madam ? Are you now persuaded

That Talbot is but shadow of himself ?

These are his substance, sinews, arms, and strength,

With which he yoketh your rebellious necks,

Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns, 65

And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot ! pardon my abuse.

I find thou art no less than fame hath bruited,

And more than may be gathered by thy shape.

Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath, 70

For I am sorry that with reverence

I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady ; nor misconster

The mind of Talbot as you did mistake

The outward composition of his body. 75

What you have done hath not offended me.

Nor other satisfaction do I crave

But only, with your patience, that we may

Taste of your wine and see what cates you have,
For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well. 80
Count. With all my heart, and think me honoured
To feast so great a warrior in my house.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The Temple garden.

Enter the EARLS OF SOMERSET, SUFFOLK, and WARWICK; RICHARD PLANTAGENET, VERNON, and another Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth?

Suf. Within the Temple Hall we were too loud;

The garden here is more convenient.

Plan. Then say at once if I maintain'd the truth;

Or else was wrangling Somerset in th' error? 5

Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law

And never yet could frame my will to it;
And therefore frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, then, between us. 10

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch;

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth;

Between two blades, which bears the better temper;

Between two horses, which doth bear him best;

Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye— 15

I have perhaps some shallow spirit of judgment;

But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,
Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

Plan. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance:

The truth appears so naked on my side 20
That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd,

So clear, so shining, and so evident,
That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.

Plan. Since you are tongue-tied and so loath to speak, 25

In dumb significant proclaim your thoughts.

Let him that is a true-born gentleman
And stands upon the honour of his birth,
If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,
From off this brier pluck a white rose with me. 30

Som. Let him that is no coward nor no flatterer,

But dare maintain the party of the truth,
 600

Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colours; and, without all colour

Of base insinuating flattery, 35
I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet.

Suf. I pluck this red rose with young Somerset,

And say withal I think he held the right.

Ver. Stay, lords and gentlemen, and pluck no more 39

Till you conclude that he upon whose side
The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree

Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good Master Vernon, it is well objected;

If I have fewest, I subscribe in silence.

Plan. And I. 45

Ver. Then, for the truth and plainness of the case,

I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,
Giving my verdict on the white rose side.

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off,

Lest, bleeding, you do paint the white rose red, 50

And fall on my side so, against your will.

Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt

And keep me on the side where still I am.

Som. Well, well, come on; who else? 55

Law. [To Somerset] Unless my study and my books be false,

The argument you held was wrong in you;
In sign whereof I pluck a white rose too.

Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

Som. Here in my scabbard, meditating that 60

Shall dye your white rose in a bloody red.

Plan. Meantime your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;

For pale they look with fear, as witnessing
The truth on our side.

Som. No, Plantagenet.
 'Tis not for fear but anger that thy cheek

Blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses, 66

And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?

Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?

Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth; 70

Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.

Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding roses,

That shall maintain what I have said is true,

Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand, 75
I scorn thee and thy fashion, peevish boy.
Suf. Turn not thy scorns this way, Plantagenet.
Plan. Proud Pole, I will, and scorn both him and thee.
Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.
Som. Away, away, good William de la Pole! 80
We grace the yeoman by conversing with him.
War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him, Somerset;
His grandfather was Lionel Duke of Clarence,
Third son to the third Edward, King of England.
Spring crestless yeomen from so deep a root? 85
Plan. He bears him on the place's privilege,
Or durst not for his craven heart say thus.
Som. By Him that made me, I'll maintain my words
On any plot of ground in Christendom.
Was not thy father, Richard Earl of Cambridge, 90
For treason executed in our late king's days?
And by his treason stand'st not thou attainted,
Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry?
His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood;
And till thou be restor'd thou art a yeoman.
Plan. My father was attached, not attainted; 96
Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;
And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,
Were growing time once ripened to my will.
For your partaker Pole, and you yourself, I'll note you in my book of memory 101
To scourge you for this apprehension.
Look to it well, and say you are well warn'd.
Som. Ay, thou shalt find us ready for thee still;
And know us by these colours for thy foes—
For these my friends in spite of thee shall wear. 106
Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose,
As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,
Will I for ever, and my faction, wear,
Until it wither with me to my grave, 110
Or flourish to the height of my degree.
Suf. Go forward, and be chok'd with thy ambition!
And so farewell until I meet thee next.
[Exit.]

Som. Have with thee, Pole. Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.]
Plan. How I am brav'd, and must perforce endure it! 115
War. This blot that they object against your house
Shall be wip'd out in the next Parliament,
Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloucester;
And if thou be not then created York, I will not live to be accounted Warwick. 120
Meantime, in signal of my love to thee, Against proud Somerset and William Pole, Will I upon thy party wear this rose;
And here I prophesy: this brawl to-day, Grown to this faction in the Temple Garden, 125
Shall send between the Red Rose and the White
A thousand souls to death and deadly night.
Plan. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to you
That you on my behalf would pluck a flower.
Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same. 130
Law. And so will I.
Plan. Thanks, gentle sir.
Come, let us four to dinner. I dare say
This quarrel will drink blood another day.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The Tower of London.

Enter MORTIMER, brought in a chair, and Gaolers.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,
Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.
Even like a man new haled from the rack,
So fare my limbs with long imprisonment;
And these grey locks, the pursuivants of death, 5
Nestor-like aged in an age of care,
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.
These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent,
Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent;
Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening grief, 10
And pithless arms, like to a withered vine
That droops his sapless branches to the ground.
Yet are these feet, whose strengthless stay is numb,
Unable to support this lump of clay,
Swift-winged with desire to get a grave, 15
As witting I no other comfort have.
But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?
1 Keep. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come.
We sent unto the Temple, unto his chamber; 19

And answer was return'd that he will come.

Mor. Enough ; my soul shall then be satisfied.

Poor gentleman ! his wrong doth equal mine.

Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,

Before whose glory I was great in arms,

This loathsome sequestration have I had ;

And even since then hath Richard been obscur'd, 26

Depriv'd of honour and inheritance.

But now the arbitrator of despairs,

Just Death, kind umpire of men's miseries,

With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence. 30

I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,

That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET.

1 Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he come ? 34

Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd,

Your nephew, late despised Richard, comes.

Mor. Direct mine arms I may embrace his neck

And in his bosom spend my latter gasp.

O, tell me when my lips do touch his cheeks,

That I may kindly give one fainting kiss. 40

And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock,

Why didst thou say of late thou wert despis'd ?

Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm ;

And, in that ease, I'll tell thee my disease.

This day, in argument upon a case, 45

Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and me ;

Among which terms he us'd his lavish tongue

And did upbraid me with my father's death ;

Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,

Else with the like I had requited him. 50

Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake,

In honour of a true Plantagenet,

And for alliance sake, declare the cause

My father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his head.

Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprison'd me 55

And hath detain'd me all my flow'ring youth

Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,

Was curs'd instrument of his decease.

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was,

For I am ignorant and cannot guess. 60

Mor. I will, if that my fading breath permit

And death approach not ere my tale be done.

Henry the Fourth, grandfather to this king,

Depos'd his nephew Richard, Edward's son,

The first-begotten and the lawful heir 65

Of Edward king, the third of that descent ;

During whose reign the Percies of the north,

Finding his usurpation most unjust,

Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne.

The reason mov'd these warlike lords to this 70

Was, for that—young Richard thus remov'd,

Leaving no heir begotten of his body—

I was the next by birth and parentage ;

For by my mother I derived am

From Lionel Duke of Clarence, third son 75

To King Edward the Third ; whereas he

From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,

Being but fourth of that heroic line.

But mark : as in this haughty great attempt

They labour'd to plant the rightful heir, 80

I lost my liberty, and they their lives.

Long after this, when Henry the Fifth,

Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign,

Thy father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd

From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of York, 85

Marrying my sister, that thy mother was,

Again, in pity of my hard distress,

Levied an army, weening to redeem

And have install'd me in the diadem ;

But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl, 90

And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,

In whom the title rested, were suppress'd.

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor. True ; and thou seest that I no issue have,

And that my fainting words do warrant death. 95

Thou art my heir ; the rest I wish thee gather ;

But yet be wary in thy studious care.

Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me.

But yet methinks my father's execution

Was nothing less than bloody tyranny. 100

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic ;

Strong fixed is the house of Lancaster

And like a mountain not to be remov'd.

But now thy uncle is removing hence,

As princes do their courts when they are cloy'd 105

With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O uncle, would some part of my young years

Might but redeem the passage of your age !

Mor. Thou dost then wrong me, as that slaughterer doth

Which giveth many wounds when one will kill. 110

Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good;
Only give order for my funeral.

And so, farewell; and fair be all thy hopes,
And prosperous be thy life in peace and war! [Dies. 115

Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul!

In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage,
And like a hermit overpass'd thy days.
Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast;
And what I do imagine, let that rest. 119
Keepers, convey him hence; and I myself
Will see his burial better than his life.

[Exeunt Gaolers, bearing out the body of Mortimer.

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer,
Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort;
And for those wrongs, those bitter injuries,
Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,
I doubt not but with honour to redress;
And therefore haste I to the Parliament,
Either to be restored to my blood, 128
Or make my ill th' advantage of my good.
[Exit.

ACT THREE

SCENE I. London. The Parliament House.

Flourish. Enter the KING, EXETER, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK; the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, and Others. Gloucester offers to put up a bill; Winchester snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines,

With written pamphlets studiously devis'd?
Humphrey of Gloucester, if thou canst accuse

Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge,
Do it without invention, suddenly; 5

As I with sudden and extemporal speech
Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glo. Presumptuous priest, this place commands my patience,

Or thou shouldst find thou hast dishonour'd me. 9

Think not, although in writing I preferr'd
The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,
That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen.

No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedness,

Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious pranks, 15

As very infants prattle of thy pride.

Thou art a most pernicious usurer;

Froward by nature, enemy to peace;
Lascivious, wanton, more than well
beseems

A man of thy profession and degree; 20

And for thy treachery, what's more manifest—

In that thou laid'st a trap to take my life,
As well at London Bridge as at the Tower?
Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,

The King, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt 25

From envious malice of thy swelling heart.

Win. Gloucester, I do defy thee. Lords, vouchsafe

To give me hearing what I shall reply.

If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse,
As he will have me, how am I so poor? 30
Or how haps it I seek not to advance

Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling?

And for dissension, who preferreth peace
More than I do, except I be provok'd?

No, my good lords, it is not that offends; 35
It is not that that hath incens'd the Duke:

It is because no one should sway but he;
No one but he should be about the King;

And that engenders thunder in his breast
And makes him roar these accusations

forth. 40

But he shall know I am as good—

Glo. As good!

Thou bastard of my grandfather!

Win. Ay, lordly sir; for what are you, I pray,

But one imperious in another's throne?

Glo. Am I not Protector, saucy priest? 45

Win. And am not I a prelate of the church?

Glo. Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps,
And useth it to patronage his theft.

Win. Unreverent Gloucester!

Glo. Thou art reverend Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life. 50

Win. Rome shall remedy this.

War. Roam thither then.

Som. My lord, it were your duty to forbear.

War. Ay, see the bishop be not overborne.

Som. Methinks my lord should be religious,

And know the office that belongs to such. 55

War. Methinks his lordship should be humbler;

It fitteth not a prelate so to plead.

Som. Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near.

War. State holy or unhallow'd, what of that?

Is not his Grace Protector to the King? 60

Plan. [Aside] Plantagenet, I see, must hold his tongue,

Lest it be said 'Speak, sirrah, when you should;

Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords?'

Else would I have a fling at Winchester.

King. Uncles of Gloucester and of Winchester,
The special watchmen of our English weal,
I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,
To join your hearts in love and amity.
O, what a scandal is it to our crown
That two such noble peers as ye should jar!
Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell Civil dissension is a viperous worm
That gnaws the bowels of the common-wealth.

[A noise within: Down with the tawny coats.

What tumult's this?

War. An uproar, I dare warrant,
Begun through malice of the Bishop's men.
[A noise again: Stones! Stones!

Enter the MAYOR of London, attended.

May. O, my good lords, and virtuous Henry,
Pity the city of London, pity us!
The Bishop and the Duke of Gloucester's men,
Forbidden late to carry any weapon,
Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble stones

And, banding themselves in contrary parts,
Do pelt so fast at one another's pate
That many have their giddy brains knock'd out.

Our windows are broke down in every street,
And we for fear compell'd to shut our shops.

Enter in skirmish, the Retainers of Gloucester and Winchester, with bloody pates.

King. We charge you, on allegiance to ourself,
To hold your slaught'ring hands and keep the peace.

Pray, uncle Gloucester, mitigate this strife.

1 Serv. Nay, if we be forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.

2 Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.

[Skirmish again.
Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish broil,

And set this unaccustom'd fight aside.

3 Serv. My lord, we know your Grace to be a man

Just and upright, and for your royal birth
Inferior to none but to his Majesty;
And ere that we will suffer such a prince,
So kind a father of the commonweal,
To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate,
We and our wives and children all will fight
And have our bodies slaught' red by thy foes.

1 Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails

Shall pitch a field when we are dead.

[Begin again.
Glo. Stay, stay, I say!

And if you love me, as you say you do,
Let me persuade you to forbear awhile.

King. O, how this discord doth afflict my soul!

Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold
My sighs and tears and will not once relent?
Who should be pitiful, if you be not?
Or who should study to prefer a peace,
If holy churchmen take delight in broils?

War. Yield, my Lord Protector; yield, Winchester;

Except you mean with obstinate repulse
To slay your sovereign and destroy the realm.

You see what mischief, and what murder too,

Hath been enacted through your enmity;
Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.

Glo. Compassion on the King commands me stoop,

Or I would see his heart out ere the priest
Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my Lord of Winchester, the Duke

Hath banish'd moody discontented fury,
As by his smoothed brows it doth appear;
Why look you still so stern and tragical?

Glo. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.

King. Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach

That malice was a great and grievous sin;
And will not you maintain the thing you teach,

But prove a chief offender in the same?

War. Sweet King! The Bishop hath a kindly gird.

For shame, my Lord of Winchester, relent;
What, shall a child instruct you what to do?

Win. Well, Duke of Gloucester, I will yield to thee;

Love for thy love and hand for hand I give.

Glo. [Aside] Ay, but, I fear me, with a hollow heart.—

See here, my friends and loving countrymen:

This token serveth for a flag of truce
Betwixt ourselves and all our followers.
So help me God, as I dissemble not!

Win. [Aside] So help me God, as I intend it not!

King. O loving uncle, kind Duke of Gloucester,

How joyful am I made by this contract!
Away, my masters! trouble us no more;
But join in friendship, as your lords have done.

1 Serv. Content: I'll to the surgeon's.

2 Serv. And so will I.

3 Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.

[Exeunt Servants, Mayor, &c.

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign ; 149

Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet
We do exhibit to your Majesty.

Glo. Well urg'd, my Lord of Warwick ;
for, sweet prince,

An if your Grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right ;
Especially for those occasions 155

At Eltham Place I told your Majesty.

King. And those occasions, uncle, were of force ;

Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is
That Richard be restored to his blood.

War. Let Richard be restored to his
blood ; 160

So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd.

Win. As will the rest, so willeth Winchester.

King. If Richard will be true, not that alone

But all the whole inheritance I give 164

That doth belong unto the house of York,
From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plan. Thy humble servant vows obedience

And humble service till the point of death.

King. Stoop then and set your knee against my foot ;

And in reguerdon of that duty done 170

I girt thee with the valiant sword of York.

Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created princely Duke of York.

Plan. And so thrive Richard as thy foes may fall !

And as my duty springs, so perish they 175

That grudge one thought against your Majesty !

All. Welcome, high Prince, the mighty
Duke of York !

Som. [Aside] Perish, base Prince, ignoble
Duke of York !

Glo. Now will it best avail your Majesty
To cross the seas and to be crown'd in
France ; 180

The presence of a king engenders love

Amongst his subjects and his loyal friends,
As it disanimates his enemies.

King. When Gloucester says the word,
King Henry goes ;

For friendly counsel cuts off many foes. 185

Glo. Your ships already are in readiness.
[Sennet. Flourish. Exeunt all but Exeter.

Exe. Ay, we may march in England or in France,

Not seeing what is likely to ensue.

This late dissension grown betwixt the peers

Burns under feigned ashes of forg'd love 190

And will at last break out into a flame ;

As fest' red members rot but by degree

Till bones and flesh and sinews fall away,

So will this base and envious discord breed.

And now I fear that fatal prophecy 195

Which in the time of Henry nam'd the Fifth

Was in the mouth of every sucking babe :
That Henry born at Monmouth should win
all, 198

And Henry born at Windsor should lose all.
Which is so plain that Exeter doth wish
His days may finish ere that hapless time.

[Exit.

SCENE II. France. Before Rouen.

Enter LA PUCELLE disguis'd, with four Soldiers dressed like Countrymen, with sacks upon their backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the gates of Rouen,
Through which our policy must make a breach.

Take heed, be wary how you place your
words ;

Talk like the vulgar sort of market-men
That come to gather money for their corn. 5
If we have entrance, as I hope we shall,
And that we find the slothful watch but weak,

I'll by a sign give notice to our friends,
That Charles the Dauphin may encounter
them.

1 Sold. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack
the city, 10

And we be lords and rulers over Rouen ;
Therefore we'll knock. [Knocks.

Watch. [Within] Qui est là ?

Puc. Paysans, pauvres gens de France—Poor market-folks that come to sell their corn. 15

Watch. Enter, go in ; the market-bell is rung.

Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground.

[La Pucelle, &c., enter the town.

Enter CHARLES, BASTARD, ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and Forces.

Char. Saint Denis bless this happy stratagem !

And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen.

Bast. Here ent'red Pucelle and her practisants ; 20

Now she is there, how will she specify
Here is the best and safest passage in ?

Alen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder tower ;

Which once discern'd shows that her meaning is—

No way to that, for weakness, which she ent'red. 25

Enter LA PUCELLE, on the top, thrusting out a torch burning.

Puc. Behold, this is the happy wedding torch

That joineth Rouen unto her countrymen,

But burning fatal to the Talbotites. [Exit.]

Bast. See, noble Charles, the beacon of our friend ;

The burning torch in yonder turret stands.

Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge,

A prophet to the fall of all our foes !

Alen. Defer no time, delays have dangerous ends ;

Enter, and cry ' The Dauphin ! ' presently, And then do execution on the watch.

[Alarum. Exeunt.]

An alarum. Enter TALBOT in an excursion.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears,

If Talbot but survive thy treachery.

Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress, Hath wrought this hellish mischief un-awares,

That hardly we escap'd the pride of France.

[Exit.]

An alarum ; excursions. BEDFORD brought in sick in a chair. Enter TALBOT and BURGUNDY without ; within, LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, BASTARD, ALENÇON, and REIGNIER, on the walls.

Puc. Good morrow, gallants ! Want ye corn for bread ?

I think the Duke of Burgundy will fast Before he'll buy again at such a rate.

'Twas full of darnel—do you like the taste ? Bur. Scoff on, vile fiend and shameless courtesan.

I trust ere long to choke thee with thine own,

And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.

Char. Your Grace may starve, perhaps, before that time.

Bed. O, let no words, but deeds, revenge this treason !

Puc. What will you do, good grey-beard ? Break a lance,

And run a tilt at death within a chair ?

Tal. Foul fiend of France and hag of all despite,

Encompass'd with thy lustful paramours, Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age

And twit with cowardice a man half dead ? Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again,

Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Puc. Are ye so hot, sir ? Yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace ;

If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.

[The English party whisper together in council.]

God speed the parliament ! Who shall be the Speaker ?

Tal. Dare ye come forth and meet us in the field ?

Puc. Belike your lordship takes us then for fools,

To try if that our own be ours or no.

Tal. I speak not to that railing Hecate, But unto thee, Alerçon, and the rest.

Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out ?

Alen. Signior, no.

Tal. Signior, hang ! Base muleteers of France !

Like peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls,

And dare not take up arms like gentlemen.

Puc. Away, captains ! Let's get us from the walls ;

For Talbot means no goodness by his looks. God b'uy, my lord ; we came but to tell you

That we are here. [Exeunt from the walls.]

Tal. And there will we be too, ere it be long,

Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest fame ! Vow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house, Prick'd on by public wrongs sustain'd in France,

Either to get the town again or die ;

And I, as sure as English Henry lives

And as his father here was conqueror,

As sure as in this late-betrayed town

Great Cœur-de-lion's heart was buried—

So sure I swear to get the town or die.

Bur. My vows are equal partners with thy vows.

Tal. But ere we go, regard this dying prince,

The valiant Duke of Bedford. Come, my lord,

We will bestow you in some better place, Fitter for sickness and for crazy age.

Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me ;

Here will I sit before the walls of Rouen, And will be partner of your weal or woe.

Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade you.

Bed. Not to be gone from hence ; for once I read

That stout Pendragon in his litter sick Came to the field, and vanquished his foes.

Methinks I should revive the soldiers' hearts,

Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast ! Then be it so. Heavens keep old Bedford safe !

And now no more ado, brave Burgundy, But gather we our forces out of hand

And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Exeunt against the town all but Bedford and attendants.]

An alarum ; excursions. Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE, and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste ?

Fast. Whither away ? To save myself by flight :

We are like to have the overthrow again.

Cap. What! Will you fly, and leave Lord Talbot?

Fast. Ay,

All the Talbots in the world, to save my life. [Exit.

Cap. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee! [Exit into the town.

Retreat; excursions. LA PUCELLE, ALENÇON, and CHARLES fly.

Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when heaven please, 110

For I have seen our enemies' overthrow. What is the trust or strength of foolish man?

They that of late were daring with their scoffs

Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

[Bedford dies and is carried in by two in his chair.

An alarum. Re-enter TALBOT, BURGUNDY, and the Rest.

Tal. Lost and recovered in a day again! This is a double honour, Burgundy. 116

Yet heavens have glory for this victory! Bur. Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy

Enshrines thee in his heart, and there erects Thy noble deeds as valour's monuments. 120

Tal. Thanks, gentle Duke. But where is Pucelle now?

I think her old familiar is asleep.

Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his gleeks?

What, all amot? Rouen hangs her head for grief

That such a valiant company are fled. 125

Now will we take some order in the town,

Placing therein some expert officers;

And then depart to Paris to the King,

For there young Henry with his nobles lie.

Bur. What wills Lord Talbot pleaseth Burgundy. 130

Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget The noble Duke of Bedford, late deceas'd,

But see his exequies fulfill'd in Rouen.

A braver soldier never couched lance,

A gentler heart did never sway in court; 135

But kings and mightiest potentates must die,

For that's the end of human misery.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. The plains near Rouen.

Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD, ALENÇON, LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Puc. Dismay not, Princes, at this accident,

Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered.

Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,

For things that are not to be remedied. Let frantic Talbot triumph for a while 5 And like a peacock sweep along his tail; We'll pull his plumes and take away his train,

If Dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd.

Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto,

And of thy cunning had no diffidence; 10 One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.

Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies,

And we will make thee famous through the world.

Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place,

And have thee reverenc'd like a blessed saint. 15

Employ thee, then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Puc. Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devise:

By fair persuasions, mix'd with sug'red words,

We will entice the Duke of Burgundy To leave the Talbot and to follow us. 20

Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do that,

France were no place for Henry's warriors; Nor should that nation boast it so with us,

But be extirped from our provinces.

Alen. For ever should they be expuls'd from France, 25

And not have title of an earldom here.

Puc. Your honours shall perceive how I will work

To bring this matter to the wished end.

[Drum sounds afar off.

Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive

Their powers are marching unto Parisward. 30

Here sound an English march. Enter, and pass over at a distance, TALBOT and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,

And all the troops of English after him.

French march. Enter the DUKE OF BURGUNDY and his Forces.

Now in the rearward comes the Duke and his.

Fortune in favour makes him lag behind. Summon a parley; we will talk with him.

[Trumpets sound a parley.

Char. A parley with the Duke of Burgundy! 36

Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy?

Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Bur. What say'st thou, Charles ? for I am marching hence.

Char. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words. 40

Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France !

Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur. Speak on ; but be not over-tedious.

Puc. Look on thy country, look on fertile France,

And see the cities and the towns defac'd 45

By wasting ruin of the cruel foe ;

As looks the mother on her lowly babe

When death doth close his tender dying eyes,

See, see the pining malady of France ;

Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds, 50

Which thy thyself hast given her woeful breast.

O, turn thy edged sword another way ;

Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help !

One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom

Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore. 55

Return thee therefore with a flood of tears,

And wash away thy country's stained spots.

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words,

Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Put. Besides, all French and France exclaims on thee, 60

Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny.

Who join'st thou with but with a lordly nation

That will not trust thee but for profit's sake ?

When Talbot hath set footing once in France,

And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill, 65

Who then but English Henry will be lord,

And thou be thrust out like a fugitive ?

Call we to mind—and mark but this for proof :

Was not the Duke of Orleans thy foe ?

And was he not in England prisoner ? 70

But when they heard he was thine enemy

They set him free without his ransom paid,

In spite of Burgundy and all his friends.

See then, thou fight'st against thy country-men,

And join'st with them will be thy slaughter-men. 75

Come, come, return ; return, thou wandering lord ;

Charles and the rest will take thee in their arms.

Bur. I am vanquished ; these haughty words of hers

Have batt' red me like roaring cannon-shot

And made me almost yield upon my knees. Forgive me, country, and sweet country-men ! 80

And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace. My forces and my power of men are yours ; So, farewell, Talbot ; I'll no longer trust thee.

Puc. Done like a Frenchman—[Aside], turn and turn again. 85

Char. Welcome, brave Duke ! Thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bast. And doth beget new courage in our breasts.

Alen. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part in this,

And doth deserve a coronet of gold.

Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers, 90

And seek how we may prejudice the foe. [Exeunt

SCENE IV. Paris. The palace.

Enter the KING, GLOUCESTER, WINCHESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK, EXETER, VERNON, BASSET, and Others To them, with his Soldiers, TALBOT.

Tal. My gracious Prince, and honourable peers,

Hearing of your arrival in this realm,

I have awhile given truce unto my wars

To do my duty to my sovereign ;

In sign whereof, this arm that hath reclaim'd

To your obedience fifty fortresses,

Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength,

Beside five hundred prisoners of esteem,

Lets fall his sword before your Highness feet,

And with submissive loyalty of heart 100

Ascribes the glory of his conquest got

First to my God and next unto your Grace [Kneels

King. Is this the Lord Talbot, uncle Gloucester,

That hath so long been resident in France,

Glo. Yes, if it please your Majesty, my liege. 105

King. Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord !

When I was young, as yet I am not old,

I do remember how my father said

A stouter champion never handled sword,

Long since we were resolved of your truth,

Your faithful service, and your toil in war ;

Yet never have you tasted our reward, 110

Or been reguerdon'd with so much as thanks,

Because till now we never saw your face.

Therefore stand up ; and for these good deserts 115

We here create you Earl of Shrewsbury ;

and in our coronation take your place.

[Sennet. Flourish. Exeunt all but Vernon and Basset.]

Ver. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea,

Disgracing of these colours that I wear
In honour of my noble Lord of York—³⁰ Darest thou maintain the former words thou spok'st?

Bas. Yes, sir; as well as you dare patronage

The envious barking of your saucy tongue against my lord the Duke of Somerset.

Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is.³⁵

Bas. Why, what is he? As good a man as York!

Ver. Hark ye: not so. In witness take ye that. [Strikes him.]

Bas. Villain, thou knowest the law of arms is such

That whoso draws a sword 'tis present
death,

Or else this blow should broach thy dearest blood.⁴⁰

But I'll unto his Majesty and crave
may have liberty to venge this wrong;

When thou shalt see I'll meet thee to thy
cost.

Ver. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as you;⁴⁴

And, after, meet you sooner than you would. [Exeunt.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Paris. The palace.

Enter the KING, GLOUCESTER, WINCHESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK, TALBOT, EXETER, the GOVERNOR of Paris, and Others.

Glo. Lord Bishop, set the crown upon his
head.

Win. God save King Henry, of that name
the Sixth!

Glo. Now, Governor of Paris, take your oath— [Governor kneels.]

That you elect no other king but him, Esteem none friends but such as are his friends,⁵

And none your foes but such as shall pretend

Malicious practices against his state.
His shall ye do, so help you righteous

God!

[Exeunt Governor and his Train.]

Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais,

So haste unto your coronation,¹⁰
That letter was deliver'd to my hands, Writ to your Grace from th' Duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy and
thee!

I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee
next

To tear the Garter from thy craven's leg,¹⁵
[Plucking it off.]

Which I have done, because unworthily
Thou wast installed in that high degree.

Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest:
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,¹⁹

When but in all I was six thousand strong,
And that the French were almost ten to one,

Before we met or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty squire did run away;

In which assault we lost twelve hundred
men;

Myself and divers gentlemen beside²⁵
Were there surpris'd and taken prisoners.

Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss,
Or whether that such cowards ought to wear

This ornament of knighthood—yea or no.

Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous³⁰

And ill beseming any common man,
Much more a knight, a captain, and a leader.

Tal. When first this order was ordain'd,
my lords,

Knights of the Garter were of noble birth, Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty

courage,³⁵
Such as were grown to credit by the wars;
Not fearing death nor shrinking for distress,

But always resolute in most extremes.

He then that is not furnish'd in this sort
Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight,

Profaning this most honourable order,⁴¹
And should, if I were worthy to be judge,

Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.

King. Stain to thy countrymen, thou hear'st thy doom.⁴⁵

Be packing, therefore, thou that wast a
knight;

Henceforth we banish thee on pain of death.
[Exit Fastolfe.]

And now, my Lord Protector, view the letter

Sent from our uncle Duke of Burgundy.

Glo. [Viewing the superscription] What means his Grace, that he hath chang'd his style?⁵⁰

No more but plain and bluntly 'To the
King'!

Hath he forgot he is his sovereign?
Or doth this churlish superscription

Pretend some alteration in good-will?
What's here? [Reads] 'I have, upon especial cause,⁵⁵

Mov'd with compassion of my country's wreck,

Together with the pitiful complaints
Of such as your oppression feeds upon,

Forsaken your pernicious faction,

And join'd with Charles, the rightful King of France.' 60

O monstrous treachery ! Can this be so—
That in alliance, amity, and oaths,
There should be found such false dissembling guile ?

King. What ! Doth my uncle Burgundy revolt ?

Glo. He doth, my lord, and is become your foe. 65

King. Is that the worst this letter doth contain ?

Glo. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.

King. Why then Lord Talbot there shall talk with him

And give him chastisement for this abuse.
How say you, my lord, are you not content ?

Tal. Content, my liege ! Yes ; but that I am prevented, 71

I should have begg'd I might have been
employ'd.

King. Then gather strength and march unto him straight ;

Let him perceive how ill we brook his
treason,

And what offence it is to flout his friends. 75

Tal. I go, my lord, in heart desiring still
You may behold confusion of your foes.

[Exit.

Enter VERNON and BASSET.

Ver. Grant me the combat, gracious
sovereign.

Bas. And me, my lord, grant me the combat too.

York. This is my servant : hear him, noble Prince. 80

Som. And this is mine : sweet Henry,
favour him.

King. Be patient, lords, and give them leave to speak.

Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim,

And wherefore crave you combat, or with whom ?

Ver. With him, my lord ; for he hath done me wrong. 85

Bas. And I with him ; for he hath done me wrong.

King. What is that wrong whereof you both complain ?

First let me know, and then I'll answer you.

Bas. Crossing the sea from England into
France,

This fellow here, with envious carping
tongue, 90

Upbraided me about the rose I wear,
Saying the sanguine colour of the leaves
Did represent my master's blushing cheeks
When stubbornly he did repugn the truth
About a certain question in the law 95
Argu'd betwixt the Duke of York and him ;
With other vile and ignominious terms—

In contutation of which rude reproach
And in defence of my lord's worthiness,
I crave the benefit of law of arms. 100

Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord ;
For though he seem with forged quaint conceit

To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him
And he first took exceptions at this badge
Pronouncing that the paleness of this flower Bewray'd the faintness of my master's
heart.

York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left ?

Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out, 109

Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it.

King. Good Lord, what madness rules in brainsick men,

When for so slight and frivolous a cause
Such factious emulations shall arise !

Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,
Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.

York. Let this dissension first be tried by
fight, 116

And then your Highness shall command a
peace.

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us
alone ;

Betwixt ourselves let us decide it then.

York. There is my pledge ; accept it.
Somerset. 120

Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.

Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord.

Glo. Confirm it so ? Confounded be your strife ;

And perish ye, with your audacious prate !
Presumptuous vassals, are you not asham'd ? 125

With this immodest clamorous outrage
To trouble and disturb the King and us ?

And you, my lords—methinks you do not
well

To bear with their perverse objections, Much less to take occasion from their
mouths 130

To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves.
Let me persuade you take a better course.

Exe. It grieves his Highness. Good my lords, be friends.

King. Come hither, you that would be combatants :

Henceforth I charge you, as you love our
favour, 135

Quite to forget this quarrel and the cause.
And you, my lords, remember where we are :

In France, amongst a fickle wavering
nation ;

If they perceive dissension in our looks
And that within ourselves we disagree, 140

How will their grudging stomachs be pro-vok'd

To wilful disobedience, and rebel !

Beside, what infamy will there arise
When foreign princes shall be certified
That for a toy, a thing of no regard, 145
King Henry's peers and chief nobility Destroy'd themselves and lost the realm of France!

O, think upon the conquest of my father,
My tender years; and let us not forgo
That for a trifle that was bought with
blood! 150

Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife.

I see no reason, if I wear this rose,

[Putting on a red rose.]

That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerset than York:
Both are my kinsmen, and I love them
both. 155

As well they may upbraid me with my
crown,

Because, forsooth, the King of Scots is
crown'd.

But your discretions better can persuade
Than I am able to instruct or teach; 159

And, therefore, as we hither came in peace,
So let us still continue peace and love.

Cousin of York, we institute your Grace
To be our Regent in these parts of France.

And, good my Lord of Somerset, unite Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot; 165

And like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,

Go cheerfully together and digest

Your angry choler on your enemies.

Ourselves, my Lord Protector, and the rest,
After some respite will return to Calais; 170

From thence to England, where I hope ere
long

To be presented by your victories

With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but York, Warwick, Exeter, Vernon.]

War. My Lord of York, I promise you,
the King

Prettily, methought, did play the orator.

York. And so he did; but yet I like it
not, 176

In that he wears the badge of Somerset.

War. Tush; that was but his fancy; blame him not;

I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought
no harm.

York. An if I wist he did—but let it rest;
Other affairs must now be managed. 181

[Exeunt all but Exeter.]

Exe. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice;

For had the passions of thy heart burst out,
I fear we should have seen decipher'd there
More rancorous spite, more furious raging
broils, 185

Than yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd.

But howsoe'er, no simple man that sees

This jarring discord of nobility,
This shouldering of each other in the court,
His factious bandying of their favourites,
But that it doth presage some ill event.
'Tis much when sceptres are in children's
hands;

But more when envy breeds unkind
division: 193

There comes the ruin, there begins confusion. [Exit.]

SCENE II. France. Before Bordeaux.

Enter TALBOT, with trumpet and drum.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bordeaux, trumpeter;

Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds a parley. Enter, aloft, the General of the French, and Others.

English John Talbot, Captains, calls you
forth,

Servant in arms to Harry King of England;
And thus he would—Open your city gates,

Be humble to us, call my sovereign yours
And do him homage as obedient subjects,

And I'll withdraw me and my bloody
power; 8

But if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,

Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing
fire;

Who in a moment even with the earth Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,

If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of
death, 15

Our nation's terror and their bloody scourge!
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.

On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well fortified,

And strong enough to issue out and fight. 20

If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee.

On either hand thee there are squadrons
pitch'd

To wall thee from the liberty of flight,
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress

But death doth front thee with apparent spoil 26

And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacra-
ment

To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.

Lo, there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant
man, 31

Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit!
This is the latest glory of thy praise

That I, thy enemy, due thee withal;
For ere the glass that now begins to run 35

Finish the process of his sandy hour,

These eyes that see thee now well coloured Shall see thee withered, bloody, pale, and dead. [Drum afar off.
Hark! hark! The Dauphin's drum, a warning bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul; 40
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.
[Exit General.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy.
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.

O, negligent and heedless discipline! 44
How are we park'd and bounded in a pale—
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be then in blood;
Not rascal-like to fall down with a pinch,
But rather, moody-mad and desperate
stags, 50

Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel

And make the cowards stand aloof at bay.
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my
friends.

God and Saint George, Talbot and England's right, 55

Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!
[Exeunt.

SCENE III. Plains in Gascony.

Enter YORK, with trumpet and many Soldiers. A Messenger meets him.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd
again
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

Mess. They are return'd, my lord, and give it out
That he is march'd to Bordeaux with his power

To fight with Talbot; as he march'd along,
By your espials were discovered 6
Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led,

Which join'd with him and made their march for Bordeaux.

York. A plague upon that villain
Somerset

That thus delays my promised supply 10
Of horsemen that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid,
And I am louted by a traitor villain
And cannot help the noble chevalier.
God comfort him in this necessity! 15
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English strength,
Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron 20
And hemm'd about with grim destruction.

To Bordeaux, warlike Duke! to Bordeaux,
York!

Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's honour.

York. O God, that Somerset, who in proud heart

Doth stop my cornets, were in Talbot's
place! 25

So should we save a valiant gentleman
By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.

Mad ire and wrathful fury makes me weep
That thus we die while remiss traitors sleep.

Lucy. O, send some succour to the distress'd lord! 30

York. He dies; we lose; I break my warlike word.

We mourn: France smiles. We lose: they daily get—

All long of this vile traitor Somerset.

Lucy. Then God take mercy on brave Talbot's soul,

And on his son, young John, who two hours
since 35

I met in travel toward his warlike father.
This seven years did not Talbot see his son;

And now they meet where both their lives are done.

York. Alas, what joy shall noble Talbot
have 39

To bid his young son welcome to his grave?
Away! vexation almost stops my breath,

That sund' red friends greet in the hour of
death.

Lucy, farewell; no more my fortune care
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man

Maine, Blois, Poitiers, and Tours, are won
away 43

Long all of Somerset and his delay.

[Exit with Forces

Lucy. Thus, while the vulture of sedition Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders,

Sleeping neglectation doth betray to loss 46
The conquest of our scarce-cold conqueror

That ever-living man of memory, Henry the Fifth. Whiles they each other cross,

Lives, honours, lands, and all, hurry to loss

[Exit

SCENE IV. Other plains of Gascony.

Enter SOMERSET, with his Forces; and Officer of Talbot's with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them
now.

This expedition was by York and Talbot
Too rashly plotted; all our general force

Might with a sally of the very town
Be buckled with. The over-daring Talbot

Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour
By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure.

York set him on to fight and die in sham

That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.

Off. Here is Sir William Lucy, who with me¹⁰
Set from our o'er-match'd forces forth for aid.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Som. How now, Sir William! Whither were you sent?

Lucy. Whither, my lord! From bought and sold Lord Talbot,

Who, ring'd about with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset¹⁵
To beat assailing death from his weak legions;

And whiles the honourable captain there
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs

And, in advantage ling'ring, looks for rescue,
You, his false hopes, the trust of England's honour,²⁰

Keep off aloof with worthless emulation.
Let not your private discord keep away
The levied succours that should lend him aid,
While he, renowned noble gentleman,
Yield up his life unto a world of odds.²⁵
Orleans the Bastard, Charles, Burgundy, Alençon, Reignier, compass him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default.

Som. York set him on; York should have sent him aid.

Lucy. And York as fast upon your Grace exclaims,³⁰

Swearing that you withhold his levied host,
Collected for this expedition.

Som. York lies; he might have sent and had the horse.

I owe him little duty and less love,
And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending.³⁵

Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force of France,

Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot.

Never to England shall he bear his life,
But dies betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will dispatch the horsemen straight;⁴⁰

Within six hours they will be at his aid.

Lucy. Too late comes rescue; he is ta'en or slain,

For fly he could not if he would have fled;
And fly would Talbot never, though he might.

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot, then, adieu!⁴⁵

Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The English camp near Bordeaux.

Enter TALBOT and JOHN his son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for thee

To tutor thee in stratagems of war,
That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd

When sapless age and weak unable limbs
Should bring thy father to his drooping chair.⁵

But—O malignant and ill-boding stars!—
Now thou art come unto a feast of death,
A terrible and unavowed danger;

Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse,⁹

And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sudden flight. Come, dally not, be gone.

John. Is my name Talbot, and am I your son?

And shall I fly? O, if you love my mother,
Dishonour not her honourable name,

To make a bastard and a slave of me!¹⁵
The world will say he is not Talbot's blood
That basely fled when noble Talbot stood.

Tal. Fly to revenge my death, if I be slain.

John. He that flies so will ne'er return again.

Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to die.²⁰

John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly.

Your loss is great, so your regard should be;
My worth unknown, no loss is known in me;
Upon my death the French can little boast;
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost.
Flight cannot stain the honour you have won;²⁶

But mine it will, that no exploit have done;
You fled for vantage, every one will swear;
But if I bow, they'll say it was for fear.

There is no hope that ever I will stay³⁰
If the first hour I shrink and run away.

Here, on my knee, I beg mortality,
Rather than life preserv'd with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb?

John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb.³⁵

Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee go.

John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee.

John. No part of him but will be shame in me.

Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not lose it.⁴⁰

John. Yes, your renowned name; shall flight abuse it?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.

If death be so apparent, then both fly.

Tal. And leave my followers here to fight and die?⁴⁵

My age was never tainted with such shame.

John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame ?

No more can I be severed from your side
Than can yourself yourself in twain divide.
Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I ; 50
For live I will not if my father die.

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair son,

Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.
Come, side by side together live and die ; 54
And soul with soul from France to heaven
fly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. A field of battle.

Alarum : excursions wherein JOHN TALBOT is hemm'd about, and TALBOT rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory ! Fight, soldiers, fight.

The Regent hath with Talbot broke his word
And left us to the rage of France his sword.
Where is John Talbot ? Pause and take thy breath ;

I gave thee life and rescu'd thee from
death. 5

John. O, twice my father, twice am I thy
son !

The life thou gav'st me first was lost and
done

Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate,
To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire, 10

It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire

Of bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age, Quicken'd with youthful spleen and warlike
rage,

Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy, 14
And from the pride of Gallia rescued thee.
The ireful bastard Orleans, that drew blood
From thee, my boy, and had the maiden-
hood

Of thy first fight, I soon encountered 18
And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed
Some of his bastard blood ; and in disgrace
Bespoke him thus : ' Contaminated, base,
And misbegotten blood I spill of thine, Mean and right poor, for that pure blood
of mine

Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy '.

Here purposing the Bastard to destroy, 25 Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care ;

Art thou not weary, John ? How dost thou fare ?

Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly,
Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry ?
Fly, to revenge my death when I am dead :
The help of one stands me in little stead.

O, too much folly is it, well I wot, 32

To hazard all our lives in one small boat !
If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,
To-morrow I shall die with mickle age. 35
By me they nothing gain an if I stay :
'Tis but the short'ning of my life one day.

In thee thy mother dies, our household's
name,

My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame.

All these and more we hazard by thy stay ; 40
All these are sav'd if thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart ;

These words of yours draw life-blood from
my heart.

On that advantage, bought with such a shame, 44

To save a paltry life and slay bright fame,
Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly,
The coward horse that bears me fall and
die !

And like me to the peasant boys of France,
To be shame's scorn and subject of mis-chance !

Surely, by all the glory you have won, 50
An if I fly, I am not Talbot's son ;

Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot ;
If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desp'rate sire of Crete,

Thou Icarus ; thy life to me is sweet. 55
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side

And, commendable prov'd, let's die in pride. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Another part of the field.

Alarum ; excursions. Enter old TALBOT led by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life ? Mine own is gone.

O, where's your young Talbot ? Where is valiant John ?

Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at
thee.

When he perceiv'd me shrink and on my knee, 5

His bloody sword he brandish'd over me
And like a hungry lion did commence

Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience
But when my angry guardant stood alone

Tend'ring my ruin and assail'd of none, 10
Dizzy-ey'd fury and great rage of heart

Suddenly made him from my side to start
Into the clust'ring battle of the French ;

And in that sea of blood my boy did drench
His overmounting spirit ; and there died, 15

My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of John Talbot.

Serv. O my dear lord, lo where your son is borne !

Tal. Thou antic Death, which laugh'st us here to scorn,
Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuity, 20
Two Talbots, winged through the lither
sky,
In thy despite shall scape mortality.
O thou whose wounds become hard-favoured Death, Speak to thy father ere thou yield thy
breath!
Brave Death by speaking, whether he will or no; 25
Imagine him a Frenchman and thy foe.
Poor boy! he smiles, methinks, as who should say,
Had Death been French, then Death had died to-day.
Come, come, and lay him in his father's
arms.
My spirit can no longer bear these harms. 30 Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have,
Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave. [Dies.

Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, BURGUNDY, BASTARD, LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in,
We should have found a bloody day of this.
Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging wood, 35
Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's
blood!
Puc. Once I encount' red him, and thus
I said:
'Thou maiden youth, be vanquish'd by a maid'.
But with a proud majestic high scorn
He answer'd thus: 'Young Talbot was not born 40

To be the pillage of a giglot wench'.
So, rushing in the bowels of the French,
He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.
Bur. Doubtless he would have made a noble knight.
See where he lies inhearsed in the arms 45
Of the most bloody nurser of his harms!

Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones asunder,
Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder.

Char. O, no; forbear! For that which we have fled
During the life, let us not wrong it dead. 50

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY, attended; a French Herald preceding.

Lucy. Herald, conduct me to the Dauphin's tent,
To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the
day.

Char. On what submissive message art thou sent?

Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! 'Tis a mere French word: 54
We English warriors wot not what it means.
I come to know what prisoners thou hast
ta'en,
And to survey the bodies of the dead.

Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? Hell our prison is.
But tell me whom thou seek'st.

Lucy. But where's the great Alcides of
the field, 63

Valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, Created for his rare success in arms Great Earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence,

Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield, Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of Alton, 65

Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Sheffield,

The thrice victorious Lord of Falconbridge,
Knight of the noble order of Saint George,
Worthy Saint Michael, and the Golden Fleece,

Great Marshal to Henry the Sixth 70
Of all his wars within the realm of France?

Puc. Here's a silly-stately style indeed!
The Turk, that two and fifty kingdoms hath,
Writes not so tedious a style as this.

Him that thou magnifi'st with all these titles, 75

Stinking and fly-blown lies here at our feet.

Lucy. Is Talbot slain—the Frenchmen's
only scourge,

Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis?
O, were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd,
That I in rage might shoot them at your faces! 80

O that I could but call these dead to life!
It were enough to fright the realm of France.

Were but his picture left amongst you here,
It would amaze the proudest of you all.

Give me their bodies, that I may bear them
hence 85

And give them burial as beseems their worth.

Puc. I think this upstart is old Talbot's
ghost,

He speaks with such a proud commanding
spirit.

For God's sake, let him have them; to keep them here, 89

They would but stink, and putrefy the air.
Char. Go, take their bodies hence.

Lucy. I'll bear them hence; but from their ashes shall be rear'd

A phoenix that shall make all France afeard.
Char. So we be rid of them, do with them what thou wilt. 94

And now to Paris in this conquering vein!
All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain.

[Exeunt.

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. London. The palace.

Sennet. Enter the KING, GLOUCESTER, and EXETER.

King. Have you perus'd the letters from the Pope,
The Emperor, and the Earl of Armagnac?
Glo. I have, my lord; and their intent is this:

They humbly sue unto your Excellence
To have a godly peace concluded of Between the realms of England and of France.

King. How doth your Grace affect their motion?

Glo. Well, my good lord, and as the only means
To stop effusion of our Christian blood
And stablish quietness on every side.

King. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought

It was both impious and unnatural
That such immorality and bloody strife
Should reign among professors of one faith.

Glo. Beside, my lord, the sooner to effect
And surer bind this knot of amity,
The Earl of Armagnac, near knit to Charles,
A man of great authority in France,
Proffers his only daughter to your Grace
In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry.

King. Marriage, uncle! Alas, my years are young!

And fitter is my study and my books
Than wanton dalliance with a paramour.
Yet call th' ambassadors, and, as you please,
So let them have their answers every one.
I shall be well content with any choice
Tends to God's glory and my country's weal.

Enter WINCHESTER in Cardinal's habit as CARDINAL BEAUFORT, the Papal Legate, and two Ambassadors.

Exe. What! Is my Lord of Winchester install'd

And call'd unto a cardinal's degree?
Then I perceive that will be verified
Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesy:
'If once he come to be a cardinal,
He'll make his cap co-equal with the crown'.

King. My Lords Ambassadors, your several suits

Have been consider'd and debated on.
Your purpose is both good and reasonable,
And therefore are we certainly resolv'd
To draw conditions of a friendly peace,
Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean
Shall be transported presently to France.

Glo. And for the proffer of my lord your master,

I have inform'd his Highness so at large,
As, liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,
Her beauty, and the value of her dower,
He doth intend she shall be England's Queen.

King. [To Ambassador] In argument and proof of which contract,
Bear her this jewel, pledge of my affection.
And so, my Lord Protector, see them guarded

And safely brought to Dover; where, inshipp'd,

Commit them to the fortune of the sea.
[Exeunt all but Winchester and the Legate.]

Win. Stay, my Lord Legate; you shall first receive

The sum of money which I promised Should be delivered to his Holiness
For clothing me in these grave ornaments.

Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure.

Win. [Aside] Now Winchester will not submit, I trow,

Or be inferior to the proudest peer.

Humphrey of Gloucester, thou shalt well perceive

That neither in birth or for authority
The Bishop will be overborne by thee.

I'll either make thee stoop and bend thy knee,

Or sack this country with a mutiny.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter CHARLES, BURGUNDY, ALENÇON, BASTARD, REIGNIER, LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits:

'Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt
And turn again unto the warlike French.

Alen. Then march to Paris, royal Charles of France,

And keep not back your powers in dalliance.

Puc. Peace be amongst them, if they turn to us;

Else ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter a Scout.

Scout. Success unto our valiant general,
And happiness to his accomplices!

Char. What tidings send our scouts? I prithee speak.

Scout. The English army, that divided was

Into two parties, is now conjoin'd in one,
And means to give you battle presently.

Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is;

But we will presently provide for them.

Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there.

Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.

Puc. Of all base passions fear is most accurs'd.

Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine,

Let Henry fret and all the world repine. ²⁰

Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Before Angiers.

Alarum; excursions. Enter LA PUCELLE.

Puc. The Regent conquers and the Frenchmen fly.

Now help, ye charming spells and periapts; And ye choice spirits that admonish me And give me signs of future accidents;

[Thunder.]

You speedy helpers that are substitutes ⁵ Under the lordly monarch of the north, Appear and aid me in this enterprise!

Enter Fiends.

This speedy and quick appearance argues proof

Of your accustom'd diligence to me.

Now, ye familiar spirits that are cull'd ¹⁰

Out of the powerful regions under earth,

Help me this once, that France may get the field. [They walk and speak not.]

O, hold me not with silence over-long!

Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,

I'll lop a member off and give it you ¹⁵

In earnest of a further benefit,

So you do condescend to help me now.

[They hang their heads.]

No hope to have redress? My body shall Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit.

[They shake their heads.]

Cannot my body nor blood sacrifice ²⁰

Entreat you to your wonted futherance?

Then take my soul—my body, soul, and all,

Before that England give the French the foil. [They depart.]

See! they forsake me. Now the time is come

That France must vail her lofty-plumed crest ²⁵

And let her head fall into England's lap.

My ancient incantations are too weak,

And hell too strong for me to buckle with.

Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust. [Exit.]

Excursions. Enter French and English, fighting. LA PUCELLE and YORK fight hand to hand; La Pucelle is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast. ³⁰

Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms,

And try if they can gain your liberty.

A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace!

See how the ugly witch doth bend her brows

As if, with Circe, she would change my shape! ³⁵

Puc. Chang'd to a worser shape thou canst not be.

York. O, Charles the Dauphin is a proper man:

No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee!

And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd ⁴⁰ By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!

York. Fell banning hag; enchantress, hold thy tongue.

Puc. I prithee give me leave to curse awhile.

York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake. [Exeunt.]

Alarum. Enter SUFFOLK, with MARGARET in his hand.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner. [Gazes on her.]

O fairest beauty, do not fear nor fly! ⁴⁶

For I will touch thee but with reverent hands;

I kiss these fingers for eternal peace, And lay them gently on thy tender side.

Who art thou? Say, that I may honour thee. ⁵⁰

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a king,

The King of Naples—whosoe'er thou art.

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.

Be not offended, nature's miracle, Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me. ⁵⁵

So doth the swan her downy cygnets save, Keeping them prisoner underneath her wings.

Yet, if this servile usage once offend, Go and be free again as Suffolk's friend.

[She is going.]

O, stay! [Aside] I have no power to let her pass; ⁶⁰

My hand would free her, but my heart says no.

As plays the sun upon the glassy streams, Twinkling another counterfeited beam,

So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes. Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak.

I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind. Fie, de la Pole! disable not thyself;

Hast not a tongue? Is she not here thy prisoner?

Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight? Ay, beauty's princely majesty is such ⁷⁰

Confounds the tongue and makes the senses rough.

Mar. Say, Earl of Suffolk, if thy name be so,

What ransom must I pay before I pass?

For I perceive I am thy prisoner.

Suf. [Aside] How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit, 75

Before thou make a trial of her love?

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? What ransom must I pay?

Suf. [Aside] She's beautiful, and therefore to be woo'd;

She is a woman, therefore to be won.

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom—yea or no? 80

Suf. [Aside] Fond man, remember that thou hast a wife;

Then how can Margaret be thy paramour?

Mar. I were best leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. [Aside] There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card.

Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad. 85

Suf. [Aside] And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.

Suf. [Aside] I'll win this Lady Margaret. For whom?

Why, for my king! Tush, that's a wooden thing!

Mar. He talks of wood. It is some carpenter. 90

Suf. [Aside] Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,

And peace established between these realms.

But there remains a scruple in that too; For though her father be the King of Naples,

Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor, 95 And our nobility will scorn the match.

Mar. Hear ye, Captain—are you not at leisure?

Suf. [Aside] It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so much.

Henry is youthful, and will quickly yield.—Madam, I have a secret to reveal. 100

Mar. [Aside] What though I be enthralld? He seems a knight,

And will not any way dishonour me.

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.

Mar. [Aside] Perhaps I shall be rescu'd by the French;

And then I need not crave his courtesy. 105

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

Mar. [Aside] Tush! women have been captivate ere now.

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so?

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid pro quo.

Suf. Say, gentle Princess, would you not suppose 110

Your bondage happy, to be made a queen?

Mar. To be a queen in bondage is more vile

Than is a slave in base servility;

For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you, If happy England's royal king be free. 115

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto me?

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen,

To put a golden sceptre in thy hand And set a precious crown upon thy head,

If thou wilt condescend to be my—

Mar. What?

Suf. His love. 120

Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife

Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am

To woo so fair a dame to be his wife 125

And have no portion in the choice myself

How say you, madam? Are ye so content?

Mar. An if my father please, I am content.

Suf. Then call our captains and our colours forth!

And, madam, at your father's castle walls

We'll crave a parley to confer with him. 130

Sound a parley. Enter REIGNIER on the walls.

See, Reignier, see, thy daughter prisoner!

Reig. To whom?

Suf. To me.

Reig. Suffolk, what remedy?

I am a soldier and unapt to weep

Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord. 135

Consent, and for thy honour give consent,

Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king,

Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto;

And this her easy-held imprisonment 140

Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty.

Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?

Suf. Fair Margaret knows

That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign

Reig. Upon thy princely warrant I descend 145

To give thee answer of thy just demand.

[Exit Reignier from the walls.]

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming

Trumpets sound. Enter REIGNIER below.

Reig. Welcome, brave Earl, into our territories;

Command in Anjou what your Honour pleases.

Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child,

Fit to be made companion with a king.

What answer makes your Grace unto my suit? 150

Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth

To be the princely bride of such a lord,

Upon condition I may quietly

Enjoy mine own, the country Maine and Anjou, ¹⁵⁴

Free from oppression or the stroke of war,
My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.

Suf. That is her ransom; I deliver her.
And those two counties I will undertake
Your Grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again, in Henry's royal name,
As deputy unto that gracious king, ¹⁶¹
Give thee her hand for sign of plighted faith.

Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee
kingly thanks,

Because this is in traffic of a king. ¹⁶⁴
[Aside] And yet, methinks, I could be well
content

To be mine own attorney in this case.—
I'll over then to England with this news,
And make this marriage to be solemniz'd.
So, farewell, Reignier. Set this diamond safe

In golden palaces, as it becomes. ¹⁷⁰

Reig. I do embrace thee as I would embrace

The Christian prince, King Henry, were he
here.

Mar. Farewell, my lord. Good wishes,
praise, and prayers,

Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret.
[She is going.]

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam. But hark
you, Margaret— ¹⁷⁵

No princely commendations to my king?

Mar. Such commendations as becomes a
maid,

A virgin, and his servant, say to him.

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd and modestly directed.

But, madam, I must trouble you again— ¹⁸⁰
No loving token to his Majesty?

Mar. Yes, my good lord: a pure un-spotted heart,

Never yet taint with love, I send the King.

Suf. And this withal. [Kisses her.]

Mar. That for thyself—I will not so presume ¹⁸⁵

To send such peevish tokens to a king.

[Exeunt Reignier and Margaret.]

Suf. O, wert thou for myself! But,
Suffolk, stay;

Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth:
There Minotaurs and ugly treasons lurk.

Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise. ¹⁹⁰

Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount,

And natural graces that extinguish art;

Repeat their semblance often on the seas,

That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet, ¹⁹⁴

Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wonder. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. Camp of the Duke of York in Anjou.

Enter YORK, WARWICK, and Others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress, condema'd to burn.

Enter LA PUCELLE, guarded, and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan, this kills thy father's heart outright!

Have I sought every country far and near,
And, now it is my chance to find thee out,

Must I behold thy timeless cruel death? ⁵
Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die
with thee!

Puc. Decrepit miser! base ignoble
wretch!

I am descended of a gentler blood;
Thou art no father nor no friend of mine.

Shep. Out, out! My lords, an please you,
'tis not so; ¹⁰

I did beget her, all the parish knows.
Her mother liveth yet, can testify

She was the first fruit of my bach'lorship.

War. Graceless, wilt thou deny thy parentage?

York. This argues what her kind of life hath been— ¹⁵

Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes.

Shep. Fie, Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle!

God knows thou art a collop of my flesh;
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear.

Deny me not, I prithee, gentle Joan. ²⁰

Puc. Peasant, avaunt! You have suborn'd this man

Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.

Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest

The morn that I was wedded to her mother.

Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl. ²⁵

Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the
time

Of thy nativity. I would the milk
Thy mother gave thee when thou suck'dst

her breast

Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake.

Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs
a-field, ³⁰

I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee.

Dost thou deny thy father, cursed drab?

O, burn her, burn her! Hanging is too good. [Exit.]

York. Take her away; for she hath liv'd too long,

To fill the world with vicious qualities. ³⁵ Puc. First let me tell you whom you have condemn'd:

Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
But issued from the progeny of kings;

Virtuous and holy, chosen from above
By inspiration of celestial grace, ⁴⁰

To work exceeding miracles on earth.

I never had to do with wicked spirits.

But you, that are polluted with your lusts, Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents, 44

Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,
Because you want the grace that others
have,

You judge it straight a thing impossible To compass wonders but by help of devils.

No, misconceived! Joan of Arc hath been A virgin from her tender infancy, 50
Chaste and immaculate in very thought;
Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously
effus'd,

Will cry for vengeance at the gates of
heaven.

York. Ay, ay. Away with her to execution!

War. And hark ye, sirs; because she is a maid, 55

Spare for no fagots, let there be enow.
Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortened.

Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?

Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity 60
That warranteth by law to be thy privilege:
I am with child, ye bloody homicides;
Murder not then the fruit within my womb,
Although ye hale me to a violent death.

York. Now heaven forfend! The holy maid with child! 65

War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought:

Is all your strict preciseness come to this?

York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling.

I did imagine what would be her refuge.

War. Well, go to; we'll have no bastards
live; 70

Especially since Charles must father it.

Puc. You are deceiv'd; my child is none
of his:

It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love.

York. Alençon, that notorious Machiavel!
It dies, an if it had a thousand lives. 75

Puc. O, give me leave, I have deluded
you.

'Twas neither Charles nor yet the Duke I
nam'd,

But Reignier, King of Naples, that prevail'd.

War. A married man! That's most intolerable.

York. Why, here's a girl! I think she knows not well— 80

There were so many—whom she may accuse.

War. It's sign she hath been liberal and free.

York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure.

Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat and
thee.

Use no entreaty, for it is in vain. 85

Puc. Then lead me hence—with whom
I leave my curse:

May never glorious sun reflex his beams
Upon the country where you make abode;
But darkness and the gloomy shade of
death

Environ you, till mischief and despair 90 Drive you to break your necks or hang yourselves! [Exit, guarded.]

York. Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes,

Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter CARDINAL BEAUFORT, attended.

Car. Lord Regent, I do greet your Excellence

With letters of commission from the King.
For know, my lords, the states of Christendom, 96

Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous
broils,

Have earnestly implor'd a general peace
Betwixt our nation and the aspiring
French;

And here at hand the Dauphin and his train 100

Approacheth, to confer about some matter.

York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?

After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers,
That in this quarrel have been overthrown
And sold their bodies for their country's benefit, 105

Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?

Have we not lost most part of all the towns,
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,

Our great progenitors had conquered? 110
O Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief
The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York. If we conclude a
peace,

It shall be with such strict and severe covenants 114

As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, BASTARD, REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed

That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,

We come to be informed by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes 120

The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
By sight of these our baleful enemies.

Car. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted
thus:

That, in regard King Henry gives consent,
Of mere compassion and of lenity, 125

To ease your country of distressful war,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,

You shall become true liegemen to his crown ;

And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear

To pay him tribute and submit thyself, 130
Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must he be then as shadow of himself ?

Adorn his temples with a coronet
And yet, in substance and authority, 135
Retain but privilege of a private man ?
This proffer is absurd and reasonless.

Char. 'Tis known already that I am possess'd

With more than half the Gallian territories,
And therein reverenc'd for their lawful king. 140

Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd, Detract so much from that prerogative
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole ?
No, Lord Ambassador ; I'll rather keep
That which I have than, coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all. 141

York. Insulting Charles ! Hast thou by secret means

Us'd intercession to obtain a league,
And now the matter grows to compromise
Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison ? 150

Either accept the title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our king
And not of any challenge of desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. [To Charles] My lord, you do not well in obstinacy 155

To cavil in the course of this contract.
If once it be neglected, ten to one
We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. [To Charles] To say the truth, it is your policy 159

To save your subjects from such massacre
And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostility ;
And therefore take this compact of a truce,

Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

War. How say'st thou, Charles ? Shall our condition stand ? 165

Char. It shall ;
Only reserv'd, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison.

York. Then swear allegiance to his Majesty :

As thou art knight, never to disobey 170
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England—Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England. [Charles and the rest give tokens of fealty.]

So, now dismiss your army when ye please ;
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still, 174

For here we entertain a solemn peace.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. London. The palace.

Enter SUFFOLK, in conference with the KING, GLOUCESTER and EXETER.

King. Your wondrous rare description, noble Earl,

Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me.
Her virtues, graced with external gifts,
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart ;

And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts 5
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,

So am I driven by breath of her renown
Either to suffer shipwreck or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush, my good lord ! This superficial tale 10

Is but a preface of her worthy praise.
The chief perfections of that lovely dame,
Had I sufficient skill to utter them,
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit ; 15

And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full-replete with choice of all delights,
But with as humble lowliness of mind
She is content to be at your command—
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste 20

intents,

To love and honour Henry as her lord.
King. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume.

Therefore, my Lord Protector, give consent
That Marg'ret may be England's royal Queen.

Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin. 25

You know, my lord, your Highness is betroth'd

Unto another lady of esteem.

How shall we then dispense with that contract,

And not deface your honour with reproach ?

Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths ;
Or one that at a triumph, having vow'd 31
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
By reason of his adversary's odds :

A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence. 35

Glo. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that ?

Her father is no better than an earl,
Although in glorious titles he excel.

Suf. Yes, my lord, her father is a king,
The King of Naples and Jerusalem ; 40
And of such great authority in France
As his alliance will confirm our peace,
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glo. And so the Earl of Armagnac may do,

Because he is near kinsman unto Charles. 45

Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower ;

Where Reignier sooner will receive than give.

Suf. A dow'r, my lords ! Disgrace not so your king,

That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth and not for perfect
love. 50

Henry is able to enrich his queen,
And not to seek a queen to make him
rich.

So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,

As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.
Marriage is a matter of more worth 55
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship ;
Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,

Must be companion of his nuptial bed.
And therefore, lords, since he affects her most,

It most of all these reasons bindeth us 60
In our opinions she should be preferr'd ;
For what is wedlock forced but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife ?
Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,
And is a pattern of celestial peace. 65

Whom should we match with Henry, being a king,

But Margaret, that is daughter to a king ?
Her peerless feature, joined with her birth, Approves her fit for none but for a
king ; 69

Her valiant courage and undaunted spirit,
More than in women commonly is seen,
Will answer our hope in issue of a king ;
For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
Is likely to beget more conquerors,
If with a lady of so high resolve 75

As is fair Margaret he be link'd in love.
Then yield, my lords ; and here conclude
with me

That Margaret shall be Queen, and none but she.

King. Whether it be through force of your report,

My noble Lord of Suffolk, or for that 80
My tender youth was never yet attain'd
With any passion of inflaming love,
I cannot tell ; but this I am assur'd,
I feel such sharp dissension in my breast,
Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear,
As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
Take therefore shipping ; post, my lord, to
France ;

Agree to any covenants ; and procure
That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come To cross the seas to England, and be
crown'd 90

King Henry's faithful and anointed queen :
For your expenses and sufficient charge,
Among the people gather up a tenth.
Be gone, I say ; for till you do return
I rest perplexed with a thousand cares. 95
And you, good uncle, banish all offence :
If you do censure me by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excuse
This sudden execution of my will. 99
And so conduct me where, from company,
I may revolve and ruminate my grief.

[Exit.

Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Exeter.]

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd ; and thus he goes,

As did the youthful Paris once to Greece,
With hope to find the like event in love 105
But prosper better than the Trojan did.
Margaret shall now be Queen, and rule the
King ;

But I will rule both her, the King, and realm. [Exit.]

THE SCENE : England.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. London. The palace.

Flourish of trumpets; then hautboys. Enter the KING, DUKE HUMPHREY OF GLOUCESTER, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and CARDINAL BEAUFORT, on the one side; the QUEEN, SUFFOLK, YORK, SOMERSET, and BUCKINGHAM, on the other.

Suf. As by your high imperial Majesty I had in charge at my depart for France, As procurator to your Excellence, To marry Princess Margaret for your Grace;
So, in the famous ancient city Tours, 5
In presence of the Kings of France and Sicil,
The Dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and Alençon,
Seven earls, twelve barons, and twenty reverend bishops,
I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd;
And humbly now upon my bended knee, 10
In sight of England and her lordly peers,

Deliver up my title in the Queen
To your most gracious hands, that are the substance
Of that great shadow I did represent :
The happiest gift that ever marquis gave, 15
The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd.
King. Suffolk, arise. Welcome, Queen Margaret :
I can express no kinder sign of love
Than this kind kiss. O Lord, that lends me life, 19
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness !
For thou hast given me in this beauteous face
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.
Queen. Great King of England, and my gracious lord,
The mutual conference that my mind hath had, 25
By day, by night, waking and in my dreams,
In courtly company or at my beads,
With you, mine alder-lieft sovereign,
Makes me the bolder to salute my king
With ruder terms, such as my wit affords 30
And over-joy of heart doth minister.

King. Her sight did ravish, but her grace in speech,
Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me from wond'ring fall to weeping
joys,
Such is the fulness of my heart's content. 35 Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my
love.

All. [Kneeling] Long live Queen Margaret, England's happiness!

Queen. We thank you all. [Flourish.

Suf. My Lord Protector, so it please your
Grace,

Here are the articles of contracted peace 40
Between our sovereign and the French King Charles,

For eighteen months concluded by consent.

Glo. [Reads] 'Imprimis: It is agreed between the French King Charles and William de la Pole, Marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England,
that the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier King of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem, and crown her Queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing.

Item: That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered to the King her father—

[Lets the paper fall.

King. Uncle, how now!

Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord; 50
Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the
heart,

And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no
further.

King. Uncle of Winchester, I pray read
on.

Car. [Reads] 'Item: It is further agreed between them that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the King her father, and she sent over of the King of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry.'

King. They please us well. Lord Marquess, kneel down:

We here create thee the first Duke of Suffolk,

And girt thee with the sword. Cousin of
York, 60

We here discharge your Grace from being Regent

I' th' parts of France, till term of eighteen months

Be full expir'd. Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloucester, York, Buckingham, Somerset,
Salisbury, and Warwick; 65

We thank you all for this great favour
done

In entertainment to my princely queen.
Come, let us in, and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Suffolk.

Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state, 70

To you Duke Humphrey must unload his
grief—

Your grief, the common grief of all the land.

What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,

His valour, coin, and people, in the wars?
Did he so often lodge in open field, 75

In winter's cold and summer's parching heat,

To conquer France, his true inheritance?
And did my brother Bedford toil his wits

To keep by policy what Henry got?
Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham, 80

Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious
Warwick,

Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy?

Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and myself,
With all the learned Council of the realm,

Studied so long, sat in the Council House 85
Early and late, debating to and fro

How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe?

And had his Highness in his infancy Crowned in Paris, in despite of foes?

And shall these labours and these honours
die? 90

Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigil ance,

Your deeds of war, and all our counsel die?
O peers of England, shameful is this league!

Fatal this marriage, cancelling your fame, Blotting your names from books of 95

memory,
Razing the characters of your renown,

Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,
Undoing all, as all had never been!

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse,

This peroration with such circumstance? 100
For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it

still.

Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it if we can;
But now it is impossible we should.

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast, 104

Hath given the duchy of Anjou and Maine Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style

Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now, by the death of Him that died for all,

These counties were the keys of Normandy!
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant

son? 110

War. For grief that they are past recovery;

For were there hope to conquer them again
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears.

Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;

Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer;

And are the cities that I got with wounds
Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?
Mort Dieu!

York. For Suffolk's duke, may he be suffocate,

That dims the honour of this warlike isle!
France should have torn and rent my very heart

Before I would have yielded to this league.
I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold and dowries with their wives;

And our King Henry gives away his own
To match with her that brings no vantages.

Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,

That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth

For costs and charges in transporting her!
She should have stay'd in France, and starv'd in France,

Before—

Car. My Lord of Gloucester, now ye grow too hot:

It was the pleasure of my lord the King.

Glo. My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind;

'Tis not my speeches that you do dislike,
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye.
Rancour will out: proud prelate, in thy face

I see thy fury; if I longer stay
We shall begin our ancient bickerings.

Lordings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,

I prophesied France will be lost ere long.

[Exit.]

Car. So, there goes our Protector in a rage.

'Tis known to you he is mine enemy;
Nay, more, an enemy unto you all,

And no great friend, I fear me, to the King.

Consider, lords, he is the next of blood
And heir apparent to the English crown.

Had Henry got an empire by his marriage
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.

Look to it, lords; let not his smoothing words

Bewitch your hearts; be wise and circumspect.

What though the common people favour him,

Calling him 'Humphrey, the good Duke of Gloucester',

Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice

'Jesu maintain your royal excellence!'

With 'God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!'

I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss,
He will be found a dangerous Protector.

Buck. Why should he then protect our sovereign,

He being of age to govern of himself?

Cousin of Somerset, join you with me,
And all together, with the Duke of Suffolk,
We'll quickly hoise Duke Humphrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty business will not brook delay;

I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.]

Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride

And greatness of his place be grief to us,
Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal;

His insolence is more intolerable

Than all the princes in the land beside;

If Gloucester be displac'd, he'll be Protector.

Buck. Or thou or I, Somerset, will be Protector, Despite Duke Humphrey or the Cardinal.

[Exeunt Buckingham and Somerset.]

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him.

While these do labour for their own preferment,

Behoves it us to labour for the realm.

I never saw but Humphrey Duke of Gloucester

Did bear him like a noble gentleman.

Oft have I seen the haughty Cardinal—

More like a soldier than a man o' th' church,

As stout and proud as he were lord of all—

Swear like a ruffian and demean himself

Unlike the ruler of a commonweal.

Warwick my son, the comfort of my age.

Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy house-keeping,

Hath won the greatest favour of the commons,

Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey.

And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,

In bringing them to civil discipline,

Thy late exploits done in the heart of France

When thou wert Regent for our sovereign,

Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people:

Join we together for the public good,

In what we can, to bridle and suppress

The pride of Suffolk and the Cardinal,

With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;

And, as we may, cherish Duke Humphrey's deeds

While they do tend the profit of the land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the land

And common profit of his country!

York. And so says York—[Aside] for he hath greatest cause.

Sal. Then let's make haste away and look unto the main.

War. Unto the main ! O father, Maine is lost—

That Maine which by main force Warwick
did win,

And would have kept so long as breath did last.

Main chance, father, you meant ; but I meant Maine,

Which I will win from France, or else be slain.

[Exeunt Warwick and Salisbury.]

York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French ;

Paris is lost ; the state of Normandy Stands on a tickle point now they are gone.

Suffolk concluded on the articles ;
The peers agreed ; and Henry was well
pleas'd

To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair
daughter.

I cannot blame them all : what is't to
them ?

'Tis thine they give away, and not their
own.

Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,

And purchase friends, and give to courtezans,

Still revelling like lords till all be gone ;
While as the silly owner of the goods

Weeps over them and wrings his hapless
hands

And shakes his head and trembling stands
aloof,

While all is shar'd and all is borne away, Ready to starve and dare not touch his
own.

So York must sit and fret and bite his
tongue,

While his own lands are bargain'd for and sold.

Methinks the realms of England, France,
and Ireland,

Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood
As did the fatal brand Althæa burnt

Unto the prince's heart of Calydon.

Anjou and Maine both given unto the French !

Cold news for me, for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile England's soil.

A day will come when York shall claim his
own ;

And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts,
And make a show of love to proud Duke

Humphrey,

And when I spy advantage, claim the
crown,

For that's the golden mark I seek to hit.

Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,

Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist,

Nor wear the diadem upon his head,

Whose church-like humours fits not for a
crown.

Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve ;

Watch thou and wake, when others be asleep,

To pry into the secrets of the state ;

Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love

With his new bride and England's dear-bought queen,

And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars ;

Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd,

And in my standard bear the arms of
York,

To grapple with the house of Lancaster ;
And force perforce I'll make him yield the
crown,

Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England
down.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. The Duke of Gloucester's house.

Enter DUKE HUMPHREY and his wife ELEANOR.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like overripen'd corn

Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load ?
Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows,

As frowning at the favours of the world ?

Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,
Gazing on that which seems to dim thy
sight ?

What see'st thou there ? King Henry's diadem,

Enchas'd with all the honours of the world ?
If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face

Until thy head be circled with the same.

Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious
gold.

What, is't too short ? I'll lengthen it with
mine ;

And having both together heav'd it up,
We'll both together lift our heads to heaven,

And never more abase our sight so low
As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Glo. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord,

Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts !
And may that thought, when I imagine ill

Against my king and nephew, virtuous
Henry,

Be my last breathing in this mortal world !
My troublous dreams this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord ? Tell me, and I'll requite it

With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glo. Methought this staff, mine office-badge in court,

Was broke in twain; by whom I have forgot,
But, as I think, it was by th' Cardinal;
And on the pieces of the broken wand
Were plac'd the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerset

And William de la Pole, first Duke of Suffolk. 30

This was my dream; what it doth bode God knows.

Duch. Tut, this was nothing but an argument

That he that breaks a stick of Gloucester's grove

Shall lose his head for his presumption.

But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet Duke: 35

Methought I sat in seat of majesty

In the cathedral church of Westminster,

And in that chair where kings and queens were crown'd;

Where Henry and Dame Margaret kneel'd to me,

And on my head did set the diadem. 40

Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide outright.

Presumptuous dame, ill-nurtur'd Eleanor! Art thou not second woman in the realm,

And the Protector's wife, belov'd of him? Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command 45

Above the reach or compass of thy thought? And wilt thou still be hammering treachery

To tumble down thy husband and thyself From top of honour to disgrace's feet?

Away from me, and let me hear no more! 50

Duch. What, what, my lord! Are you so choleric

With Eleanor for telling but her dream?

Next time I'll keep my dreams unto myself And not be check'd.

Glo. Nay, be not angry; I am pleas'd again. 55

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My Lord Protector, 'tis his Highness' pleasure

You do prepare to ride unto Saint Albans, Where as the King and Queen do mean to hawk.

Glo. I go. Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us?

Duch. Yes, my good lord, I'll follow presently. 60

[Exeunt Gloucester and Messenger. Follow I must; I cannot go before,

While Gloucester bears this base and humble mind.

Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood, I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks

And smooth my way upon their headless necks; 65

And, being a woman, I will not be slack

To play my part in Fortune's pageant.

Where are you there, Sir John? Nay, fear not, man;

We are alone; here's none but thee and I.

Enter HUME.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal Majesty!

Duch. What say'st thou? Majesty! I am but Grace. 71

Hume. But, by the grace of God and Hume's advice,

Your Grace's title shall be multiplied.

Duch. What say'st thou, man? Hast thou as yet conferr'd

With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch of Eie, 75

With Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer?

And will they undertake to do me good?

Hume. This they have promised, to show your Highness

A spirit rais'd from depth of underground That shall make answer to such questions 80

As by your Grace shall be propounded him.

Duch. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions;

When from Saint Albans we do make return

We'll see these things effected to the full. Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man, 85

With thy confederates in this weighty cause. [Exit.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the Duchess' gold;

Marry, and shall. But, how now, Sir John Hume!

Seal up your lips and give no words but mum:

The business asketh silent secrecy. 90

Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch:

Gold cannot come amiss were she a devil. Yet have I gold flies from another coast—

I dare not say from the rich Cardinal, And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk; 95

Yet I do find it so; for, to be plain, They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,

Have hired me to undermine the Duchess, And buzz these conjurations in her brain.

They say 'A crafty knave does need no broker'; 100

Yet am I Suffolk and the Cardinal's broker. Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go

near

To call them both a pair of crafty knaves. Well, so it stands; and thus, I fear, at last

Hume's knavery will be the Duchess' wreck, And her attainture will be Humphrey's fall.

Sort how it will, I shall have gold for all. [Exit.

SCENE III. London. The palace.

Enter three or four Petitioners, PETER, the Armourer's man, being one.

1 Pet. My masters, let's stand close ; my Lord Protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.

2 Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man, Jesu bless him ! 5

Enter SUFFOLK and QUEEN.

1 Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the Queen with him. I'll be the first, sure.

2 Pet. Come back, fool ; this is the Duke of Suffolk and not my Lord Protector. 9

Suf. How now, fellow ! Wouldst anything with me ?

1 Pet. I pray, my lord, pardon me ; I took ye for my Lord Protector.

Queen. [Reads] ' To my Lord Protector ! ' Are your supplications to his lordship ? Let me see them. What is thine ? 15

1 Pet. Mine is, an't please your Grace, against John Goodman, my Lord Cardinal's man, for keeping my house and lands, and wife and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too ! That's some wrong indeed. What's yours ? What's here ! [Reads] ' Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford.' How now, sir knave !

2 Pet. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township. 24

Peter. [Presenting his petition] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying that the Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Queen. What say'st thou ? Did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown ? 29

Peter. That my master was ? No, forsooth. My master said that he was, and that the King was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there ? [Enter Servant. Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently. We'll hear more of your matter before the King.

[Exit Servant with Peter.

Queen. And as for you, that love to be protected 35 Under the wings of our Protector's grace, Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Tears the supplications. Away, base cullions ! Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone. [Exeunt.

Queen. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise, 40 Is this the fashions in the court of England ? Is this the government of Britain's isle, And this the royalty of Albion's king ? What, shall King Henry be a pupil still, Under the surly Gloucester's governance ?

Am I a queen in title and in style, 46 And must be made a subject to a duke ? I tell thee, Pole, when in the city Tours Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France, 50

I thought King Henry had resembled thee In courage, courtship, and proportion ; But all his mind is bent to holiness, To number Ave-Maries on his beads ; His champions are the prophets and apostles ; 55

His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ ; His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves Are brazen images of canonized saints.

I would the college of the Cardinals Would choose him Pope, and carry him to Rome, 60

And set the triple crown upon his head ; That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient. As I was cause Your Highness came to England, so will I In England work your Grace's full content.

Queen. Beside the haughty Protector, have we Beaufort 66 The imperious churchman ; Somerset, Buckingham,

And grumbling York ; and not the least of these

But can do more in England than the King.

Suf. And he of these that can do most of all 70

Cannot do more in England than the Nevils ; Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers.

Queen. Not all these lords do vex me half so much

As that proud dame, the Lord Protector's wife.

She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies, 75

More like an empress than Duke Humphrey's wife.

Strangers in court do take her for the Queen.

She bears a duke's revenues on her back, And in her heart she scorns our poverty ; Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her ? 80 Contemptuous base-born callet as she is, She vaunted 'mongst her minions t' other day

The very train of her worst wearing gown Was better worth than all my father's lands, Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter. 85

Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her,

And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds That she will light to listen to the lays, And never mount to trouble you again. So, let her rest. And, madam, list to me, 90 For I am bold to counsel you in this : Although we fancy not the Cardinal, Yet must we join with him and with the lords,

Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.

As for the Duke of York, this late complaint 95

Will make but little for his benefit.
So one by one we'll weed them all at last,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Sound a sennet. Enter the KING, DUKE HUMPHREY, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, YORK, SOMERSET, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER.

King. For my part, noble lords, I care not which :

Or Somerset or York, all's one to me. 100

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,

Then let him be deny'd the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,

Let York be Regent ; I will yield to him.

War. Whether your Grace be worthy, yea or no, 105

Dispute not that ; York is the worthier.

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.

War. The Cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all. 110

Sal. Peace, son ! And show some reason, Buckingham,

Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this.

Queen. Because the King, forsooth, will have it so.

Glo. Madam, the King is old enough himself

To give his censure. These are no women's matters. 115

Queen. If he be old enough, what needs your Grace

To be Protector of his Excellence ?

Glo. Madam, I am Protector of the realm ;

And at his pleasure will resign my place.

Suf. Resign it then, and leave thine insolence. 120

Since thou wert king—as who is king but thou ?—

The commonwealth hath daily run to wrack,

The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas,

And all the peers and nobles of the realm Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty.

Car. The commons hast thou rack'd ; the clergy's bags 126

Are lank and lean with thy extortions.

Som. Thy sumptuous buildings and thy wife's attire

Have cost a mass of public treasury.

Buck. Thy cruelty in execution 130

Upon offenders hath exceeded law,

And left thee to the mercy of the law.

Queen. Thy sale of offices and towns in France,

If they were known, as the suspect is great, Would make thee quickly hop without thy head. [Exit Gloucester. The Queen drops her fan.]

Give me my fan. What, minion, can ye not ? [She gives the Duchess a box on the ear.]

I cry your mercy, madam ; was it you ?

Duch. Was't I ? Yea, I it was, proud Frenchwoman.

Could I come near your beauty with my nails,

I could set my ten commandments in your face. 140

King. Sweet aunt, be quiet ; 'twas against her will.

Duch. Against her will, good King ? Look to 't in time ;

She'll hamper thee and dandle thee like a baby.

Though in this place most master wear no breeches,

She shall not strike Dame Eleanor un-reveng'd. [Exit.]

Buck. Lord Cardinal, I will follow Eleanor, 146

And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds.

She's tickled now ; her fume needs no spurs,

She'll gallop far enough to her destruction. [Exit.]

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Now, lords, my choler being over-blown 150

With walking once about the quadrangle, I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.

As for your spiteful false objections, Prove them, and I lie open to the law ;

But God in mercy so deal with my soul 155

As I in duty love my king and country ! But to the matter that we have in hand :

I say, my sovereign, York is meepest man To be your Regent in the realm of France.

Suf. Before we make election, give me leave 160

To show some reason, of no little force, That York is most unmeet of any man.

York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet :

First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride ; Next, if I be appointed for the place, 165

My Lord of Somerset will keep me here Without discharge, money, or furniture,

Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands.

Last time I danc'd attendance on his will

Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost.

War. That can I witness ; and a fouler fact ¹⁷¹

Did never traitor in the land commit.

Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick !

War. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace ?

Enter HORNER, the Armourer, and his man PETER, guarded.

Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason : ¹⁷⁵

Pray God the Duke of York excuse himself !

York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor ?

King. What mean'st thou, Suffolk ? Tell me, what are these ?

Suf. Please it your Majesty, this is the man

That doth accuse his master of high treason ; ¹⁸⁰

His words were these : that Richard Duke of York

Was rightful heir unto the English crown, And that your Majesty was an usurper.

King. Say, man, were these thy words ?

Hor. An't shall please your Majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter. God is my witness, I am falsely accus'd by the villain.

Peter. [Holding up his hands] By these ten bones, my lords, he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my Lord of York's armour. ¹⁹⁰

York. Base downhill villain and mechanical,

I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech.

I do beseech your royal Majesty,

Let him have all the rigour of the law. ¹⁹⁴

Hor. Alas, my lord, hang me if ever I spake the words. My accuser is my prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me. I have good witness of this ; therefore I beseech your Majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation. ²⁰⁰

King. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law ?

Glo. This doom, my lord, if I may judge : Let Somerset be Regent o'er the French, Because in York this breeds suspicion ; ²⁰ And let these have a day appointed them For single combat in convenient place, For he hath witness of his servant's malice. This is the law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom.

Som. I humbly thank your royal Majesty. ²⁰⁹

Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.

Peter. Alas, my lord, I cannot fight ; for God's sake, pity my case ! The spite of man prevaieth against me. O Lord, have mercy upon me, I shall never be able to fight a blow ! O Lord, my heart ! ²¹⁴

Glo. Sirrah, or you must fight or else be hang'd.

King. Away with them to prison ; and the day of combat shall be the last of the next month.

Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The Duke of Gloucester's garden.

Enter MARGERY JOURDAIN, the witch ; the two priests, HUME and SOUTHWELL ; and BOLINGBROKE.

Hume. Come, my masters ; the Duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided ; will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms ?

Hume. Ay, what else ? Fear you not her courage. ⁵

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit ; but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft while we be busy below ; and so I pray you go, in God's name, and leave us. [Exit Hume] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate and grovel on the earth ; John Southwell, read you ; and let us to our work. ¹²

Enter DUCHESS aloft, followed by HUME.

Duch. Well said, my masters ; and welcome all. To this gear, the sooner the better.

Boling. Patience, good lady ; wizards know their times : ¹⁵

Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night,

The time of night when Troy was set on fire ;

The time when screech-owls cry and bandogs howl,

And spirits walk and ghosts break up their graves—

That time best fits the work we have in hand. ²⁰

Madam, sit you, and fear not : whom we raise

We will make fast within a hallow'd verge.

[Here they do the ceremonies belonging, and make the circle ; Bolingbroke or Southwell reads : 'Conjuro te,' &c. It thunders and lightens terribly ; then the Spirit riseth.

Spir. Adsum.

M. Jourd. Asmath,

By the eternal God, whose name and power Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask ; ²⁴

For till thou speak thou shalt not pass from hence.

Spir. Ask what thou wilt ; that I had said and done.

Boling. [Reads] ' First of the king : what shall of him become ? '

Spir. The Duke yet lives that Henry shall depose ; 30

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answer.

Boling. ' What fates await the Duke of Suffolk ? '

Spir. By water shall he die and take his end.

Boling. ' What shall befall the Duke of Somerset ? '

Spir. Let him shun castles : 35

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains Than where castles mounted stand.

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Boling. Descend to darkness and the burning lake ;

False fiend, avoid ! 40

[Thunder and lightning. Exit Spirit.

Enter the DUKE OF YORK and the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM with their Guard, and break in.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors and their trash.

Beldam, I think we watch'd you at an inch. What, madam, are you there ? The King and commonweal

Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains ; My Lord Protector will, I doubt it not, 45 See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts.

Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's king,

Injurious Duke, that threatest where's no cause.

Buck. True, madam, none at all. What call you this ?

Away with them ! let them be clapp'd up close, 50

And kept asunder. You, madam, shall with us.

Stafford, take her to thee.

We'll see your trinkets here all forthcoming.

All, away ! [Exeunt, above, Duchess and Hume, guarded ; below, Witch, Southwell and Bolingbroke, guarded.

York. Lord Buckingham, methinks you watch'd her well. 55

A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon ! Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ.

What have we here ? [Reads.

' The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose ;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.' 60 Why, this is just

' Aio te, Æacida, Romanos vincere posse '. Well, to the rest :

' Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk ? '

' By water shall he die and take his end.' 65

' What shall betide the Duke of Somerset ? '

' Let him shun castles ;

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains Than where castles mounted stand.'

Come, come, my lords ; 70

These oracles are hardly attain'd, And hardly understood.

The King is now in progress towards Saint Albans,

With him the husband of this lovely lady ; Thither go these news as fast as horse can carry them— 75

A sorry breakfast for my Lord Protector.

Buck. Your Grace shall give me leave, my Lord of York,

To be the post, in hope of his reward.

York. At your pleasure, my good lord. Who's within there, ho ? 79

Enter a Servingman.

Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick To sup with me to-morrow night. Away ! [Exeunt.

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Saint Albans.

Enter the KING, QUEEN, GLOUCESTER, CARDINAL, and SUFFOLK, with Falconers halloing.

Queen. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook,

I saw not better sport these seven years' day ;

Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high, And ten to one old Joan had not gone out.

King. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made, 5

And what a pitch she flew above the rest ! To see how God in all his creatures works ! Yea, man and birds are fain of climbing high.

Suf. No marvel, an it like your Majesty, My Lord Protector's hawks do tow'r so well ; 10

They know their master loves to be aloft, And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.

Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

Car. I thought as much ; he would be above the clouds. 15

Glo. Ay, my lord Cardinal, how think you by that ?

Were it not good your Grace could fly to heaven ?

King. The treasury of everlasting joy !

Car. Thy heaven is on earth ; thine eyes and thoughts

Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart ;
Pernicious Protector, dangerous peer, ²¹
That smooth'st it so with King and commonweal.

Glo. What, Cardinal, is your priesthood grown peremptory ?

Tantaene animis coelestibus irae ?

Churchmen so hot ? Good uncle, hide such malice ; ²⁵

With such holiness can you do it ?

Suf. No malice, sir ; no more than well becomes

So good a quarrel and so bad a peer.

Glo. As who, my lord ?

Suf. Why, as you, my lord,
An't like your lordly Lord's Protectorship.

Glo. Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insolence. ³¹

Queen. And thy ambition, Gloucester.

King. I prithee, peace,
Good Queen, and whet not on these furious
peers ;

For blessed are the peacemakers on earth.

Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make ³⁶

Against this proud Protector with my
sword !

Glo. [Aside to Cardinal] Faith, holy uncle, would 'twere come to that !

Car. [Aside to Gloucester] Marry, when thou dar'st.

Glo. [Aside to Cardinal] Make up no
factious numbers for the matter ;

In thine own person answer thy abuse. ⁴¹

Car. [Aside to Gloucester] Ay, where thou dar'st not peep ; an if thou dar'st,

This evening on the east side of the grove.

King. How now, my lords !

Car. Believe me, cousin Gloucester,
Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly, ⁴⁵

We had had more sport. [Aside to Gloucester]
Come with thy two-hand sword.

Glo. True, uncle.

Car. [Aside to Gloucester] Are ye advis'd ?
The east side of the grove ?

Glo. [Aside to Cardinal] Cardinal, I am
with you.

King. Why, how now, uncle Gloucester !

Glo. Talking of hawking ; nothing else,
my lord. ⁵⁰

[Aside to Cardinal] Now, by God's Mother,
priest,

I'll shave your crown for this,

Or all my fence shall fail.

Car. [Aside to Gloucester] Medice, teipsum ;
Protector, see to't well ; protect yourself.

King. The winds grow high ; so do your stomachs, lords. ⁵⁵

How irksome is this music to my heart !
When such strings jar, what hope of harmony ?

I pray, my lords, let me compound this
strife.

Enter a Townsman of Saint Albans, crying
'A miracle !'

Glo. What means this noise ?

Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim ? ⁶⁰

Towns. A miracle ! a miracle !

Suf. Come to the King, and tell him what miracle.

Towns. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Albans shrine

Within this half hour hath receiv'd his sight ;
A man that ne'er saw in his life before. ⁶⁵

King. Now God be prais'd that to believing souls

Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair !

Enter the Mayor of Saint Albans and his Brethren, bearing SIMPCOX between two in a chair ; his Wife and a multitude following.

Car. Here comes the townsmen on procession

To present your Highness with the man.

King. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale, ⁷⁰

Although by his sight his sin be multiplied.

Glo. Stand by, my masters ; bring him near the King ;

His Highness' pleasure is to talk with him.

King. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,

That we for thee may glorify the Lord. ⁷⁵

What, hast thou been long blind and now restor'd ?

Simp. Born blind, an't please your
Grace.

Wife. Ay indeed was he.

Suf. What woman is this ?

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship. ⁸⁰

Glo. Hadst thou been his mother, thou couldst have better told.

King. Where wert thou born ?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your Grace.

King. Poor soul, God's goodness hath been great to thee.

Let never day nor night unhallowed pass, ⁸⁵
But still remember what the Lord hath
done.

Queen. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance,

Or of devotion, to this holy shrine ?

Simp. God knows, of pure devotion ;
being call'd ⁸⁹

A hundred times and oft'ner, in my sleep,
By good Saint Alban, who said ' Simpcox,
come,

Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help
thee'.

Wife. Most true, forsooth ; and many time and oft

Myself have heard a voice to call him so.

Car. What, art thou lame ?

Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me !

Suf. How cam'st thou so ?

Simp. A fall off of a tree. 96

Wife. A plum tree, master.

Glo. How long hast thou been blind ?

Simp. O, born so, master !

Glo. What, and wouldst climb a tree ?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true ; and bought his climbing vervv dear. 100

Glo. Mass, thou lov'dst plums well, that wouldst venture so.

Simp. Alas, good master, my wife desir'd some damsons

And made me climb, with danger of my life.

Glo. A subtle knave ! But yet it shall not serve :

Let me see thine eyes ; wink now ; now open them ; 105

In my opinion yet thou seest not well.

Simp. Yes, master, clear as day, I thank God and Saint Alban.

Glo. Say'st thou me so ? What colour is this cloak of ?

Simp. Red, master ; red as blood. 110

Glo. Why, that's well said. What colour is my gown of ?

Simp. Black, forsooth ; coal-black as jet.

King. Why, then, thou know'st what colour jet is of ?

Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.

Glo. But cloaks and gowns before this day a many. 115

Wife. Never before this day in all his life.

Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name ?

Simp. Alas, master, I know not.

Glo. What's his name ?

Simp. I know not. 120

Glo. Nor his ?

Simp. No, indeed, master.

Glo. What's thine own name ?

Simp. Saunder Simpcox, an if it please you, master.

Glo. Then, Saunder, sit there, the lying'st knave in Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, thou mightst as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear. Sight may distinguish of colours ; but suddenly to nominate them all, it is impossible. My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle ; and would ye not think it cunning to be great that could restore this cripple to his legs again ?

Simp. O master, that you could !

Glo. My masters of Saint Albans, have you not beadles in your town, and things call'd whips ? 135

Mayor. Yes, my lord, if it please your Grace.

Glo. Then send for one presently.

Mayor. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight. [Exit an Attendant.]

Glo. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. [A stool brought] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool and run away. 141

Simp. Alas, master, I am not able to stand alone !

You go about to torture me in vain.

Enter a Beadle with whips.

Glo. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs. Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.

Bead. I will, my lord. Come on, sirrah ; off with your doublet quickly. 147

Simp. Alas, master, what shall I do ? I am not able to stand.

[After the Beadle ha'h hit him once, he leaps over the stool and runs away ; and they follow and cry ' A miracle ! '

King. O God, seest Thou this, and bearest so long ? 150

Queen. It made me laugh to see the villain run.

Glo. Follow the knave, and take this drab away.

Wife. Alas, sir, we did it for pure need !

Glo. Let them be whipp'd through every market town till they come to Berwick, from whence they came.

[Exeunt Mavor, Beadle, Wife, &c.]

Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day. 156

Suf. True ; made the lame to leap and fly away.

Glo. But you have done more miracles than I :

You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

King. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham ? 160

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold :

A sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent, Under the countenance and confederacy Of Lady Eleanor, the Protector's wife, The ringleader and head of all this rout, 165 Have practis'd dangerously against your state,

Dealing with witches and with conjurers, Whom we have apprehended in the fact, Raising up wicked spirits from under ground, 169

Demanding of King Henry's life and death And other of your Highness' Privy Council, As more at large your Grace shall understand.

Car. And so, my Lord Protector, by this means

Your lady is forthcoming yet at London. This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge ; 175

'Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour.

Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict my heart.

Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers ;

And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee
Or to the meanest groom. 180

King. O God, what mischiefs work the wicked ones,

Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby !

Queen. Gloucester, see here the tainture of thy nest ;

And look thyself be faultless, thou wert best.

Glo. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal 185

How I have lov'd my King and common-weal ;

And for my wife I know not how it stands.

Sorry I am to hear what I have heard.

Noble she is ; but if she have forgot
Honour and virtue, and convers'd with such 190

As, like to pitch, defile nobility,
I banish her my bed and company
And give her as a prey to law and shame,
That hath dishonoured Gloucester's honest name. 194

King. Well, for this night we will repose us here.

To-morrow toward London back again
To look into this business thoroughly
And call these foul offenders to their answers, 199

'And poise the cause in justice' equal scales, Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. The Duke of York's garden.

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

York. Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,

Our simple supper ended, give me leave
In this close walk to satisfy myself
In craving your opinion of my title,
Which is infallible, to England's crown. 5

Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full.

War. Sweet York, begin ; and if thy claim be good,

The Nevils are thy subjects to command.

York. Then thus :

Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons ; 10

The first, Edward the Black Prince, Prince of Wales ;

The second, William of Hatfield ; and the third,

Lionel Duke of Clarence ; next to whom Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster ;

The fifth was Edmund Langley, Duke of York ; 15

The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester ;

William of Windsor was the seventh and last.

Edward the Black Prince died before his father

And left behind him Richard, his only son, Who, after Edward the Third's death,
reign'd as king 20

Till Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster,
The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt, Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth,
Seiz'd on the realm, depos'd the rightful king,

Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came, 25

And him to Pomfret, where, as all you know,

Harmless Richard was murdered traitorously.

War. Father, the Duke hath told the truth ;

Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown.
York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right ; 30

For Richard, the first son's heir, being dead,
The issue of the next son should have reign'd.

Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an heir.

York. The third son, Duke of Clarence, from whose line

I claim the crown, had issue Philippe, a daughter, 35

Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March ;

Edmund had issue, Roger Earl of March ;
Roger had issue, Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Bolingbroke, 39

As I have read, laid claim unto the crown ;
And, but for Owen Glendower, had been king,

Who kept him in captivity till he died.
But, to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, Anne,
My mother, being heir unto the crown,
Married Richard Earl of Cambridge, who was 45

To Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth son, son.

By her I claim the kingdom : she was heir

To Roger Earl of March, who was the son
Of Edmund Mortimer, who married Philippe,

Sole daughter unto Lionel Duke of Clarence ;
So, if the issue of the elder son 51

Succeed before the younger, I am King.

War. What plain proceedings is more plain than this ?

Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,

The fourth son : York claims it from the third. ⁵⁵

Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign. It fails not yet, but flourishes in thee

And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock. Then, father Salisbury, kneel we together,

And in this private plot be we the first ⁶⁰ That shall salute our rightful sovereign

With honour of his birthright to the crown. Both. Long live our sovereign Richard,

England's King ! York. We thank you, lords. But I am not your king

Till I be crown'd, and that my sword be stain'd ⁶⁵

With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster; And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,

But with advice and silent secrecy. Do you as I do in these dangerous days :

Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence, ⁷⁰ At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition, At Buckingham, and all the crew of them, Till they have snar'd the shepherd of the flock,

That virtuous prince, the good Duke Humphrey ;

'Tis that they seek ; and they, in seeking that, ⁷⁵

Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy.

Sal. My lord, break we off ; we know your mind at full.

War. My heart assures me that the Earl of Warwick

Shall one day make the Duke of York a king. ⁷⁹

York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself, Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick

The greatest man in England but the King. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. London. A hall of justice.

Sound trumpets. Enter the KING and State : the QUEEN, GLOUCESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALISBURY, with Guard, to banish the Duchess. Enter, guarded, the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, MARGERY JOURDAIN, HUME, SOUTHWELL, and BOLINGBROKE.

King. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloucester's wife :

In sight of God and us, your guilt is great ; Receive the sentence of the law for sins

Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death. ⁴

You four, from hence to prison back again ; From thence unto the place of execution :

The witch in Smithfield shall be burnt to ashes,

And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.

You, madam, for you are more nobly born, Despoiled of your honour in your life, ¹⁰

Shall, after three days' open penance done, Live in your country here in banishment

With Sir John Stanley in the Isle of Man. Duch. Welcome is banishment ; welcome were my death. Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judged thee. ¹⁵

I cannot justify whom the law condemns. [Exeunt the Duchess and the other prisoners, guarded.]

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.

Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thine age Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground ! ¹⁹

I beseech your Majesty give me leave to go ; Sorrow would solace, and mine age would ease.

King. Stay, Humphrey Duke of Gloucester ; ere thou go,

Give up thy staff ; Henry will to himself Protector be ; and God shall be my hope,

My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet. And go in peace, Humphrey, no less belov'd

Than when thou wert Protector to thy King. ²⁷

Queen. I see no reason why a king of years Should be to be protected like a child.

God and King Henry govern England's realm ! ³⁰

Give up your staff, sir, and the King his realm.

Glo. My staff ! Here, noble Henry, is my staff.

As willingly do I the same resign As ere thy father Henry made it mine ;

And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it As others would ambitiously receive it. ³⁶

Farewell, good King ; when I am dead and gone,

May honourable peace attend thy throne ! [Exit.]

Queen. Why, now is Henry King, and Margaret Queen,

And Humphrey Duke of Gloucester scarce himself, ⁴⁰

That bears so shrewd a maim : two pulls at once—

His lady banish'd and a limb lopp'd off. This staff of honour raught, there let it stand

Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand. Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine and hangs his sprays ; ⁴⁵

Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.

York. Lords, let him go. Please it your Majesty,

This is the day appointed for the combat ; And ready are the appellant and defendant,

The armourer and his man, to enter the lists, 50

So please your Highness to behold the fight.

Queen. Ay, good my lord ; for purposely therefore

Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

King. A God's name, see the lists and all things fit ;

Here let them end it, and God defend the right ! 55

York. I never saw a fellow worse bested, Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,

The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter at one door, HORNER, the Armourer, and his Neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunk ; and he enters with a drum before him and his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it ; and at the other door PETER, his man, with a drum and sand-bag, and Prentices drinking to him.

1 Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you, in a cup of sack ; and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough. 61

2 Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.

3 Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour ; drink, and fear not your man. 65

Hor. Let it come, i' faith, and I'll pledge you all ; and a fig for Peter !

1 Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee ; and be not afraid.

2 Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master : fight for credit of the prentices. 71

Peter. I thank you all. Drink, and pray for me, I pray you ; for I think I have taken my last draught in this world. Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron ; and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer ; and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. O Lord bless me, I pray God ! for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking and fall to blows. Sirrah, what's thy name ? 80

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter ? What more ?

Peter. Thump. 83

Sal. Thump ? Then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave and myself an honest man ; and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death I never meant him any ill, nor the King, nor the Queen ; and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow !

York. Dispatch—this knave's tongue begins to double. 91

Sound, trumpets, alarum to the combatants ! [Alarum. They fight, and Peter strikes him down.]

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold ! I confess, I confess treason. [Dies.]

York. Take away his weapon. Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way. 95

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine enemies in this presence ? O Peter, thou hast prevail'd in right !

King. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight,

For by his death we do perceive his guilt ;

And God in justice hath reveal'd to us 100 The truth and innocence of this poor fellow, Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully.

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward. [Sound a flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. A street.

Enter DUKE HUMPHREY and his Men, in mourning cloaks.

Glo. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud,

And after summer evermore succeeds Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold ;

So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet. Sirs, what's o'clock ?

Serv. Ten, my lord. 5

Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me

To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess.

Uneath may she endure the flinty streets To tread them with her tender-feeling feet. Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook 10 The abject people gazing on thy face, With envious looks, laughing at thy shame, That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels

When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.

But, soft ! I think she comes, and I'll prepare 15

My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER in a white sheet, and a taper burning in her hand, with SIR JOHN STANLEY, the Sheriff, and Officers.

Serv. So please your Grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Glo. No, stir not for your lives ; let her pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame ?

Now thou dost penance too. Look how they gaze ! 20

See how the giddy multitude do point

And nod their heads and throw their eyes
on thee !

Ah, Gloucester, hide thee from their hateful
looks,

And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame
And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine !

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell ; forget this grief.

Duch. Ah, Gloucester, teach me to forget
myself !

For whilst I think I am thy married wife
And thou a prince, Protector of this land,
Methinks I should not thus be led along, 30 Mail'd up in shame, with papers on my
back,

And follow'd with a rabble that rejoice
To see my tears and hear my deep-fet groans.

The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet,
And when I start, the envious people laugh
And bid me be advised how I tread. 36

Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke ?

Trowest thou that e'er I'll look upon the
world

Or count them happy that enjoy the sun ?
No ; dark shall be my light and night my
day ; 41

To think upon my pomp shall be my hell.
Sometime I'll say I am Duke Humphrey's
wife,

And he a prince, and ruler of the land ;
Yet so he rul'd, and such a prince he was,
As he stood by whilst I, his forlorn duchess,
Was made a wonder and a pointing-stock
To every idle rascal follower.

But be thou mild, and blush not at my
shame,

Nor stir at nothing till the axe of death
Hang over thee, as sure it shortly will. 50

For Suffolk—he that can do all in all
With her that hateth thee and hates us all—
And York, and impious Beaufort, that false
priest,

Have all lim'd bushes to betray thy wings,
And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle
thee. 55

But fear not thou until thy foot be snar'd,
Nor never seek prevention of thy foes.

Glo. Ah, Nell, forbear ! Thou aimest all awry.

I must offend before I be attained ;
And had I twenty times so many foes, 60
And each of them had twenty times their
power,

All these could not procure me any scathe
So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.
Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach ?

Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away,
But I in danger for the breach of law. 66

Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell.
I pray thee sort thy heart to patience ;

These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your Grace to his Majesty's Parliament,

Holden at Bury the first of this next month.

Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein
before ! 72

This is close dealing. Well, I will be there.
[Exit Herald.]

My Nell, I take my leave—and, master sheriff,

Let not her penance exceed the King's commission. 75

Sher. An't please your Grace, here my commission stays ;

And Sir John Stanley is appointed now
To take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Glo. Must you, Sir John, protect my lady
here ?

Stan. So am I given in charge, may't
please your Grace. 80

Glo. Entreat her not the worse in that I
pray

You use her well ; the world may laugh
again,

And I may live to do you kindness if You do it her. And so, Sir John, farewell.

Duch. What, gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell ! 85

Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to
speak.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Servants.]

Duch. Art thou gone too ? All comfort go with thee !

For none abides with me. My joy is death—Death, at whose name I oft have been afraid,

Because I wish'd this world's eternity. 90

Stanley, I prithee go, and take me hence ;
I care not whither, for I beg no favour,
Only convey me where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, madam, that is to the Isle of
Man,

There to be us'd according to your state. 95

Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach—

And shall I then be us'd reproachfully ?

Stan. Like to a duchess and Duke Humphrey's lady ;

According to that state you shall be us'd.

Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare, 100

Although thou hast been conduct of my
shame.

Sher. It is my office ; and, madam,
pardon me.

Duch. Ay, ay, farewell ; thy office is discharg'd.

Come, Stanley, shall we go ?
Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet, 105

And go we to attire you for our journey.

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet.

No, it will hang upon my richest robes

And show itself, attire me how I can. 109

Go, lead the way ; I long to see my prison.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. The Abbey at Bury St. Edmunds.

Sound a sennet. Enter the KING, the QUEEN, CARDINAL, SUFFOLK, YORK, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY, and WARWICK, to the Parliament.

King. I muse my Lord of Gloucester is not come.

'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man, Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.

Queen. Can you not see, or will ye not observe

The strangeness of his alter'd countenance ?

With what a majesty he bears himself ;

How insolent of late he is become,

How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself ?

We know the time since he was mild and affable,

And if we did but glance a far-off look 10

Immediately he was upon his knee,

That all the court admir'd him for submission.

But meet him now and be it in the morn,

When every one will give the time of day,

He knits his brow and shows an angry eye

And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,

Disdaining duty that to us belongs. 17

Small curs are not regarded when they grin,

But great men tremble when the lion roars,

And Humphrey is no little man in England.

First note that he is near you in descent,

And should you fall he is the next will mount ; 22

Me seemeth, then, it is no policy—

Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears,

And his advantage following your decease—

That he should come about your royal

person 26

Or be admitted to your Highness' Council.

By flattery hath he won the commons'

hearts ;

And when he please to make commotion,

'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him. 30

Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted ;

Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the garden

And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.

The reverent care I bear unto my lord

Made me collect these dangers in the Duke.

If it be fond, call it a woman's fear ; 36

Which fear if better reasons can supplant,

I will subscribe, and say I wrong'd the

Duke.

My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and

York,

Reprove my allegation if you can, 41

Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your Highness seen into this duke ;

And had I first been put to speak my mind

I think I should have told your Grace's tale

The Duchess, by his subornation,

Upon my life, began her devilish practices

Or if he were not privy to those faults,

Yet by reputing of his high descent—

As next the King he was successive heir—

And such high vaunts of his nobility, 50

Did instigate the bedlam brainsick Duchess

By wicked means to frame our sovereign's

fall.

Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep,

And in his simple show he harbours

treason.

The fox barks not when he would steal the

lamb. 55

No, no, my sovereign, Gloucester is a man

Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit.

Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,

Devise strange deaths for small offences

done ?

York. And did he not, in his protector-

ship, 60

Levy great sums of money through the

realm

For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent

it ?

By means whereof the towns each day revolted.

Buck. Tut, these are petty faults to faults unknown

Which time will bring to light in smooth

Duke Humphrey. 65

King. My lords, at once : the care you have of us,

To mow down thorns that would annoy our

foot,

Is worthy praise ; but shall I speak my conscience ?

Our kinsman Gloucester is as innocent 69

From meaning treason to our royal person

As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove :

The Duke is virtuous, mild, and too well

given

To dream on evil or to work my downfall.

Queen. Ah, what's more dangerous than this fond affiance ?

Seems he a dove ? His feathers are but borrow'd, 75

For he's disposed as the hateful raven.

Is he a lamb ? His skin is surely lent him,

For he's inclin'd as is the ravenous wolf.

Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit ?

Take heed, my lord ; the welfare of us all 80

Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent

man.

Enter SOMERSET.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!

King. Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories

Is utterly bereft you; all is lost. 85

King. Cold news, Lord Somerset; but God's will be done!

York. [Aside] Cold news for me; for I had hope of France

As firmly as I hope for fertile England.

Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,

And caterpillars eat my leaves away; 90

But I will remedy this gear ere long,

Or sell my title for a glorious grave.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. All happiness unto my lord the King!

Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long.

Suf. Nay, Gloucester, know that thou art come too soon, 95

Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art. I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glo. Well, Suffolk, thou shalt not see me blush

Nor change my countenance for this arrest: A heart unspotted is not easily daunted. 100

The purest spring is not so free from mud As I am clear from treason to my sovereign.

Who can accuse me? Wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France

And, being Protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay; 105

By means whereof his Highness hath lost France.

Glo. Is it but thought so? What are they that think it?

I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.

So help me God, as I have watch'd the night— 110

Ay, night by night—in studying good for England!

That do it that e'er I wrested from the King, Or any groat I hoarded to my use,

Be brought against me at my trial-day! No; many a pound of mine own proper

store, 115

Because I would not tax the needy commons,

Have I dispursed to the garrisons, And never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.

Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me God! 120

York. In your protectorship you did devise

Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of,

That England was defam'd by tyranny.

Glo. Why, 'tis well known that whiles I was Protector

Pity was all the fault that was in me; 125

For I should melt at an offender's tears, And lowly words were ransom for their fault. Unless it were a bloody murderer,

Or foul felonious thief that fleec'd poor passengers,

I never gave them condign punishment. 130

Murder indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd Above the felon or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly answer'd;

But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge, 134

Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself. I do arrest you in his Highness' name,

And here commit you to my Lord Cardinal To keep until your further time of trial.

King. My Lord of Gloucester, 'tis my special hope

That you will clear yourself from all suspense. 140

My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glo. Ah, gracious lord, these days are dangerous!

Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition, And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand; Foul subornation is predominant, 145

And equity exil'd your Highness' land. I know their complot is to have my life;

And if my death might make this island happy

And prove the period of their tyranny, I would expend it with all willingness. 150

But mine is made the prologue to their play;

For thousands more that yet suspect no peril

Will not conclude their plotted tragedy. Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice, 154

And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate; Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue The envious load that lies upon his heart;

And dogged York, that reaches at the moon, Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back, By false accuse doth level at my life. 160

And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest, Causeless have laid disgraces on my head,

And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up

My liefest liege to be mine enemy; Ay, all of you have laid your heads together— 165

Myself had notice of your conventicles— And all to make away my guiltless life.

I shall not want false witness to condemn
me

Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt.
The ancient proverb will be well effected :
'A staff is quickly found to beat a dog'. 171

Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable.
If those that care to keep your royal person
From treason's secret knife and traitor's
rage

Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at, 175
And the offender granted scope of speech,
'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your
Grace.

Suf. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady
here
With ignominious words, though clerkly
couch'd,

As if she had suborned some to swear 180
False allegations to o'erthrow his state ?

Queen. But I can give the loser leave to chide.

Glo. Far truer spoke than meant : I lose
indeed.
Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false !

And well such losers may have leave to
speak. 185

Buck. He'll wrest the sense, and hold us here all day.

Lord Cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car. Sirs, take away the Duke, and guard him sure.

Glo. Ah, thus King Henry throws away his crutch

Before his legs be firm to bear his body ! 190
Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy
side,

And wolves are gnarling who shall gnaw thee first.

Ah, that my fear were false ! ah, that it
were !

For, good King Henry, thy decay I fear.
[Exit, guarded.

King. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best 195

Do or undo, as if ourself were here.

Queen. What, will your Highness leave the Parliament ?

King. Ay, Margaret ; my heart is drown'd with grief,

Whose flood begins to flow within mine
eyes ;

My body round engirt with misery— 200
For what's more miserable than discontent ?

Ah, uncle Humphrey, in thy face I see
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty !

And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to
come

That e'er I prov'd thee false or fear'd thy faith. 205

What luring star now envies thy estate
That these great lords, and Margaret our
Queen,

Do seek subversion of thy harmless life ?

Thou never didst them wrong, nor no man
wrong ;

And as the butcher takes away the calf, 210
And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,

Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house,
Even so, remorseless, have they borne him
hence ;

And as the dam runs lowing up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went, 215

And can do nought but wail her darling's
loss,

Even so myself bewails good Gloucester's case

With sad unhelpful tears, and with dimm'd
eyes

Look after him, and cannot do him good,
So mighty are his vowed enemies. 220

His fortunes I will weep, and 'twixt each groan

Say ' Who's a traitor ? Gloucester he is none'. [Exit.

Queen. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams :

Henry my lord is cold in great affairs,
Too full of foolish pity ; and Gloucester's
show 225

Beguiles him as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers ;

Or as the snake, roll'd in a flow'ring bank,
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child

That for the beauty thinks it excellent. 230 Believe me, lords, were none more wise
than I—

And yet herein I judge mine own wit good—This Gloucester should be quickly rid the
world

To rid us from the fear we have of him. 234
Car. That he should die is worthy policy ;
But yet we want a colour for his death.

'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law.
Suf. But, in my mind, that were no
policy :

The King will labour still to save his life ;
The commons haply rise to save his life ; 240
And yet we have but trivial argument,
More than mistrust, that shows him worthy
death.

York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fain as I !
York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death. 245

But, my Lord Cardinal, and you, my Lord of Suffolk,

Say as you think, and speak it from your
souls :

Were't not all one an empty eagle were set

To guard the chicken from a hungry kite
As place Duke Humphrey for the King's Protector ? 250

Queen. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.

Suf. Madam, 'tis true; and were't not madness then

To make the fox surveyor of the fold?

Who being accus'd a crafty murderer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over, ²⁵⁵
Because his purpose is not executed.

No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood,

As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege. ²⁶⁰

And do not stand on quillets how to slay him;

Be it by gins, by snares, by subtlety,
Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit
Which mates him first that first intends deceit. ²⁶⁵

Queen. Thrice-noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done,

For things are often spoke and seldom meant;

But that my heart accordeth with my tongue,

Seeing the deed is meritorious, ²⁷⁰
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,
Say but the word, and I will be his priest.

Car. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,

Ere you can take due orders for a priest;
Say you consent and censure well the deed,

And I'll provide his executioner— ²⁷⁶
I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here is my hand the deed is worthy doing.

Queen. And so say I.

York. And I. And now we three have spoke it, ²⁸⁰

It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Post.

Post. Great lords, from Ireland am I come amain

To signify that rebels there are up
And put the Englishmen unto the sword.

Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime, ²⁸⁵

Before the wound do grow incurable;
For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient stop!

What counsel give you in this weighty cause?

York. That Somerset be sent as Regent thither; ²⁹⁰

'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd,
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,

Had been the Regent there instead of me,
He never would have stay'd in France so long. ²⁹⁵

York. No, not to lose it all as thou hast done.

I rather would have lost my life betimes
Than bring a burden of dishonour home
By staying there so long till all were lost.
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin:
Men's flesh preserv'd so whole do seldom win. ³⁰¹

Queen. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,

If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with;
No more, good York; sweet Somerset, be still.

Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been Regent there, ³⁰⁵

Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.

York. What, worse than nought? Nay, then a shame take all!

Som. And in the number, thee that wishest shame!

Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is.

Th' uncivil kerns of Ireland are in arms ³¹⁰
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen;
To Ireland will you lead a band of men,

Collected choicely, from each county some,
And try your hap against the Irishmen?

York. I will, my lord, so please his Majesty. ³¹⁵

Suf. Why, our authority is his consent,
And what we do establish he confirms;

Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

York. I am content; provide me soldiers, lords,

Whiles I take order for mine own affairs. ³²⁰

Suf. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd.

But now return we to the false Duke Humphrey.

Car. No more of him; for I will deal with him

That henceforth he shall trouble us no more.
And so break off; the day is almost spent.

Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event. ³²⁶

York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days

At Bristol I expect my soldiers;
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suf. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York. [Exeunt all but York.]

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts ³³¹

And change misdoubt to resolution;
Be that thou hop'st to be; or what thou art

Resign to death—it is not worth th' enjoying.

Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born man ³³⁵

And find no harbour in a royal heart.
Faster than spring-time show'rs comes thought on thought,

And not a thought but thinks on dignity.
My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,

Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies. 310

Well, nobles, well, 'tis politicly done
To send me packing with an host of men.
I fear me you but warm the starved snake,
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting
your hearts.

'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them
me; 345

I take it kindly. Yet be well assur'd
You put sharp weapons in a madman's
hands.

Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band,
I will stir up in England some black storm Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell; 350

And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,

Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.
And for a minister of my intent 355

I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentishman,
John Cade of Ashford,

To make commotion, as full well he can,
Under the title of John Mortimer. 359

In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade Oppose himself against a troop of kerns,
And fought so long till that his thighs with darts

Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porpentine;
And in the end being rescu'd, I have
seen

Him caper upright like a wild Morisco, 365
Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells.

Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty kern,
Hath he conversed with the enemy,
And undiscover'd come to me again

And given me notice of their villainies. 370
This devil here shall be my substitute;

For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,
In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble.

By this I shall perceive the commons'
mind,

How they affect the house and claim of
York. 375

Say he be taken, rack'd, and tortured;
I know no pain they can inflict upon him
Will make him say I mov'd him to those
arms.

Say that he thrive, as 'tis great like he will,
Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength. 380

And reap the harvest which that rascal
sow'd;

For Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
And Henry put apart, the next for me.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. Bury St. Edmunds. A room of state.

Enter two or three Murderers running over the stage, from the murder of Duke Humphrey.

1 Mur. Run to my Lord of Suffolk; let him know

We have dispatch'd the Duke, as he commanded.

2 Mur. O that it were to do! What have we done?

Didst ever hear a man so penitent?

Enter SUFFOLK.

1 Mur. Here comes my lord. 5

Suf. Now, sirs, have you dispatch'd this thing?

1 Mur. Ay, my good lord, he's dead.

Suf. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to my house;

I will reward you for this venturous deed.
The King and all the peers are here at hand.

Have you laid fair the bed? Is all things
well, 11

According as I gave directions?

1 Mur. 'Tis, my good lord.

Suf. Away! be gone. [Exit Murderers.]

Sound trumpets. Enter the KING, the QUEEN, CARDINAL, SOMERSET, with Attendants.

King. Go call our uncle to our presence
straight; 15

Say we intend to try his Grace to-day,

If he be guilty, as 'tis published.

Suf. I'll call him presently, my noble lord. [Exit.]

King. Lords, take your places; and, I pray you all,

Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle
Gloucester 20

Than from true evidence, of good esteem,
He be approv'd in practice culpable.

Queen. God forbid any malice should prevail

That faultless may condemn a nobleman!
Pray God he may acquit him of suspicion!

King. I thank thee, Meg; these words content me much. 26

Re-enter SUFFOLK.

How now! Why look'st thou pale? Why tremblest thou?

Where is our uncle? What's the matter
Suffolk?

Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord; Gloucester is dead.

Queen. Marry, God forfend!

Car. God's secret judgment! I did dream
to-night

The Duke was dumb and could not speak a word. [The King swoons]

Queen. How fares my lord? Help, lords
The King is dead.

Som. Rear up his body ; wring him by the nose.

Queen. Run, go, help, help ! O Henry, ope thine eyes ! 35

Suf. He doth revive again ; madam, be patient.

King. O heavenly God !

Queen. How fares my gracious lord ?

Suf. Comfort, for my sovereign ! Gracious Henry, comfort !

King. What, doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me ?

ame he right now to sing a raven's note, 40
Whose dismal tune bereft my vital pow'rs ;
and thinks he that the chirping of a wren,
y crying comfort from a hollow breast,
can chase away the first conceived sound ?
hide not thy poison with such sug'red
words ; 45

ay not thy hands on me ; forbear, I say, their touch affrights me as a serpent's sting.

Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight !
Upon thy eye-balls murderous tyranny sits in grim majesty to fright the world. 50 Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding ;

Yet do not go away ; come, basilisk,
And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight ;
For in the shade of death I shall find joy—n life but double death, now Gloucester's
dead. 55

Queen. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk thus ?

Although the Duke was enemy to him, Yet he most Christian-like laments his
death ;

And for myself—foe as he was to me—
Might liquid tears, or heart-offending
groans, 60

Or blood-consuming sighs, recall his life,
I would be blind with weeping, sick with
groans,

Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking
sighs,

And all to have the noble Duke alive.

What know I how the world may deem of
me ? 65

For it is known we were but hollow friends :
It may be judg'd I made the Duke away ;
So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded,

And princes' courts be fill'd with my
reproach. 69

This get I by his death. Ay me, unhappy !
To be a queen and crown'd with infamy !

King. Ah, woe is me for Gloucester, wretched man !

Queen. Be woe for me, more wretched than he is.

What, dost thou turn away, and hide thy
face ?

I am no loathsome leper—look on me. 75

What, art thou like the adder waxen deaf ?

Be poisonous too, and kill thy forlorn
Queen.

Is all thy comfort shut in Gloucester's
tomb ?

Why, then Dame Margaret was ne'er thy joy.

Erect his statuë and worship it, 80

And make my image but an alehouse sign.

Was I for this nigh wreck'd upon the sea,

And twice by awkward wind from England's bank

Drove back again unto my native clime ?

What boded this but well-forewarning wind

Did seem to say ' Seek not a scorpion's nest, 85

Nor set no footing on this unkind shore ' ?

What did I then but curs'd the gentle gusts,

And he that loos'd them forth their brazen caves ;

And bid them blow towards England's blessed shore, 90

Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock ?

Yet Æolus would not be a murderer,

But left that hateful office unto thee.

The pretty-vaulting sea refus'd to drown
me,

Knowing that thou wouldst have me
drown'd on shore

With tears as salt as sea through thy unkindness ; 96

The splitting rocks cow'r'd in the sinking sands

And would not dash me with their ragged sides,

Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,

Might in thy palace perish Margaret. 100

As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,

When from thy shore the tempest beat us
back,

I stood upon the hatches in the storm ;

And when the dusky sky began to rob

My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,

I took a costly jewel from my neck— 106

A heart it was, bound in with diamonds—

And threw it towards thy land. The sea
receiv'd it ;

And so I wish'd thy body might my heart.

And even with this I lost fair England's view, 110

And bid mine eyes be packing with my
heart,

And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles

For losing ken of Albion's wished coast.

How often have I tempted Suffolk's
tongue—

The agent of thy foul inconstancy— 115

To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did

When he to madding Dido would unfold

His father's acts commenc'd in burning Troy !

Am I not witch'd like her ? Or thou not false like him ?

Ay me, I can no more ! Die, Margaret, ¹²⁰
For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter WARWICK, SALISBURY, and many Commons.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign, That good Duke Humphrey traitorously is murd' red

By Suffolk and the Cardinal Beaufort's
means.

The commons, like an angry hive of bees ¹²⁵
That want their leader, scatter up and
down

And care not who they sting in his revenge.
Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny
Until they hear the order of his death. ¹²⁹

King. That he is dead, good Warwick,
'tis too true ;

But how he died God knows, not Henry.
Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,

And comment then upon his sudden death.

War. That shall I do, my liege. Stay,
Salisbury, ¹³⁴

With the rude multitude till I return. [Exit.
[Exit Salisbury with the Commons.

King. O Thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts—

My thoughts that labour to persuade my
soul

Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's
life !

If my suspect be false, forgive me, God ;
For judgment only doth belong to Thee. ¹⁴⁰

Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips
With twenty thousand kisses and to drain
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears

To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk ;
And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling ; ¹⁴⁵

But all in vain are these mean obsequies ;
And to survey his dead and earthy image,
What were it but to make my sorrow greater ?

Bed put forth with the body. Enter WARWICK.

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.

King. That is to see how deep my grave is made ; ¹⁵⁰

For with his soul fled all my worldly solace,
For, seeing him, I see my life in death.

War. As surely as my soul intends to live With that dread King that took our state upon Him ¹⁵⁴

To free us from his Father's wrathful curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid Upon the life of this thrice-famed Duke.

Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue !

What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow ?

War. See how the blood is settled in his face. ¹⁶⁰

Of have I seen a timely-parted ghost,
Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless,

Being all descended to the labouring heart,
Who, in the conflict that it holds with death, Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy, ¹⁶⁵

Which with the heart there cools, and ne'er returneth

To blush and beautify the cheek again.
But see, his face is black and full of blood ;
His eye-balls further out than when he liv'd, ¹⁶⁹

Staring full ghastly like a strangled man ;
His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling ;

His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd

And tugg'd for life, and was by strength
subdu'd. ¹⁷⁴

Look, on the sheets his hair, you see, is sticking ;

His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugged, ¹⁷⁵

Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodged.

It cannot be but he was murd' red here :
The least of all these signs were probable.

Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the Duke to death ?

Myself and Beaufort had him in protection ;
And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers. ¹⁸¹

War. But both of you were vow'd Duke Humphrey's foes ;

And you, forsooth, had the good Duke to keep.

'Tis like you would not feast him like a
friend ;

And 'tis well seen he found an enemy. ¹⁸⁵

Queen. Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen

As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless
death.

War. Who finds the heifer dead and bleeding fresh,

And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter ? ¹⁹⁰

Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest
But may imagine how the bird was dead
Although the kite soar with unbloody beak ?

Even so suspicious is this tragedy.

Queen. Are you the butcher, Suffolk ?
Where's your knife ? ¹⁹⁵

Is Beaufort term'd a kite ? Where are his talons ?

Suf. I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping
men ;

But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,

That shall be scour'd in his rancorous heart
That slanders me with murder's crimson badge. ²⁰⁰

Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faulty in Duke Humphrey's death. [Exeunt Cardinal, Somerset, and others.]

War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Queen. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit,

Nor cease to be an arrogant controller, ²⁰⁵
Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.

War. Madam, be still—with reverence may I say;

For every word you speak in his behalf
Is slander to your royal dignity.

Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour, ²¹⁰

If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed
Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock
Was graft with crab-tree slip, whose fruit thou art,

And never of the Nevils' noble race. ²¹⁵

War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers thee,

And I should rob the deathsman of his fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,

And that my sovereign's presence makes me mild,

I would, false murd'rous coward, on thy knee ²²⁰

Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech
And say it was thy mother that thou meant'st,

That thou thyself wast born in bastardy;
And, after all this fearful homage done, ²²⁴
Give thee thy hire and send thy soul to hell,
Pernicious blood-sucker of sleeping men.

Suf. Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy blood,

If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.

War. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence.

Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee, ²³⁰

And do some service to Duke Humphrey's ghost. [Exeunt Suffolk and Warwick.]

King. What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted?

Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just;

And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel,

Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted. [A noise within.]

Queen. What noise is this? ²³⁶

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their weapons drawn.

King. Why, how now, lords, your wrathful weapons drawn

Here in our presence! Dare you be so bold?

Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suf. The trait'rous Warwick, with the men of Bury, ²⁴⁰

Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. [To the Commons within] Sirs, stand apart, the King shall know your mind.

Dread lord, the commons send you word by me

Unless Lord Suffolk straight be done to death,

Or banished fair England's territories, ²⁴⁵
They will by violence tear him from your palace

And torture him with grievous ling'ring death.

They say by him the good Duke Humphrey died;

They say in him they fear your Highness' death;

And mere instinct of love and loyalty, ²⁵⁰
Free from a stubborn opposite intent,

As being thought to contradict your liking,
Makes them thus forward in his banishment.

They say, in care of your most royal person,
That if your Highness should intend to sleep ²⁵⁵

And charge that no man should disturb your rest,

In pain of your dislike or pain of death,
Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict,
Were there a serpent seen with forked tongue

That slily glided towards your Majesty, ²⁶⁰
It were but necessary you were wak'd,

Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,

The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal.

And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,

That they will guard you, whe'er you will or no, ²⁶⁵

From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;

With whose envenomed and fatal sting
Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,

They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within] An answer from the King, my Lord of Salisbury! ²⁷⁰

Suf. 'Tis like the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds,

Could send such message to their sovereign;
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,

To show how quaint an orator you are.
But all the honour Salisbury hath won ²⁷⁵
Is that he was the lord ambassador

Sent from a sort of tinkers to the King.

Commons. [Within] An answer from the King, or we will all break in!

King. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me 290

I thank them for their tender loving care;
And had I not been cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do entreat;
For sure my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means.

And therefore by His Majesty I swear, 285
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,
He shall not breathe infection in this air
But three days longer, on the pain of death.

[Exit Salisbury.]

Queen. O Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk!

King. Ungentle Queen, to call him gentle Suffolk! 290

No more, I say; if thou dost plead for him,
Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath.
Had I but said, I would have kept my word;

But when I swear, it is irrevocable.

If after three days' space thou here be'st found 295

On any ground that I am ruler of,
The world shall not be ransom for thy life.
Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me;

I have great matters to impart to thee.

[Exeunt all but Queen and Suffolk.]

Queen. Mischance and sorrow go along with you! 300

Heart's discontent and sour affliction
Be playfellows to keep you company!
There's two of you; the devil make a third,

And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!

Suf. Cease, gentle Queen, these execrations, 305

And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Queen. Fie, coward woman and soft-hearted wretch,

Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy?

Suf. A plague upon them! Wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill as doth the mandrake's groan, 310

I would invent as bitter searching terms,
As curst, as harsh, and horrible to hear,
Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signs of deadly hate,
As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave.
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words, 315

Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint,

Mine hair be fix'd an end, as one distract;
Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban;

And even now my burden'd heart would break, 320

Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!

Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste!

Their sweetest shade a grove of cypress trees!

Their chiefest prospect murd'ring basilisks!
Their softest touch as smart as lizards' stings! 325

Their music frightful as the serpent's hiss,
And boding screech-owls make the consort full!

All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell—

Queen. Enough, sweet Suffolk, thou torment'st thyself;

And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst glass, 330

Or like an overcharged gun, recoil,

And turns the force of them upon thyself.

Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave?

Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from,

Well could I curse away a winter's night, 335

Though standing naked on a mountain top
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,

And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Queen. O, let me entreat thee cease! Give me thy hand, 339

That I may dew it with my mournful tears;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place

To wash away my woeful monuments.

O, could this kiss be printed in thy hand,
That thou might'st think upon these by the seal,

Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee! 345

So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief;

'Tis but surmis'd whiles thou art standing by,

As one that surfeits thinking on a want.

I will repeal thee or, be well assur'd,
Adventure to be banished myself; 350

And banished I am, if but from thee.

Go, speak not to me; even now be gone.

O, go not yet! Even thus two friends condemn'd

Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand leaves,

Loather a hundred times to part than die.
Yet now, farewell; and farewell life with thee! 355

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,

Once by the King and three times thrice by thee.

'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou thence;

A wilderness is populous enough, 360

So Suffolk had thy heavenly company;

For where thou art, there is the world itself,

With every several pleasure in the world;

And where thou art not, desolation. ³⁶⁴
I can no more : Live thou to joy thy life ;
Myself no joy in nought but that thou liv'st.

Enter VAUX.

Queen. Whither goes Vaux so fast ? What news, I prithee ?

Vaux. To signify unto his Majesty
That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death ;
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him
That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the air, ³⁷¹

Blaspheming God, and cursing men on
earth.

Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey's
ghost

Were by his side ; sometime he calls the
King

And whispers to his pillow, as to him, ³⁷⁵
The secrets of his overcharged soul ;

And I am sent to tell his Majesty
That even now he cries aloud for him.

Queen. Go tell this heavy message to the King. [Exit Vaux.

Ay me ! What is this world ! What news are these ! ³⁸⁰

But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor
loss,

Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure ?
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,

And with the southern clouds contend in
tears—

Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows ? ³⁸⁵

Now get thee hence : the King, thou know'st, is coming ;

If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.
Suf. If I depart from thee I cannot live ;

And in thy sight to die, what were it else
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap ? ³⁹⁰

Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe

Dying with mother's dug between its lips ;
Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad ³⁹⁴

And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,
To have thee with thy lips to stop my
mouth ;

So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so into thy body,

And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.
To die by thee were but to die in jest : ⁴⁰⁰

From thee to die were torture more than
death.

O, let me stay, befall what may befall !
Queen. Away ! Though parting be a fretful corrosive,

It is applied to a deathful wound.
To France, sweet Suffolk. Let me hear from thee ; ⁴⁰⁵

For whereso'er thou art in this world's globe

I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.
Suf. I go.

Queen. And take my heart with thee.

[She kisses him.

Suf. A jewel, lock'd into the woeful'st cask

That ever did contain a thing of worth. ⁴¹⁰
Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we :

This way fall I to death.

Queen. This way for me. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE III. London. Cardinal Beaufort's bedchamber.

Enter the KING, SALISBURY, and WARWICK, to the CARDINAL in bed.

King. How fares my lord ? Speak,
Beaufort, to thy sovereign.

Car. If thou be'st Death I'll give thee
England's treasure,

Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live and feel no pain.

King. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life ⁵
Where death's approach is seen so terrible !

War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you
will.

Died he not in his bed ? Where should he
die ?

Can I make men live, whe'er they will or no ? ¹⁰

O, torture me no more ! I will confess.
Alive again ? Then show me where he is ;

I'll give a thousand pound to look upon
him.

He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded
them.

Comb down his hair ; look, look ! it stands
upright, ¹⁵

Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged
soul !

Give me some drink ; and bid the apothecary Bring the strong poison that I bought of
him.

King. O Thou eternal Mover of the heavens, ¹⁹

Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch !
O, beat away the busy meddling fiend

That lays strong siege unto this wretch's
soul,

And from his bosom purge this black despair !

War. See how the pangs of death do make him grin.

Sal. Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably. ²⁵

King. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be !

Lord Card'nal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,

Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope.

He dies, and makes no sign : O God,
forgive him !

War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life.³⁰
 King. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all.
 Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close;
 And let us all to meditation. [Exeunt.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. The coast of Kent.

Enter a Lieutenant, a Shipmaster and his Mate, and WALTER WHITMORE, with Sailors; SUFFOLK and other Gentlemen, as prisoners.
 Lieut. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful day
 Is crept into the bosom of the sea;
 And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades
 That drag the tragic melancholy night;
 Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings
 Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws
 Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.
 Therefore bring forth the soldiers of our prize;
 For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs,
 Here shall they make their ransom on the sand,¹⁰
 Or with their blood stain this discoloured shore.
 Master, this prisoner freely give I thee;
 And thou that art his mate make boot of this;
 The other, Walter Whitmore, is thy share.
 1 Gent. What is my ransom, master, let me know?¹⁵
 Mast. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.
 Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.
 Lieut. What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns,
 And bear the name and port of gentlemen?
 Cut both the villains' throats—for die you shall;²⁰
 The lives of those which we have lost in fight
 Be counterpois'd with such a petty sum!
 1 Gent. I'll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life.
 2 Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.
 Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,²⁵
 [To Suffolk] And therefore, to revenge it, shalt thou die;
 And so should these, if I might have my will.

Lieut. Be not so rash; take ransom, let him live.
 Suf. Look on my George, I am a gentleman:
 Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.
 Whit. And so am I: my name is Walter Whitmore.
 How now! Why start'st thou? What, doth death affright?
 Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death.
 A cunning man did calculate my birth
 And told me that by water I should die; ³⁵
 Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded;
 Thy name is Gualtier, being rightly sounded.
 Whit. Gualtier or Walter, which it is I care not:
 Never yet did base dishonour blur our name
 But with our sword we wip'd away the blot;⁴⁰
 Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge,
 Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd,
 And I proclaim'd a coward through the world.
 Suf. Stay, Whitmore, for thy prisoner is a prince,
 The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.
 Whit. The Duke of Suffolk muffled up in rags?
 Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the Duke:
 Jove sometime went disguis'd, and why not I?
 Lieut. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be.
 Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, King Henry's blood,⁵⁰
 The honourable blood of Lancaster,
 Must not be shed by such a jaded groom
 Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand and helmy stirrup, Bareheaded plodded by my foot-cloth mule
 And thought thee happy when I shook my head?⁵
 How often hast thou waited at my cup,
 Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,
 When I have feasted with Queen Margaret
 Remember it, and let it make thee crest fall'n,
 Ay, and allay thus thy abortive pride,⁶⁰
 How in our voiding-lobby hast thou stood
 And duly waited for my coming forth.
 This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf
 And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.
 Whit. Speak, Captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain?⁶

Lieut. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suf. Base slave, thy words are blunt, and so art thou.

Lieut. Convey him hence, and on our longboat's side Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not, for thy own.

Lieut. Poole!

Suf. Poole?

Lieut. Ay, kennel, puddle, sink, whose filth and dirt

Troubles the silver spring where England drinks;

Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth For swallowing the treasure of the realm. Thy lips, that kiss'd the Queen, shall sweep the ground;

And thou that smil'dst at good Duke Humphrey's death

Against the senseless winds shalt grin in vain,

Who in contempt shall hiss at thee again; And wedded be thou to the hags of hell

For daring to affy a mighty lord

Unto the daughter of a worthless king, Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.

By devilish policy art thou grown great, And, like ambitious Sylla, overgorg'd

With gobbets of thy mother's bleeding heart.

By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France;

The false revolting Normans thorough thee Disdain to call us lord; and Picardy

Hath slain their governors, surpris'd our forts,

And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.

The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all, Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain,

As hating thee, are rising up in arms;

And now the house of York—thrust from the crown

By shameful murder of a guiltless king

And lofty proud encroaching tyranny— Burns with revenging fire, whose hopeful colours

Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine,

Under the which is writ 'Invitis nubibus'. The commons here in Kent are up in arms;

And to conclude, reproach and beggary Is crept into the palace of our King,

And all by thee. Away! convey him hence.

Suf. O that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder

Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges! Small things make base men proud: this villain here,

Being captain of a pinnace, threatens more

Than Bargulus, the strong Illyrian pirate. Drones suck not eagles' blood but rob bee-hives.

It is impossible that I should die By such a lowly vassal as thyself.

Thy words move rage and not remorse in me.

I go of message from the Queen to France: I charge thee waft me safely cross the Channel.

Lieut. Walter—

Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death.

Suf. Gelidus timor occupat artus: it is thee I fear.

Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear before I leave thee.

What, are ye daunted now? Now will ye stoop?

1 Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair.

Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough,

Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour.

Far be it we should honour such as these

With humble suit: no, rather let my head

Stoop to the block than these knees bow to any

Save to the God of heaven and to my king; And sooner dance upon a bloody pole

Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom. True nobility is exempt from fear:

More can I bear than you dare execute.

Lieut. Hail him away, and let him talk no more.

Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,

That this my death may never be forgot— Great men oft die by vile bezonians:

A Roman sworder and banditto slave Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand Stabb'd Julius Cæsar; savage islanders Pompey the Great; and Suffolk dies by pirates. [Exit Walter with Suffolk.

Lieut. And as for these, whose ransom we have set,

It is our pleasure one of them depart; Therefore come you with us, and let him go.

[Exeunt all but the first Gentleman.

Re-enter WHITMORE with Suffolk's body.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie,

Until the Queen his mistress bury it. [Exit.

1 Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle!

His body will I bear unto the King. If he revenge it not, yet will his friends; So will the Queen, that living held him dear.

[Exit with the body.

SCENE II. Blackheath.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS and JOHN HOLLAND.

Geo. Come and get thee a sword, though made of a lath; they have been up these two days.

John. They have the more need to sleep now, then.

Geo. I tell thee Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.

John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare. Well, I say it was never merry world in England since gentlemen came up.

Geo. O miserable age! Virtue is not regarded in handicraftsmen.

John. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

Geo. Nay, more, the King's Council are no good workmen.

John. True; and yet it is said 'Labour in thy vocation'; which is as much to say as 'Let the magistrates be labouring men'; and therefore should we be magistrates.

Geo. Thou hast hit it; for there's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand.

John. I see them! I see them! There's Best's son, the tanner of Wingham—

Geo. He shall have the skins of our enemies to make dog's leather of.

John. And Dick the butcher—

Geo. Then is sin struck down, like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

John. And Smith the weaver—

Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun.

John. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter CADE, DICK the Butcher, SMITH the Weaver, and a Sawyer, with infinite numbers.

Cade. We John Cade, so term'd of our supposed father—

Dick. [Aside] Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings.

Cade. For our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes—command silence.

Dick. Silence!

Cade. My father was a Mortimer—

Dick. [Aside] He was an honest man and a good bricklayer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet—

Dick. [Aside] I knew her well; she was a midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies—

Dick. [Aside] She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces.

Smith. [Aside] But now of late, not able to travel with her furr'd pack, she washes bucks here at home.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house.

Dick. [Aside] Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable, and there was he born, under a hedge, for his father had never a house but the cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Smith. [Aside] 'A must needs; for beggary is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. [Aside] No question of that; for I have seen him whipt three market days together.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. [Aside] He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof.

Dick. [Aside] But methinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i' th' hand for stealing of sheep.

Cade. Be brave, then, for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny; the three-hoop'd pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony to drink small beer. All the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass. And when I am king—as king I will be—

All. God save your Majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people—there shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score, and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers and worship me their lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? That parchment, being scribbld o'er, should undo a man? Some say the bee stings; but I say 'tis the bee's wax; for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now! Who's there?

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham. He can write and read and cast accompt.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade. Here's a villain!

Smith. Has a book in his pocket with red letters in't.

Cade. Nay, then he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations and write court-hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't; the man is a proper man, of mine honour; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die. Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee. What is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters; 'twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone. Dost thou use to write thy name, or hast thou a mark to thyself, like a honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up that I can write my name.

All. He hath confess'd. Away with him! He's a villain and a traitor. 103

Cade. Away with him, I say! Hang him with his pen and inkhorn about his neck.

[Exit one with the Clerk.]

Enter MICHAEL.

Mich. Where's our General?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the King's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down. He shall be encount'ed with a man as good as himself. He is but a knight, is 'a? 112

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels] Rise up, Sir John Mortimer. [Rises] Now have at him! 110

Enter SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD and WILLIAM his brother, with drum and Soldiers.

Staf. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent,

Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down;

Home to your cottages, forsake this groom; The King is merciful if you revolt. 120

W. Staf. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to blood,

If you go forward; therefore yield or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not;

It is to you, good people, that I speak, O'er whom, in time to come, I hope to reign; 125

For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staf. Villain, thy father was a plasterer; And thou thyself a sheerman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

W. Staf. And what of that? 120

Cade. Marry, this; Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March,

Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter, did he not?

Staf. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

W. Staf. That's false. 135

Cade. Ay, there's the question; but I say 'tis true.

The elder of them being put to nurse, Was by a beggar-woman stol'n away, And, ignorant of his birth and parentage, Became a bricklayer when he came to age.

His son am I; deny it if you can. 141

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore he shall be king.

Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this base drudge's words 146

That speaks he knows not what?

All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore get ye gone.

W. Staf. Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this. 149

Cade. [Aside] He lies, for I invented it myself—Go to, sirrah, tell the King from me that for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign; but I'll be Protector over him. 154

Dick. And furthermore, we'll have the Lord Say's head for selling the dukedom of Maine.

Cade. And good reason; for thereby is England main'd and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth and made it an eunuch; and more than that, he can speak French, and therefore he is a traitor. 162

Staf. O gross and miserable ignorance!

Cade. Nay, answer if you can; the Frenchmen are our enemies. Go to, then, I ask but this: can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no? 167

All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.

W. Staf. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,

Assail them with the army of the King. 170

Staf. Herald, away; and throughout every town

Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade;

That those which fly before the battle ends May, even in their wives' and children's sight,

Be hang'd up for example at their doors. 175

And you that be the King's friends, follow me.

[Exeunt the two Staffords and Soldiers.]

Cade. And you that love the commons follow me.

Now show yourselves men; 'tis for liberty. We will not leave one lord, one gentleman; Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon, For they are thrifty honest men and such As would—but that they dare not—take our parts. 182

Dick. They are all in order, and march toward us.

Cade. But then are we in order when we are most out of order. Come, march forward. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Another part of Blackheath.

Alarums to the fight, wherein both the Staffords are slain. Enter CADE and the rest.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

Dick. Here, sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavedst thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house; therefore thus will I reward thee—the Lent shall be as long again as it is, and thou shalt have a licence to kill for a hundred lacking one.

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deserv'st no less. [Putting on Sir Humphrey's brigandine] This monument of the victory will I bear, and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse heels till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The palace.

Enter the KING with a supplication, and the QUEEN with Suffolk's head; the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, and the LORD SAY.

Queen. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind

And makes it fearful and degenerate;
Think therefore on revenge and cease to weep.

But who can cease to weep, and look on this?

Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast;

But where's the body that I should embrace?

Buck. What answer makes your Grace to the rebels' supplication?

King. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat;

For God forbid so many simple souls Should perish by the sword! And I myself,
Rather than bloody war shall cut them short,

Will parley with Jack Cade their general.
But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Queen. Ah, barbarous villains! Hath this lovely face

Rul'd like a wandering planet over me,
And could it not enforce them to relent
That were unworthy to behold the same?

King. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say. Ay, but I hope your Highness shall have his.

King. How now, madam!

Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolk's death?

I fear me, love, if that I had been dead,
Thou wouldst not have mourn'd so much for me.

Queen. No, my love, I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

King. How now! What news? Why com'st thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; fly, my lord!

Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer,

Descended from the Duke of Clarence's house,

And calls your Grace usurper, openly,
And vows to crown himself in Westminster.
His army is a ragged multitude

Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless;
Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death

Hath given them heart and courage to proceed.

All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen,
They call false caterpillars and intend their death.

King. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Killingworth

Until a power be rais'd to put them down.

Queen. Ah, were the Duke of Suffolk now alive,

These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd!

King. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee;
Therefore away with us to Killingworth.

Say. So might your Grace's person be in danger.

The sight of me is odious in their eyes;
And therefore in this city will I stay
And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London Bridge.

The citizens fly and forsake their houses;
The rascal people, thirsting after prey,
Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear

To spoil the city and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord; away, take horse.

King. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.

Queen. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd.

King. [To Lord Say] Farewell, my lord, trust not the Kentish rebels.

Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be betray'd.

Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence,

And therefore am I bold and resolute. 60
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. London. The Tower.

Enter LORD SCALES upon the Tower, walking. Then enter two or three Citizens, below.

Scales. How now! Is Jack Cade slain?

1 Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them. The Lord Mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels. 5

Scales. Such aid as I can spare you shall command,

But I am troubled here with them myself; The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower. But get you to Smithfield, and gather head, And thither I will send you Matthew Goffe; Fight for your King, your country, and your lives; 11

And so, farewell, for I must hence again.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. London. Cannon street.

Enter JACK CADE and the rest, and strikes his staff on London stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London Stone, I charge and command that, of the city's cost, the pissing-conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now henceforward it shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer. 6

Enter a Soldier, running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there.

[They kill him.]

Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call ye Jack Cade more; I think he hath a very fair warning. 10

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come then, let's go fight with them. But first go and set London Bridge on fire; and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. London. Smithfield.

Alarums. MATTHEW GOFFE is slain, and all the rest. Then enter JACK CADE, with his company.

Cade. So, sirs. Now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to th' Inns of Court; down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word. 5

Dick. Only that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

John. [Aside] Mass, 'twill be sore law then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. [Aside] Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese. 11

Cade. I have thought upon it; it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm. My mouth shall be the Parliament of England.

John. [Aside] Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pull'd out. 16

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! Here's the Lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one and twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy. 21

Enter GEORGE BEVIS, with the LORD SAY.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times. Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord! Now art thou within point blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my Majesty for giving up of Normandy unto Mounsieur Basimecu the Dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar school; and whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be us'd, and, contrary to the King, his crown, and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison, and because they could not read, thou hast hang'd them, when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride in a foot-cloth, dost thou not? 43

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou ought'st not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honest men than thou go in their hose and doublets. 47

Dick. And work in their shirt too, as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent—
Dick. What say you of Kent?
Say. Nothing but this: 'tis 'bona terra, mala gens'.

Cade. Away with him, away with him!
He speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will.

Kent, in the Commentaries Cæsar writ,
Is term'd the civil'st place of all this isle.
Sweet is the country, because full of riches;
The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy;
Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.

I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy;
Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.
Justice with favour have I always done;
Pray'rs and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never.

When have I aught exacted at your hands,
But to maintain the King, the realm, and
you?

Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks,

Because my book preferr'd me to the King,
And seeing ignorance is the curse of God, Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to
heaven,

Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits
You cannot but forbear to murder me.

This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings

For your behoof.

Cade. Tut, when struck'st thou one blow
in the field?

Say. Great men have reaching hands. Oft have I struck

Those that I never saw, and struck them
dead.

Geo. O monstrous coward! What, to come behind folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your good.

Cade. Give him a box o' th' ear, and that will make 'em red again.

Say. Long sitting to determine poor men's causes

Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.

Cade. Ye shall have a hempen caudle
then, and the help of hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?

Say. The palsy, and not fear, provokes
me.

Cade. Nay, he nods at us, as who should say 'I'll be even with you'; I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no.
Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me: wherein have I offended
most?

Have I affected wealth or honour? Speak.
Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold?
Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?

Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my
death?

These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding,

This breast from harbouring foul deceitful
thoughts.

O, let me live!

Cade. [Aside] I feel remorse in myself with his words; but I'll bridle it. He shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life. —Away with him! He has a familiar under his tongue; he speaks not o' God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently, and then break into his son-in-law's house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your pray'rs,

God should be so obdurate as yourselves,
How would it fare with your departed
souls?

And therefore yet relent, and save my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye. [Exeunt some with Lord Say]
The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute; there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead ere they have it. Men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish or tongue can tell.

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry, presently.

All. O, brave!

Re-enter one with the heads.

Cade. But is not this braver? Let them kiss one another, for they lov'd well when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night; for with these borne before us instead of maces will we ride through the streets, and at every corner have them kiss. Away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII. Southwark.

Alarum and retreat. Enter again CADE and all his Rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish Street! down Saint Magnus' Corner! Kill and knock down!
Throw them into Thames! [Sound a parley] What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley
when I command them kill?

Enter BUCKINGHAM and old CLIFFORD, attended.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee.

Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from
the King 6

Unto the commons whom thou hast misled;
And here pronounce free pardon to them
all

That will forsake thee and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye, countrymen? Will ye relent 10

And yield to mercy whilst 'tis offer'd you,
Or let a rebel lead you to your deaths?

Who loves the King, and will embrace his pardon,

Fling up his cap and say 'God save his
Majesty!' 14

Who hateth him and honours not his father, Henry the Fifth, that made all France to
quake,

Shake he his weapon at us and pass by.

All. God save the King! God save the King!

Cade. What, Buckingham and Clifford, are ye so brave? And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? Will you needs be hang'd with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark?
I thought ye would never have given out these arms till you had recovered your ancient freedom. But you are all recreants and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces. For me, I will make shift for one; and so God's curse light upon you all! 31

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade!

Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth,
That thus you do exclaim you'll go with
him?

Will he conduct you through the heart of
France, 35

And make the meanest of you earls and dukes?

Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to;
Nor knows he how to live but by the spoil,
Unless by robbing of your friends and us.
Were't not a shame that whilst you live at jar 40

The fearful French, whom you late vanquished,

Should make a start o'er seas and vanquish
you?

Methinks already in this civil broil
I see them lording it in London streets,
Crying 'Villiano!' unto all they meet. 45 Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry

Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's
mercy.

To France, to France, and get what you have lost;

Spare England, for it is your native coast.

Henry hath money; you are strong and manly. 50

God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! We'll follow the King and Clifford. 53

Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude? The name of Henry the Fifth hales them to an hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together to surprise me. My sword make way for me for here is no staying. In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very middest of you! and heavens and honour be witness that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to my heels. [Exit.]

Buck. What, is he fled? Go some, and follow him;

And he that brings his head unto the King Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward. [Exeunt some of them.]

Follow me, soldiers; we'll devise a mean
To reconcile you all unto the King. 65

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IX. Killingworth Castle.

Sound trumpets. Enter KING, QUEEN, and SOMERSET, on the terrace.

King. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne
And could command no more content
than I?

No sooner was I crept out of my cradle
But I was made a king, at nine months old.
Was never subject long'd to be a king 5
As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and old CLIFFORD.

Buck. Health and glad tidings to your Majesty!

King. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor
Cade surpris'd?

Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter, below, Multitudes, with halters about their necks.

Clif. He is fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield, 10

And humbly thus, with halters on their necks,

Expect your Highness' doom of life or
death.

King. Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates,

To entertain my vows of thanks and praise!
Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your
lives, 15

And show'd how well you love your Prince and country.

Continue still in this so good a mind,
And Henry, though he be unfortunate,

Assure yourselves, will never be unkind.
And so, with thanks and pardon to you all,
I do dismiss you to your several countries.

All. God save the King! God save the King! 22

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Please it your Grace to be advertised

The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland

And with a puissant and a mighty power 25
Of gallowglasses and stout kerns

Is marching hitherward in proud array,
And still proclaimeth, as he comes along,

His arms are only to remove from thee
The Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a

traitor. 30

King. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd;

Like to a ship that, having scap'd a tempest,
Is straightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate;

But now is Cade driven back, his men
dispers'd,

And now is York in arms to second him. 35

I pray thee, Buckingham, go and meet him
And ask him what's the reason of these
arms.

Tell him I'll send Duke Edmund to the Tower—

And, Somerset, we will commit thee thither
Until his army be dismiss'd from him. 40

Som. My lord,

I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
Or unto death, to do my country good.

King. In any case be not too rough in terms,

For he is fierce and cannot brook hard
language. 45

Buck. I will, my lord, and doubt not so to deal

As all things shall redound unto your good.

King. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;

For yet may England curse my wretched reign. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE X. Kent. Iden's garden.

Enter CADE.

Cade. Fie on ambitions! Fie on myself, that have a sword and yet am ready to famish! These five days have I hid me in these woods and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me; but now am I so hungry that, if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years, I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick wall have I climb'd into this garden, to see if I can eat grass or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And I think this word
'sallet' was born to do me good; for many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill; and many a time, when I have been dry, and bravely marching, it hath serv'd me instead of a quart-pot to drink in; and now the word

'sallet' must serve me to feed on. 15

Enter IDEN.

Iden. Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court

And may enjoy such quiet walks as these?
This small inheritance my father left me
Contenteth me, and worth a monarchy.
I seek not to wax great by others' waning 20
Or gather wealth I care not with what envy;
Sufficieth that I have maintains my state,
And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. Ah, villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the King by carrying my head to him;
but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich and swallow my sword like a great pin ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatsoe'er thou be, 30

I know thee not; why then should I betray
thee?

Is't not enough to break into my garden
And like a thief to come to rob my grounds,
Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,
But thou wilt brave me with these saucy
terms? 35

Cade. Brave thee? Ay, by the best blood that ever was broach'd, and beard thee too.
Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days, yet come thou and thy five men and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail, I pray God I may never eat grass more. 40

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands,

That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent,
Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man.
Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine;
See if thou canst outface me with thy looks;
Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;
Thy hand is but a finger to my fist, 47
Thy leg a stick compared with this truncheon;

My foot shall fight with all the strength
thou hast,

And if mine arm be heaved in the air, 50
Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.

As for words, whose greatness answers
words,

Let this my sword report what speech
forbears. 53

Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard! Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burlybon'd clown in chines of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech God on my knees thou mayst be turn'd to hobnails. [Here they fight ; Cade falls] O, I am slain! famine and no other hath slain me. Let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'd defy them all. Wither, garden, and be henceforth a burying place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor? 65

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed
And hang thee o'er my tomb when I am dead.

Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point,

But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat 69
To embleze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory. Tell Kent from me she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valour. [Dies.]

Iden. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge. 75

Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare thee!

And as I thrust thy body in with my sword,

So wish I I might thrust thy soul to hell.
Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels 71

Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave,
And there cut off thy most ungracious head,
Which I will bear in triumph to the King,
Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon.

[Exit.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

Enter YORK, and his army of Irish, with drum and colours.

York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right

And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head:

Ring bells aloud, burn bonfires clear and bright,

To entertain great England's lawful king.
Ah, sancta majestas! who would not buy thee dear? 1

Let them obey that knows not how to rule;
This hand was made to handle nought but gold.

I cannot give due action to my words
Except a sword or sceptre balance it.

A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul, 10
On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

[Aside] Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me?

The King hath sent him, sure: I must dissemble.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting. 15

Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,

To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why thou, being a subject as I am,

Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn, 20

Should raise so great a power without his leave,

Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. [Aside] Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great.

O, I could hew up rocks and fight with flint,

I am so angry at these abject terms; 25

And now, like Ajax Telamonius,

On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury.

I am far better born than is the King,

More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts;

But I must make fair weather yet awhile, 30

Till Henry be more weak and I more strong.—

Buckingham, I prithee, pardon me
That I have given no answer all this while;

My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.

The cause why I have brought this army hither 35

Is to remove proud Somerset from the King,

Seditious to his Grace and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part;

But if thy arms be to no other end,
The King hath yielded unto thy demand: 40

The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my pow'rs.

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves; 45

Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,
You shall have pay and everything you wish.

And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons,

As pledges of my fealty and love. 50

I'll send them all as willing as I live:
Lands, goods, horse, armour, anything I have,

Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind submission.

We twain will go into his Highness' tent. 55

Enter the KING, and Attendants.

King. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us,
That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm?

York. In all submission and humility
York doth present himself unto your Highness.

King. Then what intends these forces thou dost bring?

York. To heave the traitor Somerset from hence, 61
And fight against that monstrous rebel Cade,

Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with Cade's head.

Iden. If one so rude and of so mean condition

May pass into the presence of a king, 65
Lo, I present your Grace a traitor's head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

King. The head of Cade! Great God, how just art thou!

O, let me view his visage, being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble. 70

Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him?

Iden. I was, an't like your Majesty.

King. How art thou call'd? And what is thy degree?

Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name;
A poor esquire of Kent that loves his king.

Buck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss 7

He were created knight for his good service.

King. Iden, kneel down. [He kneels] Rise up a knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks,
And will that thou thenceforth attend on us.

Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty, 81

And never live but true unto his liege!

Enter the QUEEN and SOMERSET.

King. See, Buckingham! Somerset comes with th' Queen:

Go, bid her hide him quickly from the Duke.

Queen. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head, 85

But boldly stand and front him to his face.

York. How now! Is Somerset at liberty? Then, York, unloose thy long-imprisoned thoughts

And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.
Shall I endure the sight of Somerset? 90

False king, why hast thou broken faith with me,

Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?
King did I call thee? No, thou art not king;

Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,
Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor. 95

That head of thine doth not become a crown;

Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,
And not to grace an awful princely sceptre.
That gold must round engirt these brows of mine,

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear, 100

Is able with the change to kill and cure.

Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up,
And with the same to act controlling laws.

Give place. By heaven, thou shalt rule no more

O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler. 105

Som. O monstrous traitor! I arrest thee, York,

Of capital treason 'gainst the King and crown.

Obey, audacious traitor; kneel for grace.

York. Wouldst have me kneel? First let me ask of these,

If they can brook I bow a knee to man. 110
Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail:

[Exit Attendant.]

I know, ere they will have me go to ward,
They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement.

Queen. Call hither Clifford; bid him come amain,

To say if that the bastard boys of York 115
Shall be the surety for their traitor father.

[Exit Buckingham.]

York. O blood-bespotted Neapolitan, Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!

The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,
Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those 120

That for my surety will refuse the boys!

Enter EDWARD and RICHARD PLANTAGENET.

See where they come: I'll warrant they'll make it good.

Enter CLIFFORD and his Son.

Queen. And here comes Clifford to deny their bail.

Clif. Health and all happiness to my lord the King! [Kneels.]

York. I thank thee, Clifford. Say, what news with thee? 125

Nay, do not fright us with an angry look.
We are thy sovereign, Clifford, kneel again;
For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

Clif. This is my King, York, I do not mistake;

But thou mistakes me much to think I do.
To Bedlam with him! Is the man grown mad? 131

King. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humour

Makes him oppose himself against his king.

Clif. He is a traitor; let him to the Tower,

And chop away that factious pate of his. 135

Queen. He is arrested, but will not obey;
His sons, he says, shall give their words for
him.

York. Will you not, sons?

Edw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall. 140

Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors have we here!

York. Look in a glass, and call thy image
so:

I am thy king, and thou a false-heart
traitor.

Call hither to the stake my two brave
bears, 144

That with the very shaking of their chains
They may astonish these fell-lurking curs.
Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Enter the EARLS OF WARWICK and SALISBURY.

Clif. Are these thy bears? We'll bait thy bears to death,

And manacle the berard in their chains,
If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting-
place. 150

Rich. Oft have I seen a hot o'erweening cur Run back and bite, because he was withheld;

Who, being suffer'd, with the bear's fell paw,

Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs and cried;

And such a piece of service will you do, 155
If you oppose yourselves to match Lord
Warwick.

Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,

As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!

York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly
anon.

Clif. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves. 160

King. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?

Old Salisbury, shame to thy silver hair,
Thou mad misleader of thy brainsick son!
What, wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian 164

And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?
O, where is faith? O, where is loyalty?
If it be banish'd from the frosty head,
Where shall it find a harbour in the earth?
Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war

And shame thine honourable age with
blood? 170

Why art thou old, and want'st experience?
Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?
For shame! In duty bend thy knee to me,
That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have considered with
myself 175

The title of this most renowned duke,
And in my conscience do repute his Grace
The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

King. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have. 180

King. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin;
But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.
Who can be bound by any solemn vow
To do a murd'rous deed, to rob a man, 185
To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
To reave the orphan of his patrimony,
To wring the widow from her custom'd
right,

And have no other reason for this wrong
But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Queen. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself. 192

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,

I am resolv'd for death or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true. 195

War. You were best to go to bed and dream again

To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm
Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;
And that I'll write upon thy burgonet, 200 Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest,

The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged
staff,

This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,
As on a mountain-top the cedar shows, 205
That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,
Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy
bear

And tread it under foot with all contempt,
Despite the berard that protects the bear.

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious
father, 211

To quell the rebels and their complices.

Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! Speak not in spite,

For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Clif. Foul stigmatic, that's more than thou canst tell. 215

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE II. Saint Albans.

Alarums to the battle. Enter WARWICK.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls ;
And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarum
And dead men's cries do fill the empty air,
Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me.
Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter YORK.

How now, my noble lord ! what, all a-foot ?
York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed ;
But match to match I have encount' red him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well.

Enter old CLIFFORD.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase,
For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York ; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st.

As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

Clif. What seest thou in me, York ?
Why dost thou pause ?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love

But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem

But that 'tis shown ignobly and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword,

As I in justice and true right express it !

Clif. My soul and body on the action both !

York. A dreadful lay ! Address thee instantly.

[They fight and Clifford falls.]

Clif. La fin couronne les œuvres. [Dies.]

York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.

Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will !

Enter young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. Shame and confusion ! All is on the rout ;

Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds

660

Where it should guard. O war, thou son of hell,

Whom angry heavens do make their minister,

Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part
Hot coals of vengeance ! Let no soldier fly.
He that is truly dedicate to war
Hath no self-love ; nor he that loves himself

Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
The name of valour. [Sees his father's body.]

O, let the vile world end

And the premised flames of the last day
Knit earth and heaven together !

Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities and petty sounds

To cease ! Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace and to achieve

The silver livery of advised age,
And in thy reverence and thy chair-days

To die in ruffian battle ? Even at this sight

My heart is turn'd to stone ; and while 'tis mine

It shall be stony. York not our old men spares ;

No more will I their babes. Tears virginal Shall be to me even as the dew to fire ;

And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaims,
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.

Henceforth I will not have to do with pity :
Meet I an infant of the house of York,

Into as many gobbets will I cut it
As wild Medea young Absyrtus did ;

In cruelty will I seek out my fame.
Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house ;

As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders ;

But then Æneas bare a living load,
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine.

[Exit with the body.]

Enter RICHARD and SOMERSET to fight.

Somersets is killed.

Rich. So, lie thou there ;
For underneath an alehouse' paltry sign,

The Castle in Saint Albans, Somerset
Hath made the wizard famous in his death.

Sword, hold thy temper ; heart, be wrathful still :

Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill.

[Exit.]

Fight. Excursions. Enter KING, QUEEN, and Others.

Queen. Away, my lord ! You are slow ;
for shame, away !

King. Can we outrun the heavens ? Good Margaret, stay.

Queen. What are you made of ? You'll nor fight nor fly.

Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,
To give the enemy way, and to secure us

By what we can, which can no more but fly.

[Alarum afar off.]

If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom

Of all our fortunes; but if we haply
scape—

As well we may, if not through your neglect—

We shall to London get, where you are lov'd,

And where this breach now in our fortunes
made

May readily be stopp'd.

Re-enter young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set,

I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;
But fly you must; uncurable discomfit

Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.

Away, for your relief! and we will live
To see their day and them our fortune give.

Away, my lord, away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Fields near Saint Albans.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter YORK, RICHARD, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of
him,

That winter lion, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions and all brush of time

And, like a gallant in the brow of youth, Repairs him with occasion? This happy

day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,

Three times to-day I help him to his horse,
Three times bestrid him, thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any further act; 10
But still where danger was, still there I met him;

And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his will in his old feeble body.

But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter SALISBURY.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day!

By th' mass, so did we all. I thank you,
Richard: 16

God knows how long it is I have to live,
And it hath pleas'd Him that three times

to-day
You have defended me from imminent
death.

Well, lords, we have not got that which we
have; 20

'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing nature.

York. I know our safety is to follow
them;

For, as I hear, the King is fled to London
To call a present court of Parliament. 25

Let us pursue him ere the writs go forth.
What says Lord Warwick? Shall we after

them?

War. After them? Nay, before them, if we can.

Now, by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious
day:

Saint Albans' battle, won by famous York,
Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come. 31

Sound drum and trumpets and to London
all;

And more such days as these to us befall!
[Exeunt.]

MARQUIS OF MONTAGUE.	QUEEN MARGARET.
EARL OF WARWICK.	LADY GREY, afterwards Queen to Edward IV.
EARL OF PEMBROKE.	BONA, sister to the French Queen.
LORD HASTINGS.	Soldiers, Attendants, Messengers, Watchmen, &c.
LORD STAFFORD.

THE SCENE : England and France.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. London. The Parliament House.

Alarum. Enter DUKE OF YORK, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with white roses in their hats.

War. I wonder how the King escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursu'd the horsemen of the north,

He sliely stole away and left his men ;

Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland,

Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,

Cheer'd up the drooping army, and himself, Lord Clifford, and Lord Stafford, all abreast, Charg'd our main battle's front, and, breaking in,

Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham,

Is either slain or wounded dangerous ; I cleft his beaver with a downright blow.

That this is true, father, behold his blood.

Mont. And, brother, here's the Earl of Wiltshire's blood,

Whom I encount'rd as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

[Throwing down Somerset's head.

York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons.

But is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset ?

Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt !

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's head.

War. And so do I. Victorious Prince of York,

Before I see thee seated in that throne Which now the house of Lancaster usurps, I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close.

This is the palace of the fearful King, And this the regal seat. Possess it, York ; For this is thine, and not King Henry's heirs'.

York. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will ;

For hither we have broken in by force.

Nor. We'll all assist you ; he that flies shall die. 30

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk. Stay by me, my lords ;

And, soldiers, stay and lodge by me this night. [They go up.

War. And when the King comes, offer him no violence,

Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce.

York. The Queen this day here holds her parliament, 35

But little thinks we shall be of her council.

By words or blows here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house.

War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd, 39

Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be King,
And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice

Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

York. Then leave me not, my lords ; be resolute :

I mean to take possession of my right.

War. Neither the King, nor he that loves him best, 45

The proudest he that holds up Lancaster, Dares stir a wing if Warwick shake his bells.
I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares.

Resolve thee, Richard ; claim the English crown. [York occupies the throne

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER, and Others, with red roses in their hats.

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits, 50

Even in the chair of state ! Belike he means,

Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer,

To aspire unto the crown and reign as king.
Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father ;

And thine, Lord Clifford ; and you both have vow'd revenge 55

On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.

North. If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me !

Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

West. What, shall we suffer this ? Let's pluck him down ;

My heart for anger burns ; I cannot brook it. 60

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland.

Clif. Patience is for poltroons such as he ;
He durst not sit there had your father liv'd.
My gracious lord, here in the parliament

Let us assail the family of York. 65

North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin ; be it so.

K. Hen. Ah, know you not the city favours them,

And they have troops of soldiers at their beck ?

Exe. But when the Duke is slain they'll quickly fly.

K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart, 70

To make a shambles of the parliament house !

Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats,

Shall be the war that Henry means to use.
Thou factious Duke of York, descend my throne 74

And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet ;
I am thy sovereign.

York. I am thine.

Exe. For shame, come down ; he made thee Duke of York.

York. 'Twas my inheritance, as the earldom was.

Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.

War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown 80

In following this usurping Henry.

Clif. Whom should he follow but his natural king ?

War. True, Clifford ; and that's Richard Duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne ?

York. It must and shall be so ; content thyself. 85

War. Be Duke of Lancaster ; let him be King.

West. He is both King and Duke of Lancaster ;

And that the Lord of Westmoreland shall maintain.

War. And Warwick shall disprove it.
You forget

That we are those which chas'd you from the field, 90

And slew your fathers, and with colours spread

March'd through the city to the palace gates.

North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief ;

And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.

West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons, 95

Thy kinsmen, and thy friends, I'll have more lives

Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.

Clif. Urge it no more ; lest that instead of words

I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger

As shall revenge his death before I stir. 100

War. Poor Clifford, how I scorn his worthless threats!

York. Will you we show our title to the crown?

If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.

K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?

Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York;

Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March: 106

I am the son of Henry the Fifth,
Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop,

And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces.

War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all. 110

K. Hen. The Lord Protector lost it, and not I:

When I was crown'd, I was but nine months old.

Rich. You are old enough now, and yet methinks you lose.

Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head.

Edw. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head. 115

Mont. Good brother, as thou lov'st and honourest arms,

Let's fight it out and not stand cavilling thus.

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the King will fly.

York. Sons, peace!

K. Hen. Peace thou! and give King Henry leave to speak. 120

War. Plantagenet shall speak first. Hear him, lords;

And be you silent and attentive too,
For he that interrupts him shall not live.

K. Hen. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne, 124

Wherein my grandsire and my father sat?

No; first shall war unpeople this my realm;
Ay, and their colours, often borne in France,

And now in England to our heart's great sorrow,

Shall be my winding-sheet. Why faint you, lords?

My title's good, and better far than his. 130

War. Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be King.

K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown.

York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.

K. Hen. [Aside] I know not what to say; my title's weak.—

Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir? 135

York. What then?

K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful King;

For Richard, in the view of many lords,

Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth,
Whose heir my father was, and I am his. 140

York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,

And made him to resign his crown perforce.

War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd,

Think you 'twere prejudicial to his crown?

Exe. No; for he could not so resign his crown 145

But that the next heir shou' succeed and reign.

K. Hen. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?

Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.

York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?

Exe. My conscience tells me he is lawful King. 150

K. Hen. [Aside] All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,

Think not that Henry shall be so depos'd.

War. Depos'd he shall be, in despite of all.

North. Thou art deceiv'd. 'Tis not thy southern power 155

Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,
Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,

Can set the Duke up in despite of me.

Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,

Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence.
May that ground gape, and swallow me alive, 161

Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!

K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart!

York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown.

What mutter you, or what conspire you, lords? 165

War. Do right unto this princely Duke of York;

Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And over the chair of state, where now he sits,

Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps with his foot and the Soldiers show themselves.

K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, hear but one word: 170

Let me for this my life-time reign as king.

York. Confirm the crown to me and to mine heirs,

And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.

K. Hen. I am content. Richard Plantagenet,

Enjoy the kingdom after my decease. 175

Clif. What wrong is this unto the Prince your son!

War. What good is this to England and himself!

West. Base, fearful, and despairing
Henry!

Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us!

West. I cannot stay to hear these articles. 180

North. Nor I.

Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the Queen these news.

West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,

In whose cold blood no spark of honour
bides.

North. Be thou a prey unto the house of
York 185

And die in bands for this unmanly deed!

Clif. In dreadful war mayst thou be overcome,

Or live in peace abandon'd and despis'd!

[Exeunt Northumberland, Clifford and Westmoreland.]

War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.

Exe. They seek revenge, and therefore will not yield. 190

K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!

War. Why should you sigh, my lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, Lord Warwick,
but my son,

Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit.

But be it as it may. [To York] I here entail
The crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever; 195

Conditionally, that here thou take an oath

To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,
To honour me as thy king and sovereign,

And neither by treason nor hostility 196

To seek to put me down and reign thyself.

York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform. [Coming from the throne.]

War. Long live King Henry! Planta-genet, embrace him.

K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons!

York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Exe. Accurs'd be he that seeks to make them foes! 200

[Sennet. Here they come down.]

York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my castle.

War. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.

Norf. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

Mont. And I unto the sea, from whence
I came. [Exeunt the Yorkists.]

K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to
the court. 210

Enter QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE
OF WALES.

Exe. Here comes the Queen, whose looks betray her anger.

I'll steal away.

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I.

Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me; I will follow thee.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.

Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes? 215

Ah, wretched man! Would I had died a
maid,

And never seen thee, never borne thee son,
Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a
father!

Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright
thus? 219

Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I,
Or felt that pain which I did for him once,

Or nourish'd him as I did with my blood, Thou wouldest have left thy dearest heart-blood there

Rather than have made that savage duke thine heir,

And disinherited thine only son. 225

Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit
me.

If you be King, why should not I succeed?

K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret; pardon me, sweet son.

The Earl of Warwick and the Duke enforc'd
me.

Q. Mar. Enforc'd thee! Art thou King and wilt be forc'd? 230

I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous
wretch!

Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me;
And giv'n unto the house of York such
head

As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.
To entail him and his heirs unto the crown,

What is it but to make thy sepulchre 236

And creep into it far before thy time?

Warwick is Chancellor and the lord of Calais;

Stern Falconbridge commands the narrow
seas;

The Duke is made Protector of the realm;
And yet shalt thou be safe? Such safety finds 241

The trembling lamb environed with wolves.
Had I been there, which am a silly woman,

The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes

Before I would have granted to that act. 245

But thou prefer'st thy life before thine
honour;

And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself
Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,

Until that act of parliament be repeal'd
Whereby my son is disinherited. 250

The northern lords that have forsworn thy colours
Will follow mine, if once they see them spread;
And spread they shall be, to thy foul disgrace
And utter ruin of the house of York.
Thus do I leave thee. Come, son, let's away;²⁵⁵

Our army is ready; come, we'll after them.
K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already; get thee gone.

K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with me?

Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies.²⁶⁰

Prince. When I return with victory from the field

I'll see your Grace; till then I'll follow her.

Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger thus. [Exeunt Queen Margaret and the Prince.]

K. Hen. Poor queen! How love to me and to her son

Hath made her break out into terms of rage!²⁶⁵

Revenge'd may she be on that hateful Duke,
Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle
Tire on the flesh of me and of my son!
The loss of those three lords torments my heart.²⁷⁰

I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair;
Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger.

Exe. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Sandal Castle, near Wakefield, in Yorkshire.

Flourish. Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and MONTAGUE.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.

Edw. No, I can better play the orator.

Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter the DUKE OF YORK.

York. Why, how now, sons and brother! at a strife?⁴

What is your quarrel? How began it first?

Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your Grace and us—

The crown of England, father, which is yours.

York. Mine, boy? Not till King Henry be dead.¹⁰

Rich. Your right depends not on his life or death.

Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now.

By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe,

It will outrun you, father, in the end.

York. I took an oath that he should quietly reign.¹⁵

Edw. But for a kingdom any oath may be broken:

I would break a thousand oaths to reign one year.

Rich. No; God forbid your Grace should be forsworn.

York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.

Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak.²⁰

York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.

Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took

Before a true and lawful magistrate That hath authority over him that swears.

Henry had none, but did usurp the place; Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,²⁶

Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous. Therefore, to arms. And, father, do but think

How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown, Within whose circuit is Elysium³⁰

And all that poets feign of bliss and joy. Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest

Until the white rose that I wear be dy'd Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.

York. Richard, enough; I will be King, or die.³⁵

Brother, thou shalt to London presently And whet on Warwick to this enterprise.

Thou, Richard, shalt to the Duke of Norfolk

And tell him privily of our intent.³⁹

You, Edward, shall unto my Lord Cobham, With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise;

In them I trust, for they are soldiers, Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.

While you are thus employ'd, what resteth more

But that I seek occasion how to rise,⁴⁵

And yet the King not privy to my drift, Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter a Messenger.

But, stay. What news? Why com'st thou in such post?

Mess. The Queen with all the northern earls and lords

Intend here to besiege you in your castle.⁵⁰ She is hard by with twenty thousand men; And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.

York. Ay, with my sword. What! think'st thou that we fear them?

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me ;

My brother Montague shall post to London. 54
Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we have left protectors of the King,
With pow'rful policy strengthen themselves
And trust not simple Henry nor his oaths.

Mont. Brother, I go ; I'll win them, fear it not. 60

And thus most humbly I do take my leave. [Exit.

Enter SIR JOHN and SIR HUGH MORTIMER.

York. Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles !

You are come to Sandal in a happy hour ;
The army of the Queen mean to besiege us.

Sir John. She shall not need ; we'll meet her in the field. 65

York. What, with five thousand men ?

Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need.

A woman's general ; what should we fear ?

[A march afar off.

Edw. I hear their drums. Let's set our men in order,

And issue forth and bid them battle straight. 70

York. Five men to twenty ! Though the odds be great,

I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.

Many a battle have I won in France,
When as the enemy hath been ten to one ;
Why should I not now have the like success ? [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Field of battle between Sandal Castle and Wakefield.

Alarum. Enter RUTLAND and his Tutor.

Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to scape their hands ?

Ah, tutor, look where bloody Clifford comes !

Enter CLIFFORD and Soldiers.

Clif. Chaplain, away ! Thy priesthood saves thy life.

As for the brat of this accursed duke,
Whose father slew my father, he shall die. 5

Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.

Clif. Soldiers, away with him !

Tut. Ah, Clifford, murder not this innocent child.

Lest thou be hated both of God and man. [Exit, forced off by Soldiers.

Clif. How now, is he dead already ? Or is it fear 10

That makes him close his eyes ? I'll open them.

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch

That trembles under his devouring paws ;
And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey, 14
And so he comes, to rend his limbs asunder.
Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,
And not with such a cruel threat'ning look !
Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die.
I am too mean a subject for thy wrath ;
Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live. 20
Clif. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy ;
my father's blood

Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should enter.

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it again :

He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives and thine 25

Were not revenge sufficient for me ;
No, if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves
And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,
It could not slake mine ire nor ease my heart.

The sight of any of the house of York 30
Is as a fury to torment my soul ;
And till I root out their accursed line
And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

Therefore—

Rut. O, let me pray before I take my death ! 35

To thee I pray : sweet Clifford, pity me.

Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.

Rut. I never did thee harm ; why wilt thou slay me ?

Clif. Thy father hath.

Rut. But 'twas ere I was born.

Thou hast one son ; for his sake pity me, 40
Lest in revenge thereof, sith God is just,
He be as miserably slain as I.

Ah, let me live in prison all my days ;
And when I give occasion of offence

Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause. 45

Clif. No cause !

Thy father slew my father ; therefore, die. [Stabs him.

Rut. Di faciant laudis summa sit ista tuæ ! [Dies.

Clif. Plantagenet, I come, Plantagenet ;
And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade 50

Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood,
Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both. [Exit.

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter the DUKE OF YORK.

York. The army of the Queen hath got the field.

My uncles both are slain in rescuing me ;
And all my followers to the eager foe

Turn back and fly, like ships before the wind,

Or lambs pursu'd by hunger-starved wolves. 5
My sons—God knows what hath bechanced
them ;
But this I know—they have demean'd themselves
Like men born to renown by life or death.
Three times did Richard make a lane to
me,
And thrice cried ' Courage, father ! fight
it out '. 10
And full as oft came Edward to my side
With purple falchion, painted to the hilt
In blood of those that had encount' red
him.
And when the hardiest warriors did retire, Richard cried ' Charge, and give no foot of
ground '. 15
And cried ' A crown, or else a glorious
tomb !
A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre ! '
With this we charg'd again ; but out alas !
We bodg'd again ; as I have seen a swan
With bootless labour swim against the tide
And spend her strength with over-matching waves. [A short alarum within.
Ah, hark ! The fatal followers do pursue,
And I am faint and cannot fly their fury ;
And were I strong, I would not shun their fury.
The sands are numb' red that make up my
life ; 25
Here must I stay, and here my life must
end.
Enter QUEEN MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTH-UMBERLAND, the PRINCE OF WALES, and Soldiers.
Come, bloody Clifford, rough Northumber-
land,
I dare your quenchless fury to more rage ;
I am your butt, and I abide your shot.
North. Yield to our mercy, proud
Plantagenet. 30
Clif. Ay, to such mercy as his ruthless
arm
With downright payment show'd unto my
father.
Now Phaethon hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noontide prick.
York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth 35
A bird that will revenge upon you all ;
And in that hope I throw mine eyes to
heaven,
Scorning whate'er you can afflict me with.
Why come you not ? What ! multitudes, and fear ?
Clif. So cowards fight when they can fly
no further ; 40
So doves do peck the falcon's piercing
talons ;
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their
lives,

Breathe out invectives ' gainst the officers.
York. O Clifford, but bethink thee once
again,
And in thy thought o'errun my former
time ;
And, if thou canst for blushing, view this
face,
And bite thy tongue that slanders him with cowardice
Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere this !
Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word,
But buckler with thee blows, twice two for
one. 50
Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford ; for a thousand causes
I would prolong awhile the traitor's life.
Wrath makes him deaf ; speak thou,
Northumberland.
North. Hold, Clifford ! do not honour him
so much
To prick thy finger, though to wound his
heart. 55
What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,
For one to thrust his hand between his
teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot
away ?
It is war's prize to take all vantages ;
And ten to one is no impeach of valour. 60
[They lay hands on York, who struggles.
Clif. Ay, ay, so strives the woodcock with the gin.
North. So doth the cony struggle in the net.
York. So triumph thieves upon their con-quer'd booty ;
So true men yield, with robbers so o'ermatch'd.
North. What would your Grace have done unto him now ? 65
Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,
Come, make him stand upon this molehill
here
That taught at mountains with outstretched arms,
Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.
What, was it you that would be England's
king ? 70
Was't you that revell'd in our parliament
And made a preachment of your high descent ?
Where are your mess of sons to back you
now ?
The wanton Edward and the lusty George ?
And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy, 75
Dicky your boy, that with his grumbling voice
Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies ?
Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland ?

Look, York: I stain'd this napkin with the blood

That valiant Clifford with his rapier's point
Made issue from the bosom of the boy;
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.
Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly,

I should lament thy miserable state.
I prithee grieve to make me merry, York.
What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails

That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death?
Why art thou patient, man? Thou shouldst be mad;

And I to make thee mad do mock thee thus.
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.

Thou wouldst be fee'd, I see, to make me
sport;

York cannot speak unless he wear a crown.
A crown for York!—and, lords, bow low to
him.

Hold you his hands whilst I do set it on.
[Putting a paper crown on his head.]

Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king!
Ay, this is he that took King Henry's chair,
And this is he was his adopted heir.
But how is it that great Plantagenet Is crown'd so soon and broke his solemn oath?

As I bethink me, you should not be King Till our King Henry had shook hands with
death.

And will you pale your head in Henry's
glory,

And rob his temples of the diadem,
Now in his life, against your holy oath?
O, 'tis a fault too too unpardonable!

Off with the crown and with the crown his
head;

And, whilst we breathe, take time to do him
dead.

Clif. That is my office, for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the orisons
he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,

Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth!

How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex
To triumph like an Amazonian trull

Upon their woes whom fortune captivates!
But that thy face is visard-like, unchanging,
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush.

To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,

Were shame enough to shame thee, wert
thou not shameless.

Thy father bears the type of King of Naples.

Of both the Sicils and Jerusalem,
Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.
Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?

It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud
queen;

Unless the adage must be verified,
That beggars mounted run their horse to
death.

'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud;

But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small.

'Tis virtue that doth make them most admir'd;

The contrary doth make thee wond'ered at.
'Tis government that makes them seem divine;

The want thereof makes thee abominable.
Thou art as opposite to every good

As the Antipodes are unto us,
Or as the south to the septentrion.

O tiger's heart wrapp'd in a woman's hide!
How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the child,

To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,
And yet be seen to bear a woman's face?

Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible:
Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless.

Bid'st thou me rage? Why, now thou hast thy wish;

Wouldst have me weep? Why, now thou hast thy will;

For raging wind blows up incessant
showers,

And when the rage allays, the rain begins.
These tears are my sweet Rutland's
obsequies;

And every drop cries vengeance for his
death

'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false Frenchwoman.

North. Beshrew me, but his passions move me so

That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.

York. That face of his the hungry cannibals

Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood;

But you are more inhuman, more inexorable—

O, ten times more—than tigers of Hyrcania.
See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears.

This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet boy,

And I with tears do wash the blood away.
Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this;

And if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;

Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling
tears

And say 'Alas, it was a piteous deed!'

There, take the crown, and with the crown
my curse ; 164

And in thy need such comfort come to thee
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand !

Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the
world ;

My soul to heaven, my blood upon your
heads !

North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin, 169

I should not for my life but weep with him,
To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul.

Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my Lord
Northumberland ?

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Clif. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death. [Stabbing him.

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king. [Stabbing him.

York. Open Thy gate of mercy, gracious
God !

My soul flies through these wounds to seek out Thee. [Dies.

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates ; 179

So York may overlook the town of York.
[Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT TWO

SCENE I. A plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

A march. Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and their Power.

Edw. I wonder how our princely father
scap'd,

Or whether he be scap'd away or no
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit.

Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news ;

Had he been slain, we should have heard the news ; 5

Or had he scap'd, methinks we should have heard

The happy tidings of his good escape.

How fares my brother ? Why is he so sad ?

Rich. I cannot joy until I be resolv'd
Where our right valiant father is become. 10

I saw him in the battle range about,
And watch'd him how he singled Clifford
forth.

Methought he bore him in the thickest troop

As doth a lion in a herd of neat ; 14

Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs,
Who having pinch'd a few and made them
cry,

The rest stand all aloof and bark at him.
So far'd our father with his enemies ;

So fled his enemies my warlike father.
Methinks 'tis prize enough to be his son. 20

See how the morning opes her golden gates
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun.
How well resembles it the prime of youth, Trim'd like a younker prancing to his
love !

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns ? 25

Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun ;

Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.

See, see ! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,

As if they vow'd some league inviolable. 30

Now are they but one lamp, one light, one
sun.

In this the heaven figures some event.
Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.

I think it cites us, brother, to the field,
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet, 35

Each one already blazing by our meeds, Should notwithstanding join our lights
together

And overshadow the earth, as this the world.
Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear

Upon my target three fair shining suns. 40

Rich. Nay, bear three daughters—by your leave I speak it,

You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger, blowing.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell

Some dreadful story hanging on thy
tongue ?

Mess. Ah, one that was a woeful looker-
on 45

When as the noble Duke of York was slain,
Your princely father and my loving lord !

Edw. O, speak no more ! for I have heard too much.

Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all. 49

Mess. Environed he was with many foes,
And stood against them as the hope of Troy

Against the Greeks that would have ent'red
Troy.

But Hercules himself must yield to odds ;
And many strokes, though with a little axe,

Hews down and fells the hardest-timber'd
oak. 55

By many hands your father was subdu'd ;
But only slaught'ed by the ireful arm

Of unrelenting Clifford and the Queen,
Who crown'd the gracious Duke in high

despite,
Laugh'd in his face ; and when with grief
he wept, 60

The ruthless Queen gave him to dry his
cheeks

A napkin steeped in the harmless blood
Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford

slain ;

And after many scorns, many foul taunts,
 They took his head, and on the gates of
 York
 They set the same; and there it doth remain,
 The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.
Edw. Sweet Duke of York, our prop to lean upon,
 Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no
 stay.
 O Clifford, boist'rous Clifford, thou hast
 slain
 The flow'r of Europe for his chivalry;
 And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd
 him,
 For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd thee.
 Now my soul's palace is become a prison.
 Ah, would she break from hence, that this my body
 Might in the ground be closed up in rest!
 For never henceforth shall I joy again;
 Never, O never shall I see more joy.
Rich. I cannot weep, for all my body's moisture Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning heart;
 Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden,
 For self-same wind that I should speak
 withal
 Is kindling coals that fires all my breast,
 And burns me up with flames that tears would quench.
 To weep is to make less the depth of grief.
 Tears then for babes; blows and revenge
 for me!
Richard, I bear thy name; I'll venge thy
 death,
 Or die renowned by attempting it.
Edw. His name that valiant duke hath left with thee;
 His dukedom and his chair with me is
 left.
Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's
 bird,
 Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun;
 For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom, say:
 Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.
March. Enter WARWICK, MONTAGUE, and their Army.
War. How now, fair lords! What fare?
 What news abroad?
Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recount
 Our baleful news and at each word's deliverance
 Stab poinards in our flesh till all were told,
 The words would add more anguish than the wounds.
 O valiant lord, the Duke of York is slain!

Edw. O Warwick, Warwick! that Plantagenet
 Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption
 Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death.
War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news
 in tears;
 And now, to add more measure to your woes,
 I come to tell you things sith then befall'n.
 After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
 Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp,
 Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
 Were brought me of your loss and his depart.
 I, then in London, keeper of the King, Muster'd my soldiers, gathered flocks of
 friends,
 And very well appointed, as I thought,
 March'd toward Saint Albans to intercept the Queen,
 Bearing the King in my behalf along;
 For by my scouts I was advertised
 That she was coming with a full intent
 To dash our late decree in parliament Touching King Henry's oath and your succession.
 Short tale to make—we at St. Albans met,
 Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely
 fought;
 But whether 'twas the coldness of the King,
 Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen,
 That robb'd my soldiers of their heated
 spleen,
 Or whether 'twas report of her success,
 Or more than common fear of Clifford's
 rigour,
 Who thunders to his captives blood and
 death,
 I cannot judge; but, to conclude with truth,
 Their weapons like to lightning came and
 went:
 Our soldiers', like the night-owl's lazy flight
 Or like an idle thresher with a flail, Fell gently down, as if they struck their
 friends.
 I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
 With promise of high pay and great rewards,
 But all in vain; they had no heart to
 fight,
 And we in them no hope to win the day;
 So that we fled: the King unto the Queen;
 Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and
 myself,
 In haste post-haste are come to join with
 you;
 For in the marches here we heard you were Making another head to fight again.
Edw. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?

And when came George from Burgundy to England ?

War. Some six miles off the Duke is with the soldiers ;

And for your brother, he was lately sent ¹⁴⁵
From your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Rich. 'Twas odds, belike, when valliant Warwick fled.

Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er till now his scandal of retire. ¹⁵⁰

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear ;

For thou shalt know this strong right hand
of mine

Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's
head

And wring the awful sceptre from his fist,
Were he as famous and as bold in war ¹⁵⁵
As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, Lord Warwick ;
blame me not.

'Tis love I bear thy glories makes me speak.
But in this troublous time what's to be done ? ¹⁵⁹

Shall we go throw away our coats of steel
And wrap our bodies in black mourning-gowns,

Numbering our Ave-Maries with our beads?
Or shall we on the helmets of our foes

Tell our devotion with revengeful arms ?
If for the last, say ' Ay ', and to it, lords. ¹⁶⁵

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out ;

And therefore comes my brother Montague.
Attend me, lords. The proud insulting
Queen,

With Clifford and the haught Northumber-
land,

And of their feather many moe proud birds,
Have wrought the easy-melting King like
wax. ¹⁷¹

He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament ;
And now to London all the crew are gone
To frustrate both his oath and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster.
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong. ¹⁷⁷

Now if the help of Norfolk and myself,
With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March,

Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure, ¹⁸⁰

Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,

Why, Via ! to London will we march amain,
And once again bestride our foaming steeds,
And once again cry ' Charge upon our foes ! '

But never once again turn back and fly.

Rich. Ay, now methinks I hear great Warwick speak. ¹⁸⁶

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day
That cries ' Retire ! ' if Warwick bid him
stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will
I lean ;

And when thou fail'st—as God forbid the hour !— ¹⁹⁰

Must Edward fall, which peril heaven
forfend.

War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke
of York ;

The next degree is England's royal throne,
For King of England shalt thou be proclaim'd

In every borough as we pass along ; ¹⁹⁵
And he that throws not up his cap for joy
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.

King Edward, valiant Richard, Montague,
Stay we no longer, dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets and about our task.

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel, ²⁰¹

As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up drums. God and Saint George for us !

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now ! what news ? ²⁰⁵

Mess. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me

The Queen is coming with a puissant host,
And craves your company for speedy
counsel.

War. Why, then it sorts ; brave warriors, let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Before York.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN
MARGARET, the PRINCE OF WALES, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, with drum and trumpets.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.

Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown.

Doth not the object cheer your heart, my
lord ?

K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck— ⁵

To see this sight, it irks my very soul.
Withhold revenge, dear God ; 'tis not my fault,

Nor wittingly have I infring'd my vow.

Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity

And harmful pity must be laid aside. ¹⁰
To whom do lions cast their gentle looks ?

Not to the beast that would usurp their den.

Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick ?

Not his that spoils her young before her face.
 Who scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting ?¹⁵
 Not he that sets his foot upon her back.
 The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on,
 And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.
 Ambitious York did level at thy crown,
 Thou smiling while he knit his angry brows.
 He, but a Duke, would have his son a king,
 And raise his issue like a loving sire :²²
 Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son,
 Didst yield consent to disinherit him,
 Which argued thee a most unloving father.
 Unreasonable creatures feed their young ;
 And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,²⁷
 Yet, in protection of their tender ones,
 Who hath not seen them—even with those wings
 Which sometime they have us'd with fearful flight—³⁰
 Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest,
 Offering their own lives in their young's defence ?
 For shame, my liege, make them your precedent !
 Were it not pity that this goodly boy
 Should lose his birthright by his father's fault,³⁵
 And long hereafter say unto his child
 What my great-grandfather and grandsire got My careless father fondly gave away ' ?
 Ah, what a shame were this ! Look on the boy ;
 And let his manly face, which promiseth⁴⁰
 Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart
 To hold thine own and leave thine own with him.
K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,
 Inferring arguments of mighty force.⁴⁴
 But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear
 That things ill got had ever bad success ?
 And happy always was it for that son
 Whose father for his hoarding went to hell ?
 'I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind ;
 And would my father had left me no more !
 For all the rest is held at such a rate⁵¹
 As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep
 Than in possession any jot of pleasure.
 Ah, cousin York ! would thy best friends did know
 How it doth grieve me that thy head is here !⁵⁵
Q. Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirits ;
 our foes are nigh,
 And this soft courage makes your followers faint.

You promis'd knighthood to our forward son ;
 Unsheathe your sword and dub him presently.
*Edward, kneel down.*⁶⁰
K. Hen. Edward Plantagent, arise a knight ;
 And learn this lesson : Draw thy sword in right.
Prince. My gracious father, by your kingly leave,
 I'll draw it as apparent to the crown,
 And in that quarrel use it to the death.⁶⁵
Clif. Why, that is spoken like a toward prince.

Enter a Messenger.
Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness ;
 For with a band of thirty thousand men
 Comes Warwick, backing of the Duke of York,⁶⁹
 And in the towns, as they do march along,
 Proclaims him king, and many fly to him.
 Darraign your battle, for they are at hand.
Clif. I would your Highness would depart the field :
 The Queen hath best success when you are absent.
Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune.⁷⁵
K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too ; therefore I'll stay.
North. Be it with resolution, then, to fight.
Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble lords,
 And hearten those that fight in your defence.
 Unsheathe your sword, good father ; cry
 ' Saint George !'⁸⁰
March. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, and Soldiers.
Edw. Now, perjur'd Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace
 And set thy diadem upon my head,
 Or bide the mortal fortune of the field ?
Q. Mar. Go rate thy minions, proud insulting boy.
 Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms⁸⁵
 Before thy sovereign and thy lawful king ?
Edw. I am his king, and he should bow his knee.
 I was adopted heir by his consent :
 Since when, his oath is broke ; for, as I hear,
 You that are King, though he do wear the crown,⁹⁰
 Have caus'd him by new act of parliament
 To blot out me and put his own son in.
Clif. And reason too :
 Who should succeed the father but the son ?

- Rich.* Are you there, butcher ? O, I cannot speak ! 95
- Clif.* Ay, crook-back, here I stand to answer thee,
- Or any he, the proudest of thy sort.
- Rich.* 'Twas you that kill'd young Rutland, was it not ?
- Clif.* Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.
- Rich.* For God's sake, lords, give signal to the fight. 100
- War.* What say'st thou, Henry ? Wilt thou yield the crown ?
- Q. Mar.* Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick ! Dare you speak ?
- When you and I met at Saint Albans last Your legs did better service than your hands.
- War.* Then 'twas my turn to fly, and now 'tis thine. 105
- Clif.* You said so much before, and yet you fled.
- War.* 'Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.
- North.* No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay.
- Rich.* Northumberland, I hold thee reverently.
- Break off the parley ; for scarce I can refrain 110
- The execution of my big-swol'n heart
Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer.
- Clif.* I slew thy father ; call'st thou him a child ?
- Rich.* Ay, like a dastard and a treacherous coward,
- As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland ; 115
- But ere sunset I'll make thee curse the deed.
- K. Hen.* Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak.
- Q. Mar.* Defy them then, or else hold close thy lips.
- K. Hen.* I prithee give no limits to my tongue :
- I am a king, and privileg'd to speak. 120
- Clif.* My liege, the wound that bred this meeting here Cannot be cur'd by words ; therefore be still.
- Rich.* Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword.
- By Him that made us all, I am resolv'd
That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue. 125
- Edw.* Say, Henry, shall I have my right, or no ?
- A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day
That ne'er shall dine unless thou yield the crown.
- War.* If thou deny, their blood upon thy head ;
- For York in justice puts his armour on. 130
- Prince.* If that be right which Warwick says is right,
There is no wrong, but every thing is right.
- Rich.* Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands ;
For well I wot thou hast thy mother's tongue.
- Q. Mar.* But thou art neither like thy sire nor dam ;
But like a foul misshapen stigmatic,
Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided,
As venom toads or lizards' dreadful stings
- Rich.* Iron of Naples hid with English gilt, Whose father bears the title of a king— 140
As if a channel should be call'd the sea—
Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught,
To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart ?
- Edw.* A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns 145
To make this shameless callet know herself
Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou,
Although thy husband may be Menelaus
And ne'er was Agamemnon's brother wrong'd
By that false woman as this king by thee
His father revell'd in the heart of France
And tam'd the King, and made the Dauphin stoop ; 150
And had he match'd according to his state,
He might have kept that glory to this day
But when he took a beggar to his bed
And grac'd thy poor sire with his bridal day, 155
Even then that sunshine brew'd a show' for him
That wash'd his father's fortunes forth o France
And heap'd sedition on his crown at home
For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy pride ?
Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept ; 160
And we, in pity of the gentle King,
Had slipp'd our claim until another age.
- Geo.* But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,
And that thy summer bred us no increase
We set the axe to thy usurping root ; 165
And though the edge hath something hit ourselves,
Yet know thou, since we have begun to strike,
We'll never leave till we have hewn thee down,
Or bath'd thy growing with our heated bloods. 170
- Edw.* And in this resolution I defy thee
Not willing any longer conference,
Since thou deniest the gentle King to speak.

Sound trumpets; let our bloody colours wave,

And either victory or else a grave!

Q. Mar. Stay, Edward.

175

Edw. No, wrangling woman, we'll no longer stay;

These words will cost ten thousand lives this day. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. A field of battle between Towton and Saxton, in Yorkshire.

Alarum; excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,

I lay me down a little while to breathe;
For strokes receiv'd and many blows repaid
Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength,

4

And spite of spite needs must I rest awhile.

Enter EDWARD, running.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven, or strike, ungentle death;

For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.

War. How now, my lord! What hap? What hope of good?

Enter GEORGE.

Geo. Our hap is lost, our hope but sad despair;

Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us. 10
What counsel give you? Whither shall we fly?

Edw. Bootless is flight: they follow us with wings;

And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk, 15

Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance;

And in the very pangs of death he cried,
Like to a dismal clangor heard from far,
Warwick, revenge! Brother, revenge my death.

So, underneath the belly of their steeds, 20
That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,

He noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood.

Will I kill my horse, because I will not fly.

Why stand we like soft-hearted women here, 25

Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage,
And look upon, as if the tragedy

Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors?

Were on my knee I vow to God above 30
I never pause again, never stand still,

Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine

Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine,

And in this vow do chain my soul to thine!

And ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face 35

I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to Thee,

Thou setter-up and plucker-down of kings,
Beseeching Thee, if with Thy will it stands

That to my foes this body must be prey, Yet that Thy brazen gates of heaven may

ope

40

And give sweet passage to my sinful soul.
Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,

Where'er it be, in heaven or in earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand; and, gentle Warwick,

Let me embrace thee in my weary arms. 45
I that did never weep now melt with woe

That winter should cut off our spring-time so.

War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
And give them leave to fly that will not stay,

50

And call them pillars that will stand to us;
And if we thrive, promise them such rewards

As victors wear at the Olympian games.
This may plant courage in their quailing

breasts,

For yet is hope of life and victory. 55

Forslow no longer; make we hence amain. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone.

Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York,
And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,

Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.

Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone. 5

This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York;

And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland;

And here's the heart that triumphs in their death

And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and brother

To execute the like upon thyself; 10
And so, have at thee! [They fight.

Enter WARWICK; Clifford flies.

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase;

For I myself will hunt this wolf to death.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY alone.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,
When dying clouds contend with growing light,
What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,
Can neither call it perfect day nor night.
Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea
Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind;

Now sways it that way, like the selfsame sea

Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind.
Sometime the flood prevails, and then the wind;

Now one the better, then another best;
Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
Yet neither conqueror nor conquered.

So is the equal poise of this fell war.

Here on this molehill will I sit me down.

To whom God will, there be the victory!

For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
Have chid me from the battle, swearing both

They prosper best of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead, if God's good will were so!

For what is in this world but grief and woe?

O God! methinks it were a happy life

To be no better than a homely swain;

To sit upon a hill, as I do now,

To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,

Thereby to see the minutes how they run—

How many makes the hour full complete,

How many hours brings about the day,

How many days will finish up the year,

How many years a mortal man may live.

When this is known, then to divide the times—

So many hours must I tend my flock;

So many hours must I take my rest;

So many hours must I contemplate;

So many hours must I sport myself;

So many days my ewes have been with young;

So many weeks ere the poor fools will ean;

So many years ere I shall shear the fleece:

So minutes, hours, days, months, and years,

Pass'd over to the end they were created,

Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.

Ah, what a life were this! how sweet!
how lovely!

Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade

To shepherds looking on their silly sheep,

Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy

To kings that fear their subjects' treachery?

O yes, it doth; a thousand-fold it doth.

And to conclude: the shepherd's home curds,

His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle

His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade

All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,

Is far beyond a prince's delicates—

His viands sparkling in a golden cup,

His body couched in a curious bed,

When care, mistrust, and treason waits him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that hath kill'd his Father, at one door; and a Father that hath kill'd his Son, at another door.

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits n body.

This man whom hand to hand I slew fight

May be possessed with some store crowns;

And I, that haply take them from him now

May yet ere night yield both my life and them

To some man else, as this dead man do me.

Who's this? O God! It is my father's face

Whom in this conflict I unwares have kill'd.

O heavy times, begetting such events!

From London by the King was I press'd forth;

My father, being the Earl of Warwick man,

Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;

And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life

Have by my hands of life bereaved him.

Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did.

And pardon, father, for I knew not thee.

My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks;

And no more words till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!

Whiles lions war and battle for their de

Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity.

Weep, wretched man; I'll aid thee tearful tear;

And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war

Be blind with tears and break o'ercharg'd with grief.

Enter Father, bearing of his Son.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hath resist'd me,

Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold;

For I have bought it with an hundred blows.

But let me see. Is this our foeman's face?

Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son!

Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee,

Throw up thine eye! See, see what show arise,

Blown with the windy tempest of my heart Upon thy wounds, that kills mine eye and
heart!

O, pity, God, this miserable age!
What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly,
Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural, ⁹⁰
This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!

O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon,
And hat's bereft thee of thy life too late!

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common grief!

O that my death would stay these ruthless deeds! ⁹⁵

O pity, pity, gentle heaven, pity!
The red rose and the white are on his face,
The fatal colours of our striving houses:
The one his purple blood right well resembles;

The other his pale cheeks, methinks, presentheth. ¹⁰⁰

Wither one rose, and let the other flourish!
If you contend, a thousand lives must perish.

Son. How will my mother for a father's
death

Take on with me, and ne'er be satisfied!

Fath. How will my wife for slaughter of my son ¹⁰⁵

Shed seas of tears, and ne'er be satisfied!

K. Hen. How will the country for these woeful chances

Misthink the King, and not be satisfied!

Son. Was ever son so rued a father's
death?

Fath. Was ever father so bemoan'd his son? ¹¹⁰

K. Hen. Was ever king so griev'd for subjects' woe?

Much is your sorrow; mine ten times so
much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill. [Exit with the body.

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet; ¹¹⁴

My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre,
For from my heart thine image ne'er shall
go;

My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell;
And so obsequious will thy father be,
Even for the loss of thee, having no more,
As Priam was for all his valiant sons. ¹²⁰

I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that will,

For I have murdered where I should not kill. [Exit with the body.

K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much over-gone with care,

Here sits a king more woeful than you are.

Alarums; excursions. Enter QUEEN MAR-GARET, PRINCE OF WALES, and EXETER.

Prince. Fly, father, fly; for all your friends are fled, ¹²⁵

And Warwick rages like a chafed bull.

Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.

Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord; towards Berwick post amain.

Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds

Having the fearful flying hare in sight, ¹³⁰
With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath,

And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful
hands,

Are at our backs; and therefore hence amain.

Exe. Away! for vengeance comes along with them.

Nay, stay not to expostulate; make speed;
Or else come after. I'll away before. ¹³⁶

K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet Exeter.

Not that I fear to stay, but love to go Whither the Queen intends. Forward;
away! [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Another part of the field.

A loud alarum. Enter CLIFFORD, wounded.

Clif. Here burns my candle out; ay, here
it dies,

Which, whiles it lasted, gave King Henry light.

O Lancaster, I fear thy overthrow
More than my body's parting with my soul!

My love and fear glu'd many friends to thee;
And, now I fall, thy tough commixture

melts, ⁶

Impairing Henry, strength'ning misproud
York.

The common people swarm like summer
flies;

And whither fly the gnats but to the sun?

And who shines now but Henry's enemies?

O Phœbus, hadst thou never given consent

That Phaethon should check thy fiery steeds, ¹²

Thy burning car never had scorch'd the
earth!

And, Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings
should do,

Or as thy father and his father did, ¹⁵

Giving no ground unto the house of York,

They never then had sprung like summer
flies;

I and ten thousand in this luckless realm

Had left no mourning widows for our death;

And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace. ²⁰

For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air?

And what makes robbers bold but too much
lenity?

Bootless are plaints, and cureless are my wounds.

No way to fly, nor strength to hold out
flight.

The foe is merciless and will not pity; ²⁵

For at their hands I have deserv'd no pity.

The air hath got into my deadly wounds,

And much effuse of blood doth make me faint.

Come, York and Richard, Warwick and the rest ;

I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms : split my breast. [He faints.

Alarum and retreat. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords. Good fortune bids us pause
And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks.

Some troops pursue the bloody-minded Queen

That led calm Henry, though he were a king,

As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust, 35
Command an argosy to stem the waves.

But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them ?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape ;

For, though before his face I speak the words,

Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave ;

And, whereso'er he is, he's surely dead. 40

[Clifford groans, and dies.

Rich. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave ?

A deadly groan, like life and death's departing.

See who it is.

Edw. And now the battle's ended,
If friend or foe, let him be gently used. 45

Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford ;

Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch

In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,

But set his murd'ring knife unto the root
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring— 50

I mean our princely father, Duke of York.

War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there ;

Instead whereof let this supply the room.
Measure for measure must be answered. 55

Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,

That nothing sung but death to us and ours.

Now death shall stop his dismal threat'ning sound,

And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak. 59

War. I think his understanding is bereft.
Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee ?

Dark cloudy death o'ershades his beams of life,

And he nor sees nor hears us what we say.

Rich. O, would he did ! and so, perhaps, he doth.

'Tis but his policy to counterfeit, 65

Because he would avoid such bitter taunts
Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy and obtain no grace.

Edw. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence. 70

War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edw. Thou pitied'st Rutland, I will pity thee.

Geo. Where's Captain Margaret, to fence you now ? 75

War. They mock thee, Clifford ; swear as thou wast wont.

Rich. What, not an oath ? Nay, then the world goes hard

When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath.

I know by that he's dead ; and by my soul, 79

If this right hand would buy two hours' life,
That I in all despite might rail at him,
This hand should chop it off, and with the issuing blood

Stifle the villain whose unstanched thirst York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

War. Ay, but he's dead. Off with the traitor's head, 85

And rear it in the place your father's stands.
And now to London with triumphant march,

There to be crowned England's royal King ;
From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France,

And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen. 90

So shalt thou sinew both these lands together ;

And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread

The scatt'red foe that hopes to rise again ;
For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,

Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine ears. 95

First will I see the coronation ;
And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea

To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be ;

For in thy shoulder do I build my seat, 100

And never will I undertake the thing

Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.

Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucester;

And George, of Clarence; Warwick, as ourself,

Shall do and undo as him pleaseth best. 105

Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Gloucester;

For Gloucester's dukedom is too ominous.

War. Tut, that's a foolish observation.

Richard, be Duke of Gloucester. Now to London

To see these honours in possession. 110

[Exeunt.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. A chase in the north of England.

Enter two Keepers, with cross-bows in their hands.

1 Keep. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves,

For through this laund anon the deer will come;

And in this covert will we make our stand, Culling the principal of all the deer.

2 Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot. 5

1 Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow

Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.

Here stand we both, and aim we at the best;

And, for the time shall not seem tedious,

I'll tell thee what befell me on a day. 10

In this self-place where now we mean to stand.

2 Keep. Here comes a man; let's stay till he be past.

Enter KING HENRY, disguised, with a prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love,

To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.

No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine; 15

Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee,

Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wast anointed.

No bending knee will call thee Cæsar now,

No humble suitors press to speak for right,

No, not a man comes for redress of thee; 20

For how can I help them and not myself?

1 Keep. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee.

This is the quondam king; let's seize upon him.

K. Hen. Let me embrace thee, sour adversity,

For wise men say it is the wisest course. 25

2 Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.

1 Keep. Forbear awhile; we'll hear a little more.

K. Hen. My Queen and son are gone to France for aid;

And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick

Is thither gone to crave the French King's sister 30

To wife for Edward. If this news be true,

Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost;

For Warwick is a subtle orator,

And Lewis a prince soon won with moving words.

By this account, then, Margaret may win him; 35

For she's a woman to be pitied much.

Her sighs will make a batt'ry in his breast;

Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;

The tiger will be mild whiles she doth mourn;

And Nero will be tainted with remorse 40

To hear and see her complaints, her brinish tears.

Ay, but she's come to beg: Warwick, to give.

She, on his left side, craving aid for Henry:

He, on his right, asking a wife for Edward.

She weeps, and says her Henry is depos'd;

He smiles, and says his Edward is install'd;

That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no more;

Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the wrong,

Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,

And in conclusion wins the King from her 50

With promise of his sister, and what else,

To strengthen and support King Edward's place.

O Margaret, thus 'twill be; and thou, poor soul,

Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn!

2 Keep. Say, what art thou that talk'st of kings and queens? 55

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to:

A man at least, for less I should not be;

And men may talk of kings, and why not I?

2 Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.

K. Hen. Why, so I am—in mind; and that's enough. 60

2 Keep. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown?

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;

Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,

Nor to be seen. My crown is call'd content;

A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy. 65

2 Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,

Your crown content and you must be contented

To go along with us ; for, as we think,
You are the king King Edward hath depos'd ;

And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,
Will apprehend you as his enemy. 71

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath ?

2 Keep. No, never such an oath ; nor will not now.

K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was King of England ?

2 Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain. 72

K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old ;

My father and my grandfather were kings ;
And you were sworn true subjects unto me ;
And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths ?

1 Keep. No ; 80
For we were subjects but while you were
king.

K. Hen. Why, am I dead ? Do I not breathe a man ?

Ah, simple men, you know not what you
swear !

Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again, 85

Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust,
Such is the lightness of you common men.
But do not break your oaths ; for of that sin 90

My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.
Go where you will, the King shall be commanded ;

And be you kings : command, and I'll obey.

1 Keep. We are true subjects to the King, King Edward.

K. Hen. So would you be again to
Henry, 95

If he were seated as King Edward is.

1 Keep. We charge you, in God's name and the King's,

To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name, lead ; your King's name be obey'd ;

And what God will, that let your King
perform ; 100

And what he will, I humbly yield unto.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II. London. The palace.

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, CLAR-ENCE, and LADY GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloucester, at Saint Albans' field

This lady's husband, Sir Richard Grey, was slain,

His land then seiz'd on by the conqueror.
Her suit is now to repossess those lands ;

Which we in justice cannot well deny, 5

Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

Glo. Your Highness shall do well to grant her suit ;

It were dishonour to deny it her.

K. Edw. It were no less ; but yet I'll make a pause.

Glo. [Aside to Clarence] Yea, is it so ?

I see the lady hath a thing to grant,

Before the King will grant her humble suit

Clar. [Aside to Gloucester] He knows the game ; how true he keeps the wind

Glo. [Aside to Clarence] Silence ! 1

K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of you
suit ;

And come some other time to know our
mind.

L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay.

May it please your Highness to resolve me
now ; 1

And what your pleasure is shall satisfy me

Glo. [Aside] Ay, widow ? Then I'll warrant you all your lands,

An if what pleases him shall please
you.

Fight closer or, good faith, you'll catch blow.

Clar. [Aside to Gloucester] I fear her not unless she chance to fall.

Glo. [Aside to Clarence] God forbid that for he'll take vantages. 2

K. Edw. How many children hast thou widow, tell me.

Clar. [Aside to Gloucester] I think he means to beg a child of her.

Glo. [Aside to Clarence] Nay, then whi-me ; he'll rather give her two.

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glo. [Aside] You shall have four if you be rul'd by him. 3

K. Edw. 'Twere pity they should lose their father's lands.

L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant
it, then.

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave ; I'll trust this widow's wit.

Glo. [Aside] Ay, good leave have you ; for you will have leave

Till youth take leave and leave you to the crutch. 3

[Gloucester and Clarence withdraw]

K. Edw. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children ?

L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love
myself.

K. Edw. And would you not do much to do them good ?

L. Grey. To do them good I would sustain some harm.

K. Edw. Then get your husband's lands to do them good. 4

L. Grey. Therefore I came unto you
Majesty.

- K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.
- L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your Highness' service.
- K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me if I give them ?
- L. Grey. What you command that rests in me to do. 45
- K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.
- L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.
- K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.
- L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your Grace commands.
- Glo. He plies her hard ; and much rain wears the marble. 50
- Clar. As red as fire ! Nay, then her wax must melt.
- L. Grey. Why stops my lord ? Shall I not hear my task ?
- K. Edw. An easy task ; 'tis but to love a king.
- L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.
- K. Edw. Why, then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee. 55
- L. Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.
- Glo. The match is made ; she seals it with a curtsy.
- K. Edw. But stay thee—'tis the fruits of love I mean.
- L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving liege.
- K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense. 60
- What love, thinkst thou, I sue so much to get ?
- L. Grey. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers ;
- That love which virtue begs and virtue grants.
- K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.
- L. Grey. Why, then you mean not as I thought you did. 65
- K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive my mind.
- L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive
- Your Highness aims at, if I aim aright.
- K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.
- L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison. 70
- K. Edw. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.
- L. Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower ;
- For by that loss I will not purchase them.
- K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.
- L. Grey. Herein your Highness wrongs both them and me. 75
- But, mighty lord, this merry inclination Accords not with the sadness of my suit. Please you dismiss me, either with ay or no.
- K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say ay to my request ;
- No, if thou dost say no to my demand. 80
- L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.
- Glo. The widow likes him not ; she knits her brows.
- Clar. He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom.
- K. Edw. [Aside] Her looks doth argue her replete with modesty ; 84
- Her words doth show her wit incomparable ; All her perfections challenge sovereignty. One way or other, she is for a king ; And she shall be my love, or else my queen. Say that King Edward take thee for his queen ?
- L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord. 90
- I am a subject fit to jest withal, But far unfit to be a sovereign.
- K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee
- I speak no more than what my soul intends ; And that is to enjoy thee for my love. 95
- L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto.
- I know I am too mean to be your queen, And yet too good to be your concubine.
- K. Edw. You cavil, widow ; I did mean my queen.
- L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your Grace my sons should call you father. 100
- K. Edw. No more than when my daughters call thee mother.
- Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children ;
- And, by God's Mother, I, being but a bachelor,
- Have other some. Why, 'tis a happy thing To be the father unto many sons. 105
- Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.
- Glo. The ghostly father now hath done his shrift.
- Clar. When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift.
- K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.
- Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad. 110
- K. Edw. You'd think it strange if I should marry her.
- Clar. To who, my lord ?
- K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.
- Glo. That would be ten days' wonder at the least.
- Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes. 115

K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers; I can tell you both

Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken

And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Edw. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower. 120

And go we, brothers, to the man that took him

To question of his apprehension.

Widow, go you along. Lords, use her honourably.

[Exeunt all but Gloucester.

Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.

Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all, 125

That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring

To cross me from the golden time I look for!

And yet, between my soul's desire and me—

The lustful Edward's title buried—

Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward, 130

And all the unlook'd for issue of their bodies,

To take their rooms ere I can place myself.

A cold premeditation for my purpose!

Why, then I do but dream on sovereignty;

Like one that stands upon a promontory 135

And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,

Wishing his foot were equal with his eye;

And chides the sea that sunders him from thence,

Saying he'll lade it dry to have his way—

So do I wish the crown, being so far off; 140

And so I chide the means that keeps me from it;

And so I say I'll cut the causes off,

Flattering me with impossibilities.

My eye's too quick, my heart o'erweens too much,

Unless my hand and strength could equal them. 145

Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;

What other pleasure can the world afford?

I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,

And deck my body in gay ornaments,

And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks. 150

O miserable thought! and more unlikely

Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns.

Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb;

And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,

She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe

To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub; 155

To make an envious mountain on my back,

Where sits deformity to mock my body;

To shape my legs of an unequal size;

To disproportion me in every part, 160

Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp

That carries no impression like the dam.

And am I, then, a man to be belov'd?

O monstrous fault to harbour such a thought! 164

Then, since this earth affords no joy to me

But to command, to check, to o'erbear such

As are of better person than myself,

I'll make my heaven to dream upon the crown,

And whiles I live t' account this world but hell,

Until my misshap'd trunk that bears this head 170

Be round impaled with a glorious crown.

And yet I know not how to get the crown,

For many lives stand between me and home;

And I—like one lost in a thorny wood

That rents the thorns and is rent with the thorns, 175

Seeking a way and straying from the way;

Not knowing how to find the open air,

But toiling desperately to find it out—

Torment myself to catch the English crown:

And from that torment I will free myself

Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.

Why, I can smile, and murder whiles I smile, 180

And cry 'Content!' to that which grieves my heart,

And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,

And frame my face to all occasions. 185

I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall;

I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk;

I'll play the orator as well as Nestor,

Deceive more sily than Ulysses could,

And, like a Sinon, take another Troy. 190

I can add colours to the chameleon,

Change shapes with Proteus for advantages,

And set the murderous Machiavel to school.

Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?

Tut, were it farther off, I'll pluck it down. [Exit.

SCENE III. France. The King's palace.

Flourish. Enter LEWIS the French King, his sister BONA, his Admiral call'd BOURBON; PRINCE EDWARD, QUEEN MARGARET, and the EARL OF OXFORD. Lewis sits, and riseth up again.

Lewis. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,

Sit down with us. It ill befits thy state

And birth that thou shouldst stand while Lewis doth sit.

Q. Mar. No, mighty King of France.
Now Margaret
Must strike her sail and learn a while to serve Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
Great Albion's Queen in former golden
days;
But now mischance hath trod my title
down
And with dishonour laid me on the ground, Where I must take like seat unto my
fortune,
And to my humble seat conform myself.
Lewis. Why, say, fair Queen, whence springs this deep despair?
Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears
And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.
Lewis. Whate'er it be, be thou still like
thyself,
And sit thee by our side. [Sits her by him]
Yield not thy neck
To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless
mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.
Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy
grief;
It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.
Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts
And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to
speak.
Now therefore be it known to noble Lewis
That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
Is, of a king, become a banish'd man,
And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn;
While proud ambitious Edward Duke of
York
Usurps the regal title and the seat
Of England's true-anointed lawful King.
This is the cause that I, poor Margaret,
With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's
heir,
Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid;
And if thou fail us, all our hope is done.
Scotland hath will to help, but cannot
help;
Our people and our peers are both misled,
Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight,
And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.
Lewis. Renowned Queen, with patience calm the storm,
While we bethink a means to break it off.
Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe.
Lewis. The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee.
Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow.
And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow!

Enter WARWICK.

Lewis. What's he approacheth boldly to our presence?
Q. Mar. Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.
Lewis. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?
[He descends. She ariseth.]
Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise;
For this is he that moves both wind and tide.
War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion,
My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed
friend,
I come, in kindness and unfeigned love,
First to do greetings to thy royal person,
And then to crave a league of amity,
And lastly to confirm that amity With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant
That virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister,
To England's King in lawful marriage.
Q. Mar. [Aside] If that go forward,
Henry's hope is done.
War. [To Bona] And, gracious madam, in our king's behalf,
I am commanded, with your leave and
favour,
Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my
tongue
To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart;
Where fame, late ent'ring at his heedful
ears,
Hath plac'd thy beauty's image and thy virtue.
Q. Mar. King Lewis and Lady Bona, hear me speak
Before you answer Warwick. His demand Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest love,
But from deceit bred by necessity;
For how can tyrants safely govern home
Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?
To prove him tyrant this reason may suffice,
That Henry liveth still; but were he
dead,
Yet here Prince Edward stands, King
Henry's son.
Look therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage
Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour;
For though usurpers sway the rule a while Yet heav'n's are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.
War. Injurious Margaret!
Prince. And why not Queen?
War. Because thy father Henry did usurp;
And thou no more art prince than she is
queen.

Oxf. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt,
Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;

And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,

Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest;
And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,

Who by his prowess conquered all France.
From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it in this smooth discourse

You told not how Henry the Sixth hath
lost

All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten?
Methinks these peers of France should smile at that.

But for the rest: you tell a pedigree
Of threescore and two years—a silly time
To make prescription for a kingdom's
worth.

Oxf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege,

Whom thou obeyed'st thirty and six years,
And not bewray thy treason with a blush?

War. Can Oxford that did ever fence the right

Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?
For shame! Leave Henry, and call Edward
king.

Oxf. Call him my king by whose injurious doom

My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere, Was done to death; and more than so, my
father,

Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,
When nature brought him to the door of
death?

No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this
arm,

This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York.

Lewis. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford

Vouchsafe at our request to stand aside

While I use further conference with Warwick.

[They stand aloof.
Q. Mar. Heavens grant that Warwick's words bewitch him not!

Lewis. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,

Is Edward your true king? for I were loath
To link with him that were not lawful chosen.

War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine honour.

Lewis. But is he gracious in the people's eye?

War. The more that Henry was unfortunate.

Lewis. Then further: all dissembling set aside,

Tell me for truth the measure of his love

Unto our sister Bona.

War. Such it seems
As may be seem a monarch like himself.
Myself have often heard him say and swe
That this his love was an eternal plant Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue
ground,

The leaves and fruit maintain'd wi
beauty's sun,

Exempt from envy, but not from disda
Unless the Lady Bona quit his pain.

Lewis. Now, sister, let us hear your fir resolve.

Bona. Your grant or your denial shall
mine.

[To Warwick] Yet I confess that often e
this day,

When I have heard your king's dese recounted,

Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desir Lewis. Then, Warwick, thus: our sist shall be Edward's.

And now forthwith shall articles be draw Touching the jointure that your king mu make,

Which with her dowry shall be counte pois'd.

Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be witness

That Bona shall be wife to the Engli
king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to t
English king.

Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick, it was th
device

By this alliance to make void my suit.
Before thy coming, Lewis was Henry's
friend.

Lewis. And still is friend to him a Margaret.

But if your title to the crown be weak,
As may appear by Edward's good succe
Then 'tis but reason that I be releas'd
From giving aid which late I promised.
Yet shall you have all kindness at r
hand

That your estate requires and mine c yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland at l ease,

Where having nothing, nothing can he lo
And as for you yourself, our quondam
queen,

You have a father able to maintain you,
And better 'twere you troubled him th
France.

Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shamele
Warwick,

Proud setter up and puller down of king
I will not hence till with my talk and tea
Both full of truth, I make King Lev
behold

Thy sly conveyance and thy lord's fa
love;

For both of you are birds of self-same feather.

[Post blowing a horn within.]

Lewis. Warwick, this is some post to us or thee.

Enter the Post.

Post. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you,

Sent from your brother, Marquis Montague. These from our King unto your Majesty. ¹⁶⁵
And, madam, these for you ; from whom I know not. [They all read their letters.]

Oxf. I like it well that our fair Queen and mistress

Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

Prince. Nay, mark how Lewis stamps as he were nettled.

I hope all's for the best. ¹⁷⁰

Lewis. Warwick, what are thy news ? And yours, fair Queen ?

Q. Mar. Mine such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys.

War. Mine full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

Lewis. What, has your king married the Lady Grey ? ¹⁷⁴

And now, to soothe your forgery and his, Sends me a paper to persuade me patience ? Is this th' alliance that he seeks with France ?

Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner ?

Q. Mar. I told your Majesty as much before.

This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty. ¹⁸⁰

War. King Lewis, I here protest in sight of heaven,

And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss, That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's—

No more my king, for he dishonours me, But most himself, if he could see his shame. ¹⁸⁵

Did I forget that by the house of York My father came untimely to his death ?

Did I let pass th' abuse done to my niece ?

Did I impale him with the regal crown ?

Did I put Henry from his native right ? ¹⁹⁰

And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame ?

Shame on himself ! for my desert is honour ;

And to repair my honour lost for him

I here renounce him and return to Henry.

My noble Queen, let former grudges pass,

And henceforth I am thy true servitor. ¹⁹⁶

I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona,

And replant Henry in his former state.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love ;

And I forgive and quite forget old faults, ²⁰⁰
And joy that thou becom'st King Henry's friend.

War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend,

That if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us With some few bands of chosen soldiers, I'll undertake to land them on our coast ²⁰⁵
And force the tyrant from his seat by war. 'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him ;

And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me, He's very likely now to fall from him

For matching more for wanton lust than honour ²¹⁰

Or than for strength and safety of our country.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd

But by thy help to this distressed queen ?

Q. Mar. Renowned Prince, how shall poor Henry live ²¹⁴

Unless thou rescue him from foul despair ?

Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one.

War. And mine, fair Lady Bona, joins with yours.

Lewis. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's.

Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd You shall have aid. ²²⁰

Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.

Lewis. Then, England's messenger, return in post

And tell false Edward, thy supposed king, That Lewis of France is sending over masquers

To revel it with him and his new bride. ²²⁵
Thou seest what's past ; go fear thy king withal.

Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,

I'll wear the willow-garland for his sake.

Q. Mar. Tell him my mourning weeds are laid aside,

And I am ready to put armour on. ²³⁰

War. Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong,

And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long.

There's thy reward ; be gone. [Exit Post.]

Lewis. But, Warwick,

Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men, Shall cross the seas and bid false Edward battle ; ²³⁵

And, as occasion serves, this noble Queen

And Prince shall follow with a fresh supply.

Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt :

What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty ?

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty : ²⁴⁰

That if our Queen and this young Prince agree,

I'll join mine eldest daughter and my joy

To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.

Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion.

Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous, 245
Therefore delay not—give thy hand to Warwick;

And with thy hand thy faith irrevocable
That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it;
And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand. 250

[He gives his hand to Warwick.]

Lewis. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied;
And thou, Lord Bourbon, our High Admiral,

Shall waft them over with our royal fleet.
I long till Edward fall by war's mischance
For mocking marriage with a dame of France. [Exeunt all but Warwick.]

War. I came from Edward as ambassador, 250

But I return his sworn and mortal foe.
Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,

But dreadful war shall answer his demand.
Had he none else to make a stale but me?
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.
I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again;
Not that I pity Henry's misery,

But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. 265
[Exit.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. London. The palace.

Enter GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET, and MONTAGUE.

Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you
Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey?
Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?

Clar. Alas, you know 'tis far from hence to France!
How could he stay till Warwick made return? 5

Som. My lords, forbear this talk; here comes the King.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, attended; LADY GREY, as Queen; PEMBROKE, STAFFORD, HASTINGS, and Others. Four stand on one side, and four on the other.

Glo. And his well-chosen bride.
Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.

K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice? 9
That you stand pensive as half malcontent?

Clar. As well as Lewis of France or the Earl of Warwick,

Which are so weak of courage and in judgment

That they'll take no offence at our abuse.

K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause;

They are but Lewis and Warwick: I am Edward, 15

Your King and Warwick's, and must have my will.

Glo. And shall have your will, because our King.

Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?

Glo. Not I. 20

No, God forbid that I should wish them sever'd

Whom God hath join'd together; ay, and 'twere pity

To sunder them that yoke so well together.

K. Edw. Setting your scorns and your mislike aside,

Tell me some reason why the Lady Grey 25
Should not become my wife and England's Queen.

And you too, Somerset and Montague,
Speak freely what you think.

Clar. Then this is mine opinion: that King Lewis

Becomes your enemy for mocking him 30
About the marriage of the Lady Bona.

Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,

Is now dishonoured by this new marriage.

K. Edw. What if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd

By such invention as I can devise? 35
Mont. Yet to have join'd with France in such alliance

Would more have strength'n'd this our commonwealth

'Gainst foreign storms than any home-bred marriage.

Hast. Why, knows not Montague that of itself

England is safe, if true within itself? 40

Mont. But the safer when 'tis back'd with France.

Hast. 'Tis better using France than trusting France.

Let us be back'd with God, and with the seas 43

Which He hath giv'n for fence impregnable,
And with their helps only defend ourselves.

In them and in ourselves our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech Lord Hastings well deserves

To have the heir of the Lord Hungerford.

K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will and grant;

And for this once my will shall stand for law. 45

Glo. And yet methinks your Grace hath not done well

To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scales

Unto the brother of your loving bride.
She better would have fitted me or Clarence;
But in your bride you bury brotherhood.

Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir 56

Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's son,

And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence! Is it for a wife

That thou art malcontent? I will provide thee. 60

Clar. In choosing for yourself you show'd your judgment,

Which being shallow, you shall give me leave

To play the broker in mine own behalf;
And to that end I shortly mind to leave you.

K. Edw. Leave me or tarry, Edward will be King, 65

And not be tied unto his brother's will.

Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleas'd his Majesty

To raise my state to title of a queen,
Do me but right, and you must all confess

That I was not ignoble of descent; 70
And meaner than myself have had like fortune.

But as this title honours me and mine,
To your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,

Doth cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns. 75

What danger or what sorrow can befall thee,

So long as Edward is thy constant friend
And their true sovereign whom they must obey?

Yay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,

Unless they seek for hatred at my hands; 80
Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,

And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Glo. [Aside] I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.

Enter a Post.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters or what news from France? 85

Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters, and few words,

Not such as I, without your special pardon, are not relate.

K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee; therefore, in brief,

Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess them. 90

What answer makes King Lewis unto our letters?

Mess. At my depart, these were his very words:

'Go tell false Edward, the supposed king,
That Lewis of France is sending over masquers

To revel it with him and his new bride'. 95

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? Belike he thinks me Henry.

But what said Lady Bona to my marriage?

Mess. These were her words, utt'ed with mild disdain:

'Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,

I'll wear the willow-garland for his sake'. 100

K. Edw. I blame not her: she could say little less;

She had the wrong. But what said Henry's queen?

For I have heard that she was there in place.

Mess. 'Tell him' quoth she 'my mourning weeds are done,

And I am ready to put armour on.' 105

K. Edw. Belike she minds to play the Amazon.

But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Mess. He, more incens'd against your Majesty

Than all the rest, discharg'd me with these words:

'Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong; 110

And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long'.

K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words?

Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd.

They shall have wars and pay for their presumption. 114

But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship

That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.

Clar. Belike the elder; Clarence will have the younger.

Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,

For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter; 120

That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage

I may not prove inferior to yourself.
You that love me and Warwick, follow me.

[Exit, and Somerset follows.]

Glo. [Aside] Not I. 124
My thoughts aim at a further matter; I stay not for the love of Edward but the crown.

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!

Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen ;
And haste is needful in this desp'rate case.
Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf ¹³⁰
Go levy men and make prepare for war ;
They are already, or quickly will be landed.
Myself in person will straight follow you.

[Exeunt Pembroke and Stafford.]

But ere I go, Hastings and Montague, Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest, ¹³⁵

Are near to Warwick by blood and by alliance.

Tell me if you love Warwick more than me?
If it be so, then both depart to him :
I rather wish you foes than hollow friends.
But if you mind to hold your true obedience,
Give me assurance with some friendly vow,
That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague as he proves true !

Hast. And Hastings as he favours
Edward's cause !

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us ? ¹⁴⁵

Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

K. Edw. Why, so ! then am I sure of victory.

Now therefore let us hence, and lose no
hour

Till we meet Warwick with his foreign pow'r. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A plain in Warwickshire.

Enter WARWICK and OXFORD, with French
Soldiers.

War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes
well ;

The common people by numbers swarm to
us.

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET.

But see where Somerset and Clarence comes.
Speak suddenly, my lords—are we all
friends ?

Clar. Fear not that, my lord. ⁵

War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto Warwick ;

And welcome, Somerset. I hold it cowardice
To rest mistrustful where a noble heart
Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love ;
Else might I think that Clarence, Edward's brother, ¹⁰

Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings.

But welcome, sweet Clarence ; my daughter shall be thine.

And now what rests but, in night's cover-
ture,

Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,
His soldiers lurking in the towns about, ¹⁵
And but attended by a simple guard,

We may surprise and take him at our
pleasure ?

Our scouts have found the adventure very
easy ;

That as Ulysses and stout Diomedé
With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus' tents, ²⁰

And brought from thence the Thracian
fatal steeds,

So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle,

At unawares may beat down Edward's
guard

And seize himself—I say not 'slaughter him',
For I intend but only to surprise him. ²⁵

You that will follow me to this attempt, Applaud the name of Henry with your leader. [They all cry 'Henry !']

Why then, let's on our way in silent sort.
For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint

George ! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Edward's camp, near Warwick.

Enter three Watchmen, to guard the King's tent.

1 Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand ;

The King by this is set him down to sleep.

2 Watch. What, will he not to bed ?

1 Watch. Why, no ; for he hath made a solemn vow

Never to lie and take his natural rest ⁵
Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress'd.

2 Watch. To-morrow then, belike, shall be the day,

If Warwick be so near as men report.

3 Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that ⁹

That with the King here resteth in his tent?

1 Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the King's chiefest friend.

3 Watch. O, is it so ? But why commands
the King

That his chief followers lodge in towns
about him,

While he himself keeps in the cold field ?

2 Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous. ¹⁵

3 Watch. Ay, but give me worship and quietness ;

I like it better than a dangerous honour.

If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.

1 Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage. ²⁰

2 Watch. Ay, wherefore else guard we his royal tent

But to defend his person from night-foes ?

Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD,
SOMERSET, and French Soldiers, silent all.

War. This is his tent ; and see where stand his guard.

Courage, my masters! Honour now or never!

But follow me, and Edward shall be ours. 25

1 Watch. Who goes there?

2 Watch. Stay, or thou diest.

[Warwick and the rest cry all 'Warwick! Warwick!' and set upon the Guard, who fly, crying 'Arm! Arm!'
Warwick and the rest following them.

The drum playing and trumpet sounding, re-enter WARWICK and the rest, bringing the KING out in his gown, sitting in a chair. GLOUCESTER and HASTINGS fly over the stage.

Som. What are they that fly there?

War. Richard and Hastings. Let them go; here is the Duke.

K. Edw. The Duke! Why, Warwick, when we parted, 30
Thou call'dst me King?

War. Ay, but the case is alter'd. When you disgrac'd me in my embassy, Then I degraded you from being King, And come now to create you Duke of York. Alas, how should you govern any kingdom That know not how to use ambassadors, 36 Nor how to be contented with one wife. Nor how to use your brothers brotherly, Nor how to study for the people's welfare, Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies?

K. Edw. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too? 41
Nay, then I see that Edward needs must down.

Yet, Edward, in despite of all mischance, Of thee thyself and all thy complices, Edward will always bear himself as King. Though fortune's malice overthrow my state, 46

My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind, be Edward England's king;

[Takes off his crown.
But Henry now shall wear the English crown

And be true King indeed; thou but the shadow. 50

My Lord of Somerset, at my request, See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey'd Unto my brother, Archbishop of York. When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,

I'll follow you and tell what answer 55
Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him. Now for a while farewell, good Duke of York.

K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must needs abide;

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[They lead him out forcibly.
Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us to do 60

But march to London with our soldiers?

War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do;

To free King Henry from imprisonment, And see him seated in the regal throne. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. London. The palace.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and RIVERS.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn

What late misfortune is befall'n King Edward?

Riv. What, loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person. 5

Riv. Then is my sovereign slain?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner;

Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares;

And, as I further have to understand, 10
Is new committed to the Bishop of York, Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.

Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of grief;

Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may: Warwick may lose that now hath won the day. 15

Q. Eliz. Till then, fair hope must hinder life's decay.

And I the rather wean me from despair For love of Edward's offspring in my womb. This is it that makes me bridle passion And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross; 20

Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs, Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown King Edward's fruit, true heir to th' English crown.

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become? 25

Q. Eliz. I am inform'd that he comes towards London

To set the crown once more on Henry's head.

Guess thou the rest: King Edward's friends must down.

But to prevent the tyrant's violence— For trust not him that hath once broken faith— 30

I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary To save at least the heir of Edward's right. There shall I rest secure from force and fraud.

Come, therefore, let us fly while we may fly: If Warwick take us, we are sure to die. 35 [Exeunt.

SCENE V. A park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter GLOUCESTER, LORD HASTINGS, SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, and Others.

Glo. Now, my Lord Hastings and Sir William Stanley, Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither
Into this chiefest thicket of the park.
Thus stands the case: you know our King,
my brother,
Is prisoner to the Bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage and great liberty;
And often but attended with weak guard
Comes hunting this way to disport himself.
I have advertis'd him by secret means
That if about this hour he make this way,
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends, with horse
and men,
To set him free from his captivity.

Enter KING EDWARD and a Huntsman with him.

Hunt. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.
K. Edw. Nay, this way, man. See where the huntsmen stand.
Now, brother of Gloucester, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close to steal the Bishop's deer?
Glo. Brother, the time and case requireth
haste;
Your horse stands ready at the park corner.
K. Edw. But whither shall we then?
Hast. To Lynn, my lord; and ship: from thence to Flanders.
Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.
K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness.
Glo. But wherefore stay we? 'Tis no time to talk.
K. Edw. Huntsmen, what say'st thou?
Wilt thou go along?
Hunt. Better do so than tarry and be hang'd.
Glo. Come then, away; let's ha' no more ado.
K. Edw. Bishop, farewell. Shield thee
from Warwick's frown,
And pray that I may repossess the crown.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. London. The Tower.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK, SOMERSET, young HENRY EARL OF RICHMOND, OXFORD, MONTAGUE, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master Lieutenant, now that God and friends
Have shaken Edward from the regal seat
And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys,
At our enlargement what are thy due fees?
Lieut. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sov'reigns;
But if an humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your Majesty.
K. Hen. For what, Lieutenant? For well using me?
Nay, be thou sure I'll well requite thy
kindness,
For that it made my imprisonment a
pleasure;
Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds
Conceive when, after many moody thoughts,
At last by notes of household harmony
They quite forget their loss of liberty.
But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me
free,
And chiefly therefore I thank God and thee;
He was the author, thou the instrument.
Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite
By living low where fortune cannot hurt
me,
And that the people of this blessed land
May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars,
Warwick, although my head still wear the
crown,
I here resign my government to thee,
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.
War. Your Grace hath still been fam'd for virtuous,
And now may seem as wise as virtuous
By spying and avoiding fortune's malice,
For few men rightly temper with the stars;
Yet in this one thing let me blame your
Grace,
For choosing me when Clarence is in place.
Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,
To whom the heav'n's in thy nativity
Adjudg'd an olive branch and laurel crown,
As likely to be blest in peace and war;
And therefore I yield thee my free consent.
War. And I choose Clarence only for Protector.
K. Hen. Warwick and Clarence, give me both your hands.
Now join your hands, and with your hands
your hearts,
That no dissension hinder government.
I make you both Protectors of this land,
While I myself will lead a private life
And in devotion spend my latter days,
To sin's rebuke and my Creator's praise.
War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?
Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent,

For on thy fortune I repose myself.

War. Why, then, though loath, yet must I be content.

We'll yoke together, like a double shadow To Henry's body, and supply his place ; 50 I mean, in bearing weight of government, While he enjoys the honour and his ease. And, Clarence, now then it is more than needful

Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a traitor,

And all his lands and goods confiscated. 55

Clar. What else ? And that succession be determin'd.

War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,

Let me entreat—for I command no more— That Margaret your Queen and my son Edward 60

Be sent for to return from France with speed ;

For till I see them here, by doubtful fear My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.

K. Hen. My Lord of Somerset, what youth is that, 65

Of whom you seem to have so tender care ?

Som. My liege, it is young Henry, Earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope. [Lays his hand on his head.

If secret powers

Suggest but truth to my divining thoughts, This pretty lad will prove our country's bliss. 70

His looks are full of peaceful majesty ; His head by nature fram'd to wear a crown, His hand to wield a sceptre ; and himself Likely in time to bless a regal throne.

Make much of him, my lords ; for this is he Must help you more than you are hurt by me. 76

Enter a Post.

War. What news, my friend ?

Post. That Edward is escaped from your brother

And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.

War. Unsavoury news ! But how made he escape ? 80

Post. He was convey'd by Richard Duke of Gloucester

And the Lord Hastings, who attended him In secret ambush on the forest side

And from the Bishop's huntsmen rescu'd him ;

For hunting was his daily exercise. 85

War. My brother was too careless of his charge.

But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide

A salve for any sore that may betide.

[Exeunt all but Somerset, Richmond, and Oxford.]

Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's ;

For doubtless Burgundy will yield him help, 90

And we shall have more wars before't be long.

As Henry's late presaging prophecy

Did glad my heart with hope of this young Richmond,

So doth my heart misgive me, in these conflicts, 94

What may befall him to his harm and ours. Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst, Forthwith we'll send him hence to Brittany, Till storms be past of civil enmity.

Oxf. Ay, for if Edward repossess the crown,

'Tis like that Richmond with the rest shall down. 100

Som. It shall be so ; he shall to Brittany. Come therefore, let's about it speedily.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Before York.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, Lord Hastings, and the rest,

Yet thus far fortune maketh us amends, And says that once more I shall interchange

My waned state for Henry's regal crown. Well have we pass'd and now repass'd the

seas, 5

And brought desired help from Burgundy ; What then remains, we being thus arriv'd

From Ravenspurgh haven before the gates of York,

But that we enter, as into our dukedom ?

Glo. The gates made fast ! Brother, I like not this ; 10

For many men that stumble at the threshold

Are well foretold that danger lurks within.

K. Edw. Tush, man, abodements must not now affright us.

By fair or foul means we must enter in, For hither will our friends repair to us. 15

Hast. My liege, I'll knock once more to summon them.

Enter, on the walls, the Mayor of York and his Brethren.

May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming

And shut the gates for safety of ourselves, For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

K. Edw. But, Master Mayor, if Henry be your King, 20

Yet Edward at the least is Duke of York.

May. True, my good lord ; I know you for no less.

K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom,

As being well content with that alone.

Glo. [Aside] But when the fox hath once got in his nose,

He'll soon find means to make the body follow.

Hast. Why, Master Mayor, why stand you in a doubt ?

Open the gates ; we are King Henry's friends.

May. Ay, say you so ? The gates shall then be open'd. [He descends.

Glo. A wise stout captain, and soon persuaded !

Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well,

So 'twere not long of him ; but being ent'red,

I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Enter, below, the Mayor and two Aldermen.

K. Edw. So, Master Mayor. These gates must not be shut

But in the night or in the time of war. What ! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys ;

For Edward will defend the town and thee,

And all those friends that deign to follow me.

March. Enter MONTGOMERY with drum and Soldiers.

Glo. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery,

Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd.

K. Edw. Welcome, Sir John ! But why come you in arms ?

Mont. To help King Edward in his time of storm,

As every loyal subject ought to do.

K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery ; but we now forget

Our title to the crown, and only claim Our dukedom till God please to send the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again.

I came to serve a king and not a duke.

Drummer, strike up, and let us march away. [The Drum begins to march.

K. Edw. Nay, stay, Sir John, a while, and we'll debate

By what safe means the crown may be recover'd.

Mont. What talk you of debating ? In few words :

If you'll not here proclaim yourself our King,

I'll leave you to your fortune and be gone

To keep them back that come to succour you.

Why shall we fight, if you pretend no title

Glo. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points ?

K. Edw. When we grow stronger, then we'll make our claim ;

Till then 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning.

Hast. Away with scrupulous wit ! Now arms must rule.

Glo. And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.

Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand ; The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.

K. Edw. Then be it as you will ; for 'tis my right,

And Henry but usurps the diadem.

Mont. Ay, now my sovereign speaketh like himself ;

And now will I be Edward's champion.

Hast. Sound trumpet ; Edward shall be here proclaim'd.

Come, fellow soldier, make thou proclamation. [Gives him a paper. Flourish.

Sold. [Reads] 'Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c.'

Mont. And whoso'er gainsays King Edward's right,

By this I challenge him to single fight.

All. Long live Edward the Fourth !

K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery, and thanks unto you all ;

If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.

Now for this night let's harbour here in York ;

And when the morning sun shall raise his car

Above the border of this horizon,

We'll forward towards Warwick and his mates ;

For well I wot that Henry is no soldier.

Ah, froward Clarence, how evil it beseems thee

To fatter Henry and forsake thy brother ! Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick.

Come on, brave soldiers ; doubt not of the day,

And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII. London. The palace.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, WARWICK, MONTAGUE, CLARENCE, OXFORD, and EXETER.

War. What counsel, lords ? Edward from Belgia,

With hasty Germans and blunt Hollanders,

Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow
seas

And with his troops doth march amain to London;

And many giddy people flock to him. 5

K. Hen. Let's levy men and beat him back again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out,
Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends,

Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war; 10

Those will I muster up, and thou, son
Clarence,

Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent,

The knights and gentlemen to come with
thee.

Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham, Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find 15

Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st.

And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well
belov'd,

In Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends.

My sovereign, with the loving citizens,

Like to his island girt in with the ocean 20

Or modest Dian circled with her nymphs,

Shall rest in London till we come to him.

Fair lords, take leave and stand not to reply.

Farewell, my sovereign.

K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector and my Troy's true hope. 25

Clar. In sign of truth, I kiss your Highness' hand.

K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate!

Mont. Comfort, my lord; and so I take my leave.

Oxf. [Kissing the King's hand] And thus
I seal my truth and bid adieu.

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving
Montague, 30

And all at once, once more a happy fare-
well.

War. Farewell, sweet lords; let's meet at Coventry.

[Exeunt all but the King and Exeter.]

K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest
a while.

Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship?

Methinks the power that Edward hath in
field 35

Should not be able to encounter mine.

Exe. The doubt is that he will seduce the rest.

K. Hen. That's not my fear; my meed hath got me fame:

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands, 39

Nor posted off their suits with slow delays;

My pity hath been balm to heal their
wounds,

My mildness hath allay'd their swelling
griefs,

My mercy dried their water-flowing tears;
I have not been desirous of their wealth,

Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies, 45

Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd.

Then why should they love Edward more than me?

No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace;
And, when the lion fawns upon the lamb,

The lamb will never cease to follow him. 50

[Shout within 'A Lancaster! A Lancaster!'
Exe. Hark, hark, my lord! What shouts are these?

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry,
bear him hence;

And once again proclaim us King of England.

You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow.

Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them dry, 55

And swell so much the higher by their ebb.
Hence with him to the Tower: let him not speak.

[Exeunt some with King Henry.]

And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,

Where peremptory Warwick now remains.
The sun shines hot; and, if we use delay, 60

Cold biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay.

Glo. Away betimes, before his forces join,
And take the great-grown traitor unawares.

Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry. [Exeunt.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Coventry.

Enter WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and Others upon the walls.

War. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest
fellow?

1 Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague?

Where is the post that came from Montague? 5

2 Mess. By this at Daintry, with a puissant troop.

Enter SIR JOHN SOMERVILLE.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving son?

- And by thy guess how nigh is Clarence now ?
- Som. At Southam I did leave him with his forces, 9
- And do expect him here some two hours hence. [Drum heard.]
- War. Then Clarence is at hand ; I hear his drum.
- Som. It is not his, my lord ; here Southam lies.
- The drum your Honour hears marcheth from Warwick.
- War. Who should that be ? Belike unlook'd for friends.
- Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know. 15
- March. Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.
- K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle.
- Glo. See how the surly Warwick mans the wall.
- War. O unbid spite ! Is sportful Edward come ?
- Where slept our scouts or how are they seduc'd 19
- That we could hear no news of his repair ?
- K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates,
- Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy knee,
- Call Edward King, and at his hands beg mercy ?
- And he shall pardon thee these outrages.
- War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence, 25
- Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down,
- Call Warwick patron, and be penitent ?
- And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York.
- Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said the King ;
- Or did he make the jest against his will ? 30
- War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift ?
- Glo. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give.
- I'll do thee service for so good a gift.
- War. 'Twas I that gave the kingdom to thy brother.
- K. Edw. Why then 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift. 35
- War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight ;
- And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again ;
- And Henry is my King, Warwick his subject.
- K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner.
- And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this ;
- What is the body when the head is off ? 41
- Glo. Alas, that Warwick had no more forecast,
- But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten,
- The king was slily finger'd from the deck !
- You left poor Henry at the Bishop's palace,
- And ten to one you'll meet him in the Tower. 46
- K. Edw. 'Tis even so ; yet you are Warwick still.
- Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time ; kneel down, kneel down.
- Nay, when ? Strike now, or else the iron cools.
- War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow, 50
- And with the other fling it at thy face,
- Than bear so low a sail to strike to thee.
- K. Edw. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend,
- This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,
- Shall, whiles thy head is warm and new cut off, 55
- Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood :
- ' Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more '.
- Enter OXFORD, with drum and colours.
- War. O cheerful colours ! See where Oxford comes.
- Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster ! 59
- [He and his forces enter the city.]
- Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too.
- K. Edw. So other foes may set upon our backs.
- Stand we in good array, for they no doubt Will issue out again and bid us battle ;
- If not, the city being but of small defence, We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.
- War. O, welcome, Oxford ! for we want thy help. 66
- Enter MONTAGUE, with drum and colours.
- Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster !
- [He and his forces enter the city.]
- Glo. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason
- Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.
- K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory. 70
- My mind presageth happy gain and conquest.
- Enter SOMERSET, with drum and colours.
- Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster !
- [He and his forces enter the city.]
- Glo. Two of thy name, both Dukes of Somerset,
- Have sold their lives unto the house of York ;

And thou shalt be the third, if this sword
hold. 75

Enter CLARENCE, with drum and colours.

War. And lo where George of Clarence sweeps along,
Of force enough to bid his brother battle ;
With whom an upright zeal to right prevails
More than the nature of a brother's love.

Clar. Clarence, Clarence, for Lancaster !

K. Edw. Et tu Brute—wilt thou stab Cæsar too ?

A parley, sirrah, to George of Clarence.

[Sound a parley. Richard and Clarence whisper.]

War. Come, Clarence, come. Thou wilt if Warwick call. 80

Clar. [Taking the red rose from his hat and throwing it at Warwick] Father of Warwick, know you what this means ?

Look here, I throw my infamy at thee.

I will not ruinate my father's house,

Who gave his blood to lime the stones
together,

And set up Lancaster. Why, trowest thou,
Warwick, 85

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,

To bend the fatal instruments of war

Against his brother and his lawful King ?

Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath.

To keep that oath were more impiety 90

Than Jephtha when he sacrific'd his daughter.

I am so sorry for my trespass made

That, to deserve well at my brother's hands,

I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe ; 94

With resolution whereso'er I meet thee—

As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad—

To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.

And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy
thee, 95

And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks.

Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends ;

And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults,

For I will henceforth be no more uncon-stant.

K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd,

Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate.

Glo. Welcome, good Clarence ; this is brother-like. 105

War. O passing traitor, perjurd and unjust !

K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town and fight ?

Or shall we beat the stones about thine
ears ?

War. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence !

I will away towards Barnet presently 110

And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.

K. Edw. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares and leads the way.

Lords, to the field ; Saint George and victory ! *[Exeunt Yorkists. March.
Warwick and his company follow.]*

SCENE II. A field of battle near Barnet.

*Alarum and excursions. Enter KING EDWARD, bringing forth WARWICK
wounded.*

K. Edw. So, lie thou there. Die thou, and die our fear ;

For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.
Now, Montague, sit fast ; I seek for thee,
That Warwick's bones may keep thine company. [Exit.]

War. Ah, who is nigh ? Come to me, friend or foe, 5

And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick ?

Why ask I that ? My mangled body shows,
My blood, my want of strength, my sick
heart shows,

That I must yield my body to the earth
And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe. 10

Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge, Whose arms gave shelter to the princely
eagle,

Under whose shade the ramping lion slept, Whose top-branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree

And kept low shrubs from winter's pow'rful
wind. 15

These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's black veil,

Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun
To search the secret treasons of the world ;

The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with
blood,

Were lik'ned oft to kingly sepulchres ; 20

For who liv'd King, but I could dig his grave ?

And who durst smile when Warwick bent his brow ?

Lo now my glory smear'd in dust and
blood !

My parks, my walks, my manors, that I had, 25

Even now forsake me ; and of all my lands

Is nothing left me but my body's length.
Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust ?

And live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter OXFORD and SOMERSET.

Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick ! wert thou as we are,

We might recover all our loss again. 30

The Queen from France hath brought a puissant power ;

Even now we heard the news. Ah, couldst thou fly !

War. Why then, I would not fly. Ah,
Montague,

If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand,³⁴
And with thy lips keep in my soul a while!
Thou lov'st me not; for, brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would wash this cold congealed
blood

That glues my lips and will not let me
speak.

Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah, Warwick! Montague hath breath'd his last;⁴⁰

And to the latest gasp cried out for Warwick,

And said 'Commend me to my valiant
brother'.

And more he would have said; and more
he spoke,

Which sounded like a clamour in a vault,
That mought not be distinguish'd; but at last,⁴⁵

I well might hear, delivered with a groan,
'O farewell, Warwick!'

War. Sweet rest his soul! Fly, lords, and save yourselves;

For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven. [Dies.

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the Queen's great power!⁵⁰

[Here they bear away his body.

SCENE III. Another part of the field.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD in triumph;
with GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,

And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.
But in the midst of this bright-shining day
I spy a black, suspicious, threat'ning cloud
That will encounter with our glorious sun
Ere he attain his easeful western bed—
I mean, my lords, those powers that the Queen

Hath rais'd in Gallia have arriv'd our coast
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud¹⁰

And blow it to the source from whence it came;

Thy very beams will dry those vapours up,
For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Glo. The Queen is valued thirty thousand
strong,

And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her.¹⁵
If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertis'd by our loving
friends

That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury;

We, having now the best at Barnet field,²⁰
Will thither straight, for willingness rids
way;

And as we march our strength will be augmented

In every county as we go along.

Strike up the drum; cry 'Courage!' and away. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Plains near Tewksbury.

Flourish. March. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD, SOMERSET, OXFORD,
and Soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wail their loss,

But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown overboard,³

The cable broke, the holding-anchor lost,
And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood;
Yet lives our pilot still. Is't meet that he Should leave the helm and, like a fearful lad,

With tearful eyes add water to the sea
And give more strength to that which hath too much;

Whiles, in his moan, the ship splits on the rock,¹⁰

Which industry and courage might have sav'd?

Ah, what a shame! ah, what a fault were
this!

Say Warwick was our anchor; what of
that?

And Montague our top-mast; what of
him?

Our slaught'ed friends the tackles; what of these?¹⁵

Why, is not Oxford here another anchor?
And Somerset another goodly mast?

The friends of France our shrouds and tacklings?

And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I
For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge?

We will not from the helm to sit and weep,
But keep our course, though the rough wind say no,²²

From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wreck.

As good to chide the waves as speak them
fair.

And what is Edward but a ruthless sea?²⁵
What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit?

And Richard but a ragged fatal rock?
All these the enemies to our poor bark.

Say you can swim; alas, 'tis but a while!
Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly sink.³⁰

Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you
off,

Or else you perish—that's a threefold
death.

This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
If case some one of you would fly from us,
That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers³⁵

More than with ruthless waves, with sands, and rocks.

Why, courage then! What cannot be avoided

'Twere childish weakness to lament or fear.

Prince. Methinks a woman of this valiant
spirit

Should, if a coward heard her speak these words, ⁴⁰

Infuse his breast with magnanimity
And make him naked foil a man-at-arms.

I speak not this as doubting any here ;

For did I but suspect a fearful man,

He should have leave to go away betimes, ⁴⁵

Lest in our need he might infect another

And make him of like spirit to himself.

If any such be here—as God forbid !—

Let him depart before we need his help.

Oxf. Women and children of so high a courage, ⁵⁰

And warriors faint ! Why, 'twere perpetual
shame.

O brave young Prince! thy famous grandfather

Doth live again in thee. Long mayst thou
live

To bear his image and renew his glories !

Som. And he that will not fight for such a hope, ⁵⁵

Go home to bed and, like the owl by day,
If he arise, be mock'd and wond' red at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset ; sweet
Oxford, thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at hand ⁶⁰

Ready to fight ; therefore be resolute.

Oxf. I thought no less. It is his policy
To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.

Som. But he's deceiv'd ; we are in readiness.

Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness. ⁶⁵

Oxf. Here pitch our battle ; hence we will not budge.

Flourish and march. Enter, at a distance,
KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE,

and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood

Which, by the heavens' assistance and your
strength,

Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.

I need not add more fuel to your fire, ⁷⁰

For well I wot ye blaze to burn them out.
Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords.

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen,
what I should say

My tears gainsay ; for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of my eye. ⁷⁵

Therefore, no more but this : Henry, your
sovereign,

Is prisoner to the foe ; his state usurp'd,
His realm a slaughter-house, his subjects

slain,
His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent ;

And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil. ⁸⁰

You fight in justice. Then, in God's name,
lords,

Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

[Alarum, retreat, excursions. Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Another part of the field.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and Forces, with QUEEN

MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET, prisoners.

K. Edw. Now here a period of tumultuous
broils.

Away with Oxford to Hames Castle
straight ;

For Somerset, off with his guilty head. ⁴

Go, bear them hence ; I will not hear them
speak.

Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words. ⁵

Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exeunt Oxford and Somerset, guarded.]

Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous
world,

To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.

K. Edw. Is proclamation made that who finds Edward

Shall have a high reward, and he his life ? ¹⁰

Glo. It is ; and lo where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers, with PRINCE EDWARD.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant ; let us hear him speak.

What, can so young a man begin to prick ?
Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make

For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects, ¹⁵

And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to ?
Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York.

Suppose that I am now my father's mouth ;
Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel

thou,

Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee ²⁰

Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolv'd !

Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat

And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster.

- Prince. Let Æsop fable in a winter's night ; 25
His currish riddles sorts not with this place.
Glo. By heaven, brat, I'll plague ye for that word.
Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men.
Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.
Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crookback rather. 30
K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue.
Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.
Prince. I know my duty ; you are all undutiful.
Lascivious Edward, and thou perjur'd George,
And thou misshapen Dick, I tell ye all 35
I am your better, traitors as ye are ;
And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.
K. Edw. Take that, the likeness of this railer here. [Stabs him.
Glo. Sprawl'st thou ? Take that, to end thy agony. [Stabs him.
Clar. And there's for twitting me with perjury. [Stabs him.
Q. Mar. O, kill me too ! 41
Glo. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill her.
K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold ; for we have done too much.
Glo. Why should she live to fill the world with words ?
K. Edw. What, doth she swoon ? Use means for her recovery. 45
Glo. Clarence, excuse me to the King my brother.
I'll hence to London on a serious matter ; Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.
Clar. What ? what ? 49
Glo. The Tower ! the Tower ! [Exit.
Q. Mar. O Ned, sweet Ned, speak to thy mother, boy !
Canst thou not speak ? O traitors ! murderers !
They that stabb'd Cæsar shed no blood at all,
Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame, If this foul deed were by to equal it. 55
He was a man : this, in respect, a child ; And men ne'er spend their fury on a child. What's worse than murderer, that I may name it ?
No, no, my heart will burst, an if I speak— And I will speak, that so my heart may burst. 60
Butchers and villains ! bloody cannibals ! How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd !
You have no children, butchers ; if you had,
- The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse.
But if you ever chance to have a child, 65
Look in his youth to have him so cut off
As, deathsmen, you have rid this sweet young prince !
K. Edw. Away with her ; go, bear her hence perforce.
Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence ; dispatch me here.
Here sheathe thy sword ; I'll pardon thee my death. 70
What, wilt thou not ? Then, Clarence, do it thou.
Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.
Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do ; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.
Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it ?
Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself. 75
'Twas sin before, but now 'tis charity.
What ! wilt thou not ? Where is that devil's butcher, Hard-favour'd Richard ? Richard, where art thou ?
Thou art not here. Murder is thy alms-deed ;
Petitioners for blood thou ne'er put'st back. 80
K. Edw. Away, I say ; I charge ye bear her hence.
Q. Mar. So come to you and yours as to this prince ! [Exit, led out forcibly.
K. Edw. Where's Richard gone ?
Clar. To London, all in post ; and, as I guess,
To make a bloody supper in the Tower. 85
K. Edw. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.
Now march we hence. Discharge the common sort
With pay and thanks ; and let's away to London
And see our gentle queen how well she fares.
By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. 90
[Exeunt.
- SCENE VI. London. The Tower.
Enter KING HENRY and GLOUCESTER with the Lieutenant, on the walls.
Glo. Good day, my lord. What, at your book so hard ?
K. Hen. Ay, my good lord—my lord, I should say rather.
'Tis sin to flatter ; 'good' was little better. 'Good Gloucester' and 'good devil' were alike,
And both preposterous ; therefore, not 'good lord'. 95

Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves; we must confer. [Exit Lieutenant.]

K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf;
The first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece,
And next his throat unto the butcher's knife.

What scene of death hath Roscius now to act? 10

Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind:

The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

K. Hen. The bird that hath been limed in a bush

With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush;

And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird, 15
Have now the fatal object in my eye

Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.

Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete

That taught his son the office of a fowl!

And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd. 20

K. Hen. I, Dædalus; my poor boy, Icarus;

Thy father, Minos, that denied our course;
The sun that sear'd the wings of my sweet boy,

Thy brother Edward; and thyself, the sea
Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.

Oh, kill me with thy weapon, not with words! 26

My breast can better brook thy dagger's point

Than can my ears that tragic history.

But wherefore dost thou come? Is't for my life? 29

Glo. Think'st thou I am an executioner?

K. Hen. A persecutor I am sure thou art,
Of murdering innocents be executing,

Why, then thou art an executioner.

Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd when first thou didst presume, 35

Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine.
And thus I prophesy, that many a thousand

Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear,
And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's, 39

And many an orphan's water-standing eye—

Men for their sons, wives for their husbands,

Orphans for their parents' timeless death—
Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.

The owl shriek'd at thy birth—an evil sign;
The night-crow cried, aboding luckless

time; 45
Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees;

The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,

And chatt'ring pies in dismal discords sung;
Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,
And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope, 50

To wit, an indigest deformed lump,

Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.

Teeth hadst thou in thy head when thou wast born,

To signify thou cam'st to bite the world;
And if the rest be true which I have heard,

Thou cam'st— 56

Glo. I'll hear no more. Die, prophet, in thy speech. [Stabs him.]

For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.

O, God forgive my sins and pardon thee! 60

Glo. What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster

Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted.

See how my sword weeps for the poor King's death.

O, may such purple tears be alway shed
From those that wish the downfall of our house! 65

If any spark of life be yet remaining,
Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee

thither— [Stabs him again.]

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear.
Indeed, 'tis true that Henry told me of;

For I have often heard my mother say 70
I came into the world with my legs forward.

Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste
And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?

The midwife wonder'd; and the women

cried

'O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth!'

And so I was, which plainly signified 76
That I should snarl, and bite, and play the dog.

Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body so,

Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.
I have no brother, I am like no brother; 80

And this word 'love', which greybeards

call divine,

Be resident in men like one another,
And not in me! I am myself alone.

Clarence, beware; thou keep'st me from the light,

But I will sort a pitchy day for thee; 85
For I will buzz abroad such prophecies

That Edward shall be fearful of his life;
And then to purge his fear, I'll be thy

death.

King Henry and the Prince his son are gone.
Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the

rest; 90
Counting myself but bad till I be best.
I'll throw thy body in another room,
And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom.
[Exit with the body.]

SCENE VII. London. The palace.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, QUEEN ELIZABETH, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, Nurse with the young PRINCE, and Attendants.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,
Repurchas'd with the blood of enemies.
What valiant foemen, like to autumn's
corn,
Have we mow'd down in tops of all their
pride!
Three Dukes of Somerset, threefold re-nown'd
For hardy and undoubted champions;
Two Cliffords, as the father and the son;
And two Northumberlands—two braver
men
Ne'er spurr'd their coursers at the trumpet's
sound;
With them the two brave bears, Warwick
and Montague,
That in their chains fetter'd the kingly
lion
And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat
And made our footstool of security.
Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my
boy.
Young Ned, for thee thine uncles and
myself
Have in our armours watch'd the winter's
night,
Went all afoot in summer's scalding heat,
That thou might'st repossess the crown in
peace;
And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain.
Glo. [Aside] I'll blast his harvest if your head were laid;
For yet I am not look'd on in the world.

This shoulder was ordain'd so thick t
heave;
And heave it shall some weight or break m
back.
Work thou the way—and that sha execute.
K. Edw. Clarence and Gloucester, lov
my lovely queen;
And kiss your princely nephew, brother
both.
Clar. The duty that I owe unto you
Majesty
I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.
K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worth brother, thanks.
Glo. And that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,
Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit.
[Aside] To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master
And cried 'All hail!' when as he mean all harm.
K. Edw. Now am I seated as my sou delights,
Having my country's peace and brothers
loves.
Clar. What will your Grace have don with Margaret?
Reignier, her father, to the King of Franc
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem, And hither have they sent it for he
ransom.
K. Edw. Away with her, and waft he hence to France.
And now what rests but that we spend the
time
With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,
Such as befits the pleasure of the court?
Sound drums and trumpets. Farewell, sou annoy!
For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.
[Exeunt]

THE SCENE : England.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. London. A street.

Enter RICHARD, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, solus.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;
And all the clouds that lur'd upon our
 house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
Our stern alarums chang'd to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front,
And now, instead of mounting barbed
 steeds
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber

To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I—that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous lookingglass—
I—that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's
 majesty
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph—
I—that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing world scarce half made
 up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable
That dogs bark at me as I halt by them—
Why, I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to spy my shadow in the sun
And descant on mine own deformity.
And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,
I am determin'd to prove a villain
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,

By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence and the King
In deadly hate the one against the other ;
And if King Edward be as true and just ³⁶
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd
up—

About a prophecy which says that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be. ⁴⁰ Dive, thoughts, down to my soul. Here Clarence comes.

Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY.

Brother, good day. What means this armed guard

That waits upon your Grace ?

Clar. His Majesty,
Tend'ring my person's safety, hath appointed

This conduct to convey me to th' Tower. ⁴⁵
Glo. Upon what cause ?

Clar. Because my name is George.

Glo. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of
yours :

He should, for that, commit your god-
fathers.

O, belike his Majesty hath some intent
That you should be new-christ'ned in the Tower. ⁵⁰

But what's the matter, Clarence ? May I
know ?

Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know ; for I protest

As yet I do not ; but, as I can learn,
He hearkens after prophecies and dreams,
And from the cross-row plucks the letter
G, ⁵⁵

And says a wizard told him that by G
His issue disinherited should be ;
And, for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought that I am he.
These, as I learn, and such like toys as these ⁶⁰

Hath mov'd his Highness to commit me
now.

Glo. Why, this it is when men are rul'd
by women :

'Tis not the King that sends you to the Tower ;

My Lady Grey his wife, Clarence, 'tis she
That tempers him to this extremity. ⁶⁵

Was it not she and that good man of worship,

Antony Woodville, her brother there,
That made him send Lord Hastings to the Tower,

From whence this present day he is delivered ? ⁶⁹

We are not safe, Clarence ; we are not safe.

Clar. By heaven, I think there is no man is secure

But the Queen's kindred, and night-walking heralds

That trudge betwixt the King and Mistress Shore.

Heard you not what an humble suppliant
Lord Hastings was, for her delivery ? ⁷⁵

Glo. Humbly complaining to her deity Got my Lord Chamberlain his liberty.

I'll tell you what—I think it is our way,
If we will keep in favour with the King,

To be her men and wear her livery : ⁸⁰
The jealous o'er-worn widow and herself,

Since that our brother dubb'd them gentle-
women,

Are mighty gossips in our monarchy.

Brak. I beseech your Graces both to
pardon me :

His Majesty hath straitly given in charge ⁸⁵
That no man shall have private conference,
Of what degree soever, with your brother.

Glo. Even so ; an't please your worship,
Brakenbury,

You may partake of any thing we say :
We speak no treason, man ; we say the

King ⁹⁰

Is wise and virtuous, and his noble queen
Well struck in years, fair, and not jealous ;

We say that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,
A cherry lip, a bonny eye, a passing pleasing

tongue ;

And that the Queen's kindred are made gentlefolks. ⁹⁵

How say you, sir ? Can you deny all this ?
Brak. With this, my lord, myself have nought to do.

Glo. Nought to do with Mistress Shore !
I tell thee, fellow,

He that doth naught with her, excepting one,
Were best to do it secretly alone. ¹⁰⁰

Brak. What one, my lord ?

Glo. Her husband, knave ! Wouldst thou betray me ?

Brak. I do beseech your Grace to pardon me, and withal

Forbear your conference with the noble
Duke.

Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey. ¹⁰⁵

Glo. We are the Queen's abjects and must obey.

Brother, farewell ; I will unto the King ;
And whatsoever you will employ me in—
Were it to call King Edward's widow sister—

I will perform it to enfranchise you. ¹¹⁰
Meantime, this deep disgrace in brotherhood

Touches me deeper than you can imagine.
Clar. I know it pleaseth neither of us well.

Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long ;

I will deliver you, or else lie for you. ¹¹⁵
Meantime, have patience.

Clar. I must perforce. Farewell.
[Exeunt Clarence, Brakenbury, and Guard.

Glo. Go tread the path that thou shalt ne'er return.
Simple, plain Clarence, I do love thee so
That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven,
If heaven will take the present at our hands.
But who comes here? The new-delivered Hastings? 121

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious
lord!

Glo. As much unto my good Lord
Chamberlain!

Well are you welcome to the open air.
How hath your lordship brook'd imprison-
ment? 125

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must;

But I shall live, my lord, to give them
thanks

That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too;

For they that were your enemies are his, 130
And have prevail'd as much on him as you.

Hast. More pity that the eagles should be mew'd

Whiles kites and buzzards prey at liberty.

Glo. What news abroad?

Hast. No news so bad abroad as this at
home: 135

The King is sickly, weak, and melancholy,
And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glo. Now, by Saint John, that news is bad indeed.

O, he hath kept an evil diet long
And overmuch consum'd his royal person!

'Tis very grievous to be thought upon. 141
Where is he? In his bed?

Hast. He is.

Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.
[Exit Hastings.]

He cannot live, I hope, and must not die 145 Till George be pack'd with posthorse up to heaven.

I'll in to urge his hatred more to Clarence With lies well steel'd with weighty arguments;

And, if I fail not in my deep intent,
Clarence hath not another day to live; 150

Which done, God take King Edward to his
mercy,

And leave the world for me to bustle in!
For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter.

What though I kill'd her husband and her
father?

The readiest way to make the wench
amends 155

Is to become her husband and her father;
The which will I—not all so much for love
As for another secret close intent

By marrying her which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to market.

Clarence still breathes; Edward still lives and reigns; 161
When they are gone, then must I count my gains. [Exit.]

SCENE II. London. Another street.

*Enter the corpse of King Henry the Sixth,
with Halberds to guard it; LADY ANNE being the mourner, attended by TRESSSEL and BERKELEY.*

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load—

If honour may be shrouded in a hearse;
Whilst I awhile obsequiously lament
Th' untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.
Poor key-cold figure of a holy king! 5

Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal
blood!

Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost
To hear the lamentations of poor Anne, Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughtered
son, 10

Stabb'd by the self-same hand that made these wounds.

Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life
I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes.

Curs'd be the hand that made these fatal holes!

Curs'd the heart that had the heart to
do it! 15

Curs'd the blood that let this blood from
hence!

More direful hap betide that hated wretch
That makes us wretched by the death of
thee

Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives!
If ever he have child, abortive be it, 21
Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,

Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopeful mother at the view,

And that be heir to his unhappiness! 25
If ever he have wife, let her be made

More miserable by the death of him Than I am made by my young lord and
thee!

Come, now towards Chertsey with your holy load,

Taken from Paul's to be interred there; 30
And still as you are weary of this weight

Rest you, whiles I lament King Henry's
corse.

[The bearers take up the coffin.]

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Stay, you that bear the corse, and set it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend

To stop devoted charitable deeds? 35
Glo. Villains, set down the corse; or, by Saint Paul,

I'll make a corse of him that disobeys !

1 Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.

Glo. Unmanner'd dog ! Stand thou, when I command.

Advance thy halberd higher than my breast, 40

Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot

And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

[The Bearers set down the coffin.]

Anne. What, do you tremble ? Are you all afraid ?

Alas, I blame you not, for you are mortal, And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil. 45

Avaunt, thou dreadful minister of hell ! Thou hadst but power over his mortal body,

His soul thou canst not have ; therefore, be gone.

Glo. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst.

Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence and trouble us not ; 50

For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,

Fill'd it with cursing cries and deep exclams.

If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds, Behold this pattern of thy butcheries.

O, gentlemen, see, see ! Dead Henry's wounds 55

Open their congeal'd mouths and bleed afre h.

Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity, For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood

From cold and empty veins where no blood dwells ;

Thy deeds inhuman and unnatural 60
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.

O God, which this blood mad'st, revenge his death !

O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his death !

Either, heav'n, with lightning strike the murd'rer dead ;

Or, earth, gape open wide and eat him quick, 65

As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,

Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered.

Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity, Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

Anne. Villain, thou knowest nor law of God nor man : 70

No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.

Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no beast.

Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth !

Glo. More wonderful when angels are so angry.

Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman, 75
Of these supposed crimes to give me leave
By circumstance but to acquit myself.

Anne. Vouchsafe, defus'd infection of a man,

For these known evils but to give me leave
By circumstance to curse thy cursed self

Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have 82

Some patient leisure to excuse myself.

Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make

No excuse current but to hang thyself.

Glo. By such despair I should accuse myself. 85

Anne. And by despairing shalt thou stand excused

For doing worthy vengeance on thyself
That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.

Glo. Say that I slew them not ?

Anne. Then say they were not slain.
But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee. 90

Glo. I did not kill your husband.

Anne. Why, then he is alive.

Glo. Nay, he is dead, and slain by Edward's hands.

Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest :
Queen Margaret saw

Thy murd'rous falchion smoking in his blood ;

The which thou once didst bend against her breast, 95

But that thy brothers beat aside the point.

Glo. I was provoked by her sland'rous tongue

That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.

Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,

That never dream'st on aught but butcheries. 100

Didst thou not kill this king ?

Glo. I grant ye. I grant ye.

Anne. Dost grant me, hedgehog ? Then, God grant me too

Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed !

O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous !

Glo. The better for the King of Heaven, that hath him. 105

Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.

Glo. Let him thank me that help to send him thither,

For he was fitter for that place than earth.

Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell.

Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it. 110

Anne. Some dungeon.

Glo. Your bed-chamber.
 Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest !
 Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you.
 Anne. I hope so.
 Glo. I know so. But, gentle Lady Anne, To leave this keen encounter of our wits, ¹¹⁵
 And fall something into a slower method—
 Is not the causer of the timeless deaths
 Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
 As blameful as the executioner ?
 Anne. Thou wast the cause and most accurs'd effect. ¹²⁰
 Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that effect—
 Your beauty that did haunt me in my sleep
 To undertake the death of all the world
 So I might live one hour in your sweet bosom.
 Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide, ¹²⁵
 These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.
 Glo. These eyes could not endure that beauty's wreck ;
 You should not blemish it if I stood by.
 As all the world is cheered by the sun,
 So I by that ; it is my day, my life. ¹³⁰ Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life !
 Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature ;
 thou art both.
 Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on
 thee.
 Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
 To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee. ¹³⁵
 Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
 To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.
 Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy
 husband,
 Did it to help thee to a better husband.
 Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth. ¹⁴
 Glo. He lives that loves thee better than he could.
 Anne. Name him.
 Glo. Plantagenet.
 Anne. Why, that was he.
 Glo. The self-same name, but one of better nature.
 Anne. Where is he ?
 Glo. Here. [She spits at him] Why dost thou spit at me ?
 Anne. Would it were mortal poison, for thy sake ! ¹⁴⁵
 Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a
 place.
 Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler toad.
 Out of my sight ! Thou dost infect mine
 eyes.
 Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine.

Anne. Would they were basilisks to strike thee dead ! ¹⁵⁰
 Glo. I would they were, that I might die
 at once ;
 For now they kill me with a living death.
 Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,
 Sham'd their aspects with store of childish drops—
 These eyes, which never shed remorseful
 tear, ¹⁵⁵
 No, when my father York and Edward wept
 To hear the piteous moan that Rutland
 made
 When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword
 at him ;
 Nor when thy warlike father, like a child,
 Told the sad story of my father's death, ¹⁶⁰
 And twenty times made pause to sob and weep
 That all the standers-by had wet their
 cheeks
 Like trees bedash'd with rain—in that sad
 time
 My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear ;
 And what these sorrows could not thence exhale ¹⁶⁵
 Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.
 I never sued to friend nor enemy ;
 My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing word ;
 But, now thy beauty is propos'd my fee,
 My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak. ¹⁷⁰
 [She looks scornfully at him.] Teach not thy lip such scorn ; for it was
 made
 For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.
 If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive, Lo here I lend thee this sharp-pointed
 sword ;
 Which if thou please to hide in this true
 breast ¹⁷⁵
 And let the soul forth that adareth thee,
 I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
 And humbly beg the death upon my knee.
 [He lays his breast open ; she offers at it with his sword.]
 Nay, do not pause ; for I did kill King
 Henry—
 But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me. ¹⁸⁰
 Nay, now dispatch ; 'twas I that stabb'd young Edward—
 But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on.
 [She falls the sword.]
 Take up the sword again, or take up me.
 Anne. Arise, dissembler ; though I wish thy death,
 I will not be thy executioner. ¹⁸⁵
 Glo. Then did me kill myself, and I will do it.
 Anne. I have already.

Glo. That was in thy rage.
 Speak it again, and even with the word
 This hand, which for thy love did kill thy
 love,
 Shall for thy love kill a far truer love ; 190
 To both their deaths shalt thou be accessary.

Anne. I would I knew thy heart.

Glo. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.

Anne. I fear me both are false.

Glo. Then never was man true. 195

Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.

Glo. Say, then, my peace is made.

Anne. That shalt thou know hereafter.

Glo. But shall I live in hope ?

Anne. All men, I hope, live so. 200

Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.

Anne. To take is not to give.

[Puts on the ring.]

Glo. Look how my ring encompasseth thy finger,

Even so thy breast encloseth my poor
 heart ;

Wear both of them, for both of them are
 thine. 205

And if thy poor devoted servant may
 But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
 Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.

Anne. What is it ?

Glo. That it may please you leave these sad designs 210

To him that hath most cause to be a mourner,

And presently repair to Crosby House ;
 Where—after I have solemnly interr'd
 At Chertsey monast'ry this noble king,
 And wet his grave with my repentant
 tears— 215

I will with all expedient duty see you.
 For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
 Grant me this boon.

Anne. With all my heart ; and much it joys me too

To see you are become so penitent. 220
 Tressel and Berkeley, go along with me.

Glo. Bid me farewell.

Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve ;
 But since you teach me how to flatter you,
 Imagine I have said farewell already.

[Exeunt two gentlemen with Lady Anne.]

Glo. Sirs, take up the corse.

Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord ?

Glo. No, to White Friars ; there attend
 my coming. 226

[Exeunt all but Gloucester.]

Was ever woman in this humour woo'd ?
 Was ever woman in this humour won ?
 I'll have her ; but I will not keep her long.
 What ! I that kill'd her husband and his
 father— 230

To take her in her heart's extremest hate,
 With curses in her mouth, tears in her
 eyes,

The bleeding witness of my hatred by ;

Having God, her conscience, and these bars
 against me,

And I no friends to back my suit at all 235
 But the plain devil and dissembling looks,
 And yet to win her, all the world to nothing!
 Ha !

Hath she forgot already that brave prince, Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since, 240

Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury
 A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman—
 Fram'd in the prodigality of nature,
 Young, valiant, wise, and no doubt right royal—

The spacious world cannot again afford ; 245
 And will she yet abase her eyes on me,
 That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet
 prince

And made her widow to a woeful bed ?
 On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety ? 249

On me, that halts and am misshapen thus ?
 My dukedom to a beggarly denier,
 I do mistake my person all this while.

Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,
 Myself to be a marv'llous proper man.

I'll be at charges for a looking-glass, 255

And entertain a score or two of tailors
 To study fashions to adorn my body.

Since I am crept in favour with myself,
 I will maintain it with some little cost.

But first I'll turn yon fellow in his grave,
 And then return lamenting to my love. 260

Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,

That I may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.]

SCENE III. London. The palace.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, LORD RIVERS, and LORD GREY.

Riv. Have patience, madam ; there's no doubt his Majesty

Will soon recover his accustom'd health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse ;

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good
 comfort,

And cheer his Grace with quick and merry
 eyes. 3

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide on me ?

Grey. No other harm but loss of such a
 lord.

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms.

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son

To be your comforter when he is gone. 10

Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young ; and his minority

Is put unto the trust of Richard Gloucester, A man that loves not me, nor none of
 you.

Riv. Is it concluded he shall be Protector?

Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded yet;

But so it must be, if the King miscarry.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and DERBY.

Grey. Here come the Lords of Buckingham and Derby.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal Grace!

Der. God make your Majesty joyful as you have been.

Q. Eliz. The Countess Richmond, good my Lord of Derby,

To your good prayer will scarcely say amen.

Yet, Derby, notwithstanding she's your wife

And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd

I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Derby. I do beseech you, either not believe

The envious slanders of her false accusers;

Or, if she be accus'd on true report, Bear with her weakness, which I think proceeds

From wayward sickness and no grounded malice.

Q. Eliz. Saw you the King to-day, my Lord of Derby?

Der. But now he Duke of Buckingham and I

Are come from visiting his Majesty.

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope; his Grace speaks cheerfully.

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you confer with him?

Buck. Ay, madam; he desires to make atonement

Between the Duke of Gloucester and your brothers,

And between them and my Lord Chamberlain;

And sent to warn them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. Would all were well! But that will never be.

I fear our happiness is at the height.

Enter GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and DORSET.

Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it.

Who is it that complains unto the King That I, forsooth, am stern and love them not?

By holy Paul, they love his Grace but lightly

That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours.

Because I cannot flatter and look fair,

Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,

Duck with French nods and apish courtesy, I must be held a rancorous enemy.

Cannot a plain man live and think no harm But thus his simple truth must be abus'd

With silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Grey. To who in all this presence speaks your Grace?

Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty nor grace.

When have I injur'd thee? when done thee wrong,

Or thee, or thee, or any of your faction?

A plague upon you all! His royal Grace— Whom God preserve better than you would wish!

Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing while But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloucester, you mistake the matter.

The King, on his own royal disposition And not provok'd by any suitor else—

Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred That in your outward action shows itself

Against my children, brothers, and myself—

Makes him to send that he may learn the ground.

Glo. I cannot tell; the world is grown so bad

That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch.

Since every Jack became a gentleman, There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloucester:

You envy my advancement and my friends';

God grant we never may have need of you!

Glo. Meantime, God grants that I have need of you.

Our brother is imprison'd by your means, Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility

Held in contempt; while great promotions Are daily given to ennoble those

That scarce some two days since were worth a noble.

Q. Eliz. By Him that rais'd me to this careful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd, I never did incense his Majesty

Against the Duke of Clarence, but have been

An earnest advocate to plead for him.

My lord, you do me shameful injury

Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glo. You may deny that you were not the mean

Of my Lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for—

Glo. She may, Lord Rivers? Why, who knows not so?

She may do more, sir, than denying that :
She may help you to many fair prefer-
ments 95

And then deny her aiding hand therein,
And lay those honours on your high desert.
What may she not ? She may—ay, marry, may she—

Riv. What, marry, may she ?

Glo. What, marry, may she ? Marry with a king, 101

A bachelor, and a handsome stripling too.
Iwis your grandam had a worsen match.

Q. Eliz. My Lord of Gloucester, I have too long borne

Your blunt upbraidings and your bitter scoffs.

By heaven, I will acquaint his Majesty 105
Of those gross taunts that oft I have endur'd.

I had rather be a country servant-maid
Than a great queen with this condition—
To be so baited, scorn'd, and stormed at.

Enter old QUEEN MARGARET, behind.

Small joy have I in being England's
Queen. 111

Q. Mar. And less'n'd be that small, God,
I beseech Him !

Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me.

Glo. What ! Threat you me with telling of the King ?

Tell him and spare not. Look what I have said

I will avouch't in presence of the King. 115
I dare adventure to be sent to th' Tow'r.
'Tis time to speak—my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. Out, devil ! I do remember them too well :

Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower,

And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury.

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king, 121

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs,
A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,
A liberal rewarder of his friends ;

To royalize his blood I spent mine own. 125

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his or thine.

Glo. In all which time you and your husband Grey

Were factious for the house of Lancaster ; And, Rivers, so were you. Was not your husband 129

In Margaret's battle at Saint Albans slain ?
Let me put in your minds, if you forget,

What you have been ere this, and what you
are ;

Withal, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A murd'rous villain, and so still thou art.

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father,
Warwick, 135

Ay, and forswore himself—which Jesu
pardon !—

Q. Mar. Which God revenge !

Glo. To fight on Edward's party for the
crown ;

And for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up
I would to God my heart were flint like Edward's, 141

Or Edward's soft and pitiful like mine.
I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame and leave this world,

Thou cacodemon ; there thy kingdom is.

Riv. My Lord of Gloucester, in those busy
days 145

Which here you urge to prove us enemies,
We follow'd then our lord, our sovereign
king.

So should we you, if you should be our king.

Glo. If I should be ! I had rather be a pedlar.

Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof ! 150

Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose

You should enjoy were you this country's
king,

As little joy you may suppose in me
That I enjoy, being the Queen thereof.

Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the Queen
thereof ; 155

For I am she, and altogether joyless.
I can no longer hold me patient.

[Advancing.]

Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall
out

In sharing that which you have pill'd from
me.

Which of you trembles not that looks or
me ? 160

If not that, I am Queen, you bow like subjects,

Yet that, by you depos'd, you quake like rebels ?

Ah, gentle villain, do not turn away !

Glo. Foul wrickled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight ?

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd, 165

That will I make before I let thee go.

Glo. Wert thou not banished on pain of
death ?

Q. Mar. I was ; but I do find more pain in banishment

Than death can yield me here by my abode.

A husband and a son thou ow'st to me ; 170
And thou a kingdom ; all of you allegiance.

This sorrow that I have by right is yours.
And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glo. The curse my noble father laid on
thee,

When thou didst crown his warlike brows
with paper 175

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes,
And then to dry them gav'st the Duke a clout
Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland—

His curses then from bitterness of soul
Denounc'd against thee are all fall'n upon thee ; 18

And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God to right the innocent.

Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,

And the most merciless that e'er was heard of!

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported. 185

Dor. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What, were you snarling all before I came,

Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turn you all your hatred now on me ?
Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven 191

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,

Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment,

Should all but answer for that peevish brat?
Can curses pierce the clouds and enter heaven ? 195

Why then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses !

Though not by war, by surfeit die your king,

As ours by murder, to make him a king !
Edward thy son, that now is Prince of Wales,

For Edward our son, that was Prince of Wales, 200

Die in his youth by like untimely violence !
Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,
Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self !
Long mayest thou live to wail thy children's death,

And see another, as I see thee now, 205
Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine !

Long die thy happy days before thy death ;
And, after many length'ned hours of grief,
Die neither mother, wife, nor England's Queen !

Rivers and Dorset, you were standers by,
And so wast thou, Lord Hast ngs, when my son 211

Was stabb'd with bloody daggers. God, I pray him,

That none of you may live his natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off !

Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd hag. 215

Q. Mar. And leave out thee ? Stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O, let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation 220
On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace !

The worm of conscience still be-gnaw thy soul !

Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st,

And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends ! 224

No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,
Unless it be while some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils !

Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog,
Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity

The slave of nature and the son of hell, 230
Thou slander of thy heavy mother's womb,
Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins,

Thou rag of honour, thou detested—

Glo. Margaret !

Q. Mar. Richard !

Glo. Ha ?

Q. Mar. I call thee not.

Glo. I cry thee mercy then, for I did think 235

That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.

Q. Mar. Why, so I did, but look'd for no reply.

O, let me make the period to my curse !

Glo. 'Tis done by me, and ends in—Margaret.

Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself. 240

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune !

Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider

Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about ?
Fool, fool ! thou whet'st a knife to kill thyself.

The day will come that thou shalt wish for me 245

To help thee curse this poisonous bunch-back'd toad.

Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic curse,

Lest to thy harm thou move our patience.

Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you ! you have all mov'd mine.

Riv. Were you well serv'd, you would be taught your duty. 250

Q. Mar. To serve me well you all should do me duty,

Teach me to be your queen and you my subjects.

O, serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty !

Dor. Dispute not with her ; she is lunatic.

Q. Mar. Peace, Master Marquis, you are malapart ; 255

Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current.

O, that your young nobility could judge
What 'twere to lose it and be miserable !
They that stand high have many blasts to shake them,

And if they fall they dash themselves to pieces. 260

Glo. Good counsel, marry ; learn it, learn it, Marquis.

Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as me.

Glo. Ay, and much more ; but I was born so high,

Our aery buildeth in the cedar's top,
And dallies with the wind, and scorns the
sun. 265

Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade—alas ! alas !

Witness my son, now in the shade of death,
Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy
wrath

Hath in eternal darkness folded up.

Your aery buildeth in our aery's nest. 270

O God that seest it, do not suffer it ;

As it is won with blood, lost be it so !

Buck. Peace, peace, for shame, if not for charity !

Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame
to me.

Uncharitably with me have you dealt, 275
And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher'd.

My charity is outrage, life my shame ;
And in that shame still live my sorrow's
rage !

Buck. Have done, have done.

Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham, I'll kiss thy hand 280

In sign of league and amity with thee.

Now fair befall thee and thy noble house !

Thy garments are not spotted with our
blood,

Nor thou within the compass of my curse.

Buck. Nor no one here ; for curses never pass 285

The lips of those that breathe them in the air.

Q. Mar. I will not think but they ascend the sky

And there awake God's gentle-sleeping
peace.

O Buckingham, take heed of yonder dog !
Look when he fawns, he bites ; and when he bites, 290

His venom tooth will rankle to the death ;
Have not to do with him, beware of him ;
Sin, death, and hell, have set their marks
on him,

And all their ministers attend on him.

Glo. What doth she say, my Lord of
Buckingham ? 295

Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious
lord.

Q. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel,

And soothe the devil that I warn thee from ?

O, but remember this another day,
When he shall split thy very heart with

sorrow, 300

And say poor Margaret was a prophetess !

Live each of you the subjects to his hate,

And he to yours, and all of you to God's !
[Exit.]

Buck. My hair doth stand an end to hear her curses.

Riv. And so doth mine. I muse why she's at liberty. 305

Glo. I cannot blame her ; by God's holy
Mother,

She hath had too much wrong ; and I repent

My part thereof that I have done to her.

Q. Eliz. I never did her any to my knowledge.

Glo. Yet you have all the vantage of her
wrong. 310

I was too hot to do somebody good

That is too cold in thinking of it now.

Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid ;

He is frank'd up to fatting for his pains ;

God pardon them that are the cause thereof.

Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion, 316

To pray for them that have done scathe
to us !

Glo. So do I ever—[Aside] being well
advis'd ;

For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself.

Enter CATESBY.

Cates. Madam, his Majesty doth call for
you, 320

And for your Grace, and you, my gracious lords.

Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come. Lords, will you go with me ?

Riv. We wait upon your Grace.
[Exeunt all but Gloucester.]

Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.

The secret mischiefs that I set abroad 325
I lay unto the grievous charge of others.

Clarence, who I indeed have cast in dark-
ness,

I do beweepe to many simple gulls ;
Namely, to Derby, Hastings, Buckingham ;

And tell them 'tis the Queen and her allies

That stir the King against the Duke my
brother. 331

Now they believe it, and withal whet me
To be reveng'd on Rivers, Dorset, Grey ;

But then I sigh and, with a piece of Scripture, 334
Tell them that God bids us do good for evil.
And thus I clothe my naked villainy
With odd old ends stol'n forth of holy writ,
And seem a saint when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

But, soft, here come my executioners. 339
How now, my hardy stout resolved mates !
Are you now going to dispatch this thing ?

1 Murd. We are, my lord, and come to have the warrant,
That we may be admitted where he is.

Glo. Well thought upon ; I have it here about me. [Gives the warrant.

When you have done, repair to Crosby
Place. 345

But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,
Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead ;
For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps May move your hearts to pity, if you mark
him.

1 Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate ; 350

Talkers are no good doers. Be assur'd We go to use our hands and not our tongues.

Glo. Your eyes drop millstones when fools' eyes fall tears.

I like you, lads ; about your business
straight ; 355

Go, go, dispatch.

1 Murd. We will, my noble lord.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. London. The Tower.

Enter CLARENCE and Keeper.

Keep. Why looks your Grace so heavily
to-day ?

Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights,
That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night 5
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy
days—

So full of dismal terror was the time !

Keep. What was your dream, my lord ? I pray you tell me.

Clar. Methoughts that I had broken from the Tower

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy ; 10
And in my company my brother Gloucester,
Who from my cabin tempted me to walk
Upon the hatches. Thence we look'd toward England,

And cited up a thousand heavy times,
During the wars of York and Lancaster, 15
That had befall'n us. As we pac'd along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches, Methought that Gloucester stumbled, and in falling

Struck me, that thought to stay him, overboard

Into the tumbling billows of the main. 20 O Lord, methought what pain it was to drown,

What dreadful noise of waters in my ears,
What sights of ugly death within my eyes !
Methoughts I saw a thousand fearful wrecks,

A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon,
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl, 26

Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,
All scatt' red in the bottom of the sea ;
Some lay in dead men's skulls, and in the holes

Where eyes did once inhabit there were crept, 30

As 'twere in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems,
That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatt' red by.

Keep. Had you such leisure in the time of death

To gaze upon these secrets of the deep ? 35 Clar. Methought I had ; and often did I strive

To yield the ghost, but still the envious
flood

Stopp'd in my soul and would not let it
forth

To find the empty, vast, and wand'ring
air ;

But smother'd it within my panting bulk,
Who almost burst to belch it in the sea. 41

Keep. Awak'd you not in this sore agony ?

Clar. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life.

O, then began the tempest to my soul !
I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood With that sour ferryman which poets write of, 46

Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.
The first that there did greet my stranger
soul

Was my great father-in-law, renowned
Warwick,

Who spake aloud 'What scourge for perjury 50

Can this dark monarchy afford false
Clarence ?'

And so he vanish'd. Then came wand'ring
by

A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood, and he shriek'd out aloud

'Clarence is come—false, fleeting, perjur'd
Clarence, 55

That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury.
Seize on him, Furies, take him unto torment !'

With that, methoughts, a legion of foul fiends

Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears

Such hideous cries that, with the very noise, 60

I trembling wak'd, and for a season after Could not believe but that I was in hell,
Such terrible impression made my dream.

Keep. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted you ;

I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it. 65

Clar. Ah, Keeper, Keeper, I have done
these things

That now give evidence against my soul
For Edward's sake, and see how he requites
me !

O God ! If my deep prayers cannot appease
Thee,

But Thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute Thy wrath in me alone ; 71

O, spare my guiltless wife and my poor
children !

Keeper, I prithee sit by me awhile ;
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Keep. I will, my lord. God give your Grace good rest. [Clarence sleeps.

Enter BRAKENBURY the Lieutenant.

Brak. Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours, 76

Makes the night morning and the noontide
night.

Princes have but their titles for their glories,

An outward honour for an inward toil ;
And for unfelt imaginations 80

They often feel a world of restless cares,
So that between their titles and low name
There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two Murderers.

1 Murd. Ho ! who's here ?

Brak. What wouldst thou, fellow, and how cam'st thou hither ? 85

1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What, so brief ?

2 Murd. 'Tis better, sir, than to be tedious. Let him see our commission and talk no more. [Brakenbury reads it.

Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver 91

The noble Duke of Clarence to your hands.
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless from the meaning.

There lies the Duke asleep ; and there the keys. 95

I'll to the King and signify to him

That thus I have resign'd to you my charge.

1 Murd. You may, sir ; 'tis a point of wisdom. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Brakenbury and Keeper.

2 Murd. What, shall I stab him as he sleeps ? 100

1 Murd. No ; he'll say 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

2 Murd. Why, he shall never wake unt'
the great judgment-day.

1 Murd. Why, then he'll say we stabb'd him sleeping. 106

2 Murd. The urging of that word judgment hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

1 Murd. What, art thou afraid ?

2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant ; but to be damn'd for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me.

1 Murd. I thought thou hadst been resolute. 113

2 Murd. So I am, to let him live.

1 Murd. I'll back to the Duke of Gloucester and tell him so. 116

2 Murd. Nay, I prithee, stay a little. I hope this passionate humour of mine will change ; it was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty. 119

1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now ?

2 Murd. Faith, some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

1 Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed's done.

2 Murd. Zounds, he dies ; I had forgot the reward.

1 Murd. Where's thy conscience now ?

2 Murd. O, in the Duke of Gloucester's purse ! 127

1 Murd. When he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

2 Murd. 'Tis no matter ; let it go ; there's few or none will entertain it. 131

1 Murd. What if it come to thee again ?

2 Murd. I'll not meddle with it—it makes a man a coward : a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him ; a man cannot swear, but it checks him ; a man cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him. 'Tis a blushing shamefac'd spirit that mutinies in a man's bosom ; it fills a man full of obstacles : it made me once restore a purse of gold that—by chance I found. It beggars any man that keeps it. It is turn'd out of towns and cities for a dangerous thing ; and every man that means to live well endeavours to trust to himself and live without it.

1 Murd. Zounds, 'tis even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the Duke. 144

2 Murd. Take the devil in thy mind and believe him not ; he would insinuate with thee but to make thee sigh.

1 Murd. I am strong-fram'd ; he cannot prevail with me. 148

2 Murd. Spoke like a tall man that respects thy reputation. Come, shall we fall to work ?

1 Murd. Take him on the costard with the hilts of thy sword, and then chop him in the malmsey-butt in the next room. 153

2 Murd. O excellent device ! and make a sop of him.

1 Murd. Soft ! he wakes.

2 Murd. Strike ! 155

1 Murd. No, we'll reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, Keeper ? Give me a cup of wine.

2 Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.

Clar. In God's name, what art thou ?

1 Murd. A man, as you are. 160

Clar. But not as I am, royal.

2 Murd. Nor you as we are, loyal.

Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.

1 Murd. My voice is now the King's, my looks mine own.

Clar. How darkly and how deadly dost thou speak ! 165

Your eyes do menace me. Why look you pale ?

Who sent you hither ? Wherefore do you
come ?

2 Murd. To, to, to—Clar. To murder me ?

Both Murd. Ay, ay. 170

Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so,

And therefore cannot have the hearts to
do it.

Wherein, my friends, have I offended you ?

1 Murd. Offended us you have not, but
the King. 174

Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him again.

2 Murd. Never, my lord ; therefore prepare to die.

Clar. Are you drawn forth among a world of men

To slay the innocent ? What is my offence ?
Where is the evidence that doth accuse me ?

What lawful quest have given their verdict
up 180

Unto the frowning judge, or who pro-nounc'd

The bitter sentence of poor Clarence'
death ?

Before I be convict by course of law,
To threaten me with death is most unlawful.

I charge you, as you hope to have redemption 185

By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins,

That you depart and lay no hands on me.
The deed you undertake is damnable.

1 Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.

2 Murd. And he that hath commanded is our king. 190

Clar. Erroneous vassals ! the great King
of kings

Hath in the tables of his law commanded That thou shalt do no murder. Will you
then

Spurn at his edict and fulfil a man's ?

Take heed ; for he holds vengeance in his
hand 195

To hurl upon their heads that break his law.

2 Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee

For false forswearing, and for murder too :
Thou didst receive the sacrament to fight

In quarrel of the house of Lancaster. 200

1 Murd. And like a traitor to the name of God

Didst break that vow ; and with thy treacherous blade

Unripp'dst the bowels of thy sov'reign's
son.

2 Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

1 Murd. How canst thou urge God's dreadful law to us, 205

When thou hast broke it in such dear degree ?

Clar. Alas ! for whose sake did I that ill deed ?

For Edward, for my brother, for his sake.
He sends you not to murder me for this, 210

For in that sin he is as deep as I.

If God will be avenged for the deed,

O, know you yet He doth it publicly.

Take not the quarrel from His pow'rful
arm ;

He needs no indirect or lawless course 215
To cut off those that have offended Him.

1 Murd. Who made thee then a bloody minister

When gallant-springing brave Plantagenet, That princely novice, was struck dead by
thee ?

Clar. My brother's love, the devil, and my rage. 220

1 Murd. Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy faults,

Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee.

Clar. If you do love my brother, hate not
me ;

I am his brother, and I love him well.

If you are hir'd for meed, go back again, 225

And I will send you to my brother
Gloucester,

Who shall reward you better for my life
Than Edward will for tidings of my death.

2 Murd. You are deceiv'd : your brother
Gloucester hates you.

Clar. O, no, he loves me, and he holds me dear. 230

Go you to him from me.

1 Murd. Ay, so we will.

Clar. Tell him when that our princely father York

Bless'd his three sons with his victorious
arm

And charg'd us from his soul to love each
other, 234

He little thought of this divided friendship.

Bid Gloucester think of this, and he will weep.

1 Murd. Ay, millstones ; as he lesson'd us to weep.

Clar. O, do not slander him, for he is kind.

1 Murd. Right, as snow in harvest. Come, you deceive yourself : 240

'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.

Clar. It cannot be ; for he bewept my fortune

And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore with sobs

That he would labour my delivery.

1 Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you 245

From this earth's thralldom to the joys of heaven.

2 Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.

Clar. Have you that holy feeling in your souls

To counsel me to make my peace with God, And are you yet to your own souls so blind 250

That you will war with God by murd'ring me ?

O, sirs, consider : they that set you on To do this deed will hate you for the deed.

2 Murd. What shall we do ?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

1 Murd. Relent ! No, 'tis cowardly and womanish. 255

Clar. Not to relent is beastly, savage, devilish.

Which of you, if you were a prince's son, Being pent from liberty as I am now, If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,

Would not entreat for life ? 260

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks ; O, if thine eye be not a flatterer,

Come thou on my side and entreat for me— As you would beg were you in my distress.

A begging prince what beggar pities not ?

2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord. 266

1 Murd. [Stabbing him] Take that, and that. If all this will not do,

I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within. [Exit with the body.

2 Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately dispatch'd !

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands 270

Of this most grievous murder !

Re-enter First Murderer.

1 Murd. How now, what mean'st thou that thou help'st me not ?

By heavens, the Duke shall know how slack you have been !

2 Murd. I would he knew that I had sav'd his brother ! 274

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say ;

For I repent me that the Duke is slain.

[Exit.

1 Murd. So do not I. Go, coward as thou art.

Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole, Till that the Duke give order for his burial ; And when I have my meed, I will away ; 280 For this will out, and then I must not stay.

[Exit.

ACT TWO

SCENE I. London. The palace.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD sick, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS, BUCKINGHAM, GREY, and Others.

K. Edw. Why, so. Now have I done a good day's work.

You peers, continue this united league. I every day expect an embassy From my Redeemer to redeem me hence ; And more at peace my soul shall part to heaven, 5

Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.

Hastings and Rivers, take each other's hand ;

Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate ;

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love. 10

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like !

K. Edw. Take heed you dally not before your king ;

Lest He that is the supreme King of kings Confound your hidden falsehood and award Either of you to be the other's end. 15

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love !

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart !

K. Edw. Madam, yourself is not exempt from this ;

Nor you, son Dorset ; Buckingham, nor you :

You have been factious one against the other. 20

Wife, love Lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand ;

And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings ; I will never more remember

Our former hatred, so thrive I and mine !

K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him ; Hastings, love Lord Marquis. 25

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,

Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I. [They embrace.

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league

With thy embracements to my wife's allies,
And make me happy in your unity. 31

Buck. [To the Queen] Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate

Upon your Grace, but with all duteous love
Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me With hate in those where I expect most
love ! 35

When I have most need to employ a friend
And most assured that he is a friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he unto me ! This do I beg of God
When I am cold in love to you or yours. 40

[They embrace.]

K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely
Buckingham,
Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.
There wanteth now our brother Gloucester
here

To make the blessed period of this peace.

Buck. And, in good time,
Here comes Sir Richard Ratcliff and the
Duke. 45

Enter GLOUCESTER, and RATCLIFF.

Glo. Good morrow to my sovereign king and queen ;

And, princely peers, a happy time of day !

K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day.

Gloucester, we have done deeds of charity,
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate, 50
Between these swelling wrong-incensed
peers.

Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign
lord.

Among this princely heap, if any here,
By false intelligence or wrong surmise,
Hold me a foe— 55

If I unwittingly, or in my rage,
Have aught committed that is hardly borne
To any in this presence, I desire To reconcile me to his friendly peace :

'Tis death to me to be at enmity ; 60
I hate it, and desire all good men's love.

First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my duteous
service ;

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham, 64
If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us ;
Of you, and you, Lord Rivers, and of Dorset,

That all without desert have frown'd on
me ;

Of you, Lord Woodville, and, Lord Scales,
of you ;

Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen—indeed, of
all.

I do not know that Englishman alive
With whom my soul is any jot at odds 70
More than the infant that is born to-night.
I thank my God for my humility.

Q. Eliz. A holy day shall this be kept hereafter.

I would to God all strifes were well compounded.

My sovereign lord, I do beseech your Highness 75

To take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glo. Why, madam, have I off' red love for
this,

To be so flouted in this royal presence ?

Who knows not that the gentle Duke is dead ? [They all start.]

You do him injury to scorn his corse. 80

K. Edw. Who knows not he is dead !
Who knows he is ?

Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world
is this !

Buck. Look I so pale, Lord Dorset, as the rest ?

Dor. Ay, my good lord ; and no man in the presence 84

But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.

K. Edw. Is Clarence dead ? The order was revers'd.

Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order died,

And that a winged Mercury did bear ;
Some tardy cripple bare the countermand

That came too lag to see him buried. 90
God grant that some, less noble and less loyal,

Nearer in bloody thoughts, an not in blood,
Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,

And yet go current from suspicion !

Enter DERBY.

Der. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done ! 95

K. Edw. I prithee, peace ; my soul is full of sorrow.

Der. I will not rise unless your Highness hear me.

K. Edw. Then say at once what is it thou requests.

Der. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's life ;

Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman 100
Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk.

K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death,

And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave ?

My brother kill'd no man—his fault was
thought,

And yet his punishment was bitter death.
Who sued to me for him ? Who, in my
wrath, 106

Kneel'd at my feet, and bid me be advis'd ?
Who spoke of brotherhood ? Who spoke of love ?

Who told me how the poor soul did forsake
The mighty Warwick and did fight for
me ? 110

Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury
When Oxford had me down, he rescued me

And said 'Dear Brother, live, and be a king' ? 113

Who told me, when we both lay in the field
Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me
Even in his garments, and did give himself,
All thin and naked, to the numb cold
night ?

All this from my remembrance brutish
wrath

Sinfully pluck'd, and not a man of you 119
Had so much grace to put it in my mind.
But when your carters or your waiting-vassals

Have done a drunken slaughter and defac'd
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
You straight are on your knees for pardon,
pardon ;

And I, unjustly too, must grant it you. 125
[Derby rises.]

But for my brother not a man would speak ;
Nor I, ungracious, speak unto myself
For him, poor soul. The proudest of you all Have been beholding to him in his life ;
Yet none of you would once beg for his life.
O God, I fear thy justice will take hold 131
On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for
this !

Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. Ah, poor Clarence !

[Exeunt some with King and Queen.]

Glo. This is the fruits of rashness.
Mark'd you not 134

How that the guilty kindred of the Queen Look'd pale when they did hear of Clarence'
death ?

O, they did urge it still unto the King !
God will revenge it. Come, lords, will you
go

To comfort Edward with our company ?
Buck. We wait upon your Grace. 140

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. The palace.

Enter the old DUCHESS OF YORK, with the Son and Daughter of Clarence.

Son. Good grandam, tell us, is our father
dead ?

Duch. No, boy.

Daugh. Why do you weep so oft, and beat your breast,

And cry 'O Clarence, my unhappy son !' ?

Son. Why do you look on us, and shake
your head, 5

And call us orphans, wretches, castaways,
If that our noble father were alive ?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me both ;

I do lament the sickness of the King, 9
As loath to lose him, not your father's
death ;

It were lost sorrow to wail one that's lost.
Son. Then you conclude, my grandam,
he is dead.

The King mine uncle is to blame for it.
God will revenge it ; whom I will im-portune

With earnest prayers all to that effect. 15
Daugh. And so will I.

Duch. Peace, children, peace ! The King doth love you well.

Incapable and shallow innocents,
You cannot guess who caus'd your father's
death.

Son. Grandam, we can ; for my good uncle Gloucester 20

Told me the King, provok'd to it by the Queen,

Devis'd impeachments to imprison him.
And when my uncle told me so, he wept,

And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek ;
Bade me rely on him as on my father, 25

And he would love me dearly as a child.

Duch. Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle shape,

And with a virtuous vizard hide deep vice !
He is my son ; ay, and therein my shame ;
Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit.

Son. Think you my uncle did dissemble, grandam ? 31

Duch. Ay, boy.

Son. I cannot think it. Hark ! what noise
is this ?

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, with her hair about her ears ; RIVERS and DORSET after her.

Q. Eliz. Ah, who shall hinder me to wail and weep, 34

To chide my fortune, and torment myself ?
I'll join with black despair against my soul
And to myself become an enemy.

Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience ?

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence.
Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead.
Why grow the branches when the root is
gone ? 41

Why wither not the leaves that want their sap ?

If you will live, lament ; if die, be brief,
That our swift-winged souls may catch the King's,

Or like obedient subjects follow him 45
To his new kingdom of ne'er-changing
night.

Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow

As I had title in thy noble husband !
I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
And liv'd with looking on his images ; 50
But now two mirrors of his princely semblance

Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death,
And I for comfort have but one false glass,
That grieves me when I see my shame in
him.

Thou art a widow, yet thou art a mother 55

And hast the comfort of thy children left;
But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms

And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble
hands—

Clarence and Edward. O, what cause
have I—

Thine being but a moiety of my moan— 60
To overgo thy woes and drown thy cries ?

Son. Ah, aunt, you wept not for our father's death !

How can we aid you with our kindred tears ?

Daugh. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd ;

Your widow-dolour likewise be unwept ! 65

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation ;
I am not barren to bring forth complaints.
All springs reduce their currents to mine
eyes

That I, being govern'd by the watery moon,
May send forth plenteous tears to drown
the world ! 70

Ah for my husband, for my dear Lord
Edward !

Chil. Ah for our father, for our dear Lord
Clarence !

Duch. Alas for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence !

Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward ?
and he's gone.

Chil. What stay had we but Clarence ?
and he's gone. 75

Duch. What stays had I but they ? and they are gone.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a
loss.

Chil. Were never orphans had so dear a
loss.

Duch. Was never mother had so dear a
loss.

Alas, I am the mother of these griefs ! 80
Their woes are parcell'd, mine is general.

She for an Edward weeps, and so do I :
I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she.

These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I :
I for an Edward weep, so do not they. 85

Alas, you three on me, threefold distress'd, Pour all your tears ! I am your sorrow's nurse,

And I will pamper it with lamentation.

Dor. Comfort, dear mother. God is much displeas'd

That you take with unthankfulness his doing. 90

In common worldly things 'tis call'd ungrateful

With dull unwillingness to repay a debt Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent ;

Much more to be thus opposite with
heaven,

For it requires the royal debt it lent you. 95

Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful
mother,

Of the young prince your son. Send straight for him ;

Let him be crown'd ; in him your comfort
lives.

Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's
grave,

And plant your joys in living Edward's
throne. 100

Enter GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, DERBY,
HASTINGS, and RATCLIFF.

Glo. Sister, have comfort. All of us have cause

To wail the dimming of our shining star ;
But none can help our harms by wailing
them.

Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy ;
I did not see your Grace. Humbly on my knee 105

I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee ; and put meekness in thy breast,

Love, charity, obedience, and true duty !

Glo. Amen ! [Aside] And make me die a good old man ! 109

That is the butt end of a mother's blessing ;
I marvel that her Grace did leave it out.

Buck. You cloudy princes and heart-sorrowing peers,

That bear this heavy mutual load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love.

Though we have spent our harvest of this
king, 115

We are to reap the harvest of his son.
The broken rancour of your high-swol'n
hearts,

But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together,

Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept.

Me seemeth good that, with some little train, 120

Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be fet

Hither to London, to be crown'd our King.

Riv. Why with some little train, my Lord of Buckingham ?

Buck. Marry, my lord, lest by a multitude
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out, 125

Which would be so much the more dangerous

By how much the estate is green and yet ungovern'd ;

Where every horse bears his commanding
rein

And may direct his course as please
himself, 129

As well the fear of harm as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glo. I hope the King made peace with all of us ;

And the compact is firm and true in me.

Riv. And so in me ; and so, I think, in all.

Yet, since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach, ¹³⁶ Which haply by much company might be urg'd ;

Therefore I say with noble Buckingham
That it is meet so few should fetch the Prince.

Hast. And so say I. ¹⁴⁰

Glo. Then be it so ; and go we to determine

Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.

Madam, and you, my sister, will you go
To give your censures in this business ?

[Exeunt all but Buckingham and Gloucester.

Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the Prince,

For God sake, let not us two stay at home ;
For by the way I'll sort occasion,
As index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the Queen's proud kindred from the Prince. ¹⁵⁰

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistory,

My oracle, my prophet, my dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction.
Toward Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. London. A street.

Enter one Citizen at one door, and another at the other.

1 Cit. Good morrow, neighbour. Whither away so fast ?

2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself.

Hear you the news abroad ?

1 Cit. Yes, that the King is dead.

2 Cit. Ill news, by'r lady ; seldom comes the better.

I fear, I fear 'twill prove a giddy world. ⁵

Enter another Citizen.

3 Cit. Neighbours, God speed !

1 Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.

3 Cit. Doth the news hold of good King Edward's death ?

2 Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true ; God help the while !

3 Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troubulous world.

1 Cit. No, no ; by God's good grace, his son shall reign. ¹⁰

3 Cit. Woe to that land that's govern'd by a child.

2 Cit. In him there is a hope of government,

Which, in his nonage, council under him,
And, in his full and ripened years, himself,
No doubt, shall then, and till then, govern
well. ¹⁵

1 Cit. So stood the state when Henry the Sixth

Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old.

3 Cit. Stood the state so ? No, no, good friends, God wot ;

For then this land was famously enrich'd
With politic grave counsel ; then the King
Had virtuous uncles to protect his Grace. ²⁰

1 Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and mother.

3 Cit. Better it were they all came by his
father,

Or by his father there were none at all ;
For emulation who shall now be nearest ²⁵
Will touch us all too near, if God prevent
not.

O, full of danger is the Duke of Gloucester !
And the Queen's sons and brothers haught
and proud ;

And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,

This sickly land might solace as before. ³⁰

1 Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst ; all will be well.

3 Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks ;

When great leaves fall, then winter is at
hand ;

When the sun sets, who doth not look for
night ?

Untimely storms make men expect a dearth. ³⁵

All may be well ; but, if God sort it so,
'Tis more than we deserve or I expect.

2 Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear.

You cannot reason almost with a man
That looks not heavily and full of dread. ⁴⁰

3 Cit. Before the days of change, still is it so ;

By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust Ensuing danger ; as by proof we see

The water swell before a boist'rous storm.
But leave it all to God. Whither away ? ⁴⁵

2 Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

3 Cit. And so was I ; I'll bear you company. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. London. The palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, the young DUKE OF YORK, QUEEN ELIZABETH, and the DUCHESS OF YORK.

Arch. Last night, I hear, they lay at Stony Stratford,

And at Northampton they do rest to-night ;
To-morrow or next day they will be here.

Duch. I long with all my heart to see the Prince.

I hope he is much grown since last I saw him. ⁵

Q. Eliz. But I hear no ; they say my son
of York

Has almost overta'en him in his growth.

York. Ay, mother ; but I would not have it so.

Duch. Why, my good cousin, it is good to grow.

York. Grandam, one night as we did sit at supper, 10

My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow More than my brother: 'Ay,' quoth my uncle Gloucester
'Small herbs have grace : great weeds do grow apace.'

And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast,
Because sweet flow'rs are slow and weeds
make haste. 15

Duch. Good faith, good faith, the saying did not hold
In him that did object the same to thee.
He was the wretched'st thing when he was young,
So long a-growing and so leisurely That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious. 20

Arch. And so no doubt he is, my gracious
madam.

Duch. I hope he is ; but yet let mothers
doubt.

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been rememb'red,
I could have given my uncle's Grace a flout
To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd
mine. 25

Duch. How, my young York ? I prithee
let me hear it.

York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast
That he could gnaw a crust at two hours
old.
'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth.
Grandam, this would have been a biting jest. 30

Duch. I prithee, pretty York, who told thee this ?

York. Grandam, his nurse.

Duch. His nurse ! Why she was dead ere thou wast born.

York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.

Q. Eliz. A parlous boy ! Go to, you are too shrewd. 35

Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child.

Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger. What
news ?

Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to report.

Q. Eliz. How doth the Prince ?

Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news ? 41

Mess. Lord Rivers and Lord Grey
Are sent to Pomfret, and with them

Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.

Duch. Who hath committed them ?

Mess. The mighty Dukes, Gloucester and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence ? 45

Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclos'd.

Why or for what the nobles were committed
Is all unknown to me, my gracious lord.

Q. Eliz. Ay me, I see the ruin of my
house ! 49

The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind ;
Insulting tyranny begins to jet
Upon the innocent and aweless throne.
Welcome, destruction, blood, and massacre !
I see, as in a map, the end of all.

Duch. Accurs'd and unquiet wrangling
days, 55

How many of you have mine eyes beheld !
My husband lost his life to get the crown ;
And often up and down my sons were toss'd

For me to joy and weep their gain and loss ;
And being seated, and domestic broils 60

Clean over-blown, themselves the conquerors
Make war upon themselves—brother to
brother,
Blood to blood, self against self. O, preposterous
And frantic outrage, end thy damned
spleen,

Or let me die, to look on death no more ! 65

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy ; we will to sanctuary.

Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.

Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. [To the Queen] My gracious lady, go.
And thither bear your treasure and your goods.

For my part, I'll resign unto your Grace 70
The seal I keep ; and so betide to me
As well I tender you and all of yours !
Go, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. London. A street.

The trumpets sound. Enter the PRINCE OF WALES, GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, CARDINAL BOURCHIER, and Others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet Prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts'
sovereign.

The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle ; but our crosses on the way
Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy. 5

I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Glo. Sweet Prince, the untainted virtue of your years

Hath not yet div'd into the world's deceit;
Nor more can you distinguish of a man Than of his outward show; which, God He knows, 10

Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart.
Those uncles which you want were
dangerous;

Your Grace attended to their sug'ed
words

But look'd not on the poison of their hearts.
God keep you from them and from such false friends! 15

Prince. God keep me from false friends!
but they were none.

Glo. My lord, the Mayor of London comes to greet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor and his Train.

May. God bless your Grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord, and thank you all.

I thought my mother and my brother
York 20

Would long ere this have met us on the way.

Fie, what a slug is Hastings, that he comes
not

To tell us whether they will come or no!

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the sweating lord.

Prince. Welcome, my lord. What, will our mother come? 25

Hast. On what occasion, God He knows, not I,

The Queen your mother and your brother
York

Have taken sanctuary. The tender Prince Would fain have come with me to meet
your Grace, 29

But by his mother was perforce withheld.

Buck. Fie, what an indirect and peevish
course

Is this of hers? Lord Cardinal, will your
Grace

Persuade the Queen to send the Duke of
York

Unto his princely brother presently?

If she deny, Lord Hastings, go with him 35

And from her jealous arms pluck him
perforce.

Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory

Can from his mother win the Duke of York, Anon expect him here; but if she be obdurate

To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid 40

We should infringe the holy privilege
Of blessed sanctuary! Not for all this land

Would I be guilty of so deep a sin.

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my
lord,

Too ceremonious and traditional. 45

Weigh it but with the grossness of this age,
You break not sanctuary in seizing him.

The benefit thereof is always granted
To those whose dealings have deserv'd the
place

And those who have the wit to claim the
place. 50

This Prince hath neither claim'd it nor
deserv'd it,

And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it.

Then, taking him from thence that is not
there,

You break no privilege nor charter there.
Oft have I heard of sanctuary men; 55

But sanctuary children never till now.

Card. My lord, you shall overrule my mind for once.

Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go with
me?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may. 60

[Exeunt Cardinal and Hastings.
Say, uncle Gloucester, if our brother come,
Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal self.

If I may counsel you, some day or two Your Highness shall repose you at the
Tower, 65

Then where you please and shall be thought most fit

For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any
place.

Did Julius Cæsar build that place, my lord?

Glo. He did, my gracious lord, begin that
place, 70

Which, since, succeeding ages have reedified.

Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported Successively from age to age, he built it?

Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not regist'ed, 75

Methinks the truth should live from age to age,

As 'twere retail'd to all posterity,
Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. [Aside] So wise so young, they say, do never live long.

Prince. What say you, uncle? 80

Glo. I say, without characters, fame lives
long.

[Aside] Thus, like the formal vice, Iniquity,
I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prince. That Julius Cæsar was a famous
man;

With what his valour did enrich his wit, 85

His wit set down to make his valour live.
Death makes no conquest of this conqueror;
For now he lives in fame, though not in life.
I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham—

Buck. What, my gracious lord? 90

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,
I'll win our ancient right in France again,
Or die a soldier as I liv'd a king.

Glo. [Aside] Short summers lightly have a forward spring.

Enter young YORK, HASTINGS, and the CARDINAL.

Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the Duke of York. 95

Prince. Richard of York, how fares our loving brother?

York. Well my dread lord; so must I call you now.

Prince. Ay brother, to our grief, as it is yours.

Too late he died that might have kept that title, 99

Which by his death hath lost much majesty.

Glo. How fares our cousin, noble Lord of
York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my
lord,

You said that idle weeds are fast in growth.
The Prince my brother hath outgrown me
far.

Glo. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle? 105

Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then he is more beholding to you than I.

Glo. He may command me as my
sovereign;

But you have power in me as in a kinsman.

York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger. 110

Glo. My dagger, little cousin? With all
my heart!

Prince. A beggar, brother?

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give,

And being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin. 115

York. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it!

Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O, then, I see you will part but with light gifts:

In weightier things you'll say a beggar nay.

Glo. It is too heavy for your Grace to wear. 120

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier.

Glo. What, would you have my weapon, little lord?

York. I would, that I might thank you as you call me.

Glo. How?

York. Little. 125

Prince. My Lord of York will still be cross in talk.

Uncle, your Grace knows how to bear with
him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear
with me.

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me;
Because that I am little, like an ape, 130
He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit he reasons!

To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle
He prettily and aptly taunts himself.
So cunning and so young is wonderful. 135

Glo. My lord, will't please you pass along?

Myself and my good cousin Buckingham
Will to your mother, to entreat of her
To meet you at the Tower and welcome
you.

York. What, will you go unto the Tower,
my lord? 140

Prince. My Lord Protector needs will have it so.

York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Glo. Why, what should you fear?

York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry
ghost.

My grandam told me he was murder'd
there. 145

Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glo. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope I need not fear.

But come, my lord; with a heavy heart,
Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower. 150

[A sennet. Exeunt all but Gloucester, Buckingham, and Catesby.

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York

Was not incensed by his subtle mother
To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?

Glo. No doubt, no doubt. O, 'tis a perilous boy; 154

Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable.
He is all the mother's, from the top to toe.

Buck. Well, let them rest. Come hither, Catesby.

Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we intend

As closely to conceal what we impart.

Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the
way. 160

What think'st thou? Is it not an easy matter

To make William Lord Hastings of our
mind,

For the instalment of this noble Duke
In the seat royal of this famous isle?

Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the Prince 165
That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? Will not he?

Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well then, no more but this: go, gentle Catesby,
And, as it were far off, sound thou Lord Hastings 170

How he doth stand affected to our purpose;
And summon him to-morrow to the Tower.
To sit about the coronation.

If thou dost find him tractable to us,
Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons; 175

If he be leaden, icy, cold, unwilling,
Be thou so too, and so break off the talk.
And give us notice of his inclination;
For we to-morrow hold divided councils,
Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd.

Glo. Commend me to Lord William. Tell him, Catesby, 181
His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries
To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret Castle;
And bid my lord, for joy of this good news,
Give Mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more. 185

Buck. Good Catesby, go effect this business soundly.

Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I can.

Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep?

Cate. You shall, my lord. 189

Glo. At Crosby House, there shall you find us both. [Exit Catesby.]

Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do if we perceive Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?

Glo. Chop off his head—something we will determine.

And, look when I am King, claim thou of me

The earldom of Hereford and all the movables 195

Whereof the King my brother was possess'd.

Buck. I'll claim that promise at your Grace's hand.

Glo. And look to have it yielded with all kindness. 198

Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards
We may digest our complots in some form.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Before Lord Hastings' house.

Enter a Messenger to the door of Hastings.

Mess. My lord, my lord! [Knocking.]

Hast. [Within] Who knocks?

Mess. One from the Lord Stanley.

Hast. [Within] What is't o'clock?

Mess. Upon the stroke of four. 3

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Hast. Cannot my Lord Stanley sleep these tedious nights?

Mess. So it appears by that I have to say.
First, he commends him to your noble self.

Hast. What then?

Mess. Then certifies your lordship that this night 10

He dreamt the boar had razed off his helm.
Besides, he says there are two councils kept,

And that may be determin'd at the one
Which may make you and him to rue at th' other.

Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure— 15

If you will presently take horse with him
And with all speed post with him toward the north

To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord;

Bid him not fear the separated council: 20
His honour and myself are at the one,
And at the other is my good friend Catesby;
Where nothing can proceed that toucheth us

Whereof I shall not have intelligence.
Tell him his fears are shallow, without instance; 25

And for his dreams, I wonder he's so simple
To trust the mock'ry of unquiet slumbers.
To fly the boar before the boar pursues
Were to incense the boar to follow us
And make pursuit where he did mean no chase. 30

Go, bid thy master rise and come to me;
And we will both together to the Tower,
Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly.

Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say. [Exit.]

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord! 35

Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring.

What news, what news, in this our tott'ring state?

Cate. It is a reeling world indeed, my lord;

And I believe will never stand upright 39
Till Richard wear the garland of the realm.

Hast. How, wear the garland! Dost thou mean the crown?

Cate. Ay, my good lord.

Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders

Before I'll see the crown so foul misplac'd.
But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?

Cate. Ay, on my life ; and hopes to find you forward 46

Upon his party for the gain thereof ;
And thereupon he sends you this good
news,

That this same very day your enemies,
The kindred of the Queen, must die at Pomfret. 50

Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that
news,
Because they have been still my adversaries ;

But that I'll give my voice on Richard's
side

To bar my master's heirs in true descent,
God knows I will not do it to the death. 55

Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind !

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelve month hence,

That they which brought me in my master's hate,

I live to look upon their tragedy.

Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older, 60

I'll send some packing that yet think not on't.

Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious
lord,

When men are unprepar'd and look not
for it. 65

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous ! And so falls it out

With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey ; and so 'twill
do

With some men else that think themselves as safe

As thou and I, who, as thou knowest, are
dear 69

To princely Richard and to Buckingham.

Cate. The Princes both make high account
of you—

[Aside] For they account his head upon the bridge.

Hast. I know they do, and I have well
deserv'd it.

Enter LORD STANLEY.

Come on, come on ; where is your boarspear, man ? 74

Fear you the boar, and go so unprovided ?

Stan. My lord, good morrow ; good morrow, Catesby.

You may jest on, but, by the holy rood,
I do not like these several councils, I.

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as
yours, 80

And never in my days, I do protest,
Was it so precious to me as 'tis now.

Think you, but that I know our state secure,

I would be so triumphant as I am ?

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London, 85

Were jocund and suppos'd their states were sure,

And they indeed had no cause to mistrust ;
But yet you see how soon the day o'ercast.
This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt ;

Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward.
What, shall we toward the Tower ? The day is spent. 91

Hast. Come, come, have with you. Wot you what, my lord ?

To-day the lords you talk'd of are beheaded.

Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads

Than some that have accus'd them wear their hats. 95

But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter HASTINGS, a pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before ; I'll talk with this good fellow.

[Exeunt Stanley and Catesby.
How now, Hastings ! How goes the world
with thee ?

Purs. The better that your lordship please to ask.

Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me
now 100

Than when thou met'st me last where now
we meet :

Then was I going prisoner to the Tower
By the suggestion of the Queen's allies ;

But now, I tell thee—keep it to thyself—
This day those enemies are put to death, 105

And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs. God hold it, to your honour's good content !

Hast. Gramercy, Hastings ; there, drink that for me. [Throws him his purse.

Purs. I thank your honour. [Exit.

Enter a Priest.

Pr. Well met, my lord ; I am glad to see your honour. 110

Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all my heart.

I am in your debt for your last exercise ;
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content
you. [He whispers in his ear.

Pr. I'll wait upon your lordship.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, Lord
Chamberlain !

Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest : 115

Your honour hath no shriving work in
hand.

Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy man,

The men you talk of came into my mind.
What, go you toward the Tower ?

Buck. I do, my lord, but long I cannot stay there ; 120

I shall return before your lordship thence.

Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.

Buck. [Aside] And supper too, although thou knowest it not.—

Come, will you go ?

Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Pomfret Castle.

Enter SIR RICHARD RATCLIFF, with Halberds, carrying the Nobles, RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN, to death.

Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this :

To-day shalt thou behold a subject die
For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God bless the Prince from all the pack of you !

A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.

Vaugh. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Dispatch ; the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret ! O thou bloody prison,

Fatal and ominous to noble peers !
Within the guilty closure of thy walls

Richard the Second here was hack'd to death ;

And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,
We give to thee our guiltless blood to drink.

Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fall'n upon our heads,

When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I,

For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son.

Riv. Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd she Buckingham,

Then curs'd she Hastings. O, remember, God,

To hear her prayer for them, as now for us !
And for my sister, and her princely sons,

Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood,
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt.

Rat. Make haste ; the hour of death is expiate.

Riv. Come, Grey ; come, Vaughan ; let us here embrace.

Farewell, until we meet again in heaven.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The Tower.

Enter BUCKINGHAM, DERBY, HASTINGS, the BISHOP OF ELY, RATCLIFF, LOVEL, with Others and seat themselves at a table.

Hast. Now, noble peers, the cause why we are met

Is to determine of the coronation.

In God's name speak—when is the royal day ?

Buck. Is all things ready for the royal time ?

Der. It is, and wants but nomination.

Ely. To-morrow then I judge a happy day.

Buck. Who knows the Lord Protector's mind herein ?

Who is most inward with the noble Duke ?

Ely. Your Grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.

Buck. We know each other's faces ; for our hearts,

He knows no more of mine than I of yours ;

Or I of his, my lord, than you of mine.

Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.

Hast. I thank his Grace, I know he loves me well ;

But for his purpose in the coronation

I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd

His gracious pleasure any way therein.

But you, my honourable lords, may name the time ;

And in the Duke's behalf I'll give my voice,
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the Duke himself.

Glo. My noble lords and cousins all, good morrow.

I have been long a sleeper, but I trust
My absence doth neglect no great design

Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my lord,

William Lord Hastings had pronounc'd your part—

I mean, your voice for crowning of the King.

Glo. Than my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder ;

His lordship knows me well and loves me well.

My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn
I saw good strawberries in your garden there.

I do beseech you send for some of them.

Ely. Marry and will, my lord, with all my heart.

Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.

Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business,

And finds the testy gentleman so hot
That he will lose his head ere give consent

His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it,

Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.

Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile ; I'll go with you.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Buckingham.]
Der. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.

To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden;
For I myself am not so well provided
As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter the BISHOP OF ELY.

Ely. Where is my lord the Duke of Gloucester?

I have sent for these strawberries.

Hast. His Grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning; 50

There's some conceit or other likes him well
When that he bids good morrow with such spirit.

I think there's never a man in Christendom
Can lesser hide his love or hate than he;
For by his face straight shall you know his heart. 55

Der. What of his heart perceive you in his face

By any livelihood he show'd to-day?

Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended;

For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve 61

That do conspire my death with devilish plots

Of damned witchcraft, and that have prevail'd

Upon my body with their hellish charms?

Hast. The tender love I bear your Grace, my lord, 65

Makes me most forward in this princely presence

To doom th' offenders, whosoe'er they be.
I say, my lord, they have deserved death.

Glo. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil.

Look how I am bewitch'd; behold, mine arm 70

Is like a blasted sapling wither'd up.

And this is Edward's wife, that moastrous witch,

Consorted with that harlot strumpet Shore,
That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble lord— 75

Glo. If?—thou protector of this damned strumpet,

Talk'st thou to me of ifs? Thou art a traitor.

Off with his head! Now by Saint Paul I swear

I will not dine until I see the same.

Lovel and Ratcliff, look that it be done. 80

The rest that love me, rise and follow me.
[Exeunt all but Hastings, Lovell, and Ratcliff.]

Hast. Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for me;

For I, too fond, might have prevented this.

Stanley did dream the boar did raze our helms,

And I did scorn it and disdain to fly. 85

Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble,

And started when he look'd upon the Tower,

As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.
O, now I need the priest that spake to me!

I now repent I told the pursuivant, 90

As too triumphing, how mine enemies
To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd,

And I myself secure in grace and favour.
O Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy curse

Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head!
Rat. Come, come, dispatch; the Duke

would be at dinner. 96

Make a short shrift; he longs to see your head.

Hast. O momentary grace of mortal men,
Which we more hunt for than the grace of God!

Who builds his hope in air of your good looks 100

Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast,
Ready with every nod to tumble down

Into the fatal bowels of the deep.
Lov. Come, come, dispatch; 'tis bootless to exclaim. 105

Hast. O bloody Richard! Miserable England!

I prophesy the fearfull'st time to thee
That ever wretched age hath look'd upon.

Come, lead me to the block; bear him my head.

They smile at me who shortly shall be dead.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. London. The Tower-walls.

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM in rotten armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou quake and change thy colour,

Murder thy breath in middle of a word,
And then again begin, and stop again,

As if thou were distraught and mad with terror?

Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian; 5

Speak and look back, and pry on every side,
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,

Intending deep suspicion. Ghastly looks
Are at my service, like enforced smiles;

And both are ready in their offices 10

At any time to grace my stratagems.
But what, is Catesby gone?

Glo. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor along.

Enter the Lord Mayor and CATESBY.

Buck. Lord Mayor—
Glo. Look to the drawbridge there! 15

Buck. Hark! a drum.

Glo. Catesby, o'erlook the walls.

Buck. Lord Mayor, the reason we have sent—

Glo. Look back, defend thee; here are enemies.

Buck. God and our innocence defend and guard us!

Enter LOVELL and RATCLIFF, with Hastings' head.

Glo. Be patient; they are friends—
Ratcliff and Lovel.

Lov. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor,

The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Glo. So dear I lov'd the man that I must weep.

I took him for the plainest harmless creature

That breath'd upon the earth a Christian;
Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded

The history of all her secret thoughts.
So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue

That, his apparent open guilt omitted,
I mean his conversation with Shore's wife—

He liv'd from all attainder of suspects.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st shelt'ring traitor

That ever liv'd.

Would you imagine, or almost believe—

Were't not that by great preservation

We live to tell it—that the subtle traitor

This day had plotted, in the council-house,

To murder me and my good Lord of Gloucester.

May. Had he done so?

Glo. What! think you we are Turks or Infidels?

Or that we would, against the form of law,
Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death

But that the extreme peril of the case,
The peace of England and our persons'

safety,

Enforc'd us to this execution?

May. Now, fair befall you! He deserv'd his death;

And your good Graces both have well proceeded

To warn false traitors from the like attempts.

I never look'd for better at his hands

After he once fell in with Mistress Shore.

Buck. Yet had we not determin'd he should die

Until your lordship came to see his end—

Which now the loving haste of these our friends,

Something against our meanings, have prevented—

Because, my lord, I would have had you heard

The traitor speak, and timorously confess
The manner and the purpose of his treasons;
That you might well have signified the same

Unto the citizens, who haply may Misconster us in him and wail his death.

May. But, my good lord, your Grace's word shall serve

As well as I had seen and heard him speak;

And do not doubt, right noble Princes both,
But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens

With all your just proceedings in this cause.

Glo. And to that end we wish'd your lordship here,

T'avoid the censures of the carping world.

Buck. Which since you come too late of our intent,

Yet witness what you hear we did intend.
And so, my good Lord Mayor, we bid farewell. [Exit Lord Mayor.]

Glo. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham.
The Mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all post.

There, at your meet'st advantage of the time,

Infer the bastardy of Edward's children.

Tell them how Edward put to death a citizen

Only for saying he would make his son Heir to the crown—meaning indeed his house,

Which by the sign thereof was termed so.

Moreover, urge his hateful luxury

And bestial appetite in change of lust,
Which stretch'd unto their servants,

daughters, wives,
Even where his raging eye or savage heart

Without control lusted to make a prey.

Nay, for a need, thus far come near my person:

Tell them, when that my mother went with child

Of that insatiate Edward, noble York
My princely father then had wars in France

And, by true computation of the time,
Found that the issue was not his begot;

Which well appeared in his lineaments,
Being nothing like the noble Duke my father.

Yet touch this sparingly, as 'twere far off;
Because, my lord, you know my mother lives.

Buck. Doubt not, my lord, I'll play the orator

As if the golden plea for which I plead
Were for myself; and so, my lord, adieu.

Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's Castle;

Where you shall find me well accompanied
With reverend fathers and well learned bishops.

Buck. I go; and towards three or four o'clock

Scene 5]

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

Look for the news that the Guildhall affords. [Exit.

Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor Shaw.

[To Catesby] Go thou to Friar Penker. Bid them both

Meet me within this hour at Baynard's Castle. [Exeunt all but Gloucester.

Now will I go to take some privy order 106

To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight,

And to give order that no manner of person

Have any time recourse unto the Princes. [Exit.

SCENE VI. London. A street.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good Lord Hastings ;

Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd

That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's.

And mark how well the sequel hangs together ; 4

Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,

For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me ;

The precedent was full as long a-doing ;

And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd,

Untainted, unexamin'd, free, at liberty.

Here's a good world the while ! Who is so gross 10

That cannot see this palpable device ?

Yet who so bold but says he sees it not ?

Bad is the world ; and all will come to nought,

When such ill dealing must be seen in thought. [Exit.

SCENE VII. London. Baynard's Castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, at several doors.

Glo. How now, how now ! What say the citizens ?

Buck. Now, by the holy Mother of our Lord,

The citizens are mum, say not a word.

Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children ?

Buck. I did ; with his contract with Lady Lucy, 5

And his contract by deputy in France ;

Th' insatiate greediness of his desire,

And his enforcement of the city wives ;

His tyranny for trifles ; his own bastardy,

As being got, your father then in France,

And his resemblance, being not like the Duke. 11

Withal I did infer your lineaments,

Being the right idea of your father,

Both in your form and nobleness of mind ;

Laid open all your victories in Scotland, 15

Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace,

Your bounty, virtue, fair humility ;

Indeed, left nothing fitter for your purpose

Untouch'd or slightly handled in discourse.

And when mine oratory drew toward end

I bid them that did love their country's good 21

Cry ' God save Richard, England's royal King ! '

Glo. And did they so ?

Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word ;

But, like dumb statues or breathing stones,

Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale. 26

Which when I saw, I reprehended them,

And ask'd the Mayor what meant this wilful silence.

His answer was, the people were not used

To be spoke to but by the Recorder. 30

Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again.

' Thus saith the Duke, thus hath the Duke inferr'd '—

But nothing spoke in warrant from himself.

When he had done, some followers of mine own

At lower end of the hall hurl'd up their caps, 35

And some ten voices cried ' God save King Richard ! '

And thus I took the vantage of those few—

' Thanks, gentle citizens and friends,' quoth I

' This general applause and cheerful shout

Argues your wisdoms and your love to Richard'. 40

And even here brake off and came away.

Glo. What, tongueless blocks were they ?

Would they not speak ?

Will not the Mayor then and his brethren come ?

Buck. The Mayor is here at hand. Intend some fear ; 45

Be not you spoke with but by mighty suit ;

And look you get a prayer-book in your hand,

And stand between two churchmen, good my lord ;

For on that ground I'll make a holy descent ;

And be not easily won to our requests. 50

Play the maid's part : still answer nay, and take it.

Glo. I go ; and if you plead as well for them

As I can say nay to thee for myself,

No doubt we bring it to a happy issue.

Buck. Go, up to the leads ; the Lord Mayor knocks. [Exit Gloucester.

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.

Welcome, my lord. I dance attendance here ; 56

I think the Duke will not be spoke withal.

Enter CATESBY.

Now, Catesby, what says your lord to my request ?

Cate. He doth entreat your Grace, my noble lord,

To visit him to-morrow or next day. 60

He is within, with two right reverend fathers,

Divinely bent to meditation ;

And in no worldly suits would he be mov'd,

To draw him from his holy exercise.

Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious Duke ; 65

Tell him, myself, the Mayor and Aldermen,

In deep designs, in matter of great moment,

No less importing than our general good,

Are come to have some conference with his Grace.

Cate. I'll signify so much unto him straight. [Exit. 71

Buck. Ah ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward ! 71

He is not lolling on a lewd love-bed,

But on his knees at meditation ;

Not dallying with a brace of courtizans,

But meditating with two deep divines ; 75

Not sleeping, to engross his idle body,

But praying, to enrich his watchful soul.

Happy were England would this virtuous prince

Take on his Grace the sovereignty thereof ;

But, sure, I fear we shall not win him to it.

May. Marry, God defend his Grace should say us nay ! 81

Buck. I fear he will. Here Catesby comes again.

Re-enter CATESBY.

Now, Catesby, what says his Grace ?

Cate. My lord,

He wonders to what end you have assembled

Such troops of citizens to come to him. 85

His Grace not being warn'd thereof before,

He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am my noble cousin should

Suspect me that I mean no good to him. 89

By heaven, we come to him in perfect love ;

And so once more return and tell his Grace.

[Exit Catesby.

When holy and devout religious men

Are at their beads, 'tis much to draw them thence,

So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter GLOUCESTER aloft, between two Bishops. CATESBY returns.

May. See where his Grace stands 'tween two clergymen ! 95

Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian prince,

To stay him from the fall of vanity ;

And, see, a book of prayer in his hand,

True ornaments to know a holy man. 99

Famous Plantagenet, most gracious Prince,

Lend favourable ear to our requests,

And pardon us the interruption

Of thy devotion and right Christian zeal.

Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology :

I do beseech your Grace to pardon me, 105

Who, earnest in the service of my God,

Deferr'd the visitation of my friends.

But, leaving this, what is your Grace's pleasure ?

Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above, 109

And all good men of this ungovern'd isle.

Glo. I do suspect I have done some offence

That seems disgracious in the city's eye,

And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord. Would it might please your Grace,

On our entreaties, to amend your fault ! 115

Glo. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian land ?

Buck. Know then, it is your fault that you resign

The supreme seat, the throne majestic,

The scepter'd office of your ancestors,

Your state of fortune and your due of birth,

The lineal glory of your royal house, 121

To the corruption of a blemish'd stock ;

Whiles in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts,

Which here we waken to our country's good,

The noble isle doth want her proper limbs ;

Her face defac'd with scars of infamy, 126

Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,

And almost should'red in the swallowing gulf

Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion.

Which to recure, we heartily solicit 130

Your gracious self to take on you the charge

And kingly government of this your land—

Not as protector, steward, substitute,

Or lowly factor for another's gain ; 134

But as successively, from blood to blood,

Your right of birth, your empery, your own.

For this, consorted with the citizens,

Your very worshipful and loving friends,

And by their vehement instigation,

In this just cause come I to move your Grace. 140

Glo. I cannot tell if to depart in silence

Or bitterly to speak in your reproof

Best fitteth my degree or your condition.

If not to answer, you might haply think

Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded 145

To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,

Which fondly you would here impose on me ;

If to reprove you for this suit of yours,

So season'd with your faithful love to me,

Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends. 150

Therefore—to speak, and to avoid the first,
And then, in speaking, not to incur the
last—

Definitively thus I answer you :

Your love deserves my thanks, but my desert

Unmeritable shuns your high request. 155

First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown,
As the ripe revenue and due of birth,
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty and so many my defects, 160
That I would rather hide me from my greatness—

Being a bark to brook no mighty sea—
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.
But, God be thank'd, there is no need of
me— 165

And much I need to help you, were there need.

The royal tree hath left us royal fruit Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of
time,

Will well become the seat of majesty 169
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign.
On him I lay that you would lay on me—
The right and fortune of his happy stars,
Which God defend that I should wring
from him.

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in
your Grace ;

But the respects thereof are nice and trivial, 175

All circumstances well considered.

You say that Edward is your brother's son.
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife ;
For first was he contract to Lady Lucy—
Your mother lives a witness to his vow— 180

And afterward by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, sister to the King of France.

These both put off, a poor petitioner,
A care-craz'd mother to a many sons,

A beauty-waning and distressed widow, 185

Even in the afternoon of her best days,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,

Seduc'd the pitch and height of his degree
To base declension and loath'd bigamy.

By her, in his unlawful bed, he got 190

This Edward, whom our manners call the Prince.

More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that, for reverence to some alive,

I give a sparing limit to my tongue. 194

Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This proffer'd benefit of dignity ;

If not to bless us and the land withal,
Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry

From the corruption of abusing times Unto a lineal true-derived course. 200

May. Do, good my lord ; your citizens entreat you.

Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

Cate. O, make them joyful, grant their lawful suit !

Glo. Alas, why would you heap this care
on me ?

I am unfit for state and majesty. 205

I do beseech you, take it not amiss :

I cannot nor I will not yield to you.

Buck. If you refuse it—as, in love and zeal,

Loath to depose the child, your brother's
son ; 209

As well we know your tenderness of heart
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,

Which we have noted in you to your kindred

And egally indeed to all estates—

Yet know, whe'er you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our

king ; 215

But we will plant some other in the throne
To the disgrace and downfall of your house ;

And in this resolution here we leave you.

Come, citizens. Zounds, I'll entreat no
more.

Glo. O, do not swear, my lord of Buckingham. [Exeunt Buckingham, Mayor, and Citizens.]

Cate. Call him again, sweet Prince, accept their suit. 221

If you deny them, all the land will rue it.

Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares ?

Call them again. I am not made of stones,
But penetrable to your kind entreaties, 225

Albeit against my conscience and my soul.

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM and the rest.

Cousin of Buckingham, and sage grave
men,

Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, whe'er I will or no,

I must have patience to endure the load ;
But if black scandal or foul-fac'd reproach

Attend the sequel of your imposition, 232

Your mere enforcement shall acquittance
me

From all the impure blots and stains
thereof ;

For God doth know, and you may partly
see, 235

How far I am from the desire of this.

May. God bless your Grace ! We see it, and will say it.

Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.

Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title—

Long live King Richard, England's worthy
King ! 240

All. Amen.

Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be crown'd ?

Glo. Even when you please, for you will have it so.

Buck. To-morrow, then, we will attend
your Grace;
And so, most joyfully, we take our leave.
Glo. [To the Bishops] Come, let us to our holy work again. ²⁴⁶
Farewell, my cousin; farewell, gentle friends. [Exeunt.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. London. Before the Tower.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, DUCHESS OF YORK, and MARQUIS OF DORSET, at one door; ANNE DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, leading LADY MARGARET PLANTAGENET, Clarence's young daughter, at another door.

Duch. Who meets us here? My niece
Plantagenet,
Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester?

Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower,
On pure heart's love, to greet the tender Princes.

Daughter, well met.
Anne. God give your Graces both ⁵
A happy and a joyful time of day!

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister!
Whither away?

Anne. No farther than the Tower; and,
as I guess,

Upon the like devotion as yourselves,
To gratulate the gentle Princes there. ¹⁰

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks; we'll enter all together.

Enter BRAKENBURY.

And in good time, here the lieutenant
comes.

Master Lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,
How doth the Prince, and my young son
of York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam. By your patience, ¹⁵

I may not suffer you to visit them.
The King hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The King! Who's that?

Brak. I mean the Lord Protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kingly title! ²⁰

Hath he set bounds between their love and
me?

I am their mother; who shall bar me from
them?

Duch. I am their father's mother; I will see them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mother.

Then bring me to their sights; I'll bear thy blame, ²⁵

And take thy office from thee on my peril.

Brak. No, madam, no. I may not leave
it so;

I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon
me. [Exit.]

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence,

And I'll salute your Grace of York as mother ³⁰

And reverend looker-on of two fair queens.
[To Anne] Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster,

There to be crowned Richard's royal queen.

Q. Eliz. Ah, cut my lace asunder

That my pent heart may have some scope to beat, ³⁵

Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news!
Anne. Despiteful tidings! O unpleasing
news!

Dor. Be of good cheer; mother, how fares your Grace?

Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee gone!

Death and destruction dogs thee at thy heels; ⁴⁰

Thy mother's name is ominous to children.
If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the
seas,

And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell.

Go, hie thee, hie thee from this slaughterhouse, ⁴⁴

Lest thou increase the number of the dead,
And make me die the thrall of Margaret's
curse,

Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted
queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel, madam.

Take all the swift advantage of the hours;
You shall have letters from me to my son ⁵⁰
In your behalf, to meet you on the way.
Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispersing wind of misery!
O my accursed womb, the bed of death!
A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world, ⁵⁵

Whose unavowed eye is murderous.

Stan. Come, madam, come; I in all haste was sent.

Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go. ⁵⁸

O, would to God that the inclusive verge
Of golden metal that must round my brow
Were red-hot steel, to sear me to the brains!
Anointed let me be with deadly venom, ⁶²
And die ere men can say 'God save the Queen!'

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul; I envy not thy glory.

To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm.
Anne. No, why? When he that is my husband now ⁶⁶

Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corse ;
When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands
Which issued from my other angel husband,
And that dear saint which then I weeping
follow'd—

O, when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face,
This was my wish: 'Be thou' quoth I
accurs'd

For making me, so young, so old a widow ;
And when thou wed'st, let sorrow haunt thy bed ;

And be thy wife, if any be so mad, 75
More miserable by the life of thee
Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's
death'.

Lo, ere I can repeat this curse again,
Within so small a time, my woman's heart Grossly grew captive to his honey words 80
And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's
curse,

Which hitherto hath held my eyes from
rest ;

For never yet one hour in his bed
Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep, But with his timorous dreams was still
awak'd. 85

Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick;
And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu ! I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours.

Dor. Farewell, thou woeful welcomer of glory ! 90

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it !

Duch. [To Dorset] Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee !

[To Anne] Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee !

[To Queen Elizabeth] Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee !

I to my grave, where peace and rest lie
with me ! 95

Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,
And each hour's joy wreck'd with a week of teen.

Q. Eliz. Stay, yet look back with me unto the Tower.

Pity, you ancient stones, those tender
babes

Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls, 100

Rough cradle for such little pretty ones.
Rude ragged nurse, old sullen playfellow

For tender princes, use my babies well.
So foolish sorrows bids your stones farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. The palace.

Sound a sennet. Enter RICHARD, in pomp, as King; BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, RATCLIFF, LOVEL, a Page, and Others.

K. Rich. Stand all apart. Cousin of Buckingham !

Buck. My gracious sovereign ?

K. Rich. Give me thy hand.

[Here he ascendeth the throne. Sound.

Thus high, by thy advice
And thy assistance, is King Richard seated.
But shall we wear these glories for a day ; 5
Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them ?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last !

K. Rich. Ah, Buckingham, now do I play
the touch,

To try if thou be current gold indeed.

Young Edward lives—think now what I would speak. 10

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say I would be King.

Buck. Why, so you are, my thricerenowned lord.

K. Rich. Ha ! am I King ? 'Tis so ; but Edward lives.

Buck. True, noble Prince.

K. Rich. O bitter consequence : 15
That Edward still should live—true noble
Prince !

Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull.
Shall I be plain ? I wish the bastards dead.
And I would have it suddenly perform'd.
What say'st thou now ? Speak suddenly, be brief. 20

Buck. Your Grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all ice ; thy kindness freezes.

Say, have I thy consent that they shall
die ?

Buck. Give me some little breath, some pause, dear lord,

Before I positively speak in this. 25
I will resolve you herein presently. [Exit.

Cate. [Aside to another] The King is angry ; see, he gnaws his lip.

K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools [Descends from the throne.

And unrespective boys ; none are for me
That look into me with considerate eyes. 30

High-reaching Buckingham grows circum-spect.

Boy !

Page. My lord ?

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any whom corrupting gold

Will tempt unto a close exploit of death ? 35
Page. I know a discontented gentleman

Whose humble means match not his haughty spirit.

Gold were as good as twenty orators,
And will, no doubt, tempt him to anything.

K. Rich. What is his name ?

Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrel. 40

K. Rich. I partly know the man. Go, call him hither, boy. [Exit Page.

The deep-revolving witty Buckingham

No more shall be the neighbour to my counsels.

Hath he so long held out with me, untir'd,
And stops he now for breath? Well, be it so. 45

Enter STANLEY.

How now, Lord Stanley! What's the news?

Stan. Know, my loving lord,
The Marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled
To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.
[Stands apart.

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby. Rumour it abroad

That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick;
I will take order for her keeping close. 54
Inquire me out some mean poor gentleman,
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence's daughter—

The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.
Look how thou dream'st! I say again, give out

That Anne, my queen, is sick and like to die.
About it; for it stands me much upon 60
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me. [Exit Catesby.

I must be married to my brother's daughter,
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass.
Murder her brothers, and then marry her!
Uncertain way of gain! But I am in 65
So far in blood that sin will pluck on sin.
Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.

Re-enter Page, with TYRREL.

Is thy name Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord. 70

K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Please you;

But I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it. Two deep enemies,

Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers, 75

Are they that I would have thee deal upon.
Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,

And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.

K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music.

Hark, come hither, Tyrrel. 80

Go, by this token. Rise, and lend thine ear.

[Whispers.

There is no more but so: say it is done,
And I will love thee and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will dispatch it straight. [Exit.

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind

The late request that you did sound me in.
K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Buck. I hear the news, my lord. 90

K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son: well, look unto it.

Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise,

For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd:

Th' earldom of Hereford and the movables
Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife; if she convey 96

Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What says your Highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me: Henry the Sixth

Did prophesy that Richmond should be King, 100

When Richmond was a little peevish boy.
A king!—perhaps—

Buck. My lord—

K. Rich. How chance the prophet could not at that time

Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him? 105

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom—

K. Rich. Richmond! When last I was at Exeter,

The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle

And call'd it Rugemount, at which name I started,

Because a bard of Ireland told me once 110
I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord—

K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock?

Buck. I am thus bold to put your Grace in mind 114

Of what you promis'd me.

K. Rich. Well, but what's o'clock?

Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck. Why let it strike?

K. Rich. Because that like a Jack thou keep'st the stroke

Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.
I am not in the giving vein to-day. 120

Buck. May it please you to resolve me in my suit.

K. Rich. Thou troublest me; I am not in the vein.

[Exeunt all but Buckingham.

Buck. And is it thus? Repays he my deep service

With such contempt? Made I him King for this? 125

O, let me think on Hastings, and be gone
To Brecknock while my fearful head is on!

[Exit.

SCENE III. London. The palace.Enter TYRREL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done,

The most arch deed of piteous massacre
That ever yet this land was guilty of.

Dighton and Forrest, who I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless butchery,

Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs,

Melted with tenderness and mild compassion,

Wept like two children in their deaths' sad
story.

'O, thus' quoth Dighton 'lay the gentle
babes'—

'Thus, thus,' quoth Forrest 'girdling one another

Within their alabaster innocent arms.

Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,
And in their summer beauty kiss'd each
other.

A book of prayers on their pillow lay ;
Which once, quoth Forrest 'almost chang'd my mind ;

But, O, the devil—there the villain
stopp'd ;

When Dighton thus told on : ' We smothered

The most replenished sweet work of nature That from the prime creation e'er she framed'.

Hence both are gone with conscience and remorse

They could not speak : and so I left them
both,

To bear this tidings to the bloody King.

Enter KING RICHARD.

And here he comes. All health, my sovereign lord !

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel, am I happy in thy
news ?

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in charge

Beget your happiness, be happy then,
For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead ?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel ?

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower ! ath buried them ;

But where, to say the truth, I do not know.

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon at after supper,

When thou shalt tell the process of their
death.

Meantime, but think how I may do thee
good

And be inheritor of thy desire.
Farewell till then.

Tyr. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.]

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pent up close ;

His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage ;

The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's
bosom,

And Anne my wife hath bid this world
good night.

Now, for I know the Britaine Richmond aims

At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter,
And by that knot looks proudly on the

crown,

To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord !

K. Rich. Good or bad news, that thou com'st in so bluntly ?

Rat. Bad news, my lord : Morton is fled to Richmond ;

And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy
Welshmen,

Is in the field, and still his power increaseth.

K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near

Than Buckingham and his rash-levied
strength.

Come, I have learn'd that fearful commenting

Is leaden servitor to dull delay ; Delay leads impotent and snail-pac'd

beggary.

Then fiery expedition be my wing,
Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king !

Go, muster men. My counsel is my shield.
We must be brief when traitors brave the field. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. Before the palace.Enter old QUEEN MARGARET.

Q. Mar. So now prosperity begins to mellow

And drop into the rotten mouth of death.
Here in these confines slyly have I lurk'd

To watch the waning of mine enemies.
A dire induction am I witness to,

And will to France, hoping the consequence
Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical.

Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret. Who comes here ? [Retires.]

*Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and the DUCHESS
OF YORK.*

Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor princes ! ah, my tender babes !

My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets !
If yet your gentle souls fly in the air

And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,
Hover about me with your airy wings

And hear your mother's lamentation.

Q. Mar. Hover about her ; say that right for right

Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night.

Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice

That my woe-wearied tongue is still and mute.

Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead ?

Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet, ²⁰

Edward for Edward pays a dying debt.

Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God, fly from such gentle lambs

And throw them in the entrails of the wolf ?

When didst thou sleep when such a deed was done ?

Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet son. ²⁵

Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost,

Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life usurp'd,

Brief abstract and record of tedious days, Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth,

[Sitting down.]

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood. ³⁰

Q. Eliz. Ah, that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave

As thou canst yield a melancholy seat !

Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here.

Ah, who hath any cause to mourn but we ?

[Sitting down by her.]

Q. Mar. [Coming forward] If ancient sorrow be most reverend, ³⁵

Give mine the benefit of seniory,

And let my griefs frown on the upper hand. If sorrow can admit society,

[Sitting down with them.]

Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine. I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him ;

I had a husband, till a Richard kill'd him ; Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him ;

Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him. ⁴²

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him ;

I had a Rutland too, thou help'st to kill him. ⁴⁵

Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept

A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death. That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes

To worry lambs and lap their gentle blood, That foul defacer of God's handiwork, ⁵¹

That excellent grand tyrant of the earth That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,

Thy womb let loose to chase us to our graves.

O upright, just, and true-disposing God, How do I thank thee that this carnal cur

Preys on the issue of his mother's body ⁵⁷ And makes her pew-fellow with others' moan !

Duch. O Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes !

God witness with me, I have wept for thine. ⁶⁰

Q. Mar. Bear with me ; I am hungry for revenge,

And now I cloy me with beholding it. Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward ;

The other Edward dead, to quit my Edward ;

Young York he is but boot, because both they ⁶⁵

Match'd not the high perfection of my loss. Thy Clarence he is dead that stabb'd my Edward ;

And the beholders of this frantic play, Th' adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan,

Gray, ⁶⁹

Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves. Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer ;

Only reserv'd their factor to buy souls And send them thither. But at hand, at hand,

Ensues his piteous and unpitied end. Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray, ⁷⁵

To have him suddenly convey'd from hence. Cancel his bond of life, dear God, I pray,

That I may live and say ' The dog is dead '.

Q. Eliz. O, thou didst prophesy the time would come

That I should wish for thee to help me curse ⁸⁰

That bottled spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad !

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then vain flourish of my fortune ;

I call'd thee then poor shadow, painted queen,

The presentation of but what I was, The flattering index of a direful pageant, ⁸⁵

One heav'd a-high to be hurl'd down below,

A mother only mock'd with two fair babes, A dream of what thou wast, a garish flag

To be the aim of every dangerous shot, A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble,

A queen in jest, only to fill the scene. ⁹¹ Where is thy husband now ? Where be thy brothers ?

Where be thy two sons ? Wherein dost thou joy ?

Who sues, and kneels, and says ' God save the Queen ' ?

Where be the bending peers that flattered thee ? ⁹⁵

Where be the thronging troops that followed thee ?

Decline all this, and see what now thou art : For happy wife, a most distressed widow ;

For joyful mother, one that wails the name;
 For one being su'd to, one that humbly
 sues ; 100
 For Queen, a very caitiff crown'd with care ;
 For she that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of
 me ;
 For she being fear'd of all, now fearing one ;
 For she commanding all, obey'd of none.
 Thus hath the course of justice whirl'd
 about 105
 And left thee but a very prey to time,
 Having no more but thought of what thou wast
 To torture thee the more, being what thou art.
 Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou
 not
 Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow ?
 Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke, 111
 From which even here I slip my weary
 head
 And leave the burden of it all on thee.
 Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad
 mischance ;
 These English woes shall make me smile in
 France. 115
Q. Eliz. O thou well skill'd in curses, stay awhile
 And teach me how to curse mine enemies !
Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the nights, and fast the days ;
 Compare dead happiness with living woe ;
 Think that thy babes were sweeter than they were, 120
 And he that slew them fouler than he is.
 Bett'ring thy loss makes the bad-causer
 worse ;
 Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.
Q. Eliz. My words are dull ; O, quicken them with thine !
Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp and pierce like mine. [Exit.
Duch. Why should calamity be full of
 words ? 126
Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client
 woes,
 Airy succeders of intestate joys,
 Poor breathing orators of miseries, Let them have scope ; though what they will impart 130
 Help nothing else, yet do they ease the
 heart.
Duch. If so, then be not tongue-tied. Go
 with me,
 And in the breath of bitter words let's smother
 My damned son that thy two sweet sons
 smother'd.
 The trumpet sounds ; be copious in exclaims. 135

Enter. KING RICHARD and his Train, marching with drums and trumpets.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition ?
Duch. O, she that might have intercepted
 thee,
 By strangling thee in her accursed womb,
 From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done !
Q. Eliz. Hidest thou that forehead with a golden crown 140
 Where should be branded, if that right were right,
 The slaughter of the Prince that ow'd that
 crown,
 And the dire death of my poor sons and
 brothers ?
 Tell me, thou villain slave, where are my children ?
Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence ? 145
 And little Ned Plantagenet, his son ?
Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers,
 Vaughan, Grey ?
Duch. Where is kind Hastings ?
K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets ! Strike alarum, drums !
 Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale
 women 149
 Rail on the Lord's anointed. Strike, I say !
 [Flourish. Alarums.
 Either be patient and entreat me fair,
 Or with the clamorous report of war
 Thus will I drown your exclamations.
Duch. Art thou my son ?
K. Rich. Ay, I thank God, my father, and
 yourself. 155
Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience.
K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition
 That cannot brook the accent of reproof.
Duch. O, let me speak !
K. Rich. Do, then ; but I'll not hear.
Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my
 words. 160
K. Rich. And brief, good mother ; for I am in haste.
Duch. Art thou so hasty ? I have stay'd for thee,
 God knows, in torment and in agony.
K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you ?
Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st
 it well 165
 Thou cam'st on earth to make the earth my
 hell.
 A grievous burden was thy birth to me ;
 Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy ;
 Thy school-days frightful, desp'rate, wild,
 and furious ;
 Thy prime of manhood daring, bold, and venturous ; 170
 Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody,
 More mild, but yet more harmful-kind in hatred.

What comfortable hour canst thou name
That ever grac'd me with thy company ?

K. Rich. Faith, none but Humphrey
Hour, that call'd your Grace ¹⁷⁵

To breakfast once forth of my company.
If I be so disgracious in your eye,
Let me march on and not offend you,
madam.

Strike up the drum.

Duch. I prithee hear me speak.

K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duch. Hear me a word ; ¹⁸⁰

For I shall never speak to thee again.

K. Rich. So.

Duch. Either thou wilt die by God's just ordinance

Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror ;
Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish ¹⁸⁵

And never more behold thy face again.
Therefore take with thee my most grievous
curse,

Which in the day of battle tire thee more Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st !

My prayers on the adverse party fight ; ¹⁹⁰
And there the little souls of Edward's children

Whisper the spirits of thine enemies
And promise them success and victory.
Bloody thou art ; bloody will be thy end.
Shame serves thy life and doth thy death attend. [Exit. ¹⁹⁵

Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse ¹⁹⁶

Abides in me ; I say amen to her.

K. Rich. Stay, madam, I must talk a word with you.

Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal
blood

For thee to slaughter. For my daughters,
Richard, ²⁰⁰

They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens ;

And therefore level not to hit their lives.

K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd
Elizabeth,

Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.

Q. Eliz. And must she die for this ? O, let her live, ²⁰⁵

And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty,

Slander myself as false to Edward's bed,
Throw over her the veil of infamy ;

So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding
slaughter,

I will confess she was not Edward's daughter. ²¹⁰

K. Rich. Wrong not her birth ; she is a royal Princess.

Q. Eliz. To save her life I'll say she is not so.

K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.

K. Rich. Lo, at their birth good stars were opposite. ²¹⁵

Q. Eliz. No, to their lives ill friends were contrary.

K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny.

Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny.

My babes were destin'd to a fairer death,
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.

K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain
my cousins. ²²⁰

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed ; and by their uncle cozen'd

Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom,
life.

Whose hand soever lanc'd their tender
hearts,

Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction. ²²⁵
No doubt the murd'rous knife was dull and
blunt

Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart
To revel in the entrails of my lambs.

But that still use of grief makes wild grief
tame,

My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys ²³⁰

Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine
eyes ;

And I, in such a desp'rate bay of death,
Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft.

Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.

K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise ²³⁵

And dangerous success of bloody wars,
As I intend more good to you or yours

Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd !
Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,

To be discover'd, that can do me good ? ²⁴⁰

K. Rich. Th' advancement of your children, gentle lady.

Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads ?

K. Rich. Unto the dignity and height of Fortune,

The high imperial type of this earth's glory.

Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrow with report of it ; ²⁴⁵

Tell me what state, what dignity, what
honour,

Canst thou demise to any child of mine ?
K. Rich. Even all I have—ay, and myself and all

Will I withal endow a child of thine ;
So in the Lethe of thy angry soul ²⁵⁰

Thou drown the sad remembrance of those
wrongs

Which thou supposest I have done to thee.
Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness

Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.

K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter. 255

Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with her soul.

K. Rich. What do you think ?

Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul.

So from thy soul's love didst thou love her
brothers,

And from my heart's love I do thank thee
for it. 260

K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning.

I mean that with my soul I love thy
daughter

And do intend to make her Queen of England.

Q. Eliz. Well, then, who dost thou mean shall be her king ?

K. Rich. Even he that makes her Queen.
Who else should be ? 265

Q. Eliz. What, thou ?

K. Rich. Even so. How think you of it ?

Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her ?

K. Rich. That would I learn of you,
As one being best acquainted with her humour.

Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me ?

K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.

Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that slew her brothers, 271

A pair of bleeding hearts ; thereon engrave
'Edward' and 'York'. Then haply will she
weep ;

Therefore present to her—as sometimes
Margaret

Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's
blood— 275

A handkerchief ; which, say to her, did drain

The purple sap from her sweet brother's body,

And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal.
If this inducement move her not to love,

Send her a letter of thy noble deeds ; 280
Tell her thou mad'st away her uncle

Clarence,

Her uncle Rivers ; ay, and for her sake Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne.

K. Rich. You mock me, madam ; this is not the way

To win your daughter.

Q. Eliz. There is no other way ; 285
Unless thou couldst put on some other

shape

And not be Richard that hath done all
this.

K. Rich. Say that I did all this for love of her.

Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed she cannot choose but hate thee,

Having bought love with such a bloody
spoil. 290

K. Rich. Look what is done cannot be now amended.

Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes,
Which after-hours gives leisure to repent.
If I did take the kingdom from your sons,
To make amends I'll give it to your
daughter. 295

If I have kill'd the issue of your womb,
To quicken your increase I will beget Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter.

A grandam's name is little less in love
Than is the doating title of a mother ; 300
They are as children but one step below,
Even of your metal, of your very blood ;
Of all one pain, save for a night of groans Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like
sorrow. 304

Your children were vexation to your youth ;
But mine shall be a comfort to your age.
The loss you have is but a son being King,
And by that loss your daughter is made
Queen.

I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore accept such kindness as I can. 310
Dorset your son, that with a fearful soul
Leads discontented steps in foreign soil,
This fair alliance quickly shall call home
To high promotions and great dignity.
The King, that calls your beauteous daughter wife, 315

Familiarly shall call thy Dorset brother ;
Again shall you be mother to a king,
And all the ruins of distressful times
Repair'd with double riches of content.
What ! we have many goodly days to
see.

The liquid drops of tears that you have shed 321

Shall come again, transform'd to orient
pearl,

Advantaging their loan with interest
Of ten times double gain of happiness.

Go, then, my mother, to thy daughter go ;
Make bold her bashful years with your experience ; 326

Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale ;
Put in her tender heart th' aspiring flame
Of golden sovereignty ; acquaint the Princess

With the sweet silent hours of marriage
joys. 330

And when this arm of mine hath chastised
The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham, Bound with triumphant garlands will I
come,

And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed ;
To whom I will retail my conquest won, 335
And she shall be sole victoress, Cæsar's
Cæsar.

Q. Eliz. What were I best to say ? Her father's brother
Would be her lord ? Or shall I say her uncle ?

Or he that slew her brothers and her uncles ?

Under what title shall I woo for thee 340
That God, the law, my honour, and her love
Can make seem pleasing to her tender years ?

K. Rich. Infer fair England's peace by this alliance.

Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase with still-lasting war.

K. Rich. Tell her the King, that may command, entreats. 345

Q. Eliz. That at her hands which the King's King forbids.

K. Rich. Say she shall be a high and mighty queen.

Q. Eliz. To wail the title, as her mother doth.

K. Rich. Say I will love her everlastingly.

Q. Eliz. But how long shall that title 'ever' last ? 350

K. Rich. Sweetly in force unto her fair life's end.

Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last ?

K. Rich. As long as heaven and nature lengthens it.

Q. Eliz. As long as hell and Richard likes of it.

K. Rich. Say I, her sovereign, am her subject low. 355

Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loathes such sovereignty.

K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.

Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best being plainly told.

K. Rich. Then plainly to her tell my loving tale.

Q. Eliz. Plain and not honest is too harsh a style. 360

K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and too quick.

Q. Eliz. O, no, my reasons are too deep and dead—

Too deep and dead, poor infants, in their graves.

K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam; that is past.

Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I till heart-strings break. 365

K. Rich. Now, by my George, my garter, and my crown—

Q. Eliz. Profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third usurp'd.

K. Rich. I swear—

Q. Eliz. By nothing; for this is no oath: Thy George, profan'd, hath lost his lordly honour;

Thy garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue; 370

Thy crown, usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory.

If something thou wouldst swear to be believ'd,

Swear then by something that thou hast not wrong'd.

K. Rich. Then, by my self—

Q. Eliz. Thy self is self-misus'd.

K. Rich. Now, by the world—

Q. Eliz. 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs.

K. Rich. My father's death—

Q. Eliz. Thy life hath it dishonour'd.

K. Rich. Why, then, by God—

Q. Eliz. God's wrong is most of all.

If thou didst fear to break an oath with Him,

The unity the King my husband made
Thou hadst not broken, nor my brothers died. 380

If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by Him,

Th' imperial metal, circling now thy head,
Had grac'd the tender temples of my child;
And both the Princes had been breathing here, 384

Which now, two tender bedfellows for dust,
Thy broken faith hath made the prey for worms.

What canst thou swear by now ?

K. Rich. The time to come.

Q. Eliz. That thou hast wronged in the time o'erpast;

For I myself have many tears to wash
Hereafter time, for time past wrong'd by thee. 390

The children live whose fathers thou hast slaughter'd,

Ungovern'd youth, to wail it in their age;
The parents live whose children thou hast butcher'd,

Old barren plants, to wail it with their age.
Swear not by time to come; for that thou hast 395

Misus'd ere us'd, by times ill-us'd o'erpast.

K. Rich. As I intend to prosper and repent,

So thrive I in my dangerous affairs
Of hostile arms! Myself myself confound!
Heaven and fortune bar me happy hours!
Day, yield me not thy light; nor, night,
thy rest! 401

Be opposite all planets of good luck
To my proceeding!—if, with dear heart's love,

Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter. 405

In her consists my happiness and thine;
Without her, follows to myself and thee,
Herself, the land, and many a Christian soul,

Death, desolation, ruin, and decay.
It cannot be avoided but by this; 410

It will not be avoided but by this.
Therefore, dear mother—I must call you so—

Be the attorney of my love to her;
Plead what I will be, not what I have been;

Not my deserts, but what I will deserve. 415
 Urge the necessity and state of times,
 And be not peevish-fond in great designs.

Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thus ?

K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt you to do good.

Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself to be myself ? 420

K. Rich. Ay, if your self's remembrance wrong yourself.

Q. Eliz. Yet thou didst kill my children.

K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury them ;

Where, in that nest of spicery, they will breed 424

Selves of themselves, to your recomforture.

Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will ?

K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.

Q. Eliz. I go. Write to me very shortly, And you shall understand from me her mind.

K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss ; and so, farewell. 430

[Kissing her. Exit Queen Elizabeth.]

Relenting fool, and shallow, changing woman !

Enter RATCLIFF ; CATESBY following.

How now ! what news ?

Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast

Rideth a puissant navy ; to our shores Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends, 435

Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back.

'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral ;

And there they hull, expecting but the aid Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore.

K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Norfolk. 440

Ratcliff, thyself—or Catesby ; where is he ?

Cate. Here, my good lord.

K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the Duke.

Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste.

K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither. Post to Salisbury ;

When thou com'st thither—[To Catesby] Dull, unmindful villain,

Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the Duke ? 445

Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your Highness' pleasure,

What from your Grace I shall deliver to him.

K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby. Bid him levy straight

The greatest strength and power that he can make

And meet me suddenly at Salisbury. 450
Cate. I go. [Exit.]

Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury ?

K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there before I go ?

Rat. Your Highness told me I should post before. 455

K. Rich. My mind is chang'd.

Enter LORD STANLEY.

Stanley, what news with you.

Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing ;

Nor none so bad but well may be reported.

K. Rich. Hoyday, a riddle ! neither good nor bad ! 460

What need'st thou run so many miles about,

When thou mayest tell thy tale the nearest way ?

Once more, what news ?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him !

White-liver'd runagate, what doth he there ? 465

Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.

K. Rich. Well, as you guess ?

Stan. Stir'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton,

He makes for England here to claim the crown.

K. Rich. Is the chair empty ? Is the sword unsway'd ? 470

Is the King dead, the empire unpossess'd ? What heir of York is there alive but we ?

And who is England's King but great York's heir ?

Then tell me what makes he upon the seas.

Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess. 475

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege,

You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes.

Thou wilt revolt and fly to him, I fear.

Stan. No, my good lord ; therefore mistrust me not.

K. Rich. Where is thy power then, to beat him back ? 480

Where be thy tenants and thy followers ? Are they not now upon the western shore,

Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships ?

Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.

K. Rich. Cold friends to me. What do they in the north, 485

When they should serve their sovereign in the west ?

Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty King.

Pleaseth your Majesty to give me leave,

I'll muster up my friends and meet your Grace

Where and what time your Majesty shall please. 490

K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond ;

But I'll not trust thee.

Stan. Most mighty sovereign,
You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful.

I never was nor never will be false. 494

K. Rich. Go, then, and muster men. But leave behind

Your son, George Stanley. Look your heart be firm,

Or else his head's assurance is but frail.

Stan. So deal with him as I prove true to you. [Exit.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire, 500

As I by friends am well advertised,
Sir Edward Courtney and the haughty prelate,

Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother,
With many moe confederates, are in arms.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guilfords are in arms ; 505

And every hour more competitors
Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong.

Enter another Messenger.

3 Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham—

K. Rich. Out on you, owls ! Nothing but songs of death ? [He strikes him.

There, take thou that till thou bring better news. 510

3 Mess. The news I have to tell your Majesty

Is that by sudden floods and fall of waters
Buckingham's army is dispers'd and scatter'd ;

And he himself wand' red away alone,
No man knows whither.

K. Rich. I cry thee mercy. 515

There is my purse to cure that blow of thine.

Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd
Reward to him that brings the traitor in ?

3 Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my lord.

Enter another Messenger.

4 Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel and Lord Marquis Dorset, 520

'Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms.
But this good comfort bring I to your

Highness—

The Britaine navy is dispers'd by tempest.

740

Richmond in Dorsetshire sent out a boat
Unto the shore, to ask those on the banks

If they were his assistants, yea or no ; 526
Who answer'd him they came from

Buckingham

Upon his party. He, mistrusting them,
Hois'd sail, and made his course again for Britaine.

K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in arms ; 530

If not to fight with foreign enemies,
Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Re-enter CATESBY.

Cate. My liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken—

That is the best news. That the Earl of Richmond 534

Is with a mighty power landed at Milford
Is colder tidings, but yet they must be told.

K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury ! While we reason here

A royal battle might be won and lost.
Some one take order Buckingham be brought 539

To Salisbury ; the rest march on with me.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V. Lord Derby's house.

Enter STANLEY and SIR CHRISTOPHER URSWICK.

Stan. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me :

That in the sty of the most deadly boar
My son George Stanley is frank'd up in hold ;

If I revolt, off goes young George's head ;
The fear of that holds off my present aid. 5

So, get thee gone ; commend me to thy lord.

Withal say that the Queen hath heartily consented

He should espouse Elizabeth her daughter.
But tell me, where is princely Richmond

now ?

Chris. At Pembroke, or at Ha'rford west in Wales.

Stan. What men of name resort to him ?

Chris. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier ;

Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley, 10
Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, Sir James

Blunt,

And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew ;
And many other of great name and worth ;

And towards London do they bend their power,

If by the way they be not fought withal. 15

Stan. Well, hie thee to thy lord ; I kiss his hand ;

My letter will resolve him of my mind.
Farewell. [Exeunt.

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Salisbury. An open place.

Enter the Sheriff and Guard, with BUCKINGHAM, led to execution.

Buck. Will not King Richard let me speak with him ?

Sher. No, my good lord ; therefore be patient.

Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children, Grey, and Rivers,

Holy King Henry, and thy fair son Edward, Vaughan, and all that have miscarried 5

By underhand corrupted foul injustice, If that your moody discontented souls

Do through the clouds behold this present hour,

Even for revenge mock my destruction ! This is All-Souls' day, fellow, is it not ? 10

Sher. It is, my lord.

Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday.

This is the day which in King Edward's time I wish'd might fall on me when I was found

False to his children and his wife's allies ; This is the day wherein I wish'd to fall 16

By the false faith of him whom most I trusted ;

This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs ;

That high All-Seer which I dallied with 20 Hath turn'd my feigned prayer on my head

And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest. Thus doth He force the swords of wicked men To turn their own points in their masters' bosoms.

Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck. 25

' When he ' quoth she ' shall split thy heart with sorrow,

Remember Margaret was a prophetess.' Come lead me, officers, to the block of shame ; Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Camp near Tamworth.

Enter RICHMOND, OXFORD, SIR JAMES BLUNT, SIR WALTER HERBERT, and Others, with drum and colours.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends,

Bruis'd underneath the yoke of tyranny, Thus far into the bowels of the land

Have we march'd on without impediment ; And here receive we from our father

Stanley 5 Lines of fair comfort and encouragement.

The wretched, bloody, and usurping boar, That spoil'd your summer fields and fruitful vines,

Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough

In your embowell'd bosoms—this foul swine 10

Is now even in the centre of this isle, Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn.

From Tamworth thither is but one day's march.

In God's name cheerly on, courageous friends,

To reap the harvest of perpetual peace 15 By this one bloody trial of sharp war.

Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand men,

To fight against this guilty homicide.

Herb. I doubt not but his friends will turn to us.

Blunt. He hath no friends but what are friends for fear, 20

Which in his dearest need will fly from him.

Richm. All for our vantage. Then in God's name march.

True hope is swift and flies with swallow's wings ;

Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Bosworth Field.

Enter KING RICHARD in arms, with NORFOLK, RATCLIFF, the EARL OF SURREY, and Others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tent, even here in Bosworth field.

My Lord of Surrey, why look you so sad ?

Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

K. Rich. My Lord of Norfolk !

Nor. Here, most gracious liege.

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks ; ha ! must we not ? 5

Nor. We must both give and take, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Up with my tent ! Here will I lie to-night ;

[Soldiers begin to set up the King's tent. But where to-morrow ? Well, all's one for that.

Who hath descried the number of the traitors ?

Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power. 10

K. Rich. Why, our battalia trebles that account ;

Besides, the King's name is a tower of strength,

Which they upon the adverse faction want. Up with the tent ! Come, noble gentlemen, Let us survey the vantage of the ground. 15

Call for some men of sound direction. Let's lack no discipline, make no delay ;

For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day. [Exeunt.]

Enter, on the other side of the Field, RICHMOND, SIR WILLIAM BRANDON, OXFORD, DORSET, and Others. Some pitch Richmond's tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And by the bright tract of his fiery car 20
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.
Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard.

Give me some ink and paper in my tent.
I'll draw the form and model of our battle,
Limit each leader to his several charge, 25
And part in just proportion our small power.

My Lord of Oxford—you, Sir William Brandon—

And you, Sir Walter Herbert—stay with me.

The Earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment;
Good Captain Blunt, bear my good night to him, 30

And by the second hour in the morning
Desire the Earl to see me in my tent.
Yet one thing more, good Captain, do for me—

Where is Lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?

Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours much— 35

Which well I am assur'd I have not done—
His regiment lies half a mile at least
South from the mighty power of the King.

Richm. If without peril it be possible,
Sweet Blunt, make some good means to speak with him 40

And give him from me this most needful note.

Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake it;

And so, God give you quiet rest to-night!

Richm. Good night, good Captain Blunt.
Come, gentlemen, 44

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business.
In to my tent; the dew is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the tent.]

Enter, to his tent, KING RICHARD, NORFOLK, RATCLIFF, and CATESBY.

K. Rich. What is't o'clock?

Cate. It's supper-time, my lord;
It's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.
Give me some ink and paper.
What, is my beaver easier than it was? 50
And all my armour laid into my tent?

Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness.

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy charge;

Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.
Nor. I go, my lord. 55

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.

Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.]

K. Rich. Catesby!

Cate. My lord?

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant-at-arms
To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power 60

Before sunrising, lest his son George fall
Into the blind cave of eternal night.

[Exit Catesby]

Fill me a bowl of wine. Give me a watch.
Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow.
Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy. 65

Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy
Lord Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the Earl of Surrey and himself,

Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop 70

Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.

K. Rich. So, I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine.

I have not that alacrity of spirit
Nor cheer of mind that I was wont to have.
Set it down. Is ink and paper ready?

Rat. It is, my lord. 75

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.
Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my tent

And help to arm me. Leave me, I say.
[Exit Ratcliff. Richard sleeps.]

Enter DERBY to RICHMOND in his tent; LORDS attending.

Der. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!

Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford 80

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!
Tell me, how fares our loving mother?

Der. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother,

Who prays continually for Richmond's good. 84

So much for that. The silent hours steal on,
And flaky darkness breaks within the east.

In brief, for so the season bids us be,
Prepare thy battle early in the morning,

And put thy fortune to the arbitrement 89
Of bloody strokes and mortal-staring war.

I, as I may—that which I would I cannot—
With best advantage will deceive the time

And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms;
But on thy side I may not be too forward,

Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George, 95

Be executed in his father's sight.
Farewell; the leisure and the fearful time

Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love

And ample interchange of sweet discourse Which so-long-sund'ed friends should dwell upon. 100

God give us leisure for these rites of love!
Once more, adieu; be valiant, and speed
well!

Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment.

I'll strive with troubled thoughts to take a nap,

Lest leaden slumber peise me down tomorrow 105

When I should mount with wings of victory.
Once more, good night, kind lords and gentlemen.

[Exeunt all but Richmond.

O Thou, whose captain I account myself,
Look on my forces with a gracious eye;
Put in their hands Thy bruising irons of
wrath, 110

That they may crush down with a heavy
fall

The usurping helmets of our adversaries!
Make us Thy ministers of chastisement,
That we may praise Thee in the victory!
To Thee I do commend my watchful soul
Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes.
Sleeping and waking, O, defend me still!

[Sleeps.

*Enter the Ghost of young PRINCE EDWARD,
son to Henry the Sixth.*

Ghost. [To Richard] Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow!

Think how thou stabb'dst me in my prime of youth 119

At Tewksbury; despair, therefore, and die!
[To Richmond] Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wronged souls

Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf.
King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts
thee.

Enter the Ghost of HENRY THE SIXTH.

Ghost. [To Richard] When I was mortal,
my anointed body

By thee was punched full of deadly holes.
Think on the Tower and me. Despair, and
die. 126

Harry the Sixth bids thee despair and die.
[To Richmond] Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!

Harry, that prophesied thou shouldst be
King,

Doth comfort thee in thy sleep. Live and flourish! 130

Enter the Ghost of CLARENCE.

Ghost. [To Richard] Let me sit heavy in thy soul to-morrow!

I that was wash'd to death with fulsome
wine,

Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to
death!

To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword. Despair and
die! 135

[To Richmond] Thou offspring of the house
of Lancaster,

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee.
Good angels guard thy battle! Live and flourish!

Enter the Ghosts of RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN.

Riv. [To Richard] Let me sit heavy in thy soul to-morrow,

Rivers that died at Pomfret! Despair and
die! 140

Grey. [To Richard] Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair!

Vaugh. [To Richard] Think upon
Vaughan, and with guilty fear

Let fall thy lance. Despair and die!
All. [To Richmond] Awake, and think our wrongs in Richard's bosom 144

Will conquer him. Awake and win the day.

Enter the Ghost of HASTINGS.

Ghost. [To Richard] Bloody and guilty,
guiltily awake,

And in a bloody battle end thy days!
Think on Lord Hastings. Despair and die.

[To Richmond] Quiet untroubled soul,
awake, awake!

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake! 150

Enter the Ghosts of the two young Princes.

Ghosts. [To Richard] Dream on thy cousins smothered in the Tower.

Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard,
And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and
death!

Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair and die.
[To Richmond] Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy; 155

Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!

Live, and beget a happy race of kings!
Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

Enter the Ghost of LADY ANNE, his wife.

Ghost. [To Richard] Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife

That never slept a quiet hour with thee 160
Now fills thy sleep with perturbations.

To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword. Despair and
die.

[To Richmond] Thou quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;

Dream of success and happy victory. 165
Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

Enter the Ghost of BUCKINGHAM.

Ghost. [To Richard] The first was I that help'd thee to the crown;

The last was I that felt thy tyranny.
O, in the battle think on Buckingham,
And die in terror of thy guiltiness ! 170
Dream on, dream on of bloody deeds and death ;

Fainting, despair ; despairing, yield thy breath !

[To Richmond] I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid ;

But cheer thy heart and be thou not dismay'd :

God and good angels fight on Richmond's side ; 175

And Richard falls in height of all his pride.
[The Ghosts vanish. Richard starts out of his dream.]

K. Rich. Give me another horse. Bind up my wounds.

Have mercy, Jesu ! Soft ! I did but dream.
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me !

The lights burn blue. It is now dead midnight. 180

Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.

What do I fear ? Myself ? There's none else by.

Richard loves Richard ; that is, I am I.
Is there a murderer here ? No—yes, I am.
Then fly. What, from myself ? Great reason why— 185

Lest I revenge. What, myself upon myself !
Alack, I love myself. Wherefore ? For any good

That I myself have done unto myself ?
O, no ! Alas, I rather hate myself 189

For hateful deeds committed by myself !
I am a villain ; yet I lie, I am not.

Fool, of thyself speak well. Fool, do not flatter.

My conscience hath a thousand several tongues, 193

And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain.
Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree ;
Murder, stern murder, in the dir'st degree ;
All several sins, all us'd in each degree,
Throng to the bar, crying all 'Guilty ! guilty !'

I shall despair. There is no creature loves me ; 200

And if I die no soul will pity me :
And wherefore should they, since that I myself

Find in myself no pity to myself ?
Methought the souls of all that I had murder'd

Came to my tent, and every one did threat
To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard. 206

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord !

K. Rich. Zounds, who is there ?

Rat. Ratcliff, my lord ; 'tis I. The early village-cock

Hath twice done salutation to the morn ;
Your friends are up and buckle on their armour. 211

K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I have dream'd a fearful dream !

What think'st thou—will our friends prove all true ?

Rat. No doubt, my lord.

K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I fear, I fear.

Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows. 215

K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night

Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard

Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers

Armed in proof and led by shallow Richmond. 219

'Tis not yet near day. Come, go with me ;

Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper,
To see if any mean to shrink from me.

[Exeunt.]

Enter the Lords to RICHMOND sitting in his tent.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond !

Richm. Cry mercy, lords and watchful gentlemen, 224

That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard here.

Lords. How have you slept, my lord ?
Richm. The sweetest sleep and fairest-bedding dreams

That ever ent'red in a drowsy head
Have I since your departure had, my lords.

Methought their souls whose bodies Richard murder'd 230

Came to my tent and cried on victory.
I promise you my soul is very jocund

In the remembrance of so fair a dream.
How far into the morning is it, lords ?

Lords. Upon the stroke of four. 235

Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm and give direction.

His Oration to his Soldiers.

More than I have said, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time

Forbids to dwell upon ; yet remember this :
God and our good cause fight upon our side ;

The prayers of holy saints and wronged souls, 241

Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces ;

Richard except, those whom we fight against

Had rather have us win than him they follow.

For what is he they follow ? Truly, gentlemen, 245

A bloody tyrant and a homicide ;

One rais'd in blood, and one in blood
establish'd ;

One that made means to come by what he
hath,

And slaughtered those that were the means to help him ;

A base foul stone, made precious by the foil ²⁵⁰

Of England's chair, where he is falsely set ;
One that hath ever been God's enemy.

Then if you fight against God's enemy,
God will in justice ward you as his soldiers ;
If you do sweat to put a tyrant down, ²⁵⁵
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain ;
If you do fight against your country's foes,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire ;

If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors ; ²⁶⁰

If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children quits it in your
age.

Then, in the name of God and all these rights,

Advance your standards, draw your willing swords.

For me, the ransom of my bold attempt ²⁶⁵
Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold
face ;

But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound drums and trumpets boldly and cheerfully ;

God and Saint George ! Richmond and victory ! [Exeunt.]

Re-enter KING RICHARD, RATCLIFF, Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland as touching Richmond ? ²⁷¹

Rat. That he was never trained up in
arms.

K. Rich. He said the truth ; and what said Surrey then ?

Rat. He smil'd, and said ' The better for our purpose ' . ²⁷⁴

K. Rich. He was in the right ; and so indeed it is. [Clock strikes.]

Tell the clock there. Give me a calendar.
Who saw the sun to-day ?

Rat. Not I, my lord.

K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine ; for by the book

He should have brav'd the east an hour ago.

A black day will it be to somebody. ²⁸⁰
Ratcliff !

Rat. My lord ?

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day ;
The sky doth frown and lour upon our army.

I would these dewy tears were from the
ground. 284

Not shine to-day ! Why, what is that to me
More than to Richmond ? For the selfsame
heaven

That frowns on me looks sadly upon him.

Enter NORFOLK.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord ; the foe vaunts
in the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle ; caparison
my horse ;

Call up Lord Stanley, bid him bring his
power. 290

I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain,
And thus my battle shall be ordered :
My foreward shall be drawn out all in length,

Consisting equally of horse and foot ;
Our archers shall be placed in the midst. ²⁹⁵

John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surrey,

Shall have the leading of this foot and horse.
They thus directed, we will follow

In the main battle, whose puissance on either side 299

Shall be well winged with our chieftest horse.
This, and Saint George to boot ! What think'st thou, Norfolk ?

Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.
This found I on my tent this morning.

[He sheweth him a paper.]

K. Rich. [Reads]

' Jockey to Norfolk, be not so bold,
For Dickon thy master is bought and
sold.' 305

A thing devised by the enemy.

Go, gentlemen, every man unto his charge.
Let not our babbling dreams affright our
souls ;

Conscience is but a word that cowards use,
Devis'd at first to keep the strong in awe.
Our strong arms be our conscience, swords
our law. 311

March on, join bravely, let us to it pell-mell ;
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to
hell.

His Oration to his Army.

What shall I say more than I have inferr'd ?
Remember whom you are to cope withal—
A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and runaways,
A scum of Britaines, and base lackey
peasants, 317

Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits
forth

To desperate adventures and assur'd destruction.

You sleeping safe, they bring to you unrest ;
You having lands, and bless'd with beauteous wives,

They would restrain the one, distain the
other. 322

And who doth lead them but a paltry
fellow,

Long kept in Britaine at our mother's cost ?

A milk-sop, one that never in his life
Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow ?
Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas
again ;
Lash hence these over-weening rags of
France,
These famish'd beggars, weary of their
lives ;
Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit,
For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd
themselves. 331
If we be conquered, let men conquer us,
And not these bastard Britaines, whom our fathers
Have in their own land beaten, bobb'd, and thump'd,
And, in record, left them the heirs of shame.
Shall these enjoy our lands ? lie with our wives, 336
Ravish our daughters ? [Drum afar off]
Hark ! I hear their drum.
Fight, gentlemen of England ! Fight, bold yeomen !
Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the
head !
Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in
blood ; 340
Amaze the welkin with your broken staves !

Enter a Messenger.

What says Lord Stanley ? Will he bring his power ?
Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come.
K. Rich. Off with his son George's head !
Nor. My lord, the enemy is pass'd the marsh. 345
After the battle let George Stanley die.
K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom.
Advance our standards, set upon our foes ;
Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint
George, 349
Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons !
Upon them ! Victory sits on our helms.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

Alarum ; excursions. Enter NORFOLK and Forces ; to him CATESBY.

Cate. Rescue, my Lord of Norfolk, rescue, rescue !
The King enacts more wonders than a man,
Daring an opposite to every danger.
His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights, Seeking for Richmond in the throat of
death. 5
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost.

Alarums. Enter KING RICHARD.

K. Rich. A horse ! a horse ! my kingdom for a horse !
Cate. Withdraw, my lord ; I'll help you to a horse.

K. Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a cast
And I will stand the hazard of the die. 10
I think there be six Richmonds in the field ;
Five have I slain to-day instead of him.
A horse ! a horse ! my kingdom for a horse !
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter RICHARD and RICHMOND ; they fight ; Richard is slain. Retreat and Flourish. Enter RICHMOND, DERBY bearing the crown, with other Lords.

Richm. God and your arms be prais'd, victorious friends ;
The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.
Der. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee !
Lo, here, this long-usurped royalty
From the dead temples of this bloody
wretch 5
Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows
withal.
Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.
Richm. Great God of heaven, say Amen to all !
But, tell me is young George Stanley living.
Der. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town, 10
Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw us.
Richm. What men of name are slain on either side ?
Der. John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord
Ferrers,
Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Brandon.
Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births. 15
Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled
That in submission will return to us.
And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,
We will unite the white rose and the red.
Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction, 20
That long have frown'd upon their enmity !
What traitor hears me, and says not amen ?
England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself ;
The brother blindly shed the brother's
blood,
The father rashly slaughter'd his own son, 25
The son, compell'd, been butcher to the
sire ;
All this divided York and Lancaster,
Divided in their dire division,
O, now let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true successors of each royal house, 30
By God's fair ordinance conjoin together !
And let their heirs, God, if thy will be so,
Enrich the time to come with smooth-fac'd
peace,
With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous
days ! 34

Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord,
That would reduce these bloody days again
And make poor England weep in streams of blood!

Let them not live to taste this land's increase

That would with treason wound this fair land's peace!

Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives
again—

That she may long live here, God say amen!
[Exeunt.]

THE PROLOGUE

I come no more to make you laugh; things
now

That bear a weighty and a serious brow, Sad, high, and working, full of state and
woe,

Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity here 5
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear:
The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe May here find truth too. Those that come to see

Only a show or two, and so agree 10
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,

I'll undertake may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours. Only they
That come to hear a merry bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow 15
In a long motley coat guarded with yellow,
Will be deceiv'd; for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring 20

To make that only true we now intend,
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness sake, and as you are known

The first and happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would make ye. Think ye see

The very persons of our noble story 26
As they were living; think you see them
great,

And follow'd with the general throng and sweat

Of thousand friends; then, in a moment,
see

How soon this mightiness meets misery. 30
And if you can be merry then, I'll say
A man may weep upon his wedding-day.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. London. The palace.

*Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK at one door;
at the other, the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and the LORD ABERGAVENNY.*

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have ye done

Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank your Grace,
Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely ague 4
Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber when Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
Met in the vale of Andren.

Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde—
I was then present, saw them salute on horseback;

Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung

In their embracement, as they grew together ; 10

Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd

Such a compounded one ?

Buck. All the whole time I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost The view of earthly glory ; men might say, Till this time pomp was single, but now married 15

To one above itself. Each following day Became the next day's master, till the last Made former wonders its. To-day the French,

All clinquant, all in gold, like heathen gods, Shone down the English ; and to-morrow they 20

Made Britain India : every man that stood Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were

As cherubins, all gilt ; the madams too, Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear The pride upon them, that their very labour Was to them as a painting. Now this masque 26

Was cried incomparable ; and th' ensuing night

Made it a fool and beggar. The two kings, Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst, As presence did present them : him in eye Still him in praise ; and being present both, 'Twas said they saw but one, and no discernor 32

Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns—

For so they phrase 'em—by their heralds challeng'd

The noble spirits to arms, they did perform Beyond thought's compass, that former fabulous story, 35

Being now seen possible enough, got credit, That Bevis was believ'd.

Buck. O, you go far !

Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect In honour honesty, the tract of ev'rything Would by a good discourser lose some life Which action's self was tongue to. All was royal : 42

To the disposing of it nought rebell'd ; Order gave each thing view. The office did Distinctly his full function.

Buck. Who did guide— 45 I mean, who set the body and the limbs Of this great sport together, as you guess ?

Nor. One, certes, that promises no element

In such a business.

Buck. I pray you, who, my lord ?

Nor. All this was ord'ed by the good discretion 50

Of the right reverend Cardinal of York.

Buck. The devil speed him ! No man's pie is freed

From his ambitious finger. What had he To do in these fierce vanities ? I wonder That such a keech can with his very bulk 55 Take up the rays o' th' beneficial sun, And keep it from the earth.

Nor. Surely, sir, There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends ;

For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose grace 59

Chalks successors their way, nor call'd upon For high feats done to th' crown, neither allied

To eminent assistants, but spider-like, Out of his self-drawing web, 'a gives us note

The force of his own merit makes his way— A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys 65

A place next to the King.

Aber. I cannot tell What heaven hath given him—let some graver eye

Pierce into that ; but I can see his pride Peep through each part of him. Whence has he that ?

If not from hell, the devil is a niggard 70 Or has given all before, and he begins A new hell in himself.

Buck. Why the devil, Upon this French going out, took he upon him—

Without the privity o' th' King—t' appoint

Who should attend on him ? He makes up the file 75

Of all the gentry ; for the most part such To whom as great a charge as little honour He meant to lay upon ; and his own letter, The honourable board of council out, Must fetch him in he papers.

Aber. I do know 80 Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have

By this so sicken'd their estates that never They shall abound as formerly.

Buck. O, many Have broke their backs with laying manors on 'em

For this great journey. What did this vanity 85

But minister communication of

A most poor issue ?

Nor. Grievingly I think The peace between the French and us not values

The cost that did conclude it.

Buck. Every man, 89 After the hideous storm that follow'd, was A thing inspir'd, and, not consulting, broke Into a general prophecy—that this tempest, Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded The sudden breach on't.

Nor. Which is budded out ;

For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd 95

Our merchants' goods at Bordeaux.

Aber. Is it therefore
Th' ambassador is silenc'd ?

Nor. Marry, is't.

Aber. A proper title of a peace, and purchas'd

At a superfluous rate !

Buck. Why, all this business
Our reverend Cardinal carried.

Nor. Like it your Grace, 100
The state takes notice of the private difference

Betwixt you and the Cardinal. I advise
you—

And take it from a heart that wishes towards you

Honour and plenteous safety—that you
read

The Cardinal's malice and his potency 105
Together ; to consider further, that What his high hatred would effect wants
not

A minister in his power. You know his
nature,

That he's revengeful ; and I know his
sword

Hath a sharp edge—it's long and't may be said 110

It reaches far, and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel, You'll find it wholesome. Lo, where comes that rock

That I advise your shunning.

Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, the purse borne before him, certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers. The Cardinal in his passage fixeth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor ? Ha ! 115

Where's his examination ?

1 Secr. Here, so please you.

Wol. Is he in person ready ?

1 Secr. Ay, please your Grace.

Wol. Well, we shall then know more, and Buckingham

Shall lessen this big look.

[Exeunt Wolsey and his Train.]

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, and I

Have not the power to muzzle him ; therefore best 121

Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book

Outworths a noble's blood.

Nor. What, are you chaf'd ?

Ask God for temp'rance ; that's th' appliance only

Which your disease requires.

Buck. I read in's looks

Matter against me, and his eye revil'd 126
Me as his abject object. At this instant

He bores me with some trick. He's gone to th' King ;

I'll follow, and outstare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord,
And let your reason with your choler

question 130

What 'tis you go about. To climb steep hills

Requires slow pace at first. Anger is like
A full hot horse, who being allow'd his way, Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in
England

Can advise me like you ; be to yourself 135
As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the King,
And from a mouth of honour quite cry

down

This Ipswich fellow's insolence ; or proclaim There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd :
Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot 140

That it do singe yourself. We may outrun
By violent swiftness that which we run at,
And lose by over-running. Know you not
The fire that mounts the liquor till't run o'er

In seeming to augment it wastes it ? Be advis'd. 145

I say again there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself,
If with the sap of reason you would quench
Or but allay the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir,
I am thankful to you, and I'll go along 150

By your prescription ; but this top-proud
fellow—

Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but
From sincere motions, by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as founts in July when We see each grain of gravel—I do know 155
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not treasonous.

Buck. To th' King I'll say't, and make my vouch as strong

As shore of rock. Attend : this holy fox,
Or wolf, or both—for he is equal rav'nous 160
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief

As able to perform't, his mind and place
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally—

Only to show his pomp as well in France
As here at home, suggests the King our

master

To this last costly treaty, th' interview 165
That swallowed so much treasure and like a glass

Did break i' th' wrenching.

Nor. Faith, and so it did.

Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir : this cunning cardinal

The articles o' th' combination drew 169
As himself pleas'd ; and they were ratified

As he cried ' Thus let be ' to as much end

As give a crutch to th' dead. But our Count-Cardinal
Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wolsey,
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,
Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy 175
To th' old dam treason: Charles the Emperor,
Under pretence to see the Queen his aunt—
For 'twas indeed his colour, but he came To whisper Wolsey—here makes visitation—

His fears were that the interview betwixt England and France might through their amity 181

Breed him some prejudice; for from this league

Peep'd harms that menac'd him—privily
Deals with our Cardinal; and, as I trow—
Which I do well, for I am sure the Emperor Paid ere he promis'd; whereby his suit was granted 185

Ere it was ask'd—but when the way was
made,

And pay'd with gold, the Emperor thus
desir'd,

That he would please to alter the King's
course,

And break the foresaid peace. Let the King
know, 190

As soon he shall by me, that thus the Cardinal

Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him, and could wish he were Something mistaken in't.

Buck. No, not a syllable: 195
I do pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appear in proof.

Enter BRANDON, a Sergeant-at-Arms before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Bran. Your office, sergeant: execute it.
Serg. Sir,

My lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl
Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign King.

Buck. Lo you, my lord,
The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish
Under device and practice.

Bran. I am sorry
To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on 205
The business present; 'tis his Highness'
pleasure

You shall to th' Tower.

Buck. It will help me nothing To plead mine innocence; for that dye is
on me

Which makes my whit'st part black. The will of heav'n

Be done in this and all things! I obey. 210

O my Lord Abergavenny, fare you well!
Bran. Nay, he must bear you company.
[To Abergavenny] The King
Is pleas'd you shall to th' Tower, till you know
How he determines further.

Aber. As the Duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the King's pleasure 215

By me obey'd.
Bran. Here is warrant from The King t' attach Lord Montacute and the bodies

Of the Duke's confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor—

Buck. So, so!
These are the limbs o' th' plot; no more, I
hope. 220

Bran. A monk o' th' Chartreux.
Buck. O, Nicholas Hopkins?

Bran. He.

Buck. My surveyor is false. The o'er-great Cardinal

Hath show'd him gold; my life is spann'd
already.

I am the shadow of poor Buckingham, 224
Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on By dark'ning my clear sun. My lord,
farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. The Council Chamber.

Cornets. Enter KING HENRY, leaning on the CARDINAL'S shoulder, the Nobles, and SIR THOMAS LOVELL, with Others. The Cardinal places himself under the King's feet on his right side.

King. My life itself, and the best heart
of it,

Thanks you for this great care; I stood i'
th' level

Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks

To you that chok'd it. Let be call'd before us

That gentleman of Buckingham's. In person 5

I'll hear him his confessions justify;
And point by point the treasons of his master

He shall again relate.

A noise within, crying 'Room for the Queen!' Enter the QUEEN, usher'd by the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK; she kneels. The King riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses and placeth her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a suitor.

King. Arise, and take place by us. Half your suit 10

Never name to us: you have half our
power.

The other moiety ere you ask is given;

Repeat your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your Majesty.
That you would love yourself, and in that love

Not unconsidered leave your honour nor
The dignity of your office, is the point ¹⁶
Of my petition.

King. Lady mine, proceed.

Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects

Are in great grievance: there have been commissions ²⁰

Sent down among 'em which hath flaw'd the heart

Of all their loyalties; wherein, although,
My good Lord Cardinal, they vent reproaches

Most bitterly on you as putter-on ²⁴
Of these exactions, yet the King our master—

Whose honour Heaven shield from soil!— even he escapes not

Language unmannerly; yea, such which breaks

The sides of loyalty, and almost appears
In loud rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears— ²⁹

It doth appear; for, upon these taxations,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them 'longing, have put off
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,

Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger
And lack of other means, in desperate manner ³⁵

Daring th' event to th' teeth, are all in uproar,

And danger serves among them.

King. Taxation!
Wherein? and what taxation? My Lord Cardinal,

You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir, ⁴⁰
I know but of a single part in aught
Pertains to th' state, and front but in that file

Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord!
You know no more than others! But you frame

Things that are known alike, which are not wholesome ⁴⁵

To those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions,

Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are

Most pestilent to th' hearing; and to bear 'em ⁴⁹

The back is sacrifice to th' load. They say
They are devis'd by you, or else you suffer

Too hard an exclamation.

King. Still exaction!

The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience, but am bold'ned ⁵⁵

Under your promis'd pardon. The subjects' grief

Comes through commissions, which compels from each

The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretence for this

Is nam'd your wars in France. This makes bold mouths; ⁶⁰

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze

Allegiance in them; their curses now Live where their prayers did; and it's come to pass

This tractable obedience is a slave
To each incensed will. I would your Highness ⁶⁵

Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer business.

King. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me, ⁶⁹
I have no further gone in this than by

A single voice; and that not pass'd me but
By learned approbation of the judges. If I am

Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither know

My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing, let me say

'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake ⁷⁵

That virtue must go through. We must not stint

Our necessary actions in the fear
To cope malicious censurers, which ever

As rav'nous fishes do a vessel follow ⁷⁹
That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further

Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is

Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up

For our best act. If we shall stand still, ⁸⁵
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd

at,

We should take root here where we sit,
or sit

State-statues only.

King. Things done well
And with a care exempt themselves from fear: ⁸⁹

Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent

Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend our subjects from our laws,

And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each? ⁹⁴

A trembling contribution ! Why, we take From every tree lop, bark, and part o' th' timber ;

And though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,

The air will drink the sap. To every county Where this is question'd send our letters with

Free pardon to each man that has denied
The force of this commission. Pray, look
to't ;

I put it to your care.

Wol. [Aside to the Secretary] A word with
you.

Let there be letters writ to every shire Of the King's grace and pardon. The grieved commons

Hardly conceive of me—let it be nois'd
That through our intercession this revoke-
ment

And pardon comes. I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.]

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.

King. It grieves many.
The gentleman is learn'd and a most rare
speaker ;

To nature none more bound ; his training
such

That he may furnish and instruct great teachers

And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet
see,

When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt,

They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly

Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,

Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,

Almost with ravish'd list'ning, could not find

His hour of speech a minute—he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us ; you shall hear—

This was his gentleman in trust—of him Things to strike honour sad. Bid him recount

The fore-recited practices, whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Wol. Stand forth, and with bold spirit relate what you,

Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

King. Speak freely.

Surv. First, it was usual with him—every
day

It would infect his speech—that if the King
Should without issue die, he'll carry it so
To make the sceptre his. These very words
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law, Lord Aberga'ny, to whom by oath he menac'd

Revenge upon the Cardinal.

Wol. Please your Highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point :
Not friended by his wish, to your high
person

His will is most malignant, and it stretches
Beyond you to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd Lord Cardinal, Deliver all with charity.

King. Speak on.
How grounded he his title to the crown Upon our fail ? To this point hast thou heard him

At any time speak aught ?

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Henton.

King. What was that Henton ?
Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,

His confessor, who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.

King. How know'st thou this ?

Surv. Not long before your Highness sped to France,

The Duke being at the Rose, within the parish

Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me demand

What was the speech among the Londoners Concerning the French journey. I replied Men fear'd the French would prove per-fidious,

To the King's danger. Presently the Duke Said 'twas the fear indeed and that he doubted

'Twould prove the verity of certain words Spoke by a holy monk ' that oft ' says he ' Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice
hour

To hear from him a matter of some moment ;
Whom after under the confession's seal

He solemnly had sworn that what he spoke My chaplain to no creature living but

To me should utter, with demure confidence
This pausingly ensu'd : " Neither the King
nor's heirs,

Tell you the Duke, shall prosper ; bid him
strive

To gain the love o' th' commonalty ; the Duke

Shall govern England "

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the Duke's surveyor, and lost your office

On the complaint o' th' tenants. Take good heed

You charge not in your spleen a noble
person

And spoil your nobler soul. I say, take heed ; 178

Yes, heartily beseech you.

King. Let him on.
Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the Duke, by th' devil's illusions

The monk might be deceiv'd, and that 'twas dangerous for him

To ruminate on this so far, until 180
It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,

It was much like to do. He answer'd 'Tush,

It can do me no damage'; adding further That, had the King in his last sickness fail'd,

The Cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads 185

Should have gone off.

King. Ha ! what, so rank ? Ah ha !
There's mischief in this man. Canst thou say further ?

Surv. I can, my liege.

King. Proceed.

Surv. Being at Greenwich,
After your Highness had reprov'd the Duke About Sir William Bulmer—

King. I remember 190
Of such a time : being my sworn servant,
The Duke retain'd him his. But on : what hence ?

Surv. ' If ' quoth he ' I for this had been committed—
As to the Tower I thought—I would have play'd

The part my father meant to act upon 195
Th' usurper Richard ; who, being at Salisbury,

Made suit to come in's presence, which if granted,

As he made semblance of his duty, would Have put his knife into him.'

King. A giant traitor !

Wol. Now, madam, may his Highness live in freedom, 200

And this man out of prison ?

Q. Kath. God mend all !

King. There's something more would out of thee : what say'st ?

Surv. After 'the Duke his father' with the 'knife',

He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger,

Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes, 205

He did discharge a horrible oath, whose tenour

Was, were he evil us'd, he would outgo His father by as much as a performance Does an irresolute purpose.

King. There's his period,
To sheath his knife in us. He is attach'd ;

Call him to present trial. If he may Find mercy in the law, 'tis his ; if none, Let him not seek't of us. By day and night ! He's traitor to th' height. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. London. The palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain and LORD SANDYS.

Cham. Is't possible the spells of France should juggle Men into such strange mysteries ?

Sandys. New customs,
Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay, let 'em be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English 5

Have got by the late voyage is but merely A fit or two o' th' face ; but they are shrewd ones ;

For when they hold 'em, you would swear directly

Their very noses had been counsellors 9
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so.

Sandys. They have all new legs, and lame ones. One would take it,

That never saw 'em pace before, the spavin Or springhalt reign'd among 'em.

Cham. Death ! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut to't,
That sure th' have worn out Christendom.

Enter SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

How now ? 15
What news, Sir Thomas Lovell ?

Lov. Faith, my lord,
I hear of none but the new proclamation That's clapp'd upon the court gate.

Cham. What is't for ?

Lov. The reformation of our travelld gallants,
That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors. 20

Cham. I am glad 'tis there. Now I would pray our monsieurs

To think an English courtier may be wise, And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either,
For so run the conditions, leave those remnants 24

Of fool and feather that they got in France, With all their honourable points of ignorance

Pertaining thereunto—as fights and fire-works ;

Abusing better men than they can be, Out of a foreign wisdom—renouncing clean

The faith they have in tennis, and tall stockings, 30

Short blist' red breeches, and those types of travel,

And understand again like honest men, Or pack to their old playfellows. There, I take it,

They may, cum privilegio, wear away
The lag end of their lewdness and be laugh'd at. 35

Sandys. 'Tis time to give 'em physic, their diseases

Are grown so catching.

Cham. What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov. Ay, marry,
There will be woe indeed, lords: the sly
whoresons

Have got a speeding trick to lay down
ladies. 40

A French song and a fiddle has no fellow.

Sandys. The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they are going,

For sure there's no converting of 'em. Now
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten

A long time out of play, may bring his plaints 45

And have an hour of hearing; and, by'r
Lady,

Held current music too.

Cham. Well said, Lord Sandys;
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sandys. No, my lord,
Nor shall not while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a-going?

Lov. To the Cardinal's; 50
Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O, 'tis true;
This night he makes a supper, and a great
one,

To many lords and ladies; there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous mind indeed, 55

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;
His dews fall everywhere.

Cham. No doubt he's noble;
He had a black mouth that said other of him.

Sandys. He may, my lord; has wherewithal. In him

Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine: 60

Men of his way should be most liberal,
They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so;
But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;

Your lordship shall along. Come, good Sir
Thomas, 64

We shall be late else; which I would not be.
For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guildford,

This night to be comptrollers.

Sandys. I am your lordship's.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The Presence Chamber in York Place.

Hautboys. A small table under a state for the Cardinal, a longer table for the guests.

Then enter ANNE BULLEN, and divers other Ladies and Gentlemen, as guests, at one door; at another door enter SIR HENRY GUILDFORD.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his
Grace

Salutes ye all; this night he dedicates To fair content and you. None here, he hopes,

In all this noble bevy, has brought with her One care abroad; he would have all as merry 5

As, first, good company, good wine, good
welcome,

Can make good people.

Enter Lord Chamberlain, LORD SANDYS, and SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

O, my lord, y'are tardy,
The very thought of this fair company
Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, Sir Harry Guild-ford.

Sandys. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the Cardinal 10

But half my lay thoughts in him, some of these

Should find a running banquet ere they rested

I think would better please 'em. By my life,
They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Lov. O that your lordship were but now confessor 15

To one or two of these!

Sandys. I would I were;
They should find easy penance.

Lov. Faith, how easy?
Sandys. As easy as a down bed would afford it.

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir Harry,

Place you that side; I'll take the charge of
this. 20

His Grace is ent'ring. Nay, you must not freeze:

Two women plac'd together makes cold weather.

My Lord Sandys, you are one will keep 'em waking:

Pray sit between these ladies.

Sandys. By my faith,
And thank your lordship. By your leave, sweet ladies. [Seats himself between Anne Bullen and another lady.]

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?
Sandys. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in love too. 28

But he would bite none; just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

[Kisses her.]
Cham. Well said, my lord.

So, now y'are fairly seated. Gentlemen, 31
The penance lies on you if these fair ladies

Pass away frowning.

Sandys. For my little cure,
Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, attended; and takes his state.

Wol. Y'are welcome, my fair guests.
That noble lady 35
Or gentleman that is not freely merry Is not my friend. This, to confirm my welcome—

And to you all, good health! [Drinks.
Sandys. Your Grace is noble.
Let me have such a bowl may hold my
thanks

And save me so much talking.

Wol. My Lord Sandys, 40
I am beholding to you. Cheer your neighbours.

Ladies, you are not merry. Gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?

Sandys. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have 'em 44

Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamester,
My Lord Sandys.

Sandys. Yes, if I make my play.
Here's to your ladyship; and pledge it,
madam,

For 'tis to such a thing—

Anne. You cannot show me.

Sandys. I told your Grace they would talk anon. [Drum and trumpet. Chambers
discharg'd.

Wol. What's that?

Cham. Look out there, some of ye.

[Exit a Servant.

Wol. What warlike voice,
And to what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear
not: 51

By all the laws of war y'are privileg'd.

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now! what is't?

Serv. A noble troop of strangers—
For so they seem. Th' have left their barge and landed,

And hither make, as great ambassadors 55
From foreign princes.

Wol. Good Lord Chamberlain, Go, give 'em welcome; you can speak the French tongue;
And pray receive 'em nobly and conduct
'em

Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty

Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend
him. 60

[Exit Chamberlain attended. All rise, and tables remov'd.

You have now a broken banquet, but we'll mend it.

A good digestion to you all; and once more
I show'r a welcome on ye: welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the KING, and Others, as maskers, habited like shepherds, usher'd by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! What are their pleasures?

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd 63

To tell your Grace, that, having heard by fame

Of this so noble and so fair assembly
This night to meet here, they could do no
less,

Out of the great respect they bear to beauty,
But leave their flocks and, under your fair conduct, 70

Crave leave to view these ladies and entreat
An hour of revels with 'em.

Wol. Say, Lord Chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay 'em

A thousand thanks, and pray 'em take their pleasures. [They choose ladies. The King chooses Anne Bullen.

King. The fairest hand I ever touch'd!
O beauty, 75

Till now I never knew thee! [Music. Dance.

Wol. My lord!

Cham. Your Grace?

Wol. Pray tell 'em thus much from me:
There should be one amongst 'em, by his
person,

More worthy this place than myself; to whom, 79

If I but knew him, with my love and duty
I would surrender it.

Cham. I will, my lord.

[He whispers to the Maskers.

Wol. What say they?

Cham. Such a one, they all confess.
There is indeed; which they would have
your Grace

Find out, and he will take it.

Wol. Let me see, then.

[Comes from his state.

By all your good leaves, gentlemen, here
I'll make 85

My royal choice.

King. [Unmasking] Ye have found him,
Cardinal.

You hold a fair assembly; you do well,
lord.

You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you,
Cardinal,

I should judge now unhappily.

Wol. I am glad

Your Grace is grown so pleasant.

King. My Lord Chamberlain, 90

Prithee come hither: what fair lady's that?

Cham. An't please your Grace, Sir
Thomas Bullen's daughter—

The Viscount Rochford—one of her Highness' women.

King. By heaven, she is a dainty one.
Sweet heart,

I were unmannerly to take you out 95
And not to kiss you. A health, gentlemen!
Let it go round.

Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready

I' th' privy chamber?

Lov. Yes, my lord.

Wol. Your Grace,
I fear, with dancing is a little heated. 100

King. I fear, too much.

Wol. There's fresher air, my lord,
In the next chamber.

King. Lead in your ladies, ev'ry one.
Sweet partner,

I must not yet forsake you. Let's be merry:
Good my Lord Cardinal, I have half a dozen healths 105

To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure
To lead 'em once again; and then let's dream

Who's best in favour. Let the music knock it. [Exeunt, with trumpets.]

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Westminster. A street.

Enter two Gentlemen, at several doors.

1 Gent. Whither away so fast?

2 Gent. O, God save ye!

Ev'n to the Hall, to hear what shall become
Of the great Duke of Buckingham.

1 Gent. I'll save you That labour, sir. All's now done but the ceremony

Of bringing back the prisoner.

2 Gent. Were you there? 5

1 Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

2 Gent. Pray, speak what has happen'd.

1 Gent. You may guess quickly what.

2 Gent. Is he found guilty?

1 Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon't.

2 Gent. I am sorry for't.

1 Gent. So are a number more.

2 Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it? 10

1 Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great
Duke

Came to the bar; where to his accusations
He pleaded still not guilty, and alleged
Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.

The King's attorney, on the contrary, 15
Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions,

Of divers witnesses; which the Duke desir'd
To have brought, viva voce, to his face;

At which appear'd against him his surveyor,

Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor, and John Car, 20

Confessor to him, with that devil-monk,
Hopkins, that made this mischief.

2 Gent.

That was he

That fed him with his prophecies?

1 Gent.

The same.

All these accus'd him strongly, which he fain

Would have flung from him; but indeed he could not; 25

And so his peers, upon this evidence,

Have found him guilty of high treason.
Much

He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all
Was either pitied in him or forgotten.

2 Gent. After all this, how did he bear
himself? 30

1 Gent. When he was brought again to th' bar to hear

His knell rung out, his judgment, he was stirr'd

With such an agony he sweat extremely,
And something spoke in choler, ill and hasty;

But he fell to himself again, and sweetly 35
In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.

2 Gent. I do not think he fears death.

1 Gent.

Sure, he does not;

He never was so womanish; the cause
He may a little grieve at.

2 Gent.

Certainly

The Cardinal is the end of this.

1 Gent.

'Tis likely, 40

By all conjectures: first, Kildare's
attainder,

Then deputy of Ireland, who remov'd, Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste
too,

Lest he should help his father.

2 Gent.

That trick of state

Was a deep envious one.

1 Gent.

At his return 45

No doubt he will requite it. This is noted,
And generally: whoever the King favours
The Cardinal instantly will find employ-
ment,

And far enough from court too.

2 Gent.

All the commons

Hate him perniciously, and, o' my conscience, 50

Wish him ten fathom deep: this Duke as much

They love and dote on; call him bounteous
Buckingham,

The mirror of all courtesy—

Enter BUCKINGHAM from his arraignment; Tip-staves before him; the axe with the edge towards him; halberds on each side;
accompanied with SIR THOMAS LOVELL,
SIR NICHOLAS VAUX, SIR WILLIAM
SANDYS, and common people, etc.

1 Gent.

Stay there, sir,

And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.
2 Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him.

Buck. All good people,
You that thus far have come to pity me, 56 Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me.

I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment,
And by that name must die; yet, heaven
bear witness,

And if I have a conscience, let it sink me 60
Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful!
The law I bear no malice for my death:
'T has done, upon the premises, but justice.
But those that sought it I could wish more Christians. 64

Be what they will, I heartily forgive 'em;
Yef let 'em look they glory not in mischief
Nor build their evils on the graves of great
men,

For then my guiltless blood must cry against 'em.

For further life in this world I ne'er hope Nor will I sue, although the King have mercies 70

More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me

And dare be hold to weep for Buckingham,
His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave

Is only bitter to him, only dying,
Go with me like good angels to my end; 75
And as the long divorce of steel falls on me
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to heaven. Lead on, a God's name.

Lov. I do beseech your Grace, for charity,
If ever any malice in your heart 80
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.

Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive
you

As I would be forgiven. I forgive all.
There cannot be those numberless offences
'Gainst me that I cannot take peace with.
No black envy 85

Shall mark my grave. Commend me to his
Grace;

And if he speak of Buckingham, pray tell
him

You met him half in heaven. My vows and prayers

Yet are the King's, and, till my soul
forsake, 89

Shall cry for blessings on him. May he live Longer than I have time to tell his years;
Ever below'd and loving may his rule be;
And when old time shall lead him to his end,
Goodness and he fill up one monument!

Lov. To th' water side I must conduct
your Grace; 95

Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas
Vaux,

Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux.

Prepare there;
The Duke is coming; see the barge be
ready;

And fit it with such furniture as suits
The greatness of his person.

Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas, 100
Let it alone; my state now will but mock
me.

When I came hither I was Lord High Constable

And Duke of Buckingham; now, poor
Edward Bohun.

Yet I am richer than my base accusers
That never knew what truth meant; I now seal it; 105

And with that blood will make 'em one day groan for't.

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against usurping
Richard,

Flying for succour to his servant Banister, Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd 110

And without trial fell; God's peace be with
him!

Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pity-
ing

My father's loss, like a most royal prince, Restor'd me to my honours, and out of ruins

Made my name once more noble. Now his
son, 115

Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and
all

That made me happy, at one stroke has taken

For ever from the world. I had my trial,
And must needs say a noble one; which makes me 119

A little happier than my wretched father;
Yet thus far we are one in fortunes:
both

Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most—

A most unnatural and faithless service.
Heaven has an end in all. Yet, you that hear me, 122

This from a dying man receive as certain:
Where you are liberal of your loves and
counsels,

Be sure you be not loose; for those you make friends

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive

The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again 130

But where they mean to sink ye. All good people,

Pray for me! I must now forsake ye; the last hour

Of my long weary life is come upon me.
Farewell;

And when you would say something that is sad, 135

Speak how I fell. I have done ; and God forgive me !

[Exeunt Buckingham and Train.]

1 Gent. O, this is full of pity ! Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors.

2 Gent. If the Duke be guiltless,
'Tis full of woe ; yet I can give you inkling
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall, 141
Greater than this.

1 Gent. Good angels keep it from us !
What may it be ? You do not doubt my faith, sir ?

2 Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill require
A strong faith to conceal it.

1 Gent. Let me have it ; 145
I do not talk much.

2 Gent. I am confident.
You shall, sir. Did you not of late days hear
A buzzing of a separation Between the King and Katharine ?

1 Gent. Yes, but it held not ;
For when the King once heard it, out of anger 150

He sent command to the Lord Mayor
straight

To stop the rumour and allay those tongues
That durst disperse it.

2 Gent. But that slander, sir,
Is found a truth now ; for it grows again Fresher than e'er it was, and held for certain 155

The King will venture at it. Either the Cardinal

Or some about him near have, out of malice
To the good Queen, possess'd him with a scruple

That will undo her. To confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd and lately ;
As all think, for this business.

1 Gent. 'Tis the Cardinal ;
And merely to revenge him on the Emperor
For not bestowing on him at his asking The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos'd.

2 Gent. I think you have hit the mark ;
but is't not cruel 165

That she should feel the smart of this ? The Cardinal

Will have his will, and she must fall.

1 Gent. 'Tis woeful.
We are too open here to argue this ;
Let's think in private more. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. The palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain reading this letter.

Cham. ' My lord,
The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnish'd. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinal's, by commission, and main power, took 'em from me, with this reason : his master would be serv'd before a subject, if not before the King ; which stopp'd our mouths, sir.'

I fear he will indeed. Well, let him have
them.

He will have all, I think.

Enter to the Lord Chamberlain the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

Nor. Well met, my Lord Chamberlain. 10
Cham. Good day to both your Graces.

Suf. How is the King employ'd ?

Cham. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause ?

Cham. It seems the marriage with his brother's wife
Has crept too near his conscience.

Suf. No, his conscience 15
Has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'Tis so ;
This is the Cardinal's doing ; the King-
Cardinal,

That blind priest, like the eldest son of
fortune,

Turns what he list. The King will know him one day.

Suf. Pray God he do ! He'll never know himself else. 20

Nor. How holily he works in all his business !

And with what zeal ! For, now he has crack'd the league

Between us and the Emperor, the Queen's great nephew,

He dives into the King's soul and there scatters

Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, 25

Fears, and despairs—and all these for his marriage ;

And out of all these to restore the King,
He counsels a divorce, a loss of her

That like a jewel has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre ;

Of her that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with ; even of her

That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,

Will bless the King—and is not this course pious ?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel ! 'Tis most true 35

These news are everywhere ; every tongue speaks 'em,

And every true heart weeps for't. All that dare

Look into these affairs see this main end—

The French King's sister. Heaven will one day open

The King's eyes, that so long have slept upon

This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray, and heartily, for our deliverance ;

Or this imperious man will work us all From princes into pages. All men's honours

Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd

Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords, I love him not, nor fear him—there's my creed ;

As I am made without him, so I'll stand, If the King please ; his curses and his blessings

Touch me alike ; th'are breath I not believe in.

I knew him, and I know him ; so I leave him

To him that made him proud—the Pope.

Nor. Let's in ;

And with some other business put the King From these sad thoughts that work too much upon him.

My lord, you'll bear us company ?

Cham. Excuse me,

The King has sent me elsewhere ; besides, You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him. Health to your lordships !

Nor. Thanks, my good Lord Chamberlain.

[Exit Lord Chamberlain ; and the King draws the curtain and sits reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks ; sure, he is much afflicted.

King. Who's there, ha ?

Nor. Pray God he be not angry.

K. Hen. Who's there, I say ? How dare you thrust yourselves

Into my private meditations ?

Who am I, ha ?

Nor. A gracious king that pardons all offences

Malice ne'er meant. Our breach of duty this way

Is business of estate, in which we come To know your royal pleasure.

King. Ye are too bold.

Go to ; I'll make ye know your times of business.

Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha ?

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS with a commission.

Who's there ? My good Lord Cardinal ? O my Wolsey,

The quiet of my wounded conscience, Thou art a cure fit for a King. [To Campeius]

You're welcome,

Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom.

Use us and it. [To Wolsey] My good lord, have great care

I be not found a talker.

Wol. Sir, you cannot.

I would your Grace would give us but an hour

Of private conference.

King. [To Norfolk and Suffolk] We are busy ; go.

Nor. [Aside to Suffolk] This priest has no pride in him !

Suf. [Aside to Norfolk] Not to speak of ! I would not be so sick though for his place.

But this cannot continue.

Nor. [Aside to Suffolk] If it do, I'll venture one have-at-him.

Suf. [Aside to Norfolk] I another.

[Exeunt Norfolk and Suffolk.

Wol. Your Grace has given a precedent of wisdom

Above all princes, in committing freely Your scruple to the voice of Christendom.

Who can be angry now ? What envy reach you ?

The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her,

Must now confess, if they have any goodness,

The trial just and noble. All the clerks, I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms Have their free voices. Rome the nurse of judgment,

Invited by your noble self, hath sent One general tongue unto us, this good man,

This just and learned priest, Cardinal Campeius,

Whom once more I present unto your Highness.

King. And once more in mine arms I bid him welcome,

And thank the holy conclave for their loves.

They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for.

Cam. Your Grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves,

You are so noble. To your Highness' hand I tender my commission ; by whose

virtue—

The court of Rome commanding—you, my Lord

Cardinal of York, are join'd with me their servant

In the impartial judging of this business.

King. Two equal men. The Queen shall be acquainted

Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner ?

Wol. I know your Majesty has always lov'd her

So dear in heart not to deny her that A woman of less place might ask by law—

Scholars allow'd freely to argue for her.

King. Ay, and the best she shall have ;
and my favour
To him that does best. God forbid else.
Cardinal,
Prithee call Gardiner to me, my new
secretary ;
I find him a fit fellow. [Exit Wolsey.]

Re-enter WOLSEY with GARDINER.

Wol. [Aside to Gardiner] Give me your hand : much joy and favour to you ;
You are the King's now.

Gard. [Aside to Wolsey] But to be commanded 116
For ever by your Grace, whose hand has rais'd me.

King. Come hither, Gardiner.

[Walks and whispers.]

Cam. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace

In this man's place before him ?

Wol. Yes, he was. 120

Cam. Was he not held a learned man ?

Wol. Yes, surely.

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then,

Even of yourself, Lord Cardinal.

Wol. How ! Of me ?

Cam. They will not stick to say you envied
him

And, fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous, 125

Kept him a foreign man still ; which so griev'd him

That he ran mad and died.

Wol. Heav'n's peace be with him !

That's Christian care enough. For living murmurers

There's places of rebuke. He was a fool,
For he would needs be virtuous : that good
fellow, 130

If I command him, follows my appointment.

I will have none so near else. Learn this,
brother,

We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons.

King. Deliver this with modesty to th'
Queen. [Exit Gardiner.]

The most convenient place that I can think of 135

For such receipt of learning is Blackfriars ;
There ye shall meet about this weighty
business—

My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O, my lord,
Would it not grieve an able man to leave
So sweet a bedfellow ? But, conscience, conscience ! 140

O, 'tis a tender place ! and I must leave her.

[Exit.]

SCENE III. London. The palace.

Enter ANNE BULLEN and an old Lady.

Anne. Not for that neither. Here's the pang that pinches :

His Highness having liv'd so long with her,
and she

So good a lady that no tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonour of her—by my life,
She never knew harm-doing—O, now, after
So many courses of the sun enthroned, 6 Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the
which

To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than 'Tis sweet at first t' acquire—after this process,

To give her the avaunt, it is a pity 10
Would move a monster.

Old L. Hearts of most hard temper
Melt and lament for her.

Anne. O, God's will ! much better
She ne'er had known pomp ; though't be temporal,

Yet, if that quarrel, fortune, do divorce 14
It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance panging
As soul and body's severing.

Old L. Alas, poor lady !
She's a stranger now again.

Anne. So much the more Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
I swear 'tis better to be lowly born
And range with humble livers in content 20
Than to be perk'd up in a glist'ring grief
And wear a golden sorrow.

Old L. Our content
Is our best having.

Anne. By my troth and maidenhead,
I would not be a queen.

Old L. Beshrew me, I would,
And venture maidenhead for't ; and so would you, 25

For all this spice of your hypocrisy.
You that have so fair parts of woman on
you

Have too a woman's heart, which ever yet
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty ;
Which, to say sooth, are blessings ; and which gifts, 30

Saving your mincing, the capacity Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive

If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good troth.

Old L. Yes, troth and troth. You would not be a queen !

Anne. No, not for all the riches under
heaven. 35

Old L. 'Tis strange : a threepence bow'd would hire me,

Old as I am, to queen it. But, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess ? Have you limbs

To bear that load of title ?

Anne. No, in truth.

Old L. Then you are weakly made. Pluck off a little ; 40

I would not be a young count in your way
For more than blushing comes to. If your back

Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too weak
Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk !
I swear again I would not be a queen 45
For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an emballing. I myself Would for Carnarvonshire, although there long'd

No more to th' crown but that. Lo, who comes here ?

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What were't worth to know 50
The secret of your conference ?

Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand ; it values not your asking.

Our mistresses' sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business and becoming 54
The action of good women ; there is hope
All will be well.

Anne. Now, I pray God, amen !

Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heav'nly blessings
Follow such creatures. That you may, fair
lady,

Perceive I speak sincerely and high note's Ta'en of your many virtues, the King's
Majesty 60

Commends his good opinion of you to you,
and

Does purpose honour to you no less flowing Than Marchioness of Pembroke ; to which title

A thousand pound a year, annual support,
Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know 65
What kind of my obedience I should
tender ;

More than my all is nothing, nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallowed, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities ; yet prayers and wishes 69

Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship, Vouchsafe to speak my thanks and my obedience,

As from a blushing handmaid, to his Highness ;

Whose health and royalty I pray for.

Cham. Lady,
I shall not fail t'approve the fair conceit
The King hath of you. [Aside] I have perus'd her well :

Beauty and honour in her are so mingled 76
That they have caught the King ; and who knows yet

But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle ?—I'll to the King
And say I spoke with you.

Anne. My honour'd lord ! 80

[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

Old L. Why, this it is : see, see !
I have been begging sixteen years in court—
Am yet a courtier beggarly—nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late
For any suit of pounds ; and you, O fate !
A very fresh-fish here—fie, fie, fie upon 86
This compell'd fortune !—have your mouth
fill'd up

Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me.

Old L. How tastes it ? Is it bitter ?
Forty pence, no. 89

There was a lady once—'tis an old story—
That would not be a queen, that would she
not,

For all the mud in Egypt. Have you heard
it ?

Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old L. With your theme I could O'ermount the lark. The Marchioness of Pembroke ! 94

A thousand pounds a year for pure respect !
No other obligation ! By my life,
That promises mee thousands : honour's
train

Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time
I know your back will bear a duchess. Say,
Are you not stronger than you were ?

Anne. Good lady, 100
Make yourself mirth with your particular
fancy,

And leave me out on't. Would I had no being,

If this salute my blood a jot ; it faints me
To think what follows. 104

The Queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence. Pray, do not deliver What here y' have heard to her.

Old L. What do you think me ?
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. A hall in Blackfriars.

Trumpets, sennet, and cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands ; next them, two Scribes, in the habit of doctors ;
after them, the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTER-BURY alone ; after him, the BISHOPS OF LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHESTER, and SAINT ASAPH ; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a Cardinal's hat ; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross ; then a Gentleman Usher bareheaded, accompanied with a Sergeant-at-Arms bearing a silver mace ; then two Gentlemen bearing two great silver pillars ;
after them, side by side, the two Cardinals, WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS ; two Noblemen with the sword and mace. Then enter the KING and QUEEN and their Trains. The King takes place under the cloth of state ;
the two Cardinals sit under him as judges.
The Queen takes place some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read,

Let silence be commanded.

King. What's the need?

It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides th' authority allow'd;
You may then spare that time.

Wol. Be't so; proceed.

Scribe. Say 'Henry King of England, come into the court'.

Crier. Henry King of England, &c.

King. Here.

Scribe. Say 'Katharine Queen of England, come into the court'.

Crier. Katharine Queen of England, &c.

[The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you do me right and justice,

And to bestow your pity on me; for
I am a most poor woman and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions, having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas,
sir,

In what have I offended you? What cause Hath my behaviour given to your dis-
pleasure

That thus you should proceed to put me
off

And take your good grace from me?
Heaven witness,

I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable,
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike, Yea, subject to your countenance—glad or sorry

As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour
I ever contradicted your desire Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends

Have I not strove to love, although I knew He were mine enemy? What friend of mine

That had to him deriv'd your anger did I Continue in my liking? Nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharg'd? Sir, call to mind

That I have been your wife in this obedience

Upward of twenty years, and have been blest

With many children by you. If, in the course

And process of this time, you can report,

And prove it too against mine honour,
aught,

My bond to wedlock or my love and duty,

Against your sacred person, in God's name,
Turn me away and let the foul'st contempt
Shut door upon me, and so give me up To the sharp'st kind of justice. Please you,
sir,

The King, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent
And unmatch'd wit and judgment;
Ferdinand,

My father, King of Spain, was reckon'd one
The wisest prince that there had reign'd by many

A year before. It is not to be question'd That they had gather'd a wise council to
them

Of every realm, that did debate this
business,

Who deem'd our marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly

Beseech you, sir, to spare me till I may Be by my friends in Spain advis'd, whose counsel

I will implore. If not, i' th' name of God,
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady,
And of your choice, these reverend fathers—
men

Of singular integrity and learning, Yea, the elect o' th' land, who are assembled

To plead your cause. It shall be therefore bootless

That longer you desire the court, as well
For your own quiet as to rectify
What is unsettled in the King.

Cam. His Grace
Hath spoken well and justly; therefore,
madam,

It's fit this roval session do proceed
And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produc'd and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord Cardinal,
To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam?

Q. Kath. Sir,
I am about to weep; but, thinking that
We are a queen, or long have dream'd so,
certain

The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet.

Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble;
nay, before,

Or God will punish me. I do believe,
Induc'd by potent circumstances, that You are mine enemy, and make my challenge

You shall not be my judge; for it is you Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and
me—

Which God's dew quench ! Therefore I say
again, 80
I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul
Refuse you for my judge, whom yet once
more
I hold my most malicious foe and think not
At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess 84
You speak not like yourself, who ever yet
Have stood to charity and display'd th' effects
Of disposition gentle and of wisdom O'ertopping woman's pow'r. Madam, you do me wrong :

I have no spleen against you, nor injustice
For you or any ; how far I have proceeded,
Or how far further shall, is warranted 91
By a commission from the Consistory, Yea, the whole Consistory of Rome. You charge me

That I have blown this coal : I do deny it.
The King is present ; if it be known to him
That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound, 96

And worthily, my falsehood ! Yea, as much
As you have done my truth. If he know That I am free of your report, he knows
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me, and the cure is to 101 Remove these thoughts from you ; the which before

His Highness shall speak in, I do beseech You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking

And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord, 105
I am a simple woman, much too weak T' oppose your cunning. Y'are meek and humble-mouth'd ;

You sign your place and calling, in full seeming,

With meekness and humility ; but your
heart

Is cramm'd with arrogancy, spleen, and
pride. 110

You have, by fortune and his Highness'
favours,

Gone slightly o'er low steps, and now are mounted

Where pow'rs are your retainers, and your
words,

Domestics to you, serve your will as't please Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell
you 115

You tender more your person's honour
than

Your high profession spiritual ; that again
I do refuse you for my judge and here,

Before you all, appeal unto the Pope, 119
To bring my whole cause 'fore his Holiness
And to be judg'd by him. [She curtsies to the King, and offers to depart.

Cam.

The Queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by't ; 'tis not well.

She's going away.

King. Call her again. 125

Crier. Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.

Gent. Usher. Madam, you are call'd back.

Q. Kath. What need you note it ? Pray
you keep your way ;

When you are call'd, return. Now the Lord
help !

They vex me past my patience. Pray you pass on. 130

I will not tarry ; no, nor ever more Upon this business my appearance make In any of their courts. [Exeunt Queen and her Attendants.

King. Go thy ways, Kate.

That man i' th' world who shall report he has 134

A better wife, let him in nought be trusted
For speaking false in that. Thou art, alone—
If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness, Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like govern-
ment,

Obeying in commanding, and thy parts Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee
out— 140

The queen of earthly queens. She's noble
born ;

And like her true nobility she has Carried herself towards me.

Wol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your High-
ness

That it shall please you to declare in hearing 145

Of all these ears—for where I am robb'd and bound,

There must I be unloos'd, although not
there

At once and fully satisfied—whether ever I Did broach this business to your Highness, or 149

Laid any scruple in your way which might Induce you to the question on't, or ever

Have to you, but with thanks to God for such

A royal lady, spake one the least word that might 153

Be to the prejudice of her present state,
Or touch of her good person ?

King. My Lord Cardinal,
I do excuse you ; yea, upon mine honour,
I free you from't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies that know
not

Why they are so, but, like to village curs, Bark when their fellows do. By some of these 160

The Queen is put in anger. Y'are excus'd.
But will you be more justified ? You ever

Have wish'd the sleeping of this business ;
never desir'd

It to be stirr'd; but oft have hind'red, oft,
 The passages made toward it. On my
 honour, 165
 I speak my good Lord Cardinal to this point,
 And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to't,
 I will be bold with time and your attention.
 Then mark th' inducement. Thus it came—give heed to't:
 My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness, Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches
 utter'd 171
 By th' Bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador,
 Who had been hither sent on the debating
 A marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleans and Our daughter Mary. I' th' progress of this
 business, 175
 Ere a determinate resolution, he—
 I mean the Bishop—did require a respite Wherein he might the King his lord advertise
 Whether our daughter were legitimate, Respecting this our marriage with the dowager, 180
 Sometimes our brother's wife. This respite shook
 The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me, Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble
 The region of my breast, which forc'd such
 way 184
 That many maz'd considerings did throng
 And press'd in with this caution. First, methought
 I stood not in the smile of heaven, who had Commanded nature that my lady's womb,
 If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to't than 190
 The grave does to the dead; for her male issue
 Or died where they were made, or shortly after
 This world had air'd them. Hence I took a thought
 This was a judgment on me, that my kingdom,
 Well worthy the best heir o' th' world,
 should not 195
 Be gladdened in't by me. Then follows that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in
 By this my issue's fail, and that gave to me
 Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling in The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are 201
 Now present here together; that's to say
 I meant to rectify my conscience, which I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,
 By all the reverend fathers of the land 205 And doctors learn'd. First, I began in private

With you, my Lord of Lincoln; you remember
 How under my oppression I did reek,
 When I first mov'd you.
 Lin. Very well, my liege.
 King. I have spoke long; be pleas'd yourself to say 210
 How far you satisfied me.
 Lin. So please your Highness,
 The question did at first so stagger me—
 Bearing a state of mighty moment in't
 And consequence of dread—that I committed
 The daring'st counsel which I had to doubt,
 And did entreat your Highness to this
 course 216
 Which you are running here.
 King. I then mov'd you,
 My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leave
 To make this present summons. Unsolicited
 I left no reverend person in this court, 220
 But by particular consent proceeded Under your hands and seals; therefore,
 go on,
 For no dislike i' th' world against the
 person
 Of the good Queen, but the sharp thorny points 224
 Of my alleged reasons, drives this forward.
 Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life
 And kingly dignity, we are contented
 To wear our mortal state to come with her, Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
 That's paragon'd o' th' world.
 Cam. So please your Highness,
 The Queen being absent, 'tis a needful
 fitness 231
 That we adjourn this court till further day;
 Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
 Made to the Queen to call back her appeal
 She intends unto his Holiness.
 King [Aside] I may perceive 235
 These cardinals trifle with me. I abhor
 This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome.
 My learn'd and well-beloved servant,
 Cranmer,
 Prithee return. With thy approach I know My comfort comes along.—Break up the court; 240
 I say, set on.

[Exeunt in manner as they enter'd.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. London. The Queen's apartments.
 Enter the QUEEN and her Women, as at
 work.

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench. My soul grows sad with troubles; Sing and disperse 'em, if thou canst. Leave working.

SONG.

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing ;
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung, as sun and showers
There had made a lasting spring.

Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep or hearing die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now ?

Gent. An't please your Grace, the two great Cardinals

Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me ?

Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their Graces

To come near. [Exit Gentleman] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fall'n from
favour ?

I do not like their coming. Now I think on't,
They should be good men, their affairs as righteous ;

But all hoods make not monks.

Enter the two Cardinals, WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Wol. Peace to your Highness !

Q. Kath. Your Graces find me here part of a housewife ;

I would be all, against the worst may happen.

What are your pleasures with me, reverend
lords ?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw

Into your private chamber, we shall give
you

The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here ;
There's nothing I have done yet, o' my
conscience,

Deserves a corner. Would all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do !
My lords, I care not—so much I am happy
Above a number—if my actions
Were tried by ev'ry tongue, ev'ry eye saw
'em,

Envy and base opinion set against 'em,
I know my life so even. If your business Seek me out, and that way I am wife in,
Out with it boldly ; truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima—

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin !
I am not such a truant since my coming,

As not to know the language I have liv'd in ;
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious ;

Pray speak in English. Here are some will
thank you,

If you speak truth, for their poor mistress'
sake ;

Believe me, she has had much wrong. Lord
Cardinal,

The willing'st sin I ever yet committed
May be absolv'd in English.

Wol. Noble lady,

I am sorry my integrity should breed,
And service to his Majesty and you,
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.

We come not by the way of accusation
To taint that honour every good tongue blesses,

Nor to betray you any way to sorrow—
You have too much, good lady ; but to
know

How you stand minded in the weighty difference

Between the King and you, and to deliver,
Like free and honest men, our just opinions
And comforts to your cause.

Cam. Most honour'd madam,
My Lord of York, out of his noble nature,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your Grace, Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure

Both of his truth and him—which was too far—

Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace,
His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. [Aside] To betray me.—
My lords, I thank you both for your good wills ;

Ye speak like honest men—pray God ye prove so !

But how to make ye suddenly an answer,
In such a point of weight, so near mine
honour,

More near my life, I fear, with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning,

In truth I know not. I was set at work Among my maids, full little, God knows, looking

Either for such men or such business.
For her sake that I have been—for I feel
The last fit of my greatness—good your Graces,

Let me have time and counsel for my cause.
Alas, I am a woman, friendless, hopeless !

Wol. Madam, you wrong the King's love with these fears ;

Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England
But little for my profit ; can you think,
lords,

That any Englishman dare give me counsel ?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his Highness'
pleasure—

Though he be grown so desperate to be honest—⁸⁶

And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,

They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here;

They are, as all my other comforts, far hence,⁹⁰

In mine own country, lords.

Cam. I would your Grace
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath. How, sir?

Cam. Put your main cause into the King's protection;

He's loving and most gracious. 'Twill be much

Both for your honour better and your cause;⁹⁵

For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye

You'll part away disgrac'd.

Wol. He tells you rightly.

Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both—my ruin.

Is this your Christian counsel? Out upon ye!⁹⁹

Heaven is above all yet: there sits a Judge
That no king can corrupt.

Cam. Your rage mistakes us.

Q. Kath. The more shame for ye; holy men I thought ye,

Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;

But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear ye.

Mend 'em, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort?¹⁰⁵

The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady—
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?

I will not wish ye half my miseries:

I have more charity; but say I warn'd ye.
Take heed, for heaven's sake take heed, lest at once¹¹⁰

The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.

Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;
You turn the good we offer into envy.

Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing. Woe upon ye,

And all such false professors! Would you have me—¹¹⁵

If you have any justice, any pity,
If ye be any thing but churchmen's habits—
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?

Alas! has banish'd me his bed already,
His love too long ago! I am old, my lords,
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me above this wretchedness? All your studies

Make me a curse like this.

Cam. Your fears are worse.

Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long—let me speak myself,¹²⁵

Since virtue finds no friends—a wife, a true one?

A woman, I dare say without vain-glory,
Never yet branded with suspicion?

Have I with all my full affections Still met the King, lov'd him next heav'n, obey'd him,¹³⁰

Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him,
Almost forgot my prayers to content him,
And am I thus rewarded? 'Tis not well,
lords.

Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure,¹³⁵

And to that woman, when she has done most,

Yet will I add an honour—a great patience.

Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.

Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty,

To give up willingly that noble title¹⁴⁰
Your master wed me to: nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.

Wol. Pray hear me.

Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English earth,

Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts.¹⁴⁵

What will become of me now, wretched lady?

I am the most unhappy woman living.
[To her Women] Alas, poor wenches, where are now your fortunes?

Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity,

No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for me;¹⁵⁰

Almost no grave allow'd me. Like the lily,
That once was mistress of the field, and flourish'd,

I'll hang my head and perish.

Wol. If your Grace
Could but be brought to know our ends are honest,

You'd feel more comfort. Why should we, good lady,¹⁵⁵

Upon what cause, wrong you? Alas, our places,

The way of our profession is against it;
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em.

For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly¹⁶⁰

Grow from the King's acquaintance, by this carriage.

The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits

They swell and grow as terrible as storms.
I know you have a gentle, noble temper,¹⁶⁵

A soul as even as a calm. Pray think us

Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues
With these weak women's fears. A noble
spirit,

As yours was put into you, ever casts 170
Such doubts as false coin from it. The King loves you ;

Beware you lose it not. For us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost studies in your service.

Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords ; and pray forgive me 175

If I have us'd myself unmannerly ;
You know I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.
Pray do my service to his Majesty ;
He has my heart yet, and shall have my prayers 180

While I shall have my life. Come, reverend
fathers,

Bestow your counsels on me ; she now begs
That little thought, when she set footing
here,

She should have bought her dignities so
dear. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. The palace.

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints
And force them with a constancy, the Cardinal

Cannot stand under them : if you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise
But that you shall sustain moe new disgraces 5

With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful
To meet the least occasion that may give
me

Remembrance of my father-in-law, the Duke, 8

To be reveng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
Have uncontain'd gone by him, or at least Strangely neglected ? When did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person
Out of himself ?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures.

What he deserves of you and me I know ;
What we can do to him—though now the
time 15

Gives way to us—I much fear. If you cannot

Bar his access to th' King, never attempt Anything on him ; for he hath a witchcraft
Over the King in's tongue.

Nor. O, fear him not !

His spell in that is out ; the King hath found 20

Matter against him that for ever mars
The honey of his language. No, he's settled,

Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir,

I should be glad to hear such news as this Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true : 25

In the divorce his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded ; wherein he appears
As I would wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came

His practices to light ?

Suf. Most strangely

Sur. O, how, how ?

Suf. The Cardinal's letters to the Pope miscarried, 30

And came to th' eye o' th' King ; wherein was read

How that the Cardinal did entreat his Holiness

To stay the judgment o' th' divorce ; for if
It did take place, ' I do ' quoth he ' perceive
My king is tangled in affection to 35

A creature of the Queen's, Lady Anne Bullen'.

Sur. Has the King this ?

Suf. Believe it.

Sur. Will this work ?

Cham. The King in this perceives him how he coasts

And hedges his own way. But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic 40

After his patient's death : the King already Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. Would he had !

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my
lord !

For, I profess, you have it.

Sur. Now, all my joy Trace the conjunction !

Suf. My amen to't !

Nor. All men's ! 45

Suf. There's order given for her corona-
tion ;

Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left

To some ears unrecounted. But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete

In mind and feature. I persuade me from her 50

Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall

In it be memoriz'd.

Sur. But will the King Digest this letter of the Cardinal's ?

The Lord forbid !

Nor. Marry, amen !

Suf. No, no ;
There be moe wasps that buzz about his nose 55

Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeius
Is stol'n away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;

Has left the cause o' th' King unhandled, and Is posted, as the agent of our Cardinal, To second all his plot. I do assure you 66
The King cried 'Ha!' at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him,
And let him cry 'Ha!' louder!

Nor. But, my lord,
When returns Cranmer?

Suf. He is return'd, in his opinions;
which

Have satisfied the King for his divorce, 65
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom. Shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and
Her coronation. Katharine no more 69
Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager
And widow to Prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the King's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him
For it an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.
Suf. 'Tis so.

Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.

The Cardinal!

Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody.
Wol. The packet, Cromwell, 76
Gave't you the King?

Crom. To his own hand, in's bedchamber.
Wol. Look'd he o' th' inside of the paper?

Crom. Presently
He did unseal them; and the first he view'd,

He did it with a serious mind; a heed 80
Was in his countenance. You he bade Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready
To come abroad?

Crom. I think by this he is.
Wol. Leave me awhile. [Exit Cromwell.]

[Aside] It shall be to the Duchess of Alençon, 85

The French King's sister; he shall marry her.
Anne Bullen! No, I'll no Anne Bullens for
him;

There's more in't than fair visage. Bullen!
No, we'll no Bullens. Speedily I wish To hear from Rome. The Marchioness of Pembroke! 90

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be he hears the King
Does whet his anger to him.

Sur. Sharp enough,
Lord, for thy justice!

Wol. [Aside] The late Queen's gentlewoman, a knight's daughter,
To be her mistress' mistress! The Queen's
queen! 95

This candle burns not clear. 'Tis I must snuff it;

Then out it goes. What though I know her virtuous

And well deserving? Yet I know her for A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to

Our cause that she should lie i' th' bosom of Our hard-rul'd King. Again, there is sprung up 101

An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one Hath crawl'd into the favour of the King,
And is his oracle.

Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Enter the KING, reading of a schedule, and LOVELL.

Sur. I would 'twere something that would fret the string, 105

The master-cord on's heart!

Suf. The King, the King!

King. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated

To his own portion! And what expense by
th' hour

Seems to flow from him! How, i' th' name of thrift,

Does he rake this together?—Now, my
lords, 110

Saw you the Cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have Stood here observing him. Some strange commotion

Is in his brain: he bites his lip and starts,
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then lays his finger on his temple; straight Springs out into fast gait; then stops again,
Strikes his breast hard; and anon he casts His eye against the moon. In most strange postures 118

We have seen him set himself.

King. It may well be
There is a mutiny in's mind. This morning

Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd; and wot you what I found
There—on my conscience, put unwittingly?
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing 124

The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household;
which

I find at such proud rate that it outspeaks Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will;
Some spirit put this paper in the packet

To bless your eye withal.

King. If we did think 130

His contemplation were above the earth
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings; but I am afraid
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth

His serious considering.

[*The King takes his seat and whispers
Lovell, who goes to the Cardinal.*]

Wol. Heaven forgive me ! 135
 Ever God bless your Highness !
King. Good, my lord,
 You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory
 Of your best graces in your mind ; the
 which You were now running o'er. You have scarce time 139
 To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span
 To keep your earthly audit ; sure, in that I deem you an ill husband, and am glad
 To have you therein my companion.
Wol. Sir,
 For holy offices I have a time ; a time 144
 To think upon the part of business which I bear i' th' state ; and nature does require
 Her times of preservation, which perforce
 I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
 Must give my tendance to.
King. You have said well.
Wol. And ever may your Highness yoke
 together, 150
 As I will lend you cause, my doing well
 With my well saying !
King. 'Tis well said again ;
 And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well ;
 And yet words are no deeds. My father
 lov'd you :
 He said he did ; and with his deed did
 crown 155
 His word upon you. Since I had my office
 I have kept you next my heart ; have not alone
 Employ'd you where high profits might come home,
 But par'd my present havings to bestow
 My bounties upon you.
Wol. [Aside] What should this mean ? 160
Sur. [Aside] The Lord increase this
 business !
King. Have I not made you
 The prime man of the state ? I pray you tell me
 If what I now pronounce you have found
 true ;
 And, if you may confess it, say withal
 If you are bound to us or no. What say
 you ? 165
Wol. My sovereign, I confess your royal
 graces,
 Show'r'd on me daily, have been more than could
 My studied purposes requite ; which went Beyond all man's endeavours. My endeavours,
 Have ever come too short of my desires, 170
 Yet fil'd with my abilities ; mine own ends Have been mine so that evermore they pointed
 To th' good of your most sacred person and The profit of the state. For your great graces

Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I 175
 Can nothing render but allegiant thanks ;
 My pray'rs to heaven for you ; my loyalty,
 Which ever has and ever shall be growing,
 Till death, that winter, kill it.
King. Fairly answer'd !
 A loyal and obedient subject is 180
 Therein illustrated ; the honour of it Does pay the act of it, as, i' th' contrary,
 The foulness is the punishment. I presume
 That, as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
 My heart dropp'd love, my pow'r rain'd honour, more 185
 On you than any, so your hand and heart,
 Your brain, and every function of your
 power,
 Should, notwithstanding that your bond of
 duty,
 As 'twere in love's particular, be more
 To me, your friend, than any.
Wol. I do profess 190
 That for your Highness' good I ever labour'd
 More than mine own ; that am, have, and will be—Though all the world should crack their duty to you,
 And throw it from their soul ; though perils did Abound as thick as thought could make
 'em, and 195
 Appear in forms more horrid—yet my duty.
 As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
 Should the approach of this wild river
 break,
 And stand unshaken yours.
King. 'Tis nobly spoken.
 Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast, 200
 For you have seen him open 't. Read o'er this ; [Giving him papers.
 And after, this ; and then to breakfast
 with
 What appetite you have. [Exit the King, frowning upon the Cardinal ; the Nobles throng after him, smiling and whispering.
Wol. What should this mean ?
 What sudden anger's this ? How have I reap'd it ?
 He parted frowning from me, as if ruin 205
 Leap'd from his eyes ; so looks the chafed
 lion
 Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd
 him—
 Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper ;
 I fear, the story of his anger. 'Tis so ;
 This paper has undone me. 'Tis th'
 account 210
 Of all that world of wealth I have drawn
 together
 For mine own ends ; indeed, to gain the popedom,
 And fee my friends in Rome. O negligence,

Fit for a fool to fall by ! What cross devil
Made me put this main secret in the packet
I sent the King ? Is there no way to cure
this ? 216

No new device to beat this from his brains ?
I know 'twill stir him strongly ; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune, Will bring me off again. What's this ? ' To th' Pope.' 220

The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to's Holiness. Nay then, farewell !
I have touch'd the highest point of all my
greatness,

And from that full meridian of my glory
I haste now to my setting. I shall fall 225
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.

Re-enter to Wolsey the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the King's pleasure, Cardinal, who commands you

To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands, and to confine yourself 230
To Asher House, my Lord of Winchester's,
Till you hear further from his Highness.

Wol. Stay :
Where's your commission, lords ? Words cannot carry Authority so weighty.

Suf. Who dare cross 'em, Bearing the King's will from his mouth
expressly ? 235

Wol. Till I find more than will or words to do it—

I mean your malice—know, officious lords,
I dare and must deny it. Now I feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded—envy ;

How eagerly ye follow my disgraces, 240
As if it fed ye ; and how sleek and wanton Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin !

Follow your envious courses, men of malice ;
You have Christian warrant for 'em, and no doubt 244

In time will find their fit rewards. That seal
You ask with such a violence, the King—
Mine and your master—with his own hand gave me ;

Bade me enjoy it, with the place and
honours,

During my life ; and, to confirm his good-
ness,

Tied it by letters-patents. Now, who'll take
it ? 250

Sur. The King, that gave it.

Wol. It must be himself then.

Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Wol. Proud lord, thou liest.

Within these forty hours Surrey durst
better

Have burnt that tongue than said so.

Sur. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law.
The heads of all thy brother cardinals, 257
With thee and all thy best parts bound
together,

Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy !

You sent me deputy for Ireland ; 260 Far from his succour, from the King, from
all

That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st him ;

Whilst your great goodness, out of holy
pity,

Absolv'd him with an axe.

Wol. This, and all else 264
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer is most false. The Duke by law Found his deserts ; how innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell
you 270

You have as little honesty as honour,
That in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the King, my ever royal master, Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can
be

And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul, 275
Your long coat, priest, protects you ; thou shouldst feel

My sword i' th' life-blood of thee else. My
lords,

Can ye endure to hear this arrogance ?
And from this fellow ? If we live thus tamely,

To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet, 280 Farewell nobility ! Let his Grace go forward

And dare us with his cap like larks.

Wol. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, Cardinal, by extortion ; 285

The goodness of your intercepted packets
You writ to th' Pope against the King ;
your goodness,

Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.

My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble,
As you respect the common good, the
state

Of our despis'd nobility, our issues, 291
Whom, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen—

Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles

Collected from his life. I'll startle you Worse than the sacring bell, when the brown wench 295

Lay kissing in your arms, Lord Cardinal.

Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise this man,
 But that I am bound in charity against it !
Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the King's hand ;
 But, thus much, they are foul ones.
Wol. So much fairer ³⁰⁰
 And spotless shall mine innocence arise,
 When the King knows my truth.
Sur. This cannot save you.
 I thank my memory I yet remember
 Some of these articles ; and out they shall.
 Now, if you can blush and cry guilty,
Cardinal, ³⁰⁵
 You'll show a little honesty.
Wol. Speak on, sir ;
 I dare your worst objections. If I blush,
 It is to see a nobleman want manners.
Sur. I had rather want those than my head. Have at you !
 First, that without the King's assent or knowledge ³¹⁰
 You wrought to be a legate ; by which power
 You maim'd the jurisdiction of all bishops.
Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else
 To foreign princes, 'Ego et Rex meus' Was still inscrib'd ; in which you brought the King ³¹⁵
 To be your servant.
Suf. Then, that without the knowledge Either of King or Council, when you went Ambassador to the Emperor, you made bold
 To carry into Flanders the great seal. ³¹⁹
Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
 To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude, Without the King's will or the state's allowance,
 A league between his Highness and Ferrara.
Suf. That out of mere ambition you have caus'd
 Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the King's coin. ³²⁵
Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,
 By what means got I leave to your own
 conscience,
 To furnish Rome and to prepare the ways ³²⁸
 You have for dignities, to the mere undoing
 Of all the kingdom. Many more there are,
 Which, since they are of you, and odious,
 I will not taint my mouth with.
Cham. O my lord,
 Press not a falling man too far ! 'Tis virtue.
 His faults lie open to the laws ; let them,
 Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him ³³⁵
 So little of his great self.
Sur. I forgive him.
Suf. Lord Cardinal, the King's further pleasure is—

Because all those things you have done of late,
 By your power legatine within this
 kingdom,
 Fall into th' compass of a præmunire— ³⁴⁰
 That therefore such a writ be sued against
 you :
 To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements, Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be Out of the King's protection. This is my charge.
Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations ³⁴⁵
 How to live better. For your stubborn
 answer
 About the giving back the great seal to us,
 The King shall know it, and, no doubt,
 shall thank you.
 So fare you well, my little good Lord
 Cardinal. [Exeunt all but Wolsey.] Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear me. ³⁵⁰
 Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness !
 This is the state of man : to-day he puts
 forth
 The tender leaves of hopes ; to-morrow blossoms
 And bears his blushing honours thick upon him ; ³⁵⁴
 The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,
 And when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
 His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
 And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd, Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
 This many summers in a sea of glory ; ³⁶⁰
 But far beyond my depth. My high-blown
 pride
 At length broke under me, and now has left me,
 Weary and old with service, to the mercy
 Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide
 me.
 Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye ; ³⁶⁵
 I feel my heart new open'd. O, how wretched
 Is that poor man that hangs on princes'
 favours !
 There is betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
 That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin
 More pangs and fears than wars or women have ; ³⁷⁰
 And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
 Never to hope again.
Enter CROMWELL, standing amazed.
 Why, how now, Cromwell !
Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.
Wol. What, amaz'd
 At my misfortunes ? Can thy spirit wonder

A great man should decline ? Nay, an you weep, 375

I am fall'n indeed.

Crom. How does your Grace ?

Wol. Why, well ;

Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.

I know myself now, and I feel within me

A peace above all earthly dignities,

A still and quiet conscience. The King has cur'd me, 380

I humbly thank his Grace ; and from these shoulders,

These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken

A load would sink a navy—too much honour.

O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden

Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven !

Crom. I am glad your Grace has made that right use of it. 386

Wol. I hope I have. I am able now, methinks,

Out of a fortitude of soul I feel,

To endure more miseries and greater far

Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.

What news abroad ?

Crom. The heaviest and the worst Is your displeasure with the King.

Wol. God bless him !

Crom. The next is that Sir Thomas More is chosen 393

Lord Chancellor in your place.

Wol. That's somewhat sudden.

But he's a learned man. May he continue

Long in his Highness' favour, and do justice

For truth's sake and his conscience ; that his bones,

When he has run his course and sleeps in blessings,

May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on him !

What more ?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome, 400

Install'd Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.

Wol. That's news indeed.

Crom. Last, that the Lady Anne,

Whom the King hath in secrecy long married,

This day was view'd in open as his queen,

Going to chapel ; and the voice is now 405

Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down. O Cromwell,

The King has gone beyond me. All my glories

In that one woman I have lost for ever.

No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours,

Or gild again the noble troops that waited

Upon my smiles. Go get thee from me, Cromwell ;

I am a poor fall'n man, unworthy now

To be thy lord and master. Seek the King ;

That sun, I pray, may never set ! I have told him 415

What and how true thou art. He will advance thee ;

Some little memory of me will stir him—

I know his noble nature—not to let

Thy hopeful service perish too. Good Cromwell,

Neglect him not ; make use now, and provide 420

For thine own future safety.

Crom. O my lord,

Must I then leave you ? Must I needs forgo

So good, so noble, and so true a master ?

Bear witness, all that have not hearts of iron,

With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord. 425

The King shall have my service ; but my prayers

For ever and for ever shall be yours.

Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear

In all my miseries ; but thou hast forc'd me, Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.

Let's dry our eyes ; and thus far hear me, Cromwell, 431

And when I am forgotten, as I shall be, And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention

Of me more must be heard of, say I taught thee—

Say Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory, 435

And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour,

Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in—

A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it.

Mark but my fall and that that ruin'd me. Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away

ambition : 440

By that sin fell the angels. How can man then,

The image of his Maker, hope to win by it ? Love thyself last ; cherish those hearts that hate thee ;

Corruption wins not more than honesty.

Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not ; 446

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,

Thy God's, and truth's ; then, if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,

Thou fall'st a blessed martyr !

Serve the King, and—prithee lead me in. 450

There take an inventory of all I have

To the last penny ; 'tis the King's. My robe,

And my integrity to heaven, is all

I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell ! 451

Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal

I serv'd my King, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.

Crom. Good sir, have patience.

Wol. So I have. Farewell

The hopes of court ! My hopes in heaven do dwell. [Exeunt.

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. A street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting one another.

1 Gent. Y'are well met once again.

2 Gent. So are you.

1 Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold

The Lady Anne pass from her coronation ?

2 Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter

The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial.

1 Gent. 'Tis very true. But that time
offer'd sorrow ;

This, general joy.

2 Gent. 'Tis well. The citizens,

I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds—

As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward—

In celebration of this day with shows, 10
Pageants, and sights of honour.

1 Gent. Never greater,

Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.

2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains,

That paper in your hand ?

1 Gent. Yes ; 'tis the list

Of those that claim their offices this day, 15
By custom of the coronation.

The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims To be High Steward ; next, the Duke of Norfolk,

He to be Earl Marshal. You may read the rest.

2 Gent. I thank you, sir ; had I not known those customs, 20

I should have been beholding to your paper.

But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,

The Princess Dowager ? How goes her
business ?

1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The Archbishop

Of Canterbury, accompanied with other 25
Learned and reverend fathers of his order,

Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off
From Ampthill, where the Princess lay ;

to which

She was often cited by them, but appear'd
not.

And, to be short, for not appearance and 30
The King's late scruple, by the main assent

Of all these learned men, she was divorc'd,
And the late marriage made of none effect ;

Since which she was removed to Kimbolton,
Where she remains now sick.

2 Gent. Alas, good lady ! 35

[Trumpets.

The trumpets sound. Stand close, the Queen is coming. [Hautboys.

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION.

1. A lively flourish of trumpets.

2. Then two Judges.

3. Lord Chancellor, with purse and mace before him.

4. Choristers singing. [Music.

5. Mayor of London, bearing the mace.

Then Gauger, in his coat of arms, and on his head he wore a gilt copper crown.

6. MARQUIS DORSET, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demi-coronal of gold. With him, the EARL OF SURREY, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of Esses.

7. DUKE OF SUFFOLK, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as High Steward.
With him, the DUKE OF NORFOLK, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of Esses.

8. A canopy borne by four of the CINQUE-PORTS ; under it the QUEEN in her robe ; in her hair richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.

9. The old DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.

10. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

[Exeunt, first passing over the stage in order and state, and then a great flourish of trumpets.

2 Gent. A royal train, believe me. These
I know.

Who's that that bears the sceptre ?

1 Gent. Marquis Dorset ;

And that the Earl of Surrey, with the rod.

2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That should be

The Duke of Suffolk ?

1 Gent. 'Tis the same—High Steward. 45

2 Gent. And that my Lord of Norfolk ?

1 Gent. Yes.

2 Gent. [Looking on the Queen] Heaven bless thee !

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd
on.

Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel ;
Our king has all the Indies in his arms, 45

And more and richer, when he strains that
lady ;

I cannot blame his conscience.

1 Gent. They that bear
The cloth of honour over her are four barons
Of the Cinque-ports.

2 Gent. Those men are happy ; and so are all are near her. 50

I take it she that carries up the train
Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk.

1 Gent. It is ; and all the rest are countesses.

2 Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars indeed,
And sometimes falling ones.

1 Gent. No more of that. 55
[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of trumpets.

Enter a third Gentleman.

God save you, sir ! Where have you been broiling ?

3 Gent. Among the crowd i' th' Abbey, where a finger
Could not be wedg'd in more ; I am stifled
With the mere rankness of their joy.

2 Gent. You saw
The ceremony ?

3 Gent. That I did.

1 Gent. How was it ? 60

3 Gent. Well worth the seeing.

2 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.

3 Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream

Of lords and ladies, having brought the Queen

To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off
A distance from her, while her Grace sat
down 65

To rest awhile, some half an hour or so,
In a rich chair of state, opposing freely
The beauty of her person to the people.
Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman That ever lay by man ; which when the
people 70

Had the full view of, such a noise arose
As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest,

As loud, and to as many tunes ; hats,
cloaks—

Doublets, I think—flew up, and had their faces

Been loose, this day they had been lost.
Such joy 75

I never saw before. Great-bellied women,
That had not half a week to go, like rams

In the old time of war, would shake the press,

And make 'em reel before 'em. No man living

Could say ' This is my wife ' there, all were woven 80

So strangely in one piece.

2 Gent. But what follow'd ?

3 Gent. At length her Grace rose, and with modest paces

Came to the altar, where she kneel'd, and saintlike

Cast her fair eyes to heaven, and pray'd devoutly.

Then rose again, and bow'd her to the
people ; 85

When by the Archbishop of Canterbury
She had all the royal makings of a
queen :

As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,
The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems

Laid nobly on her ; which perform'd, the choir, 90

With all the choicest music of the kingdom,
Together sung ' Te Deum '. So she parted,
And with the same full state pac'd back
again

To York Place, where the feast is held.

1 Gent. Sir,
You must no more call it York Place :
that's past ; 95

For since the Cardinal fell that title's lost.
'Tis now the King's, and call'd Whitehall.

3 Gent. I know it ;
But 'tis so lately alter'd that the old name
Is fresh about me.

2 Gent. What two reverend bishops Were those that went on each side of the
Queen ? 100

3 Gent. Stokesly and Gardiner : the one of Winchester,
Newly prefer'd from the King's secretary ;
The other, London.

2 Gent. He of Winchester
Is held no great good lover of the Archbishop's,

The virtuous Cranmer.

3 Gent. All the land knows that ; 105
However, yet there is no great breach.
When it comes,

Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink
from him.

2 Gent. Who may that be, I pray you ?

3 Gent. Thomas Cromwell,
A man in much esteem with th' King, and truly

A worthy friend. The King has made him
Master 110

O' th' Jewel House,

And one, already, of the Privy Council.

2 Gent. He will deserve more.

3 Gent. Yes, without all doubt.
Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way,
which

Is to th' court, and there ye shall be my guests :

Something I can command. As I walk thither, 115

I'll tell ye more.

Both. You may command us, sir.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Kimbolton.

Enter KATHARINE, Dowager, sick ; led between GRIFFITH, her Gentleman Usher, and PATIENCE, her woman.

Grif. How does your Grace ?

Kath. O Griffith, sick to death !
My legs like loaden branches bow to th'
earth,
Willing to leave their burden. Reach a chair.

So—now, methinks, I feel a little ease.
Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st me,
That the great child of honour, Cardinal Wolsey,
Was dead ?

Grif. Yes, madam ; but I think your
Grace,
Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear
to't.

Kath. Prithee, good Griffith, tell me how he died.

If well, he stepp'd before me, happily, 10
For my example.

Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam ;
For after the stout Earl Northumberland Arrested him at York and brought him
forward,

As a man sorely tainted, to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill 15
He could not sit his mule.

Kath. Alas, poor man !

Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester, Lodg'd in the abbey ; where the reverend abbot,

With all his covent, honourably receiv'd
him ;

To whom he gave these words : ' O father
Abbot, 20
An old man, broken with the storms of
state,

Is come to lay his weary bones among ye ;
Give him a little earth for charity ! '

So went to bed ; where eagerly his sickness Pursu'd him still. And three nights after
this, 25

About the hour of eight—which he himself
Foretold should be his last—full of repentance,

Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in
peace. 30

Kath. So may he rest ; his faults lie gently on him !

Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak him,

And yet with charity. He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking Himself with princes ; one that, by suggestion, 35

Tied all the kingdom. Simony was fair play ;

His own opinion was his law. I' th' presence
He would say untruths, and be ever double Both in his words and meaning. He was never,

But where he meant to ruin, pitiful. 40
His promises were, as he then was, mighty ;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass : their virtues 45

We write in water. May it please your Highness

To hear me speak his good now ?

Kath. Yes, good Griffith ;
I were malicious else.

Grif. This Cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle. 50

He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one ;
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuad-
ing ;

Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not,
But to those men that sought him sweet as summer. 54

And though he were unsatisfied in getting—
Which was a sin—yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely : ever witness for him
Those twins of learning that he rais'd in
you,

Ipswich and Oxford ! One of which fell
with him, 59

Unwilling to outlive the good that did it ;
The other, though unfinish'd, yet so famous,

So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.

His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him ;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little. 66

And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,

No other speaker of my living actions, 70
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made
me,

With thy religious truth and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour. Peace be with
him ! 75

Patience, be near me still, and set me lower :

I have not long to trouble thee. Good
Griffith,

Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating

On that celestial harmony I go to. 80
[Sad and solemn music.]
 Grif. She is asleep. Good wench, let's sit down quiet,
 For fear we wake her. Softly, gentle Patience.

THE VISION.

Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden vizards on their faces; branches of bays or palm in their hands. They first congee unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head, a which the other four make reverent cur ses. Then the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head; which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order; at which, as it were by inspiration, she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven. And so in their dancing vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye?
 Are ye all gone?
 And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for.
 Saw ye none enter since I slept?

Grif. None, madam. 86

Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop
 Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces
 Cast thousand beams upon me, like the
 sun?

They promis'd me eternal happiness, 90
 And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel

I am not worthy yet to wear. I shall, assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams
 Possess your fancy.

Kath. Bid the music leave,
 They are harsh and heavy to me.

[Music ceases.]

Pat. Do you note 95
 How much her Grace is alter'd on the sudden?

How long her face is drawn! How pale she looks,

And of an earthy cold! Mark her eyes.

Grif. She is going, wench. Pray, pray.

Pat. Heaven comfort her!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your Grace—

Kath. You are a saucy fellow.
 Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to blame, 101
 Knowing she will not lose her wonted
 greatness,

To use so rude behaviour. Go to, kneel.

Mess. I humbly do entreat your Highness' pardon;

My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying 105

A gentleman, sent from the King, to see
 you.

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith; but this fellow

Let me ne'er see again. [Exit Messenger.]

Enter LORD CAPUCIUS.

If my sight fail not,
 You should be Lord Ambassador from the
 Emperor, 109

My royal nephew, and your name Capucius.

Cap. Madam, the same—your servant.

Kath. O, my Lord,
 The times and titles now are alter'd
 strangely

With me since first you knew me. But, I pray you,

What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble lady,
 First, mine own service to your Grace; the
 next, 115

The King's request that I would visit
 you,

Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me

Sends you his princely commendations
 And heartily entreats you take good comfort.

Kath. O my good lord, that comfort comes too late,

'Tis like a pardon after execution: 121
 That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd
 me;

But now I am past all comforts here, but prayers.

How does his Highness?

Cap. Madam, in good health.

Kath. So may he ever do! and ever
 flourish 125

When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor name

Banish'd the kingdom! Patience, is that letter

I caus'd you write yet sent away?

Pat. No, madam.

[Giving it to Katharine.]

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver

This to my lord the King.

Cap. Most willing, madam. 130

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness

The model of our chaste loves, his young
 daughter—

The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her!—

Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding—

She is young, and of a noble modest nature;
I hope she will deserve well—and a little To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd
him,

Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition

Is that his noble Grace would have some pity

Upon my wretched women that so long
Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully;
Of which there is not one, I dare avow—
And now I should not lie—but will deserve,

For virtue and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty and decent carriage,
A right good husband, let him be a noble;
And sure those men are happy that shall have 'em.

The last is for my men—they are the poorest,

But poverty could never draw 'em from
me—

That they may have their wages duly paid
'em,

And something over to remember me by.
If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life

And able means, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole contents; and, good
my lord,

By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish Christian peace to souls departed,

Stand these poor people's friend, and urge
the King

To do me this last right.

Cap. By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man!

Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember me

In all humility unto his Highness;
Say his long trouble now is passing Out of this world. Tell him in death I bless'd him,

For so I will. Mine eyes grow dim. Fare-
well,

My lord. Griffith, farewell. Nay, Patience, You must not leave me yet. I must to
bed;

Call in more women. When I am dead,
good wench,

Let me be us'd with honour; strew me over
With maiden flowers, that all the world may know

I was a chaste wife to my grave. Embalm
me,

Then lay me forth; although unqueen'd,
yet like

A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.
I can no more. [Exeunt, leading Katharine.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. London. A gallery in the palace.

Enter GARDINER, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, a Page with a torch before him, met by SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Boy. It hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights; times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir Thomas!

Whither so late?

Lov. Came you from the King, my lord?

Gar. I did, Sir Thomas, and left him at primero

With the Duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too,

Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.

Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's
the matter?

It seems you are in haste. An if there be No great offence belongs to't, give your friend

Some touch of your late business. Affairs that walk—

As they say spirits do—at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature than the business
That seeks despatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you;

And durst commend a secret to your ear Much weightier than this work. The Queen's in labour,

They say in great extremity, and fear'd
She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with
I pray for heartily, that it may find Good time, and live; but for the stock, Sir
Thomas,

I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks I could Cry thee amen; and yet my conscience

says
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir—
Hear me, Sir Thomas. Y'are a gentleman
Of mine own way; I know you wise, religious;

And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well—
'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take't of
me—

Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,

Sleep in their graves.

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd i' th' kingdom. As for Cromwell,

Beside that of the Jewel House, is made
Master

O' th' Rolls, and the King's secretary;
further, sir,

Stands in the gap and trade of moe preferments,
With which the time will load him. Th' Archbishop
Is the King's hand and tongue, and who dare speak
One syllable against him ?
Gar. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas, There are that dare ; and I myself have ventur'd 40
To speak my mind of him ; and indeed this day, Sir—I may tell it you—I think I have Incens'd the lords o' th' Council, that he is—
For so I know he is, they know he is—A most arch heretic, a pestilence 45
That does infect the land ; with which they moved
Have broken with the King, who hath so far Given ear to our complaint—of his great grace
And princely care, foreseeing those fell mischiefs
Our reasons laid before him—hath commanded 50
To-morrow morning to the Council board He be convented. He's a rank weed, Sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long—good night, Sir Thomas. 54
Lov. Many good nights, my lord ; I rest your servant.
[Exeunt Gardiner and Page.
Enter the KING and the DUKE OF SUFFOLK.
King. Charles, I will play no more to-night ;
My mind's not on't ; you are too hard for me.
Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before.
King. But little, Charles ;
Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play.
Now, Lovell, from the Queen what is the news ? 61
Lov. I could not personally deliver to her What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message ; who return'd her thanks
In the great'st humbleness, and desir'd your Highness
Most heartily to pray for her.
King. What say'st thou, ha ? 66
To pray for her ? What, is she crying out ?
Lov. So said her woman ; and that her suff'rance made Almost each pang a death.
King. Alas, good lady !
Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and 70

With gentle travail, to the gladding of Your Highness with an heir !
King. 'Tis midnight, Charles ; Prithee to bed ; and in thy pray'rs remember .
Th' estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone,
For I must think of that which company 75
Will not be friendly to.
Suf. I wish your Highness A quiet night, and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.
King. Charles, good night. [Exit Suffolk.
Enter SIR ANTHONY DENNY.
Well, sir, what follows ?
Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the Archbishop, 80
As you commanded me.
King. Ha ! Canterbury ?
Den. Ay, my good lord.
King. 'Tis true. Where is he, Denny ?
Den. He attends your Highness' pleasure.
King. Bring him to us. [Exit Denny.
Lov. [Aside] This is about that which the bishop spake.
I am happily come hither. 85
Re-enter DENNY, with CRANMER.
King. Avoid the gallery.
[Lovell seems to stay.
Ha ! I have said. Be gone. [Exeunt Lovell and Denny.
Cran. [Aside] I am fearful—wherefore frowns he thus ?
'Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well.
King. How now, my lord ? You do desire to know
Wherefore I sent for you.
Cran. [Kneeling] It is my duty 90
T' attend your Highness' pleasure.
King. Pray you, arise, My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury. Come, you and I must walk a turn together ; I have news to tell you ; come, come, give me your hand. 94
Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak, And am right sorry to repeat what follows. I have, and most unwillingly, of late Heard many grievous—I do say, my lord, Grievous—complaints of you ; which, being consider'd,
Have mov'd us and our Council that you shall 100
This morning come before us ; where I know
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself
But that, till further trial in those charges Which will require your answer, you must take 104
Your patience to you and be well contented

To make your house our Tow'r. You a brother of us,

It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thank your Highness,
And am right glad to catch this good occasion

Most thoroughly to be winnowed where my chaff 110

And corn shall fly asunder; for I know
There's none stands under more calumnious tongues

Than I myself, poor man.

King. Stand up, good Canterbury;
Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted
In us, thy friend. Give me thy hand, stand up; 115

Prithee let's walk. Now, by my holidame,
What manner of man are you? My lord,
I look'd

You would have given me your petition
that

I should have ta'en some pains to bring
together

Yourself and your accusers, and to have heard you 120

Without indurance further.

Cran. Most dread liege,
The good I stand on is my truth and honesty;

If they shall fail, I with mine enemies Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh not,

Being of those virtues vacant. I fear
nothing 125

What can be said against me.

King. Know you not How your state stands i' th' world, with the whole world?

Your enemies are many, and not small;
their practices

Must bear the same proportion; and not ever

The justice and the truth o' th' question carries 130

The due o' th' verdict with it; at what ease Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt

To swear against you? Such things have been done.

You are potently oppos'd, and with a malice 134

Of as great size. Ween you of better luck,
I mean in perjur'd witness, than your
Master,

Whose minister you are, whiles here He liv'd

Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to;
You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
And woo your own destruction.

Cran. God and your Majesty
Protect mine innocence, or I fall into 141
The trap is laid for me!

King. Be of good cheer;

They shall no more prevail than we give way to.

Keep comfort to you, and this morning see You do appear before them; if they shall chance, 145

In charging you with matters, to commit
you,

The best persuasions to the contrary
Fail not to use, and with what vehemency
Th' occasion shall instruct you. If entreaties

Will render you no remedy, this ring 150
Deliver them, and your appeal to us

There make before them. Look, the good man weeps!

He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest
Mother!

I swear he is true-hearted, and a soul 154
None better in my kingdom. Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. [Exit Cranmer.
He has strangled his language in his tears.

Enter Old Lady.

Gent. [Within] Come back; what mean
you?

Old L. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring

Will make my boldness manners. Now, good angels

Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy
person 160

Under their blessed wings!

King. Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message. Is the Queen deliver'd?

Say ay, and of a boy.

Old L. Ay, ay, my liege;
And of a lovely boy. The God of Heaven
Both now and ever bless her! 'Tis a girl, Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be 167
Acquainted with this stranger; 'tis as like you
As cherry is to cherry.

King. Lovell!

Enter LOVELL.

Lov. Sir?

King. Give her an hundred marks. I'll to the Queen. [Exit.

Old L. An hundred marks? By this light,
I'll ha' more! 171

An ordinary groom is for such payment.
I will have more, or scold it out of him.
Said I for this the girl was like to him? I'll Have more, or else unsay't; and now, while
'tis hot,

I'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Lobby before the Council Chamber.

Enter CRANMER, ARCHBISHOP OF CANTER-BURY.

Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman

That was sent to me from the Council
 pray'd me
To make great haste. All fast? What means this? Ho!
Who waits there? Sure you know me?

Enter Keeper.

Keep. Yes, my lord;
But yet I cannot help you.
Cran. Why?
Keep. Your Grace must wait till you be call'd for.

Enter DOCTOR BUTTS.

Cran. So.
Butts. [Aside] This is a piece of malice.
 I am glad
I came this way so happily; the King
Shall understand it presently. [Exit.
Cran [Aside] 'Tis Butts,
The King's physician; as he pass'd along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me!
Pray heaven he sound not my disgrace!
 For certain,
This is of purpose laid by some that hate
 me—
God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice—
To quench mine honour; they would shame to make me
Wait else at door, a fellow councillor,
'Mong boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their
 pleasures
Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.
Enter the KING and BUTTS at a window above.

Butts. I'll show your Grace the strangest
 sight—
King. What's that, Butts?
Butts. I think your Highness saw this many a day.
King. Body a me, where is it?
Butts. There my lord:
The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury;
Who holds his state at door, 'mongst
 pursuivants,
Pages, and footboys.
King. Ha, 'tis he indeed.
Is this the honour they do one another?
'Tis well there's one above 'em yet. I had thought
They had parted so much honesty among
 'em—
At least good manners—as not thus to suffer
A man of his place, and so near our
 favour,
To dance attendance on their lordships'
 pleasures,
And at the door too, like a post with packets.
By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery!

Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close;
We shall hear more anon. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The Council Chamber.

A Council table brought in, with chairs and stools, and placed under the state. Enter Lord Chancellor, places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand, a seat being left void above him, as for Canterbury's seat. DUKE OF SUFFOLK,
DUKE OF NORFOLK, SURREY, LORD
CHAMBERLAIN, GARDINER, seat themselves in order on each side; CROMWELL at lower end, as secretary. Keeper at the door.
Chan. Speak to the business, master
 secretary;
Why are we met in council?
Crom. Please your honours,
The chief cause concerns his Grace of Canterbury.
Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?
Crom. Yes.
Nor. Who waits there?
Keep. Without, my noble lords?
Gar. Yes.
Keep. My Lord Archbishop;
And has done half an hour, to know your pleasures.
Chan. Let him come in.
Keep. Your Grace may enter now.
CRANMER approaches the Council table.
Chan. My good Lord Archbishop, I am very sorry
To sit here at this present, and behold
That chair stand empty; but we all are
 men,
In our own natures frail and capable Of our flesh; few are angels; out of which frailty
And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,
Have misdemean'd yourself, and not a little,
Toward the King first, then his laws, in filling
The whole realm by your teaching and your chaplains—
For so we are inform'd—with new opinions,
Divers and dangerous; which are heresies,
And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.
Gar. Which reformation must be sudden
 too,
My noble lords; for those that tame wild horses
Pace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle,
But stop their mouths with stubborn bits and spur 'em
Till they obey the manage. If we suffer,
Out of our easiness and childish pity
To one man's honour, this contagious sickness,

Farewell all physic; and what follows then?

Commotions, uproars, with a general taint
Of the whole state; as of late days our neighbours,

The upper Germany, can dearly witness, 30
Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto in all the progress

Both of my life and office, I have labour'd,
And with no little study, that my teaching
And the strong course of my authority 35
Might go one way, and safely; and the end
Was ever to do well. Nor is there living—
I speak it with a single heart, my lords—
A man that more detests, more stirs against, Both in his private conscience and his
place, 40

Defacers of a public peace than I do.

Pray heaven the King may never find a
heart

With less allegiance in it! Men that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships 45

That, in this case of justice, my accusers,
Be what they will, may stand forth face to
face

And freely urge against me.

Suf. Nay, my lord,
That cannot be; you are a counsellor, 49
And by that virtue no man dare accuse you.

Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,
We will be short with you. 'Tis his Highness' pleasure

And our consent, for better trial of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower;

Where, being but a private man again, 55
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,

More than, I fear, you are provided for.

Cran. Ah, my good Lord of Winchester,
I thank you;

You are always my good friend; if your will pass,

I shall both find your lordship judge and juror, 60

You are so merciful. I see your end—

'Tis my undoing. Love and meekness, lord,
Become a churchman better than ambition;
Win straying souls with modesty again,
Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
I make as little doubt as you do conscience
In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,
But reverence to your calling makes me modest. 69

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary; That's the plain truth. Your painted gloss discovers,
To men that understand you, words and weakness.

Crom. My Lord of Winchester, y'are a little,

By your good favour, too sharp; men so
noble,

However faulty, yet should find respect 75
For what they have been; 'tis a cruelty
To load a falling man.

Gar. Good Master Secretary,
I cry your honour mercy; you may,
worst

Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer 80
Of this new sect? Ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. Would you were half so honest!
Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.

Crom. Do.

Remember your bold life too.

Chan. This is too much; 85
Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.

Crom. And I.

Chan. Then thus for you, my lord: it stands agreed,

I take it, by all voices, that forthwith
You be convey'd to th' Tower a prisoner;
There to remain till the King's further
pleasure 90

Be known unto us. Are you all agreed,
lords?

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
But I must needs to th' Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other
Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome.

Let some o' th' guard be ready there.

Enter the Guard.

Cran. For me? 95
Must I go like a traitor thither?

Gar. Receive him,
And see him safe i' th' Tower.

Cran. Stay, good my lords,
I have a little yet to say. Look there, my
lords;

By virtue of that ring I take my cause 99
Out of the gripes of cruel men and give it
To a most noble judge, the King my master.

Cham. This is the King's ring.

Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heav'n. I told ye all,

When we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling,

'Twould fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my lords, 105
The King will suffer but the little finger
Of this man to be vex'd?

Cham. 'Tis now too certain;

How much more is his life in value with him !

Would I were fairly out on't !

Crom. My mind gave me,
In seeking tales and informations ¹¹⁰
Against this man—whose honesty the devil
And his disciples only envy at—Ye blew the fire that burns ye. Now have at ye !

Enter the KING frowning on them ; he takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven ¹¹⁴
In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince ;
Not only good and wise but most religious ;
One that in all obedience makes the church
The chief aim of his honour and, to strengthen

That holy duty, out of dear respect,
His royal self in judgment comes to hear ¹²⁰
The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

King. You were ever good at sudden commendations, Bishop of Winchester. But know I come
not

To hear such flattery now, and in my presence ¹²⁴

They are too thin and bare to hide offences.
To me you cannot reach you play the spaniel,

And think with wagging of your tongue to win me ;

But whatsoe'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure
Thou hast a cruel nature and a bloody.

[To Cranmer] Good man, sit down. Now let me see the proudest ¹³⁰

He that dares most but wag his finger at
thee.

By all that's holy, he had better starve
Than but once think this place becomes thee
not.

Sur. May it please your Grace—

King. - No, sir, it does not please me.
I had thought I had had men of some understanding

And wisdom of my Council ; but I find none. ¹³⁶

Was it discretion, lords, to let this man,
This good man—few of you deserve that
title—

This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy
At chamber door ? and one as great as you are ? ¹⁴⁰

Why, what a shame was this ! Did my commission

Bid ye so far forget yourselves ? I gave ye Power as he was a councillor to try him,
Not as a groom. There's some of ye, I see,
More out of malice than integrity, ¹⁴⁵
Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean ;
Which ye shall never have while I live.

Chan. Thus far,

My most dread sovereign, may it like your
Grace

To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos'd ¹⁴⁹

Concerning his imprisonment was rather—
If there be faith in men—meant for his trial

And fair purgation to the world, than malice,

I'm sure, in me.

King. Well, well, my lords, respect him ;
Take him, and use him well, he's worthy
of it.

I will say thus much for him : if a prince ¹⁵⁵
May be beholding to a subject, I Am for his love and service so to him.

Make me no more ado, but all embrace him ;
Be friends, for shame, my lords ! My Lord of Canterbury, ¹⁵⁹

I have a suit which you must not deny me :
That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism ;

You must be godfather, and answer for her.

Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory ¹⁶³

In such an honour ; how may I deserve it,
That am a poor and humble subject to you ?

King. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons. You shall have

Two noble partners with you : the old Duchess of Norfolk

And Lady Marquis Dorset. Will these
please you ?

Once more, my Lord of Winchester, I charge you, ¹⁷⁰

Embrace and love this man.

Gar. With a true heart
And brother-love I do it.

Cran. And let heaven
Witness how dear I hold this confirmation.

King. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart.

The common voice, I see, is verified ¹⁷⁵
Of thee, which says thus : ' Do my Lord of Canterbury

A shrewd turn and he's your friend for ever'.

Come, lords, we trifle time away ; I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one, lords, one remain ;
So I grow stronger, you more honour gain.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. The palace yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals. Do you take the court for Paris garden ? Ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.

[Within: Good master porter, I belong to th' larder.

Port. Belong to th' gallows, and be hang'd, ye rogue ! Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these are but switches to 'em. I'll scratch your heads. You must be seeing christenings? Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals?

Man. Pray, sir, be patient; 'tis as much impossible,
Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons, 11

To scatter 'em as 'tis to make 'em sleep
On May-day morning; which will never be.
We may as well push against Paul's as stir 'em.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd? 15

Man. Alas, I know not: how gets the tide in?

As much as one sound cudgel of four foot—
You see the poor remainder—could distribute,

I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.

Man. I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand,

To mow 'em down before me; but if I spar'd any 21

That had a head to hit, either young or old,
He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker,
Let me ne'er hope to see a chin again;
And that I would not for a cow, God save her! 25

[Within: Do you hear, master porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy. Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do? 29

Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by th' dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? Or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand: here will be father, godfather, and all together. 36

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in's nose; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance. That fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me; he stands there like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that rail'd upon me till her pink'd porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out 'Clubs!' when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope o' th' Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place. At length they came to th' broomstaff to me; I defied 'em still;

when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose shot, deliver'd such a show'r of pebbles that I was fain to draw mine honour in and let 'em win the work: the devil was amongst 'em, I think surely. 36

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse and fight for bitten apples; that no audience but the tribulation of Tower-hill or the limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two beadles that is to come.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here!

They grow still too; from all parts they are coming, 65

As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters,

These lazy knaves? Y'have made a fine hand, fellows.

There's a trim rabble let in: are all these Your faithful friends o' th' suburbs? We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies, 70

When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your honour, We are but men; and what so many may do,

Not being torn a pieces, we have done.
An army cannot rule 'em.

Cham. As I live,
If the King blame me for't, I'll lay ye all 75
By th' heels, and suddenly; and on your heads

Clap round fines for neglect. Y'are lazy knaves;

And here ye lie baiting of bombards, when Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets sound; 79

Th'are come already from the christening.
Go break among the press and find a way out

To let the troop pass fairly, or I'll find
A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these two months.

Port. Make way there for the Princess.

Man. You great fellow,
Stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.

Port. You i' th' camlet, get up o' th' rail;
I'll peck you o'er the pales else. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The palace.

Enter Trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, CRANMER, DUKE OF NORFOLK, with his marshal's staff, DUKE OF SUFFOLK, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening gifts; then four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the child richly habited in a mantle, &c., train borne by a Lady; then follows the MARCHIONESS DORSET, the other god-mother, and Ladies. The troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long and ever-happy, to the high and mighty Princess of England, Elizabeth!

Flourish. Enter KING and Guard.

Cran. [Kneeling] And to your royal Grace and the good Queen!

My noble partners and myself thus pray: 5
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye!

King. Thank you, good Lord Archbishop. What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.

King. Stand up, lord.

[The King kisses the child.

With this kiss take my blessing: God protect thee! 10

Into whose hand I give thy life.

Cran. Amen.

King. My noble gossips, y'have been too prodigal;

I thank ye heartily. So shall this lady,
When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak, sir,

For heaven now bids me; and the words I utter 15

Let none think flattery, for they'll find 'em truth.

This royal infant—heaven still move about her!—

Though in her cradle, yet now promises
Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings,

Which time shall bring to ripeness. She shall be— 20

But few now living can behold that goodness—

A pattern to all princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed. Saba was never More covetous of wisdom and fair virtue
Than this pure soul shall be. All princely graces 25

That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,

With all the virtues that attend the good,
Shall still be doubled on her. Truth shall nurse her,

Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her;

She shall be lov'd and fear'd. Her own shall bless her:

Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn, 31
And hang their heads with sorrow. Good grows with her;

In her days every man shall eat in safety
Under his own vine what he plants, and sing

The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours. 35

God shall be truly known; and those about her

From her shall read the perfect ways of honour,

And by those claim their greatness, not by blood.

Nor shall this peace sleep with her; but as when

The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix, 40

Her ashes new create another heir

As great in admiration as herself,

So shall she leave her blessedness to one—
When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness—

Who from the sacred ashes of her honour 45
Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,

And so stand fix'd. Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror,

That were the servants to this chosen infant,

Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him;

Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine, 50

His honour and the greatness of his name
Shall be, and make new nations; he shall flourish,

And like a mountain cedar reach his branches

To all the plains about him; our children's children

Shall see this and bless heaven.

King. Thou speakest wonders.

Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England, 56

An aged princess; many days shall see her,

And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
Would I had known no more! But she must die—

She must, the saints must have her—yet a virgin; 60

A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To th' ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

King. O Lord Archbishop, Thou hast made me now a man; never

before

This happy child did I get anything. 65
This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me

That when I am in heaven I shall desire
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.

I thank ye all. To you, my good Lord Mayor,

And you, good brethren, I am much be- 70 holding;

I have receiv'd much honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way, lords ;
Ye must all see the Queen, and she must thank ye,
She will be sick else. This day, no man
think
Has business at his house ; for all shall
stay. 75
This little one shall make it holiday.

[Exeunt.

THE EPILOGUE

'Tis ten to one this play can never please All that are here. Some come to take their ease

And sleep an act or two ; but those, we fear, W'have frighted with our trumpets ; so,
'tis clear,
They'll say 'tis nought ; others to hear the city 5
Abus'd extremely, and to cry ' That's witty !'
Which we have not done neither ; that,
I fear,
All the expected good w'are like to hear
For this play at this time is only in 9
The merciful construction of good women ;
For such a one we show'd 'em. If they smile
And say 'twill do, I know within a while
All the best men are ours ; for 'tis ill hap
If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

PROLOGUE

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece

The princes orgillous, their high blood chaf'd,

Have to the port of Athens sent their ships
Fraught with the ministers and instruments

Of cruel war. Sixty and nine that wore Their crownets regal from th' Athenian bay

Put forth toward Phrygia ; and their vow is made

To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures

The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen, With wanton Paris sleeps—and that's the quarrel. 10

To Tenedos they come,
And the deep-drawing barks do there

disgorge
Their war-like fraughtage. Now on Dardan

plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch

Their brave pavilions : Priam's six-gated

city, 15
Dardan, and Tymbria, Helias, Chetas,

Troien,
And Antenorides, with massy staples

And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
Sperr up the sons of Troy.

Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits 20
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,

Sets all on hazard—and hither am I come
A Prologue arm'd, but not in confidence

Of author's pen or actor's voice, but suited
In like conditions as our argument, 25

To tell you, fair beholders, that our play Leaps o'er the vaunt and firstlings of those

broils,
Beginning in the middle ; starting thence

away
To what may be digested in a play.

Like or find fault ; do as your pleasures
are ; 30

Now good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Troy. Before Priam's palace.

Enter TROILUS armed, and PANDARUS.

Tro. Call here my varlet ; I'll unarm
again.

Why should I war without the walls of
Troy

That find such cruel battle here within ?
Each Trojan that is master of his heart,

Let him to field ; Troilus, alas, hath none!

Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended ? 6

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,

Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness
valiant ;

But I am weaker than a woman's tear, 9
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,

Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skillless as unpractis'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this ; for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no farther. He that will have a cake out of the wheat must needs tarry the grinding. 16

Tro. Have I not tarried ?

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Yes, the bolting; but you must tarry the leavening. 21

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening; but here's yet in the word 'hereafter' the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips. 26

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she be,
Doth lesser blench at suff'rance than I do.
At Priam's royal table do I sit;

And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts—30
So, traitor, then she comes when she is thence.

Pan. Well, she look'd yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee: when my heart,
As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain,
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me, 36

I have, as when the sun doth light a storm,
Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile.
But sorrow that is couch'd in seeming gladness
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness. 40

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's—well, go to—there were no more comparison between the women. But, for my part, she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they term it, praise her, but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit; but—46

Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus—
When I do tell thee there my hopes lie drown'd,

Reply not in how many fathoms deep
They lie indrench'd. I tell thee I am mad
In Cressid's love. Thou answer'st 'She is fair'—51

Pourest in the open ulcer of my heart—
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice,

Handlest in thy discourse. O, that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink 55
Writing their own reproach; to whose soft seizure

The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense

Hard as the palm of ploughman! This thou tell'st me,

As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her;

But, saying thus, instead of oil and balin,
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me

The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much. 64

Pan. Faith, I'll not meddle in it. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.. 67

Tro. Good Pandarus! How now, Pandarus!

Pan. I have had my labour for my travail, ill thought on of her and ill thought on of you; gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour. 71

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? What, with me?

Pan. Because she's kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen. An she were not kin to me, she would be as fair a Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not an she were a blackamoor; 'tis all one to me. 77

Tro. Say I she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind her father. Let her to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her. For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more i' th' matter. 82

Tro. Pandarus!

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus!

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me: I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. 85

[Exit. Sound alarm.

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours!
Peace, rude sounds!

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair,

When with your blood you daily paint her thus. 90

I cannot fight upon this argument;
It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.
But Pandarus—O gods, how do you plague me!

I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar;
And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo 95
As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?

Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl;
Between our Ilium and where she resides
Let it be call'd the wild and wand'ring flood; 101

Ourselves the merchant, and this sailing Pandar

Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

Alarum. Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. How now, Prince Troilus! Wherefore not afield?

Tro. Because not there. This woman's answer sorts,
For womanish it is to be from thence. 106
What news, Æneas, from the field to-day?
Æne. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.
Tro. By whom, Æneas?
Æne. Troilus, by Menelaus.
Tro. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to scorn;
Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn. 110
[Alarum.
Æne. Hark what good sport is out of town to-day!
Tro. Better at home, if 'would I might' were 'may'.
But to the sport abroad. Are you bound thither?
Æne. In all swift haste.
Tro. Come, go we then together.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Troy. A street.

Enter CRESSIDA and her man ALEXANDER.

Cres. Who were those went by?
Alex. Queen Hecuba and Helen.
Cres. And whither go they?
Alex. Up to the eastern tower,
Whose height commands as subject all the vale,
To see the battle. Hector, whose patience is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mov'd.
He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer;
And, like as there were husbandry in war,
Before the sun rose he was harness'd light,
And to the field goes he; where every flower
Did as a prophet weep what it foresaw
In Hector's wrath.
Cres. What was his cause of anger?
Alex. The noise goes, this: there is among the Greeks
A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;
They call him Ajax.
Cres. Good; and what of him?
Alex. They say he is a very man per se
And stands alone.
Cres. So do all men, unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.
Alex. This man, lady, hath robb'd many beasts of their particular additions: he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant—a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crush'd into folly, his folly sauced with discretion. There is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attainment but he carries some stain of it; he is melancholy without cause and merry against the hair; he hath the joints of every thing; but everything so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use, or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight. 29

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say he yesterday cop'd Hector in the battle and struck him down, the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. Who comes here? 35

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? What's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus. 40

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do you talk of?—Good morrow, Alexander.—How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cres. This morning, uncle. 44

Pan. What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector arm'd and gone ere you came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'en so. Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger. 50

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too; he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that. And there's Troilus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Troilus, I can tell them that too. 56

Cres. What, is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O Jupiter! there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector? Do you know a man if you see him? 63

Cres. Ay, if I ever saw him before and knew him.

Pan. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say, for I am sure he is not Hector. 66

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some degrees.

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them: he is himself.

Pan. Himself! Alas, poor Troilus! I would he were!

Cres. So he is. 70

Pan. Condition I had gone barefoot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself! no, he's not himself. Would 'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; time must friend or end. Well, Troilus, well! I would my heart were in her body! No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus. 76

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th' other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale when th' other's come to't. Hector shall not have his wit this year. 82

Cres. He shall not need it if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities.

Cres. No matter. 85

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'Twould not become him: his own's better.

Pan. You have no judgment, niece. Helen herself swore th' other day that Troilus, for a brown favour, for so 'tis, I must confess—not brown neither— 90

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough. 95

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then Troilus should have too much. If she prais'd him above, his complexion is higher than his; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose. 101

Pan. I swear to you I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him th' other day into the compass'd window—and you know he has not past three or four hairs on his chin— 107

Cres. Indeed a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young, and yet will he within three pound lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man and so old a lifter?

Pan. But to prove to you that Helen loves him: she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin—

Cres. Juno have mercy! How came it cloven? 115

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled. I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O, he smiles valiantly!

Pan. Does he not? 119

Cres. O yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn!

Pan. Why, go to, then! But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus—

Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus! Why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg. 126

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' th' shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh to think how she tickled his chin. Indeed, she has a marvell's white hand, I must needs confess.

Cres. Without the rack. 132

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! Many a wart is richer. 135

Pan. But there was such laughing! Queen Hecuba laugh'd that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With mill-tones.

Pan. And Cassandra laugh'd.

Cres. But there was a more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes. Did her eyes run o'er too? 141

Pan. And Hector laugh'd.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin. 145

Cres. An't had been a green hair I should have laugh'd too.

Pan. They laugh'd not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer? 150

Pan. Quoth she 'Here's but two and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white'.

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. 'Two and fifty hairs,' quoth he 'and one white. That white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons.' 'Jupiter!' quoth she 'which of these hairs is Par's my husband?' 'The forked one,' quoth he 'pluck't out and give it him.' But there was such laughing! and Helen so blush'd, and Paris so chaf'd; and all the rest so laugh'd that it pass'd. 161

Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't. 165

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn 'tis true; he will weep you, an 'twere a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May. 170

[Sound a retreat.]

Pan. Hark! they are coming from the field. Shall we stand up here and see them as they pass toward Ilium? Good niece, do, sweet niece Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure. 174

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place; here we may see most bravely. I'll tell you them all by their names as they pass by; but mark Troilus above the rest.

ÆNEAS passes.

Cres. Speak not so loud. 178

Pan. That's Æneas. Is not that a brave man? He's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you. But mark Troilus; you shall see anon. 181

ANTENOR passes.

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Antenor. He has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough; he's one o' th' soundest judgments in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person. When comes Troilus? I'll show you Troilus anon. If he see me, you shall see him nod at me. 187

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

HECTOR passes.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that; there's a fellow! Go thy way, Hector! There's a brave man, niece. O brave Hector! Look how he looks. There's a countenance! Is't not a brave man?

Cres. O, a brave man! 195

Pan. Is 'a not? It does a man's heart good. Look you what hacks are on his helmet! Look you yonder, do you see? Look you there. There's no jesting; there's laying on; take't off who will, as they say. There be hacks. 200

Cres. Be those with swords?

Pan. Swords! anything, he cares not; an the devil come to him, it's all one. By God's lid, it does one's heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris. 204

PARIS passes.

Look ye yonder, niece; is't not a gallant man too, is't not? Why, this is brave now. Who said he came hurt home to-day? He's not hurt. Why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha! Would I could see Troilus now! You shall see Troilus anon.

HELENUS passes.

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Helenus. I marvel where Troilus is. That's Helenus. I think he went not forth to-day. That's Helenus. 214

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus! no. Yes, he'll fight indifferent well. I marvel where Troilus is. Hark! do you not hear the people cry 'Troilus'? Helenus is a priest.

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder? 218

TROILUS passes.

Pan. Where? yonder? That's Deiphobus. 'Tis Troilus. There's a man, niece. Hem! Brave Troilus, the prince of chivalry! 221

Cres. Peace, for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him. O brave

Troilus! Look well upon him, niece; look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hack'd than Hector's; and how he looks, and how he goes! O admirable youth! he never saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way. Had I a sister were a grace or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot. 231

Cres. Here comes more.

Common Soldiers pass.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die in the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone. Crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is amongst the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus. 240

Pan. Achilles? A drayman, a porter, a very camel!

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well! Why, have you any discretion? Have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man? 247

Cres. Ay, a minc'd man; and then to be bak'd with no date in the pie, for then the man's date is out.

Pan. You are such a woman! A man knows not at what ward you lie. 251

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these; and at all these wards I lie at, at a thousand watches. 256

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too. If I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching. 262

Pan. You are such another!

Enter Troilus' Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where? 265

Boy. At your own house; there he un-arms him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come.

[Exit Boy.
I doubt he be hurt. Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I will be with you, niece, by and by.
 Cres. To bring, uncle. 271
 Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.
 Cres. By the same token, you are a bawd. [Exit Pandarus.
 Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice,
 He offers in another's enterprise ; 275
 But more in Troilus thousand-fold I see
 Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be,
 Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing :
 Things won are done ; joy's soul lies in the doing.
 That she belov'd knows nought that knows not this : 280
 Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is.
 That she was never yet that ever knew
 Love got so sweet as when desire did sue ;
 Therefore this maxim out of love I teach :
 Achievement is command ; ungain'd,
 beseech. 285
 Then though my heart's content firm love
 doth bear,
 Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear. [Exit.

SCENE III. The Grecian camp. Before Agamemnon's tent.

Sennet. Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, MENELAUS, and Others.

Agam. Princes,
 What grief hath set these jaundies o'er your
 cheeks ?
 The ample proposition that hope makes
 In all designs begun on earth below Fails in the promis'd largeness ; checks and disasters 5
 Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd,
 As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap, Infects the sound pine, and diverts his grain Tortive and errant from his course of growth.
 Nor, princes, is it matter new to us 10
 That we come short of our suppose so far That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls
 stand ;
 Sith every action that hath gone before,
 Whereof we have record, trial did draw
 Bias and thwart, not answering the aim, 15
 And that unbodied figure of the thought That gave't surmised shape. Why then,
 you princes,
 Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works
 And call them shames, which are, indeed, nought else
 But the protractive trials of great Jove 20
 To find persistive constancy in men ;
 The fineness of which metal is not found In fortune's love ? For then the bold and coward,

The wise and fool, the artist and unread, 24
 The hard and soft, seem all affin'd and kin.
 But in the wind and tempest of her frown
 Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,
 Puffing at all, winnows the light away ;
 And what hath mass or matter by itself
 Lies rich in virtue and unmingled. 30 Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat,
 Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
 Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance Lies the true proof of men. The sea being smooth, 34
 How many shallow bauble boats dare sail
 Upon her patient breast, making their way
 With those of nobler bulk !
 But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage
 The gentle Thetis, and anon behold
 The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut, 40
 Bounding between the two moist elements Like Perseus' horse. Where's then the saucy boat,
 Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now Co-rivall'd greatness ? Either to harbour fled
 Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so 45
 Doth valour's show and valour's worth divide
 In storms of fortune ; for in her ray and brightness
 The herd hath more annoyance by the breese
 Than by the tiger ; but when the splitting
 wind
 Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks, 50
 And flies fled under shade—why, then the thing of courage,
 As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathise,
 And with an accent tun'd in self-same key Retorts to chiding fortune.
 Ulyss. Agamemnon, Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece, 55
 Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit
 In whom the tempers and the minds of all Should be shut up—hear what Ulysses
 speaks.
 Besides the applause and approbation
 The which, [To Agamemnon] most mighty, for thy place and sway, 60 [To Nestor] And, thou most reverend, for thy stretch'd-out life,
 I give to both your speeches—which were such
 As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece Should hold up high in brass ; and such
 again
 As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver, 65 Should with a bond of air, strong as the axle-tree
 On which heaven rides, knit all the Greekish
 ears

To his experienc'd tongue—yet let it please
both,
Thou great, and wise, to hear Ulysses
speak.
Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca ; and be'tt of less expect 70
That matter needless, of importless burden,
Divide thy lips than we are confident,
When rank Thersites opes his mastic jaws,
We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.
Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been
down, 75
And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a
master,
But for these instances :
The specialty of rule hath been neglected ;
And look how many Grecian tents do stand Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions. 80
When that the general is not like the hive,
To whom the foragers shall all repair, What honey is expected ? Degree being vizarded,
Th' unworthiest shows as fairly in the mask.
The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre, 85
Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
Office, and custom, in all line of order ;
And therefore is the glorious planet Sol
In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd 90
Amidst the other, whose med'cinable eye
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
And posts, like the commandment of a
king,
Sans check, to good and bad. But when the planets
In evil mixture to disorder wander, 95
What plagues and what portents, what mutiny,
What raging of the sea, shaking of earth,
Commotion in the winds ! Frights, changes, horrors,
Divert and crack, rend and deracinate,
The unity and married calm of states 100
Quite from their fixture ! O, when degree is shak'd,
Which is the ladder of all high designs,
The enterprise is sick ! How could communities,
Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities, 104
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
The primogenity and due of birth, Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres,
laurels,
But by degree, stand in authentic place ?
Take but degree away, untune that string,
And hark what discord follows ! Each thing melts 110
In mere oppugnancy : the bounded waters Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
And make a sop of all this solid globe ;

Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father
dead ; 115
Force should be right ; or, rather, right and wrong—
Between whose endless jar justice resides—Should lose their names, and so should justice too.
Then everything includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite ; 120
And appetite, an universal wolf,
So doubly seconded with will and power,
Must make perforce an universal prey,
And last eat up himself. Great Agamem-non,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate, 125
Follows the choking.
And this neglect of degree it is That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose
It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd
By him one step below, he by the next, 130
That next by him beneath ; so every step,
Exempl'd by the first pace that is sick
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation.
And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot, Not her own sinews. To end a tale of
length, 136
Troy in our weakness stands, not in her
strength.
Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here dis-cover'd
The fever whereof all our power is sick.
Agam. The nature of the sickness found,
Ulysses, 140
What is the remedy ?
Ulyss. The great Achilles, whom opinion
crowns
The sinew and the forehead of our host,
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
Lies mocking our designs ; with him
Patroclus 146
Upon a lazy bed the livelong day
Breaks scurril jests ;
And with ridiculous and awkward action—
Which, slanderer, he imitation calls— 150
He pageants us. Sometime, great Aga-memnon,
Thy topless deputation he puts on ;
And like a strutting player whose conceit
Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound 155
'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage—
Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming He acts thy greatness in ; and when he speaks
'Tis like a chime a-mending ; with terms
unsquar'd,
Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon
dropp'd, 160
Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff

The large Achilles, on his press'd bed
 lolling,
 From his deep chest laughs out a loud
 applause;
 Cries 'Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just.
 Now play me Nestor; hem, and stroke thy beard, 165

As he being drest to some oration'.
 That's done—as near as the extremest ends
 Of parallels, as like as Vulcan and his wife;
 Yet god Achilles still cries 'Excellent!
 'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me,
 Patroclus, 170

Arming to answer in a night alarm'.
 And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age Must be the scene of mirth: to cough and spit

And, with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget, Shake in and out the rivet. And at this sport 175

Sir Valour dies; cries 'O, enough,
 Patroclus;

Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all In pleasure of my spleen'. And in this fashion

All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
 Severals and generals of grace exact, 180
 Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
 Excitements to the field or speech for truce,
 Success or loss, what is or is not, serves
 As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain— 185

Who, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
 With an imperial voice—many are infect.
 Ajax is grown self-will'd and bears his head
 In such a rein, in full as proud a place 189
 As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him; Makes faction feasts; rails on our state of
 war

Bold as an oracle, and sets Thersites,
 A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint,

To match us in comparisons with dirt,
 To weaken and discredit our exposure, 195
 How rank soever rounded in with danger.

Ulyss. They tax our policy and call it
 cowardice,

Count wisdom as no member of the war,
 Forestall prescience, and esteem no act
 But that of hand. The still and mental parts 200

That do contrive how many hands shall strike

When fitness calls them on, and know, by measure

Of their observant toil, the enemies' weight—

Why, this hath not a finger's dignity:
 They call this bed-work, mapp'ry, closet-
 war; 205

So that the ram that batters down the wall,
 For the great swinge and rudeness of his poise,

They place before his hand that made the engine,

Or those that with the fineness of their souls
 By reason guide his execution. 210

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles'
 horse

Makes many Thetis' sons. [Tucket. 216

Agam. What trumpet? Look, Menelaus.

Men. From Troy.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Agam. What would you fore our tent?

Æne. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you? 216

Agam. Even this.

Æne. May one that is a herald and a prince

Do a fair message to his kingly eyes?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles'
 arm 220

Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice

Call Agamemnon head and general.

Æne. Fair leave and large security. How may

A stranger to those most imperial looks
 Know them from eyes of other mortals?

Agam. How? 226

Æne. Ay;

I ask, that I might waken reverence,
 And bid the cheek be ready with a blush
 Modest as Morning when she coldly eyes
 The youthful Phœbus. 230

Which is that god in office, guiding men?

Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Agam. This Trojan scorns us, or the men of Troy

Are ceremonious courtiers.

Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonair, un-arm'd, 235

As bending angels; that's their fame in
 peace.

But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,

Good arms, strong joints, true swords;
 and, Jove's accord, 238

Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Æneas,
 Peace, Trojan; lay thy finger on thy lips.

The worthiness of praise distains his worth,
 If that the prais'd himself bring the praise
 forth;

But what the repining enemy commends,
 That breath fame blows; that praise, sole pure, transcends.

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself
 Æneas? 245

Æne. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

Æne. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's
 ears.

Agam. He hears nought privately that comes from Troy.

Æne. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper with him; 250

I bring a trumpet to awake his ear,
To set his sense on the attentive bent,
And then to speak.

Agam. Speak frankly as the wind ;
It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour. ²⁵⁴
That thou shalt know, Troyan, he is awake,
He tells thee so himself.

Æne. Trumpet, blow loud,
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy
tents ;

And every Greek of mettle, let him know What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud. [Sound trumpet.]

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy
A prince called Hector—Priam is his father— ²⁶¹

Who in this dull and long-continued truce
Is resty grown ; he bade me take a trumpet
And to this purpose speak : Kings, princes, lords ! ²⁶⁴

If there be one among the fair'st of Greece
That holds his honour higher than his ease,
That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril,

That knows his valour and knows not his
fear,

That loves his mistress more than in confession ²⁶⁹

With truant vows to her own lips he loves,
And dare avow her beauty and her worth
In other arms than hers—to him this challenge.

Hector, in view of Troyans and of Greeks,
Shall make it good or do his best to do it :
He hath a lady wiser, fairer, truer, ²⁷⁵
Than ever Greek did couple in his arms ;
And will to-morrow with his trumpet call Mid-way between your tents and walls of
Troy

To rouse a Grecian that is true in love.
If any come, Hector shall honour him ; ²⁸⁰
If none, he'll say in Troy, when he retires,
The Grecian dames are sunburnt and not
worth

The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, Lord
Æneas. ²⁸⁴

If none of them have soul in such a kind,
We left them all at home. But we are
soldiers ;

And may that soldier a mere recreant prove That means not, hath not, or is not in
love.

If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector ; if none else, I am
he. ²⁹⁰

Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a
man

When Hector's grandsire suck'd. He is old
now ;

But if there be not in our Grecian mould
One noble man that hath one spark of fire
To answer for his love, tell him from me ²⁹⁵
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver,

And in my vantbrace put this wither'd
brawn,

And, meeting him, will tell him that my
lady

Was fairer than his grandame, and as chaste
As may be in the world. His youth in flood, I'll prove this truth with my three drops of blood. ³⁰¹

Æne. Now heavens forbend such scarcity
of youth !

Ulyss. Amen.

Agam. Fair Lord Æneas, let me touch
your hand ;

To our pavilion shall I lead you, first. ³⁰⁵
Achilles shall have word of this intent ;
So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to
tent.

Yourself shall feast with us before you go,
And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but Ulysses and Nestor.]

Ulyss. Nestor ! ³¹⁰

Nest. What says Ulysses ?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain ;

Be you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is't ?

Ulyss. This 'tis : ³¹⁵

Blunt wedges rive hard knots. The seeded
pride

That hath to this maturity blown up
In rank Achilles must or now be cropp'd
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil
To overbulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how ? ³²⁰

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,

However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. True. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance ³²⁴

Whose grossness little characters sum up ;
And, in the publication, make no strain
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya—though, Apollo knows,
'Tis dry enough—will with great speed of judgment,

Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose ³³⁰
Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think you ?

Nest. Why, 'tis most meet. Who may you else oppose

That can from Hector bring those honours
off,

If not Achilles ? Though't be a sportful combat, ³³⁵

Yet in this trial much opinion dwells ;
For here the Troyans taste our dear'st repute

With their fin'st palate ; and trust to me,
Ulysses,

Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd
In this vile action ; for the success, ³⁴⁰

Although particular, shall give a scantling

Of good or bad unto the general ;
And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass 345
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd He that meets Hector issues from our
choice ;
And choice, being mutual act of all our
souls,
Makes merit her election, and doth boil,
As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd
Out of our virtues ; who miscarrying, 351
What heart receives from hence a conquering part,
To steel a strong opinion to themselves ?
Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,
In no less working than are swords and bows 355
Directive by the limbs.
Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech.
Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not
Hector.
Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares
And think perchance they'll sell ; if not,
the lustre 360
Of the better yet to show shall show the
better,
By showing the worst first. Do not consent
That ever Hector and Achilles meet ;
For both our honour and our shame in this
Are dogg'd with two strange followers. 365 Nest. I see them not with my old eyes.
What are they ?
Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
Were he not proud, we all should wear with
him ;
But he already is too insolent ;
And it were better parch in Afric sun 370 Than in the pride and salt scorn of his
eyes,
Should he scape Hector fair. If he were foil'd,
Why, then we do our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No, make a lott'ry ;
And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw 375
The sort to fight with Hector. Among ourselves
Give him allowance for the better man ;
For that will physic the great Myrmidon,
Who broils in loud applause, and make him
fall
His crest, that prouder than blue Iris bends.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off, 381
We'll dress him up in voices ; if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
Our project's life this shape of sense
assumes— 385
Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Nest. Now, Ulysses, I begin to relish thy advice ;
And I will give a taste thereof forthwith
To Agamemnon. Go we to him straight. 390
Two curs shall tame each other : pride
alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone. [Exeunt.]

ACT TWO

SCENE I. The Grecian camp.

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Ajax. Thersites !
Ther. Agamemnon—how if he had boils full, all over, generally ?
Ajax. Thersites !
Ther. And those boils did run—say so.
Did not the general run then ? Were not that a botchy core ? 6
Ajax. Dog !
Ther. Then there would come some matter from him ; I see none now.
Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear ? Feel, then. [Strikes him.]
Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord ! 13
Ajax. Speak, then, thou whinid'st leaven, speak. I will beat thee into handsomeness.
Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness ; but I think thy horse will sooner con an oration than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou ? A red murrain o' thy jade's tricks !
Ajax. Toadstool, learn me the proclamation. 20
Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strikest me thus ?
Ajax. The proclamation !
Ther. Thou art proclaim'd a fool, I think.
Ajax. Do not, porpentine, do not ; my fingers itch. 23
Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot and I had the scratching of thee ; I would make thee the loathsome scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikest as slow as another Ajax. I say, the proclamation. 30 Ther. Thou grumblest and railest every hour on Achilles ; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Prosperpina's beauty—ay, that thou bark'st
at him.
Ajax. Mistress Thersites !
Ther. Thou shouldst strike him. 35
Ajax. Cobloaf !
Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.
Ajax. You whoreson cur ! [Strikes him.]
Ther. Do, do. 40
Ajax. Thou stool for a witch !
Ther. Ay, do, do ; thou sodden-witted lord ! Thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows ; an assinico may tutor thee. You scurvy valiant ass! Thou art here but to thrash Troyans, and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

Ther. You scurvy lord!

Ajax. You cur! [Strikes him.

Ther. Mars his idiot! Do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax! Wherefore do you thus?

How now, Thersites! What's the matter, man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, look upon him.

Achil. So I do. What's the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well! why, so I do.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him; for who some ever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters! His evasions have ears thus long. I have bobb'd his brain more than he has beat my bones. I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax—who wears his wit in his belly and his guts in his head—I'll tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What?

Ther. I say this Ajax—

[Ajax offers to strike him.

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

Ther. Has not so much wit—

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool!

Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not—he there; that he; look you there.

Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall—

Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's?

Ther. No, I warrant you; the fool's will shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rails upon me.

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was suff'rance; 'twas not voluntary. No man is beaten voluntary. Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Ther. E'en so; a great deal of your wit too lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch an he knock out either of your brains: 'a were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?

Ther. There's Ulysses and old Nestor—whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes—yoke you like draught oxen, and make you plough up the wars.

Achil. What, what?

Ther. Yes, good sooth. To Achilles, to Ajax, to—Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much as thou afterwards.

Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace!

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach bids me, shall I?

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hang'd like clotpoles ere I come any more to your tents. I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools.

Patr. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaim'd through all our host.

That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun,

Will with a trumpet 'twixt our tents and Troy,

To-morrow morning, call some knight to arms

That hath a stomach; and such a one that dare

Maintain I know not what; 'tis trash. Farewell.

Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not; 'tis put to lott'ry. Otherwise

He knew his man.

Ajax. O, meaning you! I will go learn more of it.

SCENE II. Troy. Priam's palace.

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS, and HELENUS.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches, spent,

Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:

'Deliver Helen, and all damage else—

As honour, loss of time, travail, expense, Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd

In hot digestion of this cormorant war— Shall be struck off'. Hector, what say you to't?

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I,
As far as toucheth my particular,
Yet, dread Priam, 10
There is no lady of more softer bowels,
More spongy to suck in the sense of fear,
More ready to cry out 'Who knows what follows?'

Than Hector is. The wound of peace is surety,
Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd
The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches 16

To th' bottom of the worst. Let Helen go.
Since the first sword was drawn about this
question,

Every titch soul 'mongst many thousand dismes

Hath been as dear as Helen—I mean, of ours. 20

If we have lost so many tenths of ours
To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten,
What merit's in that reason which denies
The yielding of her up?

Tro. Fie, fie, my brother! 25
Weigh you the worth and honour of a king,
So great as our dread father's, in a scale Of common ounces? Will you with counters sum

The past-proportion of his infinite,
And buckle in a waist most fathomless 30
With spans and inches so diminutive
As fears and reasons? Fie, for godly shame!

Hel. No marvel though you bite so sharp
at reasons,

You are so empty of them. Should not our
father

Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons, 35

Because your speech hath none that tells him so?

Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest;

You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:

You know an enemy intends you harm;
You know a sword employ'd is perilous, 40

And reason flies the object of all harm.
Who marvels, then, when Helenus beholds

A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heels

And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove, 45 Or like a star disorb'd? Nay, if we talk of reason,

Let's shut our gates and sleep. Manhood and honour

Should have hare hearts, would they but fat their thoughts

With this cramm'd reason. Reason and respect

Make livers pale and lustihood deject. 50

Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost

The keeping.

Tro. What's aught but as 'tis valued?

Hect. But value dwells not in particular
will:

It holds his estimate and dignity
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself 55

As in the prizer. 'Tis mad idolatry
To make the service greater than the god;

And the will dotes that is attributive
To what infectionally itself affects,

Without some image of th' affected merit. 60

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will;

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous
shores

Of will and judgment: how may I avoid, 65
Although my will distaste what it elected,
The wife I chose? There can be no evasion

To blench from this and to stand firm by honour.

We turn not back the silks upon the merchant

When we have soil'd them; nor the remainder viands 70

We do not throw in unrespective sieve, Because we now are full. It was thought

meet

Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks;

Your breath with full consent bellied his sails;

The seas and winds, old wranglers, took a truce, 75

And did him service. He touch'd the ports
desir'd;

And for an old aunt whom the Greeks held captive

He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness

Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes stale the morning.

Why keep we her? The Grecians keep our aunt, 80

Is she worth keeping? Why, she is a pearl Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,

And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went—

As you must needs, for you all cried 'Go,
go'— 85

If you'll confess he brought home worthy prize—

As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your
hands,

And cried 'Inestimable!'—why do you
now

The issue of your proper wisdoms rate,
And do a deed that never fortune did— 90

Beggar the estimation which you priz'd Richer than sea and land? O theft most base,

That we have stol'n what we do fear to keep!

But thieves unworthy of a thing so stol'n
That in their country did them that
disgrace 95

We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [Within] Cry, Troyans, cry.

Pri. What noise, what shriek is this?

Pro. 'Tis our mad sister; I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within] Cry, Troyans.

Hect. It is Cassandra. 100

Enter CASSANDRA, raving.

Cas. Cry, Troyans, cry. Lend me ten thousand eyes,

And I will fill them with prophetic tears.

Hect. Peace, sister, peace.

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled eld, 104

Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours. Let us pay betimes
A moiety of that mass of moan to come.
Cry, Troyans, cry. Practise your eyes with tears.

Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilium stand;
Our firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all.
Cry, Troyans, cry, A Helen and a woe! 111
Cry, cry. Troy burns, or else let Helen go.

[Exit.]

Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains

Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse, or is your blood
So madly hot that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause, 117
Can qualify the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it;
Nor once deject the courage of our minds
Because Cassandra's mad. Her brain-sick raptures 122

Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel
Which hath our several honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons;
And Jove forbid there should be done
amongst us 127

Such things as might offend the weakest spleen

To fight for and maintain.

Par. Else might the world convince of levity 130

As well my undertakings as your counsels;
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project.

For what, alas, can these my single arms?
What propugnation is in one man's valour
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will, 140
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done

Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri.

Paris, you speak

Like one besotted on your sweet delights.
You have the honey still, but these the gall:
So to be valiant is no praise at all. 145

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it;
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wip'd off in honourable keeping her.

What treason were it to the ransack'd queen, 150

Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,

Now to deliver her possession up
On terms of base compulsion! Can it be
That so degenerate a strain as this Should once set footing in your generous bosoms? 155

There's not the meanest spirit on our party
Without a heart to dare or sword to draw
When Helen is defended; nor none so noble

Whose life were ill bestow'd or death unfam'd

Where Helen is the subject. Then, I say, 160
Well may we fight for her whom we know well

The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris and Troilus, you have both said well;

And on the cause and question now in hand
Have glaz'd, but superficially; not much Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought Unfit to hear moral philosophy.

The reasons you allege do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemp'rd blood
Than to make up a free determination 170
'Twixt right and wrong; for pleasure and revenge

Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice

Of any true decision. Nature craves
All dues be rend'ed to their owners. Now,
What nearer debt in all humanity 175

Than wife is to the husband? If this law
Of nature be corrupted through affection;
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same;
There is a law in each well-order'd nation
To curb those raging appetites that are 181
Most disobedient and refractory.

If Helen, then, be wife to Sparta's king—
As it is known she is—these moral laws
Of nature and of nations speak aloud 185
To have her back return'd. Thus to persist
In doing wrong extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion

Is this, in way of truth. Yet, ne'er the less,
My spritely brethren, I propend to you 190
In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence

Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design.

Were it not glory that we more affected
Than the performance of our heaving
spleens,

I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood Spent more in her defence. But, worthy
Hector,

She is a theme of honour and renown,
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds, Whose present courage may beat down our
foes,

And fame in time to come canonize us ;
For I presume brave Hector would not lose

So rich advantage of a promis'd glory
As smiles upon the forehead of this action
For the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits.

I was advertis'd their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept.
This, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. The Grecian camp. Before the tent of Achilles.

Enter THERSITES, solus.

Ther. How now, Thersites ! What, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury ? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus ? He beats me, and I rail at him. O worthy satisfaction !
Would it were otherwise : that I could beat him, whilst he rail'd at me ! 'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations.
Then there's Achilles, a rare engineer ! If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove, the king of gods, and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy caduceus, if ye take not that little little less-than-little wit from them that they have !
which short-arm'd ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider without drawing their massy irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp ! or, rather, the Neapolitan bone-ache ! for that, methinks, is the curse depending on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers ; and devil Envy say 'Amen'. What ho ! my Lord Achilles !

Enter PATROCLUS.

Patr. Who's there ? Thersites ! Good
Thersites, come in and rail.

800

Ther. If I could 'a rememb' red a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldst not have slipp'd out of my contemplation ; but it is no matter ; thyself upon thyself ! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue ! Heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee ! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death. Then if she that lays the out says thou art a fair corse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. Where's Achilles ?

Patr. What, art thou devout ? Wast thou in prayer ?

Ther. Ay, the heavens hear me !
Patr. Amen.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there ?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where ? O, where ? Art thou come ? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals ? Come, what's Agamemnon ?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles. Then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles ?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites. Then tell me,
I pray thee, what's Thersites ?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus. Then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou ?

Patr. Thou must tell that knowest.

Achil. O, tell, tell !

Ther. I'll decline the whole question.
Agamemnon commands Achilles ; Achilles is my lord ; I am Patroclus' knower ; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal !

Ther. Peace, fool ! I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileg'd man. Proceed,
Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool ; Achilles is a fool ; Thersites is a fool ; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this ; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles ; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon ; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool ; and this Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool ?

Ther. Make that demand of the Creator.
It suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes here ?

Achil. Come, Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody. Come in with me, Thersites.

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery. All the argument is a whore and a cuckold—a good quarrel to draw emulous factions and bleed to death upon. Now the dry serpigio on the subject, and war and lechery confound all !

[Exit.

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, AJAX, and CALCAS.

Agam. Where is Achilles? 72

Patr. Within his tent; but ill-dispos'd, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here.

He shent our messengers; and we lay by 75
Our appertainings, visiting of him.

Let him be told so; lest, perchance, he think

We dare not move the question of our place

Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent. 80

He is not sick.

Ajax. Sick, lion-sick, sick of proud heart. You may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride. But why, why? Let him show us a cause. A word, my lord. 85

[Takes Agamemnon aside.

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.

Nest. Who, Thersites?

Ulyss. He. 89

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

Ulyss. No; you see he is his argument that has his argument—Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their faction is more our wish than their faction. But it was a strong composure a fool could disunite! 96

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie.

Re-enter PATROCLUS.

Here comes Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him. 100

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy; his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say he is much sorry

If any thing more than your sport and pleasure

Did move your greatness and this noble state 105

To call upon him; he hopes it is no other But for your health and your digestion sake,

An after-dinner's breath.

Agam. Hear you, Patroclus. We are too well acquainted with these answers;

But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn, 110

Cannot outfly our apprehensions.

Much attribute he hath, and much the reason

Why we ascribe it to him. Yet all his virtues,

Not virtuously on his own part beheld, 114
Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss;

Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him

We come to speak with him; and you shall not sin

If you do say we think him over-proud And under-honest, in self-assumption

greater 120
Than in the note of judgment; and worthier than himself

Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on,

Disguise the holy strength of their command,

And underwrite in an observing kind 124
His humorous predominance; yea, watch

His pettish lunes, his ebbs, his flows, as if The passage and whole carriage of this action

Rode on his tide. Go tell him this, and add That if he overhold his price so much

We'll none of him, but let him, like an engine 130

Not portable, lie under this report: Bring action hither; this cannot go to war.

A stirring dwarf we do allowance give Before a sleeping giant. Tell him so.

Patr. I shall, and bring his answer presently. [Exit.

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied;

We come to speak with him. Ulysses, enter you. [Exit Ulysses.

Ajax. What is he more than another?

Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think he thinks himself a better man than I am? 142

Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought and say he is?

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable. 146

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud eats up himself. Pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed devours the deed in the praise. 153

Re-enter ULYSSES.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man as I do hate the engend'ring of toads.

Nest. [Aside] And yet he loves himself: is't not strange?

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.
 Agam. What's his excuse ?
 Ulyss. He doth rely on none ;
 But carries on the stream of his dispose,
 Without observance or respect of any, ¹⁶⁰
 In will peculiar and in self-admission.
 Agam. Why will he not, upon our fair request,
 Untent his person and share the air with us ?
 Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only,
 He makes important ; possess'd he is with greatness, ¹⁶⁵
 And speaks not to himself but with a pride
 That quarrels at self-breath. Imagin'd worth Holds in his blood such swol'n and hot discourse
 That 'twixt his mental and his active parts
 Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages, ¹⁷⁰
 And batters down himself. What should I say ?
 He is so plaguy proud that the death tokens of it Cry ' No recovery ' .
 Agam. Let Ajax go to him.
 Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent.
 'Tis said he holds you well ; and will be led
 At your request a little from himself. ¹⁷⁶ Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so !
 We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
 When they go from Achilles. Shall the proud lord
 That bastes his arrogance with his own seam ¹⁸⁰
 And never suffers matter of the world
 Enter his thoughts, save such as doth revolve
 And ruminate himself—shall he be worshipping'd
 Of that we hold an idol more than he ?
 No, this thrice-worthy and right valiant lord ¹⁸⁵
 Shall not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd,
 Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit,
 As amply titled as Achilles is,
 By going to Achilles. ¹⁸⁹
 That were to enlard his fat-already pride,
 And add more coals to Cancer when he burns
 With entertaining great Hyperion.
 This lord go to him ! Jupiter forbid,
 And say in thunder ' Achilles go to him ' .
 Nest. [Aside] O, this is well ! He rubs the vein of him.
 Dio. [Aside] And how his silence drinks up this applause ! ¹⁹⁶
 Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist
 I'll pash him o'er the face.
 Agam. O, no, you shall not go.
 Ajax. An 'a be proud with me I'll phreeze his pride. ²⁰⁰
 Let me go to him.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.
 Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow !
 Nest. [Aside] How he describes himself !
 Ajax. Can he not be sociable ? ²⁰⁵
 Ulyss. [Aside] The raven chides blackness.
 Ajax. I'll let his humours blood.
 Agam. [Aside] He will be the physician that should be the patient.
 Ajax. An all men were a my mind— ²¹⁰
 Ulyss. [Aside] Wit would be out of fashion.
 Ajax. 'A should not bear it so, 'a should eat's words first. Shall pride carry it ?
 Nest. [Aside] An 'twould, you'd carry half.
 Ulyss. [Aside] 'A would have ten shares.
 Ajax. I will knead him, I'll make him supple. ²¹⁶
 Nest. [Aside] He's not yet through warm.
 Force him with praises ; pour in, pour in ; his ambition is dry.
 Ulyss. [To Agamemnon] My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.
 Nest. Our noble general, do not do so.
 Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles. ²²¹
 Ulyss. Why 'tis this naming of him does him harm.
 Here is a man—but 'tis before his face ; I will be silent.
 Nest. Wherefore should you so ?
 He is not emulous, as Achilles is. ²²⁵
 Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.
 Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter with us thus ! Would he were a Trojan !
 Nest. What a vice were it in Ajax now—
 Ulyss. If he were proud. ²³⁰
 Dio. Or covetous of praise.
 Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne.
 Dio. Or strange, or self-affected.
 Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure ;
 Praise him that gat thee, she that gave thee suck ; ²³⁵
 Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature
 Thrice-fam'd beyond, beyond all erudition ;
 But he that disciplin'd thine arms to fight—
 Let Mars divide eternity in twain
 And give him half ; and, for thy vigour, ²⁴⁰
 Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield
 To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,
 Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines
 Thy spacious and dilated parts. Here's Nestor, Instructed by the antiquary times— ²⁴⁵
 He must, he is, he cannot but be wise ;
 But pardon, father Nestor, were your days

As green as Ajax' and your brain so temper'd,
You should not have the eminence of him,
But be as Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Nest. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be rul'd by him, Lord Ajax.

Ulyss. There is no tarrying here; the hart Achilles

Keeps thicket. Please it our great general
To call together all his state of war;
Fresh kings are come to Troy. To-morrow
We must with all our main of power stand fast;

And here's a lord—come knights from east to west

And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.

Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep.

Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep. [Exeunt.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. Troy. Priam's palace.

Music sounds within. Enter PANDARUS and a Servant.

Pan. Friend, you—pray you, a word. Do you not follow the young Lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You depend upon him, I mean?

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.

Pan. You depend upon a notable gentleman; I must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord be praised!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.

Pan. Friend, know me better: I am the Lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope I shall know your honour better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace.

Pan. Grace! Not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles. What music is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir; it is music in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.

Pan. Command, I mean, friend.

Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to't, indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul—

Pan. Who, my cousin, Cressida?

Serv. No, sir, Helen. Could not you find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus; I will make a complimentary assault upon him, for my business seethes.

Serv. Sudden business! There's a stew'd phrase indeed!

Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! Fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them—especially to you, fair queen! Fair thoughts be your fair pillow.

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen. Fair prince, here is good broken music.

Par. You have broke it, cousin; and by my life, you shall make it whole again; you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance.

Helen. He is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir—

Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.

Par. Well said, my lord. Well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen. My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out. We'll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my lord: my dear lord and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus—

Helen. My Lord Pandarus, honey-sweet lord—

Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to—commends himself most affectionately to you—

Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody. If you do, our melancholy upon your head!

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that's a sweet queen, i' faith.

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words; no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you that, if the King call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.

Helen. My Lord Pandarus!

Pan. What says my sweet queen, my very sweet queen?

Par. What exploit's in hand? Where sup's he to-night?

Helen. Nay, but, my lord—

Pan. What says my sweet queen?—My cousin will fall out with you.

Helen. You must not know where he sup's.

Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer
Cressida.

Pan. No, no, no such matter; you are wide. Come, your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make's excuse.

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? No, your poor disposer's sick.

Par. I spy

Pan. You spy! What do you spy?— Come, give me an instrument. Now, sweet
queen.

Helen. Why, this is kindly done.

Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my Lord Paris.

Pan. He! No, she'll none of him; they two are twain.

Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come. I'll hear no more of this; I'll sing you a song now.

Helen. Ay, ay, prithee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.

Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love. This love will undo us all. O Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!

Pan. Love! Ay, that it shall, i' faith.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good troth, it begins so. [Sings] Love, love, nothing but love, still love, still
more!

For, oh, love's bow

Shoots buck and doe;

The shaft confounds

Not that it wounds,

But tickles still the sore.

These lovers cry, O ho, they die!

Yet that which seems the wound to kill Doth turn O ho! to ha! ha! he!

So dying love lives still.

O ho! a while, but ha! ha! ha!

O ho! groans out for ha! ha! ha!—hey ho!

Helen. In love, i' faith, to the very tip of the nose.

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love;
and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love: hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why, they are vipers. Is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's a-field today?

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy. I would fain have arm'd to-day, but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not?

Helen. He hangs the lip at something.
You know all, Lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen. I long to hear how they sped to-day. You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen. [Exit.

[Sound a retreat.

Par. They're come from the field. Let us to Priam's hall

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you

To help unarm our Hector. His stubborn buckles,

With these your white enchanting fingers
touch'd,

Shall more obey than to the edge of steel

Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall do

more

Than all the island kings—disarm great

Hector.

Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris;

Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty Gives us more palm in beauty than we have,

Yea, overshines ourself.

Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Troy. Pandarus' orchard.

Enter PANDARUS and Troilus' Boy, meeting.

Pan. How now! Where's thy master?
At my cousin Cressida's?

Boy. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. O, here he comes. How now, how
now!

Tro. Sirrah, walk off. [Exit Boy.

Pan. Have you seen my cousin?

Tro. No, Pandarus. I stalk about her door

Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks Staying for waffage. O, be thou my

Charon,

And give me swift transportance to these fields

Where I may wallow in the lily beds
Propos'd for the deserver! O gentle

Pandar,

From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted
wings,

And fly with me to Cressid!

Pan. Walk here i' th' orchard, I'll bring her straight. [Exit

Tro. I am giddy ; expectation whirls me round.
 Th' imaginary relish is so sweet
 That it enchants my sense ; what will it be
 When that the wat'ry palate tastes indeed
 Love's thrice-repured nectar ? Death, I fear me ; ²¹
 Swooning destruction ; or some joy too fine,
 Too subtle-potent, tun'd too sharp in sweetness,
 For the capacity of my ruder powers.
 I fear it much ; and I do fear besides ²⁵
 That I shall lose distinction in my joys ;
 As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps
 The enemy flying.

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. She's making her ready, she'll come straight ; you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were fray'd with a sprite. I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain ; she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta'en sparrow. [Exit.]

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom.
 My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse, ³⁵
 And all my powers do their bestowing lose,
 Like vassalage at unawares encount'ring
 The eye of majesty.

Re-enter PANDARUS with CRESSIDA.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush ? Shame's a baby.—Here she is now ; swear the oaths now to her that you have sworn to me.—What, are you gone again ? You must be watch'd ere you be made tame, must you ? Come your ways, come your ways ; an you draw backward, we'll put you i' th' fills.—Why do you not speak to her ?—Come, draw this curtain and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loath you are to offend daylight ! An 'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So, so ; rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now, a kiss in fee-farm ! Build there, carpenter ; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks i' th' river. Go to, go to. ⁵²

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds ; but she'll bereave you o' th' deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again ? Here's 'In witness whereof the parties interchangeably'. Come in, come in ; I'll go get a fire. [Exit.]

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord ? ⁵⁹

Tro. O Cressid, how often have I wish'd me thus !

Cres. Wish'd, my lord ! The gods grant—O my lord !

Tro. What should they grant ? What makes this pretty abruption ? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love ? ⁶⁴

Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils of cherubins ; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear. To fear the worst oft cures the worse. ⁷⁰

Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear ! In all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither ?

Tro. Nothing, but our undertakings when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers ; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstrosity in love, lady, that the will is infinite, and the execution confin'd ; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit. ⁸⁰

Cres. They say all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform ; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters ? ⁸⁶

Tro. Are there such ? Such are not we. Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove ; our head shall go bare till merit crown it. No perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present. We will not name desert before his birth ; and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith : Troilus shall be such to Cressid as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth ; and what truth can speak truest not truer than Troilus. ⁹⁵

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord ?

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. What, blushing still ? Have you not done talking yet ?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you. ¹⁰⁰

Pan. I thank you for that ; if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord ; if he flinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages : your uncle's word and my firm faith. ¹⁰⁵

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too : our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being won ; they are burs, I can tell you ; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. Boldness comes to me now and brings me heart. 110

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day

For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win ?

Cres. Hard to seem won ; but I was won, my lord,

With the first glance that ever—pardon me. 115

If I confess much, you will play the tyrant. I love you now ; but till now not so much But I might master it. In faith, I lie ; My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown

Too headstrong for their mother. See, we fools ! 120

Why have I blabb'd ? Who shall be true to us,

When we are so unsecret to ourselves ?

But, though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you you not ;

And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man,

Or that we women had men's privilege 125

Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue,

For in this rapture I shall surely speak The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence,

Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws 129

My very soul of counsel. Stop my mouth.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

Pan. Pretty, i' faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me ;

'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiss. I am asham'd. O heavens ! what have I done ? 135

For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid !

Pan. Leave ! An you take leave till to-morrow morning—

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady ? 140

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try.

I have a kind of self resides with you ; But an unkind self, that it self will leave 145

To be another's fool. I would be gone.

Where is my wit ? I know not what I speak.

Tro. Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love ;

And fell so roundly to a large confession 150 To angle for your thoughts ; but you are wise—

Or else you love not ; for to be wise and love

Exceeds man's might ; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O that I thought it could be in a woman—

As, if it can, I will presume in you— 155

To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love ;

To keep her constancy in plight and youth,

Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind

That doth renew swifter than blood decays !

Or that persuasion could but thus convince me 160

That my integrity and truth to you Might be affronted with the match and weight

Of such a winnowed purity in love.

How were I then uplifted ! but, alas,

I am as true as truth's simplicity, 165

And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. O virtuous fight,

When right with right wars who shall be most right !

True swains in love shall in the world to come

Approve their truth by Troilus, when their rhymes, 170

Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,

Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration—

As true as steel, as plantage to the moon,

As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,

As iron to adamant, as earth to th' centre—

Yet, after all comparisons of truth, 176

As truth's authentic author to be cited,

'As true as Troilus' shall crown up the verse

And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be !

If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth, 180

When time is old and hath forgot itself,

When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy,

And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,

And mighty states characterless are grated

To dusty nothing—yet let memory 185

From false to false, among false maids in love,

Upbraid my falsehood when th' have said

'As false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,

As fox to lamb, or wolf to heifer's calf,

Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son'—

Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood, 191

'As false as Cressid'.

Pan. Go to, a bargain made ; seal it, seal it ; I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand ; here my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be call'd to the world's end after my name—call them all

Pandars ; let all constant men be Troiluses,

all false women Cressids, and all brokers between Pandars. Say 'Amen'. 200

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber and a bed ; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death. Away!

And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here,

Bed, chamber, pander, to provide this gear!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The Greek camp.

Flourish. Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, NESTOR, AJAX, MENELAUS, and CALCHAS.

Cal. Now, Princes, for the service I have done,

Th' advantage of the time prompts me aloud

To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind

That, through the sight I bear in things to come,

I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession, ⁵
Incurr'd a traitor's name, expos'd myself
From certain and possess'd conveniences
To doubtful fortunes, sequest'ring from me all

That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition, ⁹

Made tame and most familiar to my nature;
And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted—

I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit

Out of those many regist'ed in promise, ¹⁵
Which you say live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What wouldst thou of us, Trojan?
Make demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner call'd Antenor,

Yesterday took ; Troy holds him very dear.
Oft have you—often have you thanks therefore— ²⁰

Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy hath still denied ; but this Antenor,

I know, is such a wrest in their affairs
That their negotiations all must slack ²⁴

Wanting his manage ; and they will almost Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,

In change of him. Let him be sent, great Princes,

And he shall buy my daughter ; and her presence

Shall quite strike off all service I have done
In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him, ³⁰
And bring us Cressid hither. Calchas shall have

What he requests of us. Good Diomed, Furnish you fairly for this interchange ;

Withal, bring word if Hector will to-morrow

Be answer'd in his challenge. Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake ; and 'tis a burden ³⁶

Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt Diomedes and Calchas.]

ACHILLES and PATROCLUS stand in their tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands i' th' entrance of his tent.

Please it our general pass strangely by him,
As if he were forgot ; and, Princes all, ⁴⁰

Lay negligent and loose regard upon him.
I will come last. 'Tis like he'll question me

Why such unplausive eyes are bent, why turn'd on him ?

If so, I have derision med'cinable

To use between your strangeness and his pride, ⁴⁵

Which his own will shall have desire to drink.

It may do good. Pride hath no other glass
To show itself but pride ; for supple knees

Feed arrogance and are the proud man's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on ⁵⁰

A form of strangeness as we pass along.
So do each lord ; and either greet him not,

Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more

Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What comes the general to speak with me ? ⁵⁵

You know my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy.

Agam. What says Achilles ? Would he aught with us ?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general ?

Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord. ⁶⁰

Agam. The better.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Nestor.]

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you ? How do you ? [Exit.]

Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me ?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus ? ⁶⁵

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha ?

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit.]

Achil. What mean these fellows ? Know they not Achilles ? ⁷⁰

Patr. They pass by strangely. They were us'd to bend,

To send their smiles before them to Achilles,
To come as humbly as they us'd to creep

To holy altars.

Achil. What, am I poor of late ?
'Tis certain, greatness, once fall'n out with fortune, ⁷⁵

Must fall out with men too. What the declin'd is,

He shall as soon read in the eyes of others
As feel in his own fall; for men, like butterflies,

Show not their mealy wings but to the summer;

And not a man for being simply man 80
Hath any honour, but honour for those
honours

That are without him, as place, riches, and
favour,

Prizes of accident, as oft as merit;
Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,

The love that lean'd on them as slippery
too, 85

Doth one pluck down another, and together
Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:

Fortune and I are friends; I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess
Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find out 90

Something not worth in me such rich beholding

As they have often given. Here is Ulysses.
I'll interrupt his reading.

How now, Ulysses!

Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son!
Achil. What are you reading?

Ulyss. A strange fellow here Writes me that man—how dearly ever
parted, 95

How much in having, or without or in—Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,

Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;

As when his virtues shining upon others 100
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses.
The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends itself
To others' eyes; nor doth the eye itself—
That most pure spirit of sense—behold itself, 106

Not going from itself; but eye to eye opposed

Salutes each other with each other's form;
For speculation turns not to itself

Till it hath travell'd, and is mirror'd there Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all. 111

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position—
It is familiar—but at the author's drift;
Who, in his circumstance, expressly proves
That no man is the lord of anything, 115
Though in and of him there be much consisting,

Till he communicate his parts to others;
Nor doth he of himself know them for
aught

Till he behold them formed in th' applause
808

Where th' are extended; who, like an arch, reverb'rate 120

The voice again; or, like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in
this;

And apprehended here immediately
Th' unknown Ajax. Heavens, what a man is there! 125

A very horse that has he knows not what!
Nature, what things there are Most abject in regard and dear in use!

What things again most dear in the esteem
And poor in worth! Now shall we see tomorrow— 130

An act that very chance doth throw upon
him—

Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some men
do,

While some men leave to do!
How some men creep in skittish Fortune's hall,

Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes! 135
How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is fasting in his wantonness!

To see these Grecian lords!—why, even
already

They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder,
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
And great Troy shrinking. 141

Achil. I do believe it; for they pass'd by
me

As misers do by beggars—neither gave to
me

Good word nor look. What, are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his
back, 145

Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-siz'd monster of ingratitude.

Those scraps are good deeds past, which are devour'd

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done. Perseverance, dear my lord, 150

Keeps honour bright. To have done is to hang

Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
In monumental mock'ry. Take the instan-
way;

For honour travels in a strait so narrow Where one but goes abreast. Keep then the path, 155

For emulation hath a thousand sons
That one by one pursue; if you give way,

Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an ent'red tide they all rush by

And leave you hindmost; 160
Or, like a gallant horse fall'n in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear,

O'er-run and trampled on. Then what they do in present,

Though less than yours in past, must o'ertop yours;

For Time is like a fashionable host, 165

That slightly shakes his parting guest by
th' hand ;
And with his arms out-stretch'd, as he would fly, Grasps in the comer. The welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was ; 170
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating Time.
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin— 175
That all with one consent praise new-born
gawds,
Though they are made and moulded of things past,
And give to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted. 179
The present eye praises the present object.
Then marvel not, thou great and complete
man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax,
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye Than what stirs not. The cry went once on
thee,
And still it might, and yet it may again, 185
If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive
And case thy reputation in thy tent, Whose glorious deeds but in these fields of late
Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods
themsel. es,
And drave great Mars to faction.
Achil. Of this my privacy 190
I have strong reasons.
Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroical.
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters.
Achil. Ha ! known !
Ulyss. Is that a wonder ? 195
The providence that's in a watchful state Knows almost every grain of Plutus' gold ; Finds bottom in th' uncomprehensive depths ;
Keeps place with thought, and almost, like the gods, 199
Do thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.
There is a mystery—with whom relation
Durst never meddle—in the soul of state,
Which hath an operation more divine
Than breath or pen can give expressure to.
All the commerce that you have had with
Troy 205
As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord ;
And better would it fit Achilles much
To throw down Hector than Polyxena.
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at
home,
When fame shall in our island, sound her trump, 210

And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing
' Great Hector's sister did Achilles win ;
But our great Ajax bravely beat down
him'.
Farewell, my lord. I as your lover speak.
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break. [Exit.
Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd you. 216
A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath'd than an effeminate
man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for
this ;
They think my little stomach to the war 220
And your great love to me restrains you
thus.
Sweet, rouse yourself ; and the weak
wanton Cupid Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to airy air.
Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector ?
Patr. Ay, and perhaps receive much honour by him. 226
Achil. I see my reputation is at stake ;
My fame is shrewdly gor'd.
Patr. O, then, beware :
Those wounds heal ill that men do give
themselves ;
Omission to do what is necessary 230
Seals a commission to a blank of danger ;
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
Even then when they sit idly in the sun.
Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet
Patroclus.
I'll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him 235
T' invite the Trojan lords, after the combat,
To see us here unarm'd. I have a woman's longing,
An appetite that I am sick withal, 238
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace ;
To talk with him, and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view.

Enter THERSITES.

A labour sav'd !

Ther. A wonder !

Achil. What ?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field asking for himself. 245

Achil. How so ?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an heroical cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be ? 250

Ther. Why, 'a stalks up and down like a peacock—a stride and a stand ; ruminates like an hostess that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning, bites

his lip with a politic regard, as who should say 'There were wit in this head, an 'twould out'; and so there is; but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck i' th' combat, he'll break't himself in vain-glory. He knows not me. I said 'Good morrow, Ajax'; and he replies 'Thanks, Agamemnon'. What think you of this man that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! A man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin. ²⁶⁴

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him, Thersites.

Ther. Who, I? Why, he'll answer nobody; he professes not answering. Speaking is for beggars: he wears his tongue in's arms. I will put on his presence. Let Patroclus make his demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax. ²⁶⁹

Achil. To him, Patroclus. Tell him I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarm'd to my tent; and to procure safe conduct for his person of the magnanimous and most illustrious six-or-seven-times-honour'd Captain General of the Grecian army, et cetera, Agamemnon. Do this. ²⁷⁵

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax!

Ther. Hum!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles—

Ther. Ha! ²⁷⁹

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent—

Ther. Hum!

Patr. And to procure safe conduct from Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon!

Patr. Ay, my lord. ²⁸⁵

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to't?

Ther. God buy you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir. ²⁸⁹

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven of the clock it will go one way or other. Howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare ye well, with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he? ²⁹⁵

Ther. No, but he's out a tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knock'd out his brains I know not; but, I am sure, none; unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on. ²⁹⁹

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight.

Ther. Let me carry another to his horse; for that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fountain stirr'd;

And I myself see not the bottom of it. ³⁰⁴

[Exeunt Achilles and Patroclus.]

Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it. I had rather be a tick in a sheep than such a valiant ignorance. [Exit.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Troy. A street.

Enter, at one side, ÆNEAS, and Servant with a torch; at another, PARIS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, DIOMEDES the Grecian, and Others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! Who is that there?

Dei. It is the Lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the Prince there in person?

Had I so good occasion to lie long

As you, Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business ⁵

Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dio. That's my mind too. Good morrow, Lord Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Æneas—take his hand:

Witness the process of your speech, wherein You told how Diomed, a whole week by days, ¹⁰

Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, valiant sir, During all question of the gentle truce;

But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance

As heart can think or courage execute. ¹⁵

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces.

Our bloods are now in calm; and so long health!

But when contention and occasion meet, By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life

With all my force, pursuit, and policy. ²⁰

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly

With his face backward. In humane gentleness,

Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life, Welcome indeed! By Venus' hand I swear

No man alive can love in such a sort ²⁵

The thing he means to kill, more excellently. Dio. We sympathise. Jove let Æneas live,

If to my sword his fate be not the glory, A thousand complete courses of the sun!

But in mine emulous honour let him die ³⁰

With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow!

Æne. We know each other well.

Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most spiteful'st gentle greeting,

The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of. ³⁵

What business, lord, so early ?

Æne. I was sent for to the King ; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you : 'twas to bring this Greek ³⁸

To Calchas' house, and there to render him, For the unfreed Antenor, the fair Cressid. Let's have your company ; or, if you please, Haste there before us. I constantly believe—

Or rather call my thought a certain knowledge—

My brother Troilus lodges there to-night. Rouse him and give him note of our approach, ⁴⁵

With the whole quality wherefore ; I fear We shall be much unwelcome.

Æne. That I assure you : Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece

Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help ; The bitter disposition of the time ⁵⁰ Will have it so. On, lord ; we'll follow you.

Æne. Good morrow, all.

[Exit with servant.]

Par. And tell me, noble Diomed—faith, tell me true,

Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship— Who in your thoughts deserves fair Helen best, ⁵⁵

Myself or Menelaus ?

Dio. Both alike :

He merits well to have her that doth seek her,

Not making any scruple of her soilure, With such a hell of pain and world of charge ;

And you as well to keep her that defend her, ⁶⁰

Not palating the taste of her dishonour, With such a costly loss of wealth and friends.

He like a puling cuckold would drink up The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece ;

You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins ⁶⁵ Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors.

Both merits pois'd, each weighs nor less nor more ;

But he as he, the heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your country-woman.

Dio. She's bitter to her country. Hear me, Paris : ⁷⁰

For every false drop in her bawdy veins A Grecian's life hath sunk ; for every scruple

Of her contaminated carrion weight A Trojan hath been slain ; since she could speak,

She hath not given so many good words breath ⁷⁵

As for her Greeks and Trojans suff'ered death.

Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do, Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy ; But we in silence hold this virtue well : ⁷⁹ We'll not commend what we intend to sell. Here lies our way. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Troy. The court of Pandarus' house.

Enter TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself ; the morn is cold.

Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down ;

He shall unbolt the gates.

Tro. Trouble him not ; To bed, to bed ! Sleep kill those pretty eyes,

And give a soft attachment to thy senses ⁵ As infants' empty of all thought !

Cres. Good morrow, then.

Tro. I prithee now, to bed.

Cres. Are you aweary of me ?

Tro. O Cressida ! but that the busy day, Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald crows,

And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer, ¹⁰

I would not from thee.

Cres. Night hath been too brief.

Tro. Beshrew the witch ! with venomous wights she stays As tediously as hell, but flies the grasps of love

With wings more momentary-swift than thought.

You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cres. Prithee tarry. ¹⁵

You men will never tarry.

O foolish Cressid ! I might have still held off,

And then you would have tarried. Hark ! there's one up.

Pan. [Within] What's all the doors open here ?

Tro. It is your uncle. ²⁰

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. A pestilence on him ! Now will he be mocking.

I shall have such a life !

Pan. How now, how now ! How go maidenheads ? Here, you maid ! Where's my cousin Cressid ?

Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle. ²⁵

You bring me to do, and then you flout me too.

Pan. To do what ? to do what ? Let her say what. What have I brought you to do ?

Cres. Come, come, beshrew your heart ! You'll ne'er be good,

Nor suffer others. ³⁰

Pan. Ha, ha ! Alas, poor wretch ! a poor capocchia! hast not slept to-night? Would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? A bugbear take him!

Cres. Did not I tell you? Would he were knock'd i' th' head! [One knocks. Who's that at door? Good uncle, go and see.

My lord, come you again into my chamber. You smile and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha! ha!

Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing. [Knock. How earnestly they knock! Pray you come in:

I would not for half Troy have you seen here. [Exeunt Troilus and Cressida.

Pan. Who's there? What's the matter? Will you beat down the door? How now? What's the matter?

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

Pan. Who's there? My lord Æneas? By my troth, I knew you not. What news with you so early?

Æne. Is not Prince Troilus here?

Pan. Here! What should he do here?

Æne. Come, he is here, my lord; do not deny him.

It doth import him much to speak with me.

Pan. Is he here, say you? It's more than I know, I'll be sworn. For my own part, I came in late. What should he do here?

Æne. Who!—nay, then. Come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you are ware; you'll be so true to him to be false to him. Do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither; go.

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. How now! What's the matter?

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,

My matter is so rash. There is at hand Paris your brother, and Deiphobus, The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith, Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour, We must give up to Diomedes' hand The Lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded?

Æne. By Priam, and the general state of Troy.

They are at hand and ready to effect it.

Tro. How my achievements mock me! I will go meet them; and, my lord Æneas, We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne. Good, good, my lord, the secrets of neighbour Pandar

Have not more gift in taciturnity.

[Exeunt Troilus and Æneas.]

Pan. Is't possible? No sooner got but lost? The devil take Antenor! The young prince will go mad. A plague upon Antenor! I would they had broke's neck.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Cres. How now! What's the matter? Who was here?

Pan. Ah, ah!

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? Where's my lord? Gone? Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?

Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above!

Cres. O the gods! What's the matter?

Pan. Pray thee, get thee in. Would thou hadst ne'er been born! I knew thou wouldst be his death! O, poor gentleman! A plague upon Antenor!

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art chang'd for Antenor; thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus. 'Twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it.

Cres. O you immortal gods! I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle. I have forgot my father;

I know no touch of consanguinity, No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me

As the sweet Troilus. O you gods divine, Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood,

If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,

Do to this body what extremes you can, But the strong base and building of my love Is as the very centre of the earth, Drawing all things to it. I'll go in and weep—

Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks,

Crack my clear voice with sobs and break my heart,

With sounding 'Troilus'. I will not go from Troy. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Troy. A street before Pandarus' house.

Enter PARIS, TROILUS, ÆNEAS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, and DIOMEDES.

Par. It is great morning; and the hour prefix'd

For her delivery to this valiant Greek Comes fast upon. Good my brother Troilus,

Tell you the lady what she is to do, And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk into her house.
I'll bring her to the Grecian presently ;
And to his hand when I deliver her,
Think it an altar, and thy brother Troilus
A priest, there off'ring to it his own heart.
[Exit.]

Par. I know what 'tis to love, ¹⁰
And would, as I shall pity, I could help !
Please you walk in, my lords. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Troy. Pandarus' house.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation ?
The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
And violenteth in a sense as strong As that which causeth it. How can I moderate it ? ⁵

If I could temporize with my affections
Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
The like allayment could I give my grief.
My love admits no qualifying dross ; ⁹
No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes. Ah, sweet ducks !

Cres. O Troilus ! Troilus !

[Embracing him.]
Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here !
Let me embrace too. 'O heart,' as the goodly saying is,

O heart, heavy heart, ¹⁵

Why sigh'st thou without breaking ?
where he answers again

Because thou canst not ease thy smart

By friendship nor by speaking. ¹⁹
There was never a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse. We see it, we see it. How now, lams !

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a purity

That the bless'd gods, as angry with my fancy,
More bright in zeal than the devotion which ²⁵

Cold lips blow to their deities, take thee
from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy ?

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay ; 'tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true that I must go from Troy ?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too ? ³⁰

Tro. From Troy and Troilus.

Cres. Is't possible ?

Tro. And suddenly ; where injury of chance

Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by
All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents ³⁵

Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows

Even in the birth of our own labouring
breath.

We two, that with so many thousand sighs
Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves ³⁹

With the rude brevity and discharge of one.
Injurious time now with a robber's haste Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how.

As many farewells as be stars in heaven,
With distinct breath and consign'd kisses
to them,

He fumbles up into a loose adieu, ⁴⁵
And scants us with a single famish'd kiss,
Distasted with the salt of broken tears.

Æne. [Within] My lord, is the lady ready ?

Tro. Hark ! you are call'd. Some say the Genius so

Cries 'Come' to him that instantly must die. ⁵⁰

Bid them have patience ; she shall come
anon.

Pan. Where are my tears ? Rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by th' root ? [Exit.]

Cres. I must then to the Grecians ?

Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks ! ⁵⁵

When shall we see again ?

Tro. Hear me, my love. Be thou but true of heart—

Cres. I true ! how now ! What wicked deem is this ?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,

For it is parting from us. ⁶⁰

I speak not 'Be thou true' as fearing thee,
For I will throw my glove to Death himself
That there's no maculation in thy heart ;
But 'Be thou true' say I to fashion in My sequent protestation : be thou true, ⁶⁵
And I will see thee.

Cres. O, you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers

As infinite as imminent ! But I'll be true.

Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger.
Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see you ? ⁷⁰

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels
To give thee nightly visitation.

But yet be true.

Cres. O heavens ! 'Be true' again !

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love.

The Grecian youths are full of quality ; ⁷⁵ They're loving, well compos'd with gifts of
nature,

And flowing o'er with arts and exercise.
How novelties may move, and parts with
person,

Alas, a kind of godly jealousy,

Which I beseech you call a virtuous sin, 80
Makes me afeard.

Cres. O heavens ! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain, then !

In this I do not call your faith in question
So mainly as my merit. I cannot sing, 84
Nor heel the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk,
Nor play at subtle games—fair virtues all,
To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant ;

But I can tell that in each grace of these
There lurks a still and dumb-discoursive
devil

That tempts most cunningly. But be not tempted. 90

Cres. Do you think I will ?

Tro. No.

But something may be done that we will
not ;

And sometimes we are devils to ourselves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers, 95

Presuming on their changeful potency.

Æne. [Within] Nay, good my lord !

Tro. Come, kiss ; and let us part.

Par. [Within] Brother Troilus !

Tro. Good brother, come you hither ;
And bring Æneas and the Grecian with you.

Cres. My lord, will you be true ? 100

Tro. Who, I ? Alas, it is my vice, my fault !

Whiles others fish with craft for great opinion,

I with great truth catch mere simplicity ;
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper
crowns,

With truth and plainness I do wear mine
bare. 105

Enter ÆNEAS, PARIS, ANTENOR, DEI-PHOBUS, and DIOMEDES.

Fear not my truth : the moral of my wit
Is ' plain and true ' ; there's all the reach
of it.

Welcome, Sir Diomed ! Here is the lady
Which for Antenor we deliver you ; 109

At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand,
And by the way possess thee what she is.
Entreat her fair ; and, by my soul, fair
Greek,

If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Ilion.

Dio. Fair Lady Cressid, 115

So please you, save the thanks this prince expects.

The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,

Pleads your fair usage ; and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously 120

To shame the zeal of my petition to thee

In praising her. I tell thee, lord of Greece,
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.
I charge thee use her well, even for my charge ; 125

For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not, Though the great bulk Achilles be thy
guard,

I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. O, be not mov'd, Prince Troilus.
Let me be privileg'd by my place and
message

To be a speaker free : when I am hence 130
I'll answer to my lust. And know you, lord, I'll nothing do on charge : to her own
worth

She shall be priz'd. But that you say
' Be't so ' ,

I speak it in my spirit and honour, ' No ' .

Tro. Come, to the port. I'll tell thee,
Diomed, 135

This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy
head.

Lady, give me your hand ; and, as we walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

[Exeunt Troilus, Cressida, and Diomedes.
[Sound trumpet.

Par. Hark ! Hector's trumpet.

Æne. How have we spent this morning !
The Prince must think me tardy and remiss,
That swore to ride before him to the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault. Come, come to field with him.

Dei. Let us make ready straight.

Æne. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity

Let us address to tend on Hector's heels. 145
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth and single chivalry.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. The Grecian Camp. Lists set out.

Enter AJAX, armed ; AGAMEMNON, ACHIL-LES, PATROCLUS, MENELAUS, ULYSSES, NESTOR, and Othe's.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment
fresh and fair,

Anticipating time with starting courage.
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thou dreadful Ajax, that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combatant, 5

And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse.
Now crack thy lungs and split thy brazen pipe ;

Blow, villain, till thy sphered bias cheek
Out-swell the colic of puff'd Aquilon.

Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes
spout blood : 10

Thou blowest for Hector. [Trumpet sounds.

Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achil. 'Tis but early days.

Enter DIOMEDES, with CRESSIDA.

Agam. Is not yond Diomed, with Calchas' daughter ?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait :

He rises on the toe. That spirit of his ¹⁵
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Agam. Is this the lady Cressid ?

Dio. Even she.

Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular ;
'Twere better she were kiss'd in general. ²¹

Nest. And very courtly counsel : I'll begin.

So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady.

Achilles bids you welcome. ²⁵

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now ;

For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment,
And parted thus you and your argument.

Ulyss. O deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns ! ³⁰

For which we lose our heads to gild his horns.

Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss ; this, mine—[Kisses her again.]

Patroclus kisses you.

Men. O, this is trim !

Patr. Paris and I kiss evermore for him.

Men. I'll have my kiss, sir. Lady, by your leave. ³⁵

Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive ?

Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to live,
The kiss you take is better than you give ;
Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot ; I'll give you three for one. ⁴⁰

Cres. You are an odd man ; give even or give none.

Men. An odd man, lady ? Every man is odd.

Cres. No, Paris is not ; for you know 'tis true

That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Men. You fillip me o' th' head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn. ⁴⁵

Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn.

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you ?

Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, beg then.

Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake give me a kiss

When Helen is a maid again, and his. ⁵⁰

Cres. I am your debtor ; claim it when 'tis due.

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you.

Dio. Lady, a word. I'll bring you to your father. [Exit with Cressida.]

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her !

There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip, ⁵⁵

Nay, her foot speaks ; her wanton spirits look out

At every joint and motive of her body.

O these encounterers so glib of tongue

That give a coasting welcome ere it comes,

And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts ⁶⁰

To every ticklish reader ! Set them down

For sluttish spoils of opportunity,

And daughters of the game.

[Trumpet within.]

All. The Troyans' trumpet.

Enter HECTOR, armed ; ÆNEAS, TROILUS, PARIS, HELENUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

Æne. Hail, all the state of Greece ! What shall be done ⁶⁵

To him that victory commands ? Or do you purpose

A victor shall be known ? Will you the knights

Shall to the edge of all extremity

Pursue each other, or shall they be divided By any voice or order of the field ? ⁷⁰

Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it ?

Æne. He cares not ; he'll obey conditions.

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector ; but securely done,

A little proudly, and great deal misprizing The knight oppos'd.

Æne. If not Achilles, sir, ⁷⁵
What is your name ?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.

Æne. Therefore Achilles. But whate'er, know this :

In the extremity of great and little

Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector ;

The one almost as infinite as all, ⁸⁰

The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,

And that which looks like pride is courtesy.

This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood ; In love whereof half Hector stays at home ;

Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek ⁸⁵

This blended knight, half Trojan and half Greek.

Achil. A maiden battle then ? O, I perceive you !

Re-enter DIOMEDES.

Agam. Here is Sir Diomed. Go, gentle knight, Stand by our Ajax. As you and Lord Æneas
Consent upon the order of their fight, 90
So be it; either to the uttermost,
Or else a breath. The combatants being kin Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

[Ajax and Hector enter the lists.

Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy? 95

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true
knight;

Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of
word;

Speaking in deeds and deedless in his
tongue;

Not soon provok'd, nor being provok'd
soon calm'd;

His heart and hand both open and both
free; 100

For what he has he gives, what thinks he shows,

Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty,

Nor dignifies an impair thought with
breath;

Manly as Hector, but more dangerous;
For Hector in his blaze of wrath subscribes
To tender objects, but he in heat of action
Is more vindicative than jealous love. 107

They call him Troilus, and on him erect
A second hope as fairly built as Hector.

Thus says Æneas, one that knows the
youth 110

Even to his inches, and, with private soul,
Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me.

[Alarum. Hector and Ajax fight.

Agam. They are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!

Tro. Hector, thou sleep'st;
Awake thee. 115

Agam. His blows are well dispos'd. There, Ajax! [Trumpets cease.

Dio. You must no more.

Æne. Princes, enough, so please you.

Ajax. I am not warm yet; let us fight
again.

Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hect. Why, then will I no more.
Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's
son, 120

A cousin-german to great Priam's seed;
The obligation of our blood forbids

A gory emulation 'twixt us twain:
Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so

That thou could'st say 'This hand is Grecian all, 125

And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg
All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's
blood

Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister Bounds in my father's'; by Jove multi-potent,

Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member 130

Wherein my sword had not impressure
made

Of our rank feud; but the just gods gainsay
That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy
mother,

My sacred aunt, should by my mortal
sword

Be drained! Let me embrace thee, Ajax. 135

By him that thunders, thou hast lusty
arms;

Hector would have them fall upon him
thus.

Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector.
Thou art too gentle and too free a man.

I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence
A great addition earned in thy death. 141

Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable,
On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st
Oyes

Cries 'This is he' could promise to himself
A thought of added honour torn from
Hector. 145

Æne. There is expectance here from both the sides

What further you will do.

Hect. We'll answer it:
The issue is embracement. Ajax, farewell.

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,
As sold I have the chance, I would desire
My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish; and great
Achilles

Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant
Hector.

Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to
me,

And signify this loving interview 155

To the expecters of our Trojan part; Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my cousin;

I will go eat with thee, and see your knights.

Agamemnon and the rest of the Greeks come forward.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet
us here.

Hect. The worthiest of them tell me name
by name; 160

But for Achilles, my own searching eyes
Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agam. Worthy all arms! as welcome as to one

That would be rid of such an enemy.

But that's no welcome. Understand more clear, 165

What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion;

But in this extant moment, faith and troth, Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing,

Bids thee with most divine integrity, 170
From heart of very heart, great Hector,
welcome.

Hect. I thank thee, most imperious
Agamemnon.

Agam. [To Troilus] My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to you.

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting.

You brace of warlike brothers, welcome
hither. 175

Hect. Who must we answer ?

Aene. The noble Menelaus.

Hect. O you, my lord ? By Mars his gauntlet, thanks !

Mock not that I affect the untraded oath ;
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus'
glove.

She's well, but bade me not commend her
to you. 180

Men. Name her not now, sir ; she's a deadly theme.

Hect. O, pardon ; I offend.

Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee oft,

Labouring for destiny, make cruel way Through ranks of Greekish youth ; and I have seen thee, 185

As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed,
Despising many forfeits and subduements,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword
i' th' air,

Not letting it decline on the declined ;
That I have said to some my standers-by
'Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life !' 191

And I have seen thee pause and take thy
breath,

When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,

Like an Olympian wrestling. This have I
seen ;

But this thy countenance, still lock'd in
steel, 195

I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire, And once fought with him. He was a soldier good,

But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee. O, let an old man embrace
thee ;

And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.

Aene. 'Tis the old Nestor. 201

Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,

That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with
time.

Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp
thee.

Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention 205

As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.

Nest. Ha !

By this white beard, I'd fight with thee
to-morrow.

Well, welcome, welcome ! I have seen the
time. 210

Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city
stands,

When we have here her base and pillar
by us.

Hect. I know your favour, Lord Ulysses,
well.

Ah, sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan
dead,

Since first I saw yourself and Diomed 215
In Ilion on your Greekish embassy.

Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue.

My prophecy is but half his journey yet ;
For yonder walls, that pertly front your
town,

Yond towers, whose wanton tops do buss
the clouds, 220

Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you.

There they stand yet ; and modestly I
think

The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood. The end crowns
all ;

And that old common arbitrator, Time, 225
Will one day end it.

Ulyss. So to him we leave it.

Most gentle and most valiant Hector,
welcome.

After the General, I beseech you next
To feast with me and see me at my tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses,
thou ! 230

Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee ;
I have with exact view perus'd thee,
Hector,

And quoted joint by joint.

Hect. Is this Achilles ?

Achil. I am Achilles.

Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee ; let me look on thee. 235

Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hect. Nay, I have done already.

Achil. Thou art too brief. I will the second time,

As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.

Hect. O, like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er ;

But there's more in me than thou understand'st. 240

Why dost thou so oppress me with thine
eye ?

Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body

Shall I destroy him ? Whether there, or there, or there ?

That I may give the local wound a
name.

And make distinct the very breach where-
out 245

Hector's great spirit flew. Answer me,
heavens.

Hect. It would discredit the blest gods,
proud man,

To answer such a question. Stand again.
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly
As to prenominate in nice conjecture 250
Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achil. I tell thee yea.

Hect. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so, I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well;

For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor
there;

But, by the forge that stithied Mars his helm, 255

I'll kill thee everywhere, yea, o'er and o'er.
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag.
His insolence draws folly from my lips;
But I'll endeavour deeds to match these
words,

Or may I never—

Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin; 260
And you, Achilles, let these threats alone
Till accident or purpose bring you to't.
You may have every day enough of Hector,
If you have stomach. The general state,

I fear, 264
Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.

Hect. I pray you let us see you in the field;

We have had pelting wars since you refus'd
The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death;
To-night all friends.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match. 270

Agam. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent;

There in the full convive we; afterwards,
As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall Concur together, severally entreat him.

Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets
blow, 275

That this great soldier may his welcome
know.

[Exeunt all but Troilus and Ulysses.]

Tro. My Lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech
you,

In what place of the field doth Calchas
keep?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely
Troilus. 279

There Diomed doth feast with him to-night,
Who neither looks upon the heaven nor
earth,

But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressid.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you
so much,

After we part from Agamemnon's tent, 285
To bring me thither?

818

Ulyss. You shall command me, sir.
As gentle tell me of what honour was This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover
there

That wails her absence?

Tro. O, sir, to such as boasting show their scars 290

A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord?
She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth;

But still sweet love is food for fortune's
tooth. [Exeunt.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. The Grecian camp. Before the tent of Achilles.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine to-night,

Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow.
Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

Achil. How now, thou core of envy!
Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the
news? 3

Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seemest, and idol of idiot worshippers, here's a letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

Patr. Who keeps the tent now? 10

Ther. The surgeon's box or the patient's wound.

Patr. Well said Adversity! and what needs these tricks?

Ther. Prithee, be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk; thou art said to be Achilles' male varlet.

Patr. Male varlet, you rogue! What's
that? 15

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now, the rotten diseases of the south, the guts-gripping ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel in the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas,
limekilns i' th' palm, incurable bone-ache,
and the rivelled fee-simple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discoveries! 22

Patr. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee? 25

Patr. Why, no, you ruinous butt; you whoreson indistinguishable cur, no.

Ther. No! Why art thou, then, exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of sleid silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah, how the poor world is pest' red with such water-flies—diminutives of nature!

Patr. Out, gall!

Ther. Finch egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite

From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle.

Here is a letter from Queen Hecuba,
A token from her daughter, my fair love,
Both taxing me and gaging me to keep An oath that I have sworn. I will not break
it.

Fall Greeks; fail fame; honour or go or
stay;

My major vow lies here, this I'll obey.
Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my
tent;

This night in banqueting must all be spent.
Away, Patroclus! [Exit with Patroclus.]

Ther. With too much blood and too little brain these two may run mad; but, if with too much brain and too little blood they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamem-non, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails, but he has not so much brain as ear-wax; and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull, the primitive statue and oblique memorial of cuckolds, a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg—to what form but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turn him to? To an ass, were nothing: he is both ass and ox. To an ox, were nothing:
he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care; but to be Menelaus, I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites; for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hey-day! sprites and fires!

Enter HECTOR, TROILUS, AJAX, AGAMEM-NON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, MENELAUS, and DIOMEDES, with lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;

There, where we see the lights.

Hect. I trouble you.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Re-enter ACHILLES.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome Princes all.

Agam. So now, fair Prince of Troy, I bid
good night;

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks, and good night to the Greeks' general.

Men. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet Lord Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught! 'Sweet' quoth 'a? Sweet sink, sweet sewer!

Achil. Good night and welcome, both at once, to those

That go or tarry.

Agam. Good night.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Menelaus.]

Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too,
Diomed,

Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important
business,

The tide whereof is now. Good night, great Hector.

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulyss. [Aside to Troilus] Follow his torch;
he goes to Calchas' tent;

I'll keep you company.

Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so, good night. *[Exit Diomedes;
Ulysses and Troilus following.]*

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exeunt all but Thersites.]

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when he leers than I will a serpent when he hisses. He will spend his mouth and promise, like Brabblers the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it: it is prodigious, there will come some change; the sun borrows of the moon when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector than not to dog him.
They say he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent. I'll after. Nothing but lechery! All incontinent varlets!

[Exit.]

SCENE II. The Grecian camp. Before Calchas' tent.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. What, are you up here, ho? Speak.

Cal. [Within] Who calls?

Dio. Diomed. Calchas, I think. Where's your daughter?

Cal. [Within] She comes to you.

*Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES, at a distance;
after them THERSITES.*

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid comes forth to him.

Dio. How now, my charge!

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian! Hark, a word with you.

Tro. Yea, so familiar!

Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff; she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember?

Cres. Remember ? Yes.
 Dio. Nay, but do, then ;
 And let your mind be coupled with your words. 15
 Tro. What shall she remember ?
 Ulyss. List !
 Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.
 Ther. Roguery !
 Dio. Nay, then— 20
 Cres. I'll tell you what—
 Dio. Fo, fo ! come, tell a pin ; you are a forsworn—Cres. In faith, I cannot. What would you have me do ?
 Ther. A juggling trick, to be secretly open.
 Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me ? 25
 Cres. I prithee, do not hold me to mine oath ;
 Bid me do anything but that, sweet Greek.
 Dio. Good night.
 Tro. Hold, patience !
 Ulyss. How now, Trojan ! 30
 Cres. Diomed !
 Dio. No. no, good night ; I'll be your fool no more.
 Tro. Thy better must.
 Cres. Hark ! a word in your ear.
 Tro. O plague and madness ! 35
 Ulyss. You are moved, Prince ; let us depart, I pray, Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself To wrathful terms. This place is dangerous ;
 The time right deadly ; I beseech you, go.
 Tro. Behold, I pray you.
 Ulyss. Nay, good my lord, go off ;
 You flow to great distraction ; come, my lord. 41
 Tro. I prithee stay.
 Ulyss. You have not patience ; come.
 Tro. I pray you, stay ; by hell and all hell's torments,
 I will not speak a word.
 Dio. And so, good night.
 Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.
 Tro. Doth that grieve thee ? O withered truth !
 Ulyss. How now, my lord ?
 Tro. By Jove, I will be patient. 46
 Cres. Guardian ! Why, Greek !
 Dio. Fo, fo ! adieu ! you palter.
 Cres. In faith, I do not. Come hither once again.
 Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something ; will you go ? 50
 You will break out.
 Tro. She strokes his cheek.
 Ulyss. Come, come.
 Tro. Nay, stay ; by Jove, I will not speak a word :

There is between my will and all offences A guard of patience. Stay a little while. 54
 Ther. How the devil luxury, with his fat rump and potato finger, tickles these together ! Fry, lechery, fry !
 Dio. But will you, then ?
 Cres. In faith, I will, lo ; never trust me else.
 Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it. 59
 Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.
 Ulyss. You have sworn patience.
 Tro. Fear me not, my lord ;
 I will not be myself, nor have cognition Of what I feel. I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge ; now, now, now !
 Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve. 65
 Tro. O beauty ! where is thy faith ?
 Ulyss. My lord !
 Tro. I will be patient ; outwardly I will.
 Cres. You look upon that sleeve ; behold it well.
 He lov'd me—O false wench !—Give't me again.
 Dio. Whose was't ? 70
 Cres. It is no matter, now I ha't again.
 I will not meet with you to-morrow night.
 I prithee, Diomed, visit me no more.
 Ther. Now she sharpens. Well said, whetstone.
 Dio. I shall have it.
 Cres. What, this ?
 Dio. Ay, that.
 Cres. O all you gods ! O pretty, pretty pledge ! 76
 Thy master now lies thinking on his bed Of thee and me, and sighs, and takes my glove,
 And gives memorial dainty kisses to it, As I kiss thee. Nay, do not snatch it from me ; 80
 He that takes that doth take my heart withal.
 Dio. I had your heart before ; this follows it.
 Tro. I did swear patience.
 Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed ; faith, you shall not ;
 I'll give you something else. 85
 Dio. I will have this. Whose was it ?
 Cres. It is no matter.
 Dio. Come, tell me whose it was.
 Cres. 'Twas one's that lov'd me better than you will. 88
 But, now you have it, take it.
 Dio. Whose was it ?
 Cres. By all Diana's waiting women yond, And by herself, I will not tell you whose.
 Dio. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm,
 And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it.

Tro. Wert thou the devil and wor'st it on thy horn,
It should be challeng'd. 95
Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past; and yet it is not;
I will not keep my word.
Dio. Why, then farewell;
Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.
Cres. You shall not go. One cannot speak a word
But it straight starts you.
Dio. I do not like this fooling. 100
Ther. Nor I, by Pluto; but that that likes not you Pleases me best.
Dio. What, shall I come? The hour—
Cres. Ay, come—O Jove! Do come. I shall be plagu'd.
Dio. Farewell till then.
Cres. Good night. I prithee come. [Exit Diomedes.
Troilus, farewell! One eye yet looks on thee; 105
But with my heart the other eye doth see.
Ah, poor our sex! this fault in us I find,
The error of our eye directs our mind.
What error leads must err; O, then conclude,
Minds sway'd by eyes are full of turpitude. [Exit.
Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more, 111
Unless she said 'My mind is now turn'd whore'.
Ulyss. All's done, my lord.
Tro. It is.
Ulyss. Why stay we, then?
Tro. To make a recordation to my soul
Of every syllable that here was spoke. 115
But if I tell how these two did coact,
Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?
Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,
An esperance so obstinately strong, 119
That doth invert th' attest of eyes and ears;
As if those organs had deceptive functions
Created only to calumniate.
Was Cressid here?
Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan.
Tro. She was not, sure.
Ulyss. Most sure she was.
Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness. 125
Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord. Cressid was here but now.
Tro. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood.
Think, we had mothers; do not give advantage
To stubborn critics, apt, without a theme,
For depravation, to square the general sex
By Cressid's rule. Rather think this not Cressid. 131
Ulyss. What hath she done, Prince, that can soil our mothers?

Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.
Ther. Will 'a swagger himself out on's own eyes?
Tro. This she? No; this is Diomed's Cressida. 135
If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimonies,
If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
If there be rule in unity itself, 139
This was not she. O madness of discourse,
That cause sets up with and against itself!
Bifold authority! where reason can revolt
Without perdition, and loss assume all reason 143
Without revolt: this is, and is not, Cressid.
Within my soul there doth conduce a fight
Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparate
Divides more wider than the sky and earth;
And yet the spacious breadth of this division
Admits no orifex for a point as subtle
As Ariachne's broken woof to enter. 150
Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates:
Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven.
Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself:
The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd;
And with another knot, five-finger-tied, 155
The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy relics
Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.
Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half-attach'd
With that which here his passion doth express? 160
Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged well
In characters as red as Mars his heart
Inflam'd with Venus. Never did young man fancy
With so eternal and so fix'd a soul. 164
Hark, Greek: as much as I do Cressid love,
So much by weight hate I her Diomed.
That sleeve is mine that he'll bear on his helm;
Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill
My sword should bite it. Not the dreadful spout
Which shipmen do the hurricano call, 170
Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun,
Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear
In his descent than shall my prompted sword Falling on Diomed.
Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupy. 175

Tro. O Cressid ! O false Cressid ! false, false, false !
Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,
And they'll seem glorious.
Ulyss. O, contain yourself ;
Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour,
my lord. 180
Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy ;
Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you
home.

Tro. Have with you, Prince. My courteous lord, adieu.
Farewell, revolted fair !—and, Diomed,
Stand fast and wear a castle on thy head.

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.
Tro. Accept distracted thanks. 187

[Exeunt Troilus, Æneas, and Ulysses.]

Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed ! I would croak like a raven ; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus will give me anything for the intelligence of this whore ; the parrot will not do more for an almond than he for a commodious drab.
Lechery, lechery ! Still wars and lechery !
Nothing else holds fashion. A burning devil take them ! [Exit.]

SCENE III. Troy. Before Priam's palace.

Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE.

And. When was my lord so much un-gently temper'd
To stop his ears against admonishment ?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hect. You train me to offend you ; get you in.

By all the everlasting gods, I'll go. 5

And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.

Hect. No more, I say.

Enter CASSANDRA.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector ?

And. Here, sister, arm'd, and bloody in intent.

Consort with me in loud and dear petition, Pursue we him on knees ; for I have dreamt

Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.

Cas. O, 'tis true !

Hect. Ho ! bid my trumpet sound.

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother !

Hect. Be gone, I say. The gods have heard me swear. 15

Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish
vows ;

They are polluted off'rings, more abhorr'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.

And. O, be persuaded ! Do not count it holy

To hurt by being just. It is as lawful, 20
For we would give much, to use violent thefts

And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow ;

But vows to every purpose must not hold.
Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say. 25

Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate.

Life every man holds dear ; but the dear
man

Holds honour far more precious dear than
life.

Enter TROILUS.

How now, young man ! Mean'st thou to fight to-day ? 29

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade. [Exit Cassandra.]

Hect. No, faith, young Troilus ; doff thy harness, youth ;

I am to-day i' th' vein of chivalry.

Let grow thy sinews till their knots be
strong,

And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.
Unarm thee, go ; and doubt thou not,
brave boy, 35

I'll stand to-day for thee and me and Troy.

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you

Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus ?
Chide me for it.

Tro. When many times the captive
Grecian falls, 40

Even in the fan and wind of your fair
sword,

You bid them rise and live.

Hect. O, 'tis fair play !

Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.

Hect. How now ! how now !

Tro. For th' love of all the gods, Let's leave the hermit Pity with our
mother ; 45

And when we have our armours buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our
swords,

Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth !

Hect. Fie, savage, fie !

Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.

Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight
to-day. 50

Tro. Who should withhold me ?

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beck'ning with fiery truncheon my retire ;

Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears ;

Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn, 56

Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

Re-enter CASSANDRA, with PRIAM.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him
fast ;

He is thy crutch ; now if thou lose thy
stay, 60

Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on
thee,

Fall all together.

Pri. Come, Hector, come, go back.
Thy wife hath dreamt ; thy mother hath had visions ;

Cassandra doth foresee ; and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt 65
To tell thee that this day is ominous.
Therefore, come back.

Hect. Aeneas is a-field ;
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Pri. Ay, but thou shalt not go. 70

Hect. I must not break my faith.
You know me dutiful ; therefore, dear sir,
Let me not shame respect ; but give me
leave

To take that course by your consent and voice 74

Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.
Cas. O Priam, yield not to him !

And. Do not, dear father.

Hect. Andromache, I am offended with
you.

Upon the love you bear me, get you in.
[Exit Andromache.]

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl

Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O, farewell, dear Hector ! 80 Look how thou diest. Look how thy eye turns pale.

Look how thy wounds do bleed at many vents.

Hark how Troy roars ; how Hecuba cries
out ;

How poor Andromache shrills her dolours
forth ;

Behold distraction, frenzy, and amaze-
ment, 85

Like witless antics, one another meet,
And all cry, Hector ! Hector's dead ! O
Hector !

Tro. Away, away !

Cas. Farewell !—yet, soft ! Hector I take my leave.

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive.
[Exit.]

Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim. 91

Go in, and cheer the town ; we'll forth, and
fight,

Do deeds worth praise and tell you them at
night.

Pri. Farewell. The gods with safety stand about thee ! [Exeunt severally Priam and Hector. Alarums.

Tro. They are at it, hark ! Proud
Diomed, believe, 95

I come to lose my arm or win my sleeve.

Enter PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord ? Do you hear ?

Tro. What now ?

Pan. Here's a letter come from yond poor girl.

Tro. Let me read. 100

Pan. A whoreson tisick, a whoreson rascally tisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl, and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' th's days ; and I have a rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ache in my bones that unless a man were curs'd I cannot tell what to think on't. What says she there ? 107

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart ;

Th' effect doth operate another way.

[Tearing the letter.]

Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change
together. 110

My love with words and errors still she feeds,

But edifies another with her deeds.

[Pan. Why but heare you.

Tro. Hence broker-lackey. Ignominy and
shame

Pursue thy life and live aye with thy name !]

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE IV. The plain between Troy and the Grecian camp.

Enter THERSITES. Excursions.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another ; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy doting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm. I would fain see them meet, that that same young Troyan ass that loves the whore there might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain with the sleeve back to the dissembling luxurious drab of a sleeve-less errand. A th' t'other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses—is not prov'd worth a blackberry. They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles ; and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day ; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill
opinion. 16

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following.

Soft! here comes sleeve, and t'other.

Tro. Fly not; for shouldst thou take the river Styx

I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire.

I do not fly; but advantageous care

Withdrew me from the odds of multitude. Have at thee.

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian; now for thy whore, Trojan—now the sleeve, now the sleeve!

[Exeunt Troilus and Diomedes fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? Art thou for Hector's match?

Art thou of blood and honour?

Ther. No, no—I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee. Live. [Exit.]

Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me; but a plague break thy neck for frightening me! What's become of the wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another. I would laugh at that miracle. Yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. [Exit.]

SCENE V. Another part of the plain.

Enter DIOMEDES and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse;

Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid.

Fellow, commend my service to her beauty;

Tell her I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan,

And am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord. 5 [Exit.]

Enter AGAMEMNON.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamus

Hath beat down Menon; bastard Margarelon

Hath Doreus prisoner,

And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam,

Upon the pashed corsos of the kings

Epistrophus and Cadius. Polixenes is slain;

Amphimachus and Thoas deadly hurt;

Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes

Sore hurt and bruised. The dreadful

Sagittary

Appals our numbers. Haste we, Diomed, 15

To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter NESTOR.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles,

And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame.

There is a thousand Hectors in the field; Now here he fights on Galathea his horse, And there lacks work; anon he's there afoot,

And there they fly or die, like scaled sculls Before the belching whale; then is he yonder,

And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,

Fall down before him like the mower's swath.

Here, there, and everywhere, he leaves and takes;

Dexterity so obeying appetite

That what he will he does, and does so much

That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. O, courage, courage, Princes! Great Achilles

Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance.

Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood,

Together with his mangled Myrmidons, That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to him,

Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd and at it,

Roaring for Troilus; who hath done to-day Mad and fantastic execution,

Engaging and redeeming of himself With such a careless force and forceless care

As if that luck, in very spite of cunning, Bade him win all.

42

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit.]

Dio. Ay, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together. [Exit.]

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Where is this Hector? Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face;

Know what it is to meet Achilles angry. Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector.

45

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Another part of the plain.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Troilus, I say! Where's Troilus? Ajax. What wouldst thou?

Dio. I would correct him.

Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office

Ere that correction. Troilus, I say ! What,
Troilus ! 5

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. O traitor Diomed ! Turn thy false face, thou traitor,
And pay thy life thou owest me for my horse.

Dio. Ha ! art thou there ?

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone. Stand,
Diomed. 9

Dio. He is my prize. I will not look upon.

Tro. Come, both, you cogging Greeks ; have at you both. [Exeunt fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Yea, Troilus ? O, well fought, my youngest brother !

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Now do I see thee, ha ! Have at thee, Hector !

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan. 15

Be happy that my arms are out of use ;
My rest and negligence befriends thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me again ;
Till when, go seek thy fortune. [Exit.]

Hect. Fare thee well.

I would have been much more a fresher
man, 20

Had I expected thee.

Re-enter TROILUS.

How now, my brother !

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas. Shall it be ?
No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
He shall not carry him ; I'll be ta'en too,
Or bring him off. Fate, hear me what I say :
I reckon not though thou end my life to-day.
[Exit.]

Enter One in armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek ; thou art a goodly mark.

No ? wilt thou not ? I like thy armour
well ;

I'll crush it and unlock the rivets all

But I'll be master of it. Wilt thou not, beast, abide ? 30

Why then, fly on ; I'll hunt thee for thy hide. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Another part of the plain.

Enter ACHILLES, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons ;

Mark what I say. Attend me where I wheel ; Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in
breath ;

And when I have the bloody Hector found,

Empale him with your weapons round
about ; 5

In fellest manner execute your arms.

Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye.
It is decreed Hector the great must die.

[Exeunt.]

Enter MENELAUS and PARIS, fighting ; then THERSITES.

Ther. The cuckold and the cuckold-maker are at it. Now, bull ! now, dog !
'Loo, Paris, 'loo ! now my double-horn'd Spartan ! 'loo, Paris, 'loo ! The bull has the game. Ware horns, ho ! 12

[Exeunt Paris and Menelaus.]

Enter MARGARELON.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou ?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's. 15

Ther. I am a bastard too ; I love bastards. I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in everything illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard ? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us : if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment. Farewell, bastard. [Exit.]

Mar. The devil take thee, coward !
[Exit.]

SCENE VIII. Another part of the plain.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Most putrified core so fair without,
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my day's work done ; I'll take good
breath :

Rest, sword ; thou hast thy fill of blood and death ! [Disarms.]

Enter ACHILLES and his Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set ; 5

How ugly night comes breathing at his
heels ;

Even with the vail and dark'ning of the
sun,

To close the day up, Hector's life is done.

Hect. I am unarm'd ; forego this vantage,
Greek. 9

Achil. Strike, fellows, strike ; this is the man I seek. [Hector falls.]

So, Ilion, fall thou next ! Come, Troy, sink
down ;

Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.

On, Myrmidons, and cry you all amain
'Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain'.

[A retreat sounded.]

Hark ! a retire upon our Grecian part. 15

Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like, my lord.

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'er-spreads the earth
And, stickler-like, the armies separates.
My half-suppl'd sword, that frankly would have fed,
Pleas'd with this dainty bait, thus goes to bed. [Sheathes his sword.
Come, tie his body to my horse's tail; 21
Along the field I will the Trojan trail.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IX. Another part of the plain.

Sound retreat. Shout. Enter AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS, NESTOR, DIOMEDES,
and the rest, marching.

Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is this?

Nest. Peace, drums!

Soldiers. [Within] Achilles! Achilles!
Hector's slain. Achilles!

Dio. The bruit is Hector's slain, and by Achilles.

Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be; 5
Great Hector was as good a man as he.

Agam. March patiently along. Let one be sent

To pray Achilles see us at our tent.

If in his death the gods have us befriended;
Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended. [Exeunt.

SCENE X. Another part of the plain.

Enter ÆNEAS, PARIS, ANTENOR, and DEIPHOBUS.

Æne. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field.

Never go home; here starve we out the
night.

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. Hector is slain.

All. Hector! The gods forbid!

Tro. He's dead, and at the murderer's horse's tail,

In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful field. 5

Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage
with speed.

Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy.

I say at once let your brief plagues be
mercy,

And linger not our sure destructions on.

Æne. My lord, you do discomfort all the host. 10

Tro. You understand me not that tell me
so.

I do not speak of flight, of fear of death,
But dare all imminence that gods and men
Address their dangers in. Hector is gone.
Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba? 15

Let him that will a screech-owl aye be call'd

Go in to Troy, and say there 'Hector's
dead'.

There is a word will Priam turn to stone;
Make wells and Niobes of the maids and
wives, 19

Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word, Scare Troy out of itself. But, march away;
Hector is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet. You vile abominable tents, Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian
plains,

Let Titan rise as early as he dare, 25
I'll through and through you. And, thou great-siz'd coward,

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates;

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience
still,

That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's
thoughts.

Strike a free march to Troy. With comfort
go; 30

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

Enter PANDARUS.

Pan. But hear you, hear you!

Tro. Hence, broker-lackey. Ignominy and shame

Pursue thy life and live aye with thy name!
[Exeunt all but Pandarus.

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching bones! O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despis'd! O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a work, and how ill requited! Why should our endeavour be so lov'd, and the performance so loathed?
What verse for it? What instance for it?
Let me see— 40

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing
Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;
And being once subdu'd in armed tail,
Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.

As many as be here of pander's hall, 46
Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's
fall;

Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some
groans,

Though not for me, yet for your aching
bones.

Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade,
Some two months hence my will shall here
be made. 51

It should be now, but that my fear is this,
Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss.
Till then I'll sweat and seek about for eases,
And at that time bequeath you my diseases.
[Exit.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Enter a company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

1 Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

All. Speak, speak.

1 Cit. You are all resolv'd rather to die than to famish?

All. Resolv'd, resolv'd.

1 Cit. First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know't, we know't.

1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict?

All. No more talking on't; let it be done. Away, away!

2 Cit. One way, good citizens.

1 Cit. We are accounted poor citizens, the patricians good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us; if they would yield us but the superfluity while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear. The leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes ere we become rakes; for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

2 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?

1 Cit. Against him first; he's a very dog to the commonalty.

2 Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

1 Cit. Ver/ well, and could be content to give him good report for't but that he pays himself with being proud.

2 Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously he did it to that end; though soft-conscienc'd men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother and to be partly proud, which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

2 Cit. What he cannot help in his nature you account a vice in him. You must in no way say he is covetous.

1 Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations; he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition. [Shouts within] What shouts are these? The other side o' th' city is risen. Why stay we prating here? To th' Capitol!

All. Come, come.

1 Cit. Soft! who comes here?

Enter MENENIUS AGRIPPA.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always lov'd the people.

1 Cit. He's one honest enough; would all the rest were so!

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand? Where go you
With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak, I pray you.

1 Cit. Our business is not unknown to th' Senate; they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say poor suitors have strong breaths; they shall know we have strong arms too.

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,
Will you undo yourselves?

1 Cit. We cannot, sir ; we are undone already.

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care

Have the patricians of you. For your wants,

Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well 65

Strike at the heaven with your staves as lift them

Against the Roman state ; whose course will on

The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs

Of more strong link asunder than can ever Appear in your impediment. For the dearth, 70

The gods, not the patricians, make it, and Your knees to them, not arms, must help. Alac !

You are transported by calamity Thither where more attends you ; and you slander

The helms o' th' state, who care for you like fathers, 75

When you curse them as enemies.

1 Cit. Care for us ! True, indeed ! They ne'er car'd for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their storehouses cramm'd with grain ; make edicts for usury, to support usurers ; repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich, and provide more piercing statutes daily to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will ; and there's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must 85 Confess yourselves wondrous malicious, Or be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you A pretty tale. It may be you have heard it ; But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture

To stale't a little more. 90

1 Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir ; yet you must not think to fob off our disgrace with a tale. But, an't please you, deliver.

Men. There was a time when all the body's members

Rebell'd against the belly ; thus accus'd it : That only like a gulf it did remain 96

I' th' midst o' th' body, idle and unactive, Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing Like labour with the rest ; where th' other instruments

Did see and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel, 100

And, mutually participate, did minister Unto the appetite and affection common Of the whole body. The belly answer'd—

1 Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly ?

Men. Sir, I shall tell you. With a kind of smile, 105

Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus—

For look you, I may make the belly smile As well as speak—it tauntingly replied To th' discontented members, the mutinous parts

That envied his receipt ; even so most fitly As you malign our senators for that 111 They are not such as you.

1 Cit. Your belly's answer—What ? The kingly crowned head, the vigilant eye, The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier, Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter, With other muniments and petty helps 116 Is this our fabric, if that they—

Men. What then ? Fore me, this fellow speaks ! What then ? What then ?

1 Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd,

Who is the sink o' th' body—

Men. Well, what then ? 120

1 Cit. The former agents, if they did complain,

What could the belly answer ?

Men. I will tell you ; If you'll bestow a small—of what you have little—

Patience awhile, you'st hear the belly's answer.

1 Cit. Y'are long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend : Your most grave belly was deliberate, 126 Not rash like his accusers, and thus answered.

' True is it, my incorporate friends,' quoth he

' That I receive the general food at first Which you do live upon ; and fit it is, 130 Because I am the storehouse and the shop Of the whole body. But, if you do remember,

I send it through the rivers of your blood, Even to the court, the heart, to th' seat o' th' brain ; 134

And, through the cranks and offices of man, The strongest nerves and small inferior veins

From me receive that natural competency Whereby they live. And though that all at once

You, my good friends'—this says the belly ; mark me.

1 Cit. Ay, sir ; well, well.

Men. ' Though all at once cannot See what I do deliver out to each, 141 Yet I can make my audit up, that all From me do back receive the flour of all, And leave me but the bran.' What say you to't ?

1 Cit. It was an answer. How apply you this ?

Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly, 146

And you the mutinous members ; for, examine

Their counsels and their cares, digest things
rightly

Touching the weal o' th' common, you shall find

No public benefit which you receive 150
But it proceeds or comes from them to you,
And no way from yourselves. What do you think,

You, the great toe of this assembly ?

1 Cit. I the great toe ? Why the great toe ?

Men. For that, being one o' th' lowest,
basest, poorest,

Of this most wise rebellion, thou goest
foremost. 156

Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run,
Lead'st first to win some vantage.

But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs.

Rome and her rats are at the point of
battle ; 160

The one side must have bale.

Enter CAIUS MARCIUS.

Hail, noble Marcius !

Mar. Thanks. What's the matter, you dissentious rogues

That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scabs ?

1 Cit. We have ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to thee will flatter

Beneath abhorring. What would you have, you curs, 166

That like nor peace nor war ? The one affrights you,

The other makes you proud. He that trusts
to you,

Where he should find you lions, finds you hares ;

Where foxes, geese ; you are no surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice 171

Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is To make him worthy whose offence subdues
him,

And curse that justice did it. Who deserves
greatness

Deserves your hate ; and your affections
are 175

A sick man's appetite, who desires most
that

Which would increase his evil. He that depends

Upon your favours swims with fins of lead,
And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye !

Trust ye ? 179

With every minute you do change a mind
And call him noble that was now your hate,

Him vile that was your garland. What's the matter

That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble Senate, who,

Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else 185

Would feed on one another ? What's their seeking ?

Men. For corn at their own rates, whereof they say

The city is well stor'd.

Mar. Hang 'em ! They say !
They'll sit by th' fire and presume to know

What's done i' th' Capitol, who's like to rise, 190

Who thrives and who declines ; side factions, and give out

Conjectural marriages, making parties
strong,

And feebling such as stand not in their liking

Below their cobbled shoes. They say there's grain enough !

Would the nobility lay aside their ruth 195
And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry

With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high

As I could pick my lance.

Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded ;

For though abundantly they lack discretion, 200

Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech you,

What says the other troop ?

Mar. They are dissolv'd. Hang 'em !
They said they were an-hungry ; sigh'd forth proverbs—

That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs

must eat,
That meat was made for mouths, that the gods sent not Corn for the rich men only. With these shreds 206

They vented their complainings ; which being answer'd,

And a petition granted them—a strange
one,

To break the heart of generosity 209
And make bold power look pale—they threw their caps

As they would hang them on the horns o'
th' moon,

Shouting their emulation.

Men. What is granted them ?

Mar. Five tribunes, to defend their vulgar wisdoms,

Of their own choice. One's Junius Brutus—Sicinius Velutus, and I know not. 'Sdeath !

The rabble should have first unroof'd the
city 216

Ere so prevail'd with me ; it will in time Win upon power and throw forth greater themes

For insurrection's arguing.

Men. This is strange:

Mar. Go get you home, you fragments.

Enter a Messenger, hastily.

Mess. Where's Caius Marcius ?

Mar. Here. What's the matter ?
 Mess. The news is, sir, the Volsces are in arms.
 Mar. I am glad on't ; then we shall ha' means to vent
 Our musty superfluity. See, our best elders.

Enter COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, with other Senators ; JUNIUS BRUTUS and SICINIUS VELUTUS.

1 Sen. Marcius, 'tis true that you have lately told us :
 The Volsces are in arms.

Mar. They have a leader, Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to't. I sin in envying his nobility ; And were I anything but what I am, I would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought together ?

Mar. Were half to half the world by th' ears, and he

Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make Only my wars with him. He is a lion That I am proud to hunt.

1 Sen. Then, worthy Marcius, Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir, it is ; And I am constant. Titus Lartius, thou Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face.

What, art thou stiff ? Stand'st out ?

Lart. No, Caius Marcius ; I'll lean upon one crutch and fight with t'other

Ere stay behind this business.

Men. O, true bred !

1 Sen. Your company to th' Capitol ; where, I know, Our greatest friends attend us.

Lart. [To Cominius] Lead you on. [To Marcius] Follow Cominius ; we must follow you ;

Right worthy you priority.

Com. Noble Marcius !

1 Sen. [To the Citizens] Hence to your homes ; be gone.

Mar. Nay, let them follow. The Volsces have much corn ; take these rats thither
 To gnaw their garners. Worshipful mutineers,

Your valour puts well forth ; pray follow. [Citizens steal away. Exeunt all but Sicinius and Brutus.]

Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this Marcius ?

Bru. He has no equal.

Sic. When we were chosen tribunes for the people—

Bru. Mark'd you his lip and eyes ?

Sic. Nay, but his taunts !

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gods.

Sic. Bemock the modest moon.

Bru. The present wars devour him ! He is grown

Too proud to be so valiant.

Sic. Such a nature, Tickled with good success, disdains the shadow

Which he treads on at noon. But I do wonder

His insolence can brook to be commanded Under Cominius.

Bru. Fame, at the which he aims— In whom already he is well grac'd—cannot Better be held nor more attain'd than by A place below the first ; for what miscarries Shall be the general's fault, though he perform

To th' utmost of a man, and giddy censure Will then cry out of Marcius ' O, if he Had borne the business ! '

Sic. Besides, if things go well, Opinion, that so sticks on Marcius, shall Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Bru. Come. Half all Cominius' honours are to Marcius, Though Marcius earn'd them not ; and all his faults

To Marcius shall be honours, though indeed In aught he merit not.

Sic. Let's hence and hear How the dispatch is made, and in what fashion,

More than his singularity, he goes Upon this present action.

Bru. Let's along. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Corioli. The Senate House.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS with Senators of Corioli.

1 Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius, That they of Rome are ent'red in our counsels

And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours ? What ever have been thought on in this state

That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome

Had circumvention ? 'Tis not four days gone

Since I heard thence ; these are the words—I think

I have the letter here ; yes, here it is : [Reads] ' They have press'd a power, but it is not known

Whether for east or west. The dearth is great ;

The people mutinous ; and it is rumour'd, Cominius, Marcius your old enemy, Who is of Rome worse hated than of you, And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman, These three lead on this preparation

Whither 'tis bent. Most likely 'tis for you ;
Consider of it'.

1 Sen. Our army's in the field ;
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready

To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly
To keep your great pretences veil'd till when

They needs must show themselves ; which in the hatching,

It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery

We shall be short'ned in our aim, which was

To take in many towns ere almost Rome
Should know we were afoot.

2 Sen. Noble Aufidius, 25 Take your commission ; hie you to your bands ;

Let us alone to guard Corioli.

If they set down before's, for the remove Bring up your army ; but I think you'll find

Th'have not prepar'd for us.

Auf. O, doubt not that ! 30
I speak from certainties. Nay more,
Some parcels of their power are forth
already,

And only hitherward. I leave your honours.
If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you !

Auf. And keep your honours safe !

1 Sen. Farewell.

2 Sen. Farewell.

All. Farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Rome. Marcius' house.

Enter VOLUMNIA and VIRGILIA, mother and wife to Marcius ; they set them down on two low stools and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing, or express yourself in a more comfortable sort.
If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embracements of his bed where he would show most love.
When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb ; when youth with comeliness pluck'd all gaze his way ;
when, for a day of kings' entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding ; I, considering how honour would become such a person—that it was no better than picture-like to hang by th' wall, if renown made it not stir—was pleas'd to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him, from whence he return'd his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam, how then ? 19

Vol. Then his good report should have been my son ; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely : had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action. 25

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you give me leave to retire
myself.

Vol. Indeed you shall not.

Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum ; 29

See him pluck Aufidius down by th'
hair ;

As children from a bear, the Volsces shunning him.

Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call
thus :

'Come on, you cowards ! You were got in
fear,

Though you were born in Rome'. His bloody brow

With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth
he goes, 35

Like to a harvest-man that's task'd to mow
Or all or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow ? O Jupiter, no
blood !

Vol. Away, you fool ! It more becomes a man

Than gilt his trophy. The breasts of Hecuba, 40

When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier

Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth
blood

At Grecian sword, contemning. Tell Valeria

We are fit to bid her welcome.

[Exit Gentlewoman.

Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell
Aufidius ! 45

Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee

And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with VALERIA and an Usher.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam !

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship. 50

Val. How do you both ? You are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here ? A fine spot, in good faith. How does your little son ?

Vir. I thank your ladyship ; well, good madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords and hear a drum than look upon his school-master. 50

Val. O' my word, the father's son ! I'll swear 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I look'd upon him a Wednesday half an hour together ; has such a confirm'd countenance ! I saw him run after a gilded butterfly ; and when he caught it he let it go again, and after it again, and over and over he comes, and up again, catch'd it again ; or whether his fall enrag'd him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth and tear it. O, I warrant, how he mammock'd it ! 65

Vol. One on's father's moods.

Val. Indeed, la, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery ; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon. 70

Vir. No, good madam ; I will not out of doors.

Val. Not out of doors !

Vol. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience ; I'll not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars. 75

Val. Fie, you confine yourself most unreasonably ; come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers ; but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you ? 80

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope ; yet they say all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come, I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us. 86

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me ; indeed I will not forth.

Val. In truth, la, go with me ; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband. 90

Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you ; there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam ?

Val. In earnest, it's true ; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is : the Volsces have an army forth ; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power. Your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioli ; they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour ; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam ; I will obey you in everything hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone, lady ; as she is now, she will but disease our better mirth. 100

Val. In troth, I think she would. Fare you well, then. Come, good sweet lady. Prithee, Virgilia, turn thy solemnness out o' door and go along with us.

Vir. No, at a word, madam ; indeed I must not. I wish you much mirth. 110

Val. Well then, farewell. [Exeunt]

SCENE IV. Before Corioli.

Enter MARCIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, with drum and colours, with Captains and Soldiers. To them a Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news ; a wager—they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours—no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy ?

Mess. They lie in view, but have not spoke as yet.

Lart. So, the good horse is mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I'll nor sell nor give him ; lend you him I will 6

For half a hundred years. Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies ?

Mess. Within this mile and half.

Mar. Then shall we hear their 'larum, and they ours.

Now, Mars, I prithee, make us quick in work, 10

That we with smoking swords may march from hence

To help our fielded friends ! Come, blow thy blast.

They sound a parley. Enter two Senators with Others, on the walls of Corioli.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls ?

1 Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he :

That's lesser than a little. [Drum afar off]

Hark, our drums 15

Are bringing forth our youth. We'll break our walls

Rather than they shall pound us up ; our gates,

Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes ;

They'll open of themselves. [Alarum far off]

Hark you far off !

There is Aufidius. List what work he makes 20

Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O, they are at it !

Lart. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders, ho !

Enter the army of the Volsces.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city.

Now put your shields before your hearts, and fight

With hearts more proof than shields. Advance, brave Titus. ²⁵

They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts,

Which makes me sweat with wrath. Come on, my fellows.

He that retires, I'll take him for a Volsce, And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum. The Romans are beat back to their trenches. Re-enter MARCIUS, cursing.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you, ³⁰

You shames of Rome! you herd of—Boils and plagues

Plaster you o'er, that you may be abhorr'd Farther than seen, and one infect another Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese

That bear the shapes of men, how have you run ³⁵

From slaves that apes would beat! Pluto and hell!

All hurt behind! Backs red, and faces pale

With flight and agued fear! Mend and charge home,

Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe And make my wars on you. Look to't.

Come on; ⁴⁰

If you'll stand fast we'll beat them to their wives,

As they us to our trenches. Follow me.

Another alarum. The Volsces fly, and Marcius follows them to the gates.

So, now the gates are ope; now prove good seconds; ⁴³

'Tis for the followers fortune widens them, Not for the fliers. Mark me, and do the like.

[Marcius enters the gates.]

1 Sol. Fool-hardiness; not I.

2 Sol. Not I. [Marcius is shut in.]

1 Sol. See, they have shut him in.

All. To th' pot, I warrant him.

[Alarum continues.]

Re-enter TITUS LARTIUS.

Lart. What is become of Marcius?

All. Slain, sir, doubtless.

1 Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels, ⁵⁰

With them he enters; who, upon the sudden,

Clapp'd to their gates. He is himself alone, To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow!

Who sensibly outdares his senseless sword,

And when it bows stand'st up. Thou art left, Marcius;

A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art, ⁵⁶ Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier

Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible Only in strokes; but with thy grim looks and ⁵⁹

The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the world

Were feverous and did tremble.

Re-enter MARCIUS, bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy.

1 Sol. Look, sir.

Lart. O, 'tis Marcius!

Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike. [They fight, and all enter the city.]

SCENE V. Within Corioli. A street.

Enter certain Romans, with spoils.

1 Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

2 Rom. And I this.

3 Rom. A murrain on't! I took this for silver. [Alarum continues still afar off.]

Enter MARCIUS and TITUS LARTIUS with a trumpeter.

Mar. See here these movers that do prize their hours

At a crack'd drachma! Cushions, leaden spoons, ⁵

Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would

Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,

Ere yet the fight be done, pack up. Down with them! [Exeunt pillagers.]

And hark, what noise the general makes! To him!

There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius, ¹⁰

Piercing our Romans; then, valiant Titus, take

Convenient numbers to make good the city; Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste

To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st; Thy exercise hath been too violent ¹⁵

For a second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not; My work hath yet not warm'd me. Fare you well;

The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me. To Aufidius thus

I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune, Fall deep in love with thee, and her great charms ²¹

Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentleman,

Prosperity be thy page!

Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she placeth highest! So farewell.

Lart. Thou worthiest Marcius! ²⁵
[Exit Marcius.]

Go sound thy trumpet in the market-place;
Call thither all the officers o' th' town,
Where they shall know our mind. Away!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Near the camp of Cominius.

Enter COMINIUS, as it were in retire, with Soldiers.

Com. Breathe you, my friends. Well fought; we are come off
Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands
Nor cowardly in retire. Believe me, sirs, We shall be charg'd again. Whiles we have struck,

By interims and conveying gusts we have heard ⁵

The charges of our friends. The Roman gods,

Lead their successes as we wish our own,
That both our powers, with smiling fronts
encount'ring,

May give you thankful sacrifice!

Enter a Messenger.

Thy news?

Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued
And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle;
I saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak'st truth, Methinks thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?

Mess. Above an hour, my lord. ¹⁵

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums.

How couldst thou in a mile confound an
hour,

And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volsces
Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about; else had I, sir, Half an hour since brought my report. ²¹

Enter MARCIUS.

Com. Who's yonder
That does appear as he were flay'd? O
gods!

He has the stamp of Marcius, and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor

More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue ²⁶

From every meaner man.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,

But mantled in your own.

Mar. O! let me clip ye
In arms as sound as when I woo'd, in heart
As merry as when our nuptial day was done, ³¹

And tapers burn'd to bedward.

Com. Flower of warriors,
How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:

Condemning some to death and some to exile; ³⁵

Ransoming him or pitying, threat'ning th'
other;

Holding Corioli in the name of Rome
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave Which told me they had beat you to your trenches? ⁴⁰

Where is he? Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone;
He did inform the truth. But for our
gentlemen,

The common file—a plague! tribunes for
them!

The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did budge

From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you? ⁴⁵

Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.

Where is the enemy? Are you lords o' th'
field?

If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. Marcius,
We have at disadvantage fought, and did
Retire to win our purpose. ⁵⁰

Mar. How lies their battle? Know you on which side

They have plac'd their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcius
Their bands i' th' vaward are the Antiates
Of their best trust; o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you, ⁵⁵
By all the battles wherein we have fought
By th' blood we have shed together, by th'
vows

We have made to endure friends, that you directly

Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates
And that you not delay the present, but, ⁶⁰
Filling the air with swords advanc'd and darts,

We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking: take your choice o'
those ⁶⁵

That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are the
That most are willing. If any such be here—

As it were sin to doubt—that love this painting

Wherein you see me smear'd ; if any fear
Lesser his person than an ill report ; 70
If any think brave death outweighs bad life

And that his country's dearer than himself ;
Let him alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus to express his disposition,
And follow Marcius. 75

[They all shout and wave their swords, take him up in their arms and cast up their caps.]

O, me alone ! Make you a sword of me ?
If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Volscies ? None of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number, Though thanks to all, must I select from all ; the rest 81

Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march ;

And four shall quickly draw out my command,

Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on, my fellows ; 85
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. The gates of Corioli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a guard upon Corioli, going with drum and trumpet toward Cominius and Caius Marcius, enters with a Lieutenant, other Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So, let the ports be guarded ; keep your duties

As I have set them down. If I do send, dispatch

Those centuries to our aid ; the rest will serve

For a short holding. If we lose the field
We cannot keep the town.

Lieut. Fear not our care, sir. 5

Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon's.
Our guider, come ; to th' Roman camp conduct us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII. A field of battle between the Roman and the Volscian camps.

Alarum, as in battle. Enter MARCIUS and AUFIDIUS at several doors.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee, for I do hate thee

Worse than a promise-breaker.

Auf. We hate alike :
Not Afric owns a serpent I abhor
More than thy fame and envy. Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the first budger die the other's slave, 5

And the gods doom him after !

Auf.

If I fly, Marcius,

Halloa me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus,
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleas'd. 'Tis not my blood

Wherein thou seest me mask'd. For thy revenge 10

Wrench up thy power to th' highest.

Auf. Wert thou the Hector
That was the whip of your bragg'd progeny,
Thou shouldst not scape me here.

[Here they fight, and certain Volscies come in the aid of Aufidius. Marcius fights till they be driven in breathless.]
Officious, and not valiant, you have sham'd me 14

In your condemned seconds. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX. The Roman camp.

Flourish. Alarum. A retreat is sounded.
Enter, at one door, COMINIUS with the Romans ; at another door, MARCIUS, with his arm in a scarf.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
Thou't not believe thy deeds ; but I'll report it

Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles ;

Where great patricians shall attend, and shrug,

I' th' end admire ; where ladies shall be frighted 5

And, gladly quak'd, hear more ; where the dull tribunes,

That with the fusty plebeians hate thine honours,

Shall say against their hearts ' We thank the gods

Our Rome hath such a soldier '.

Yet can'st thou to a morsel of this feast, 10
Having fully din'd before.

Enter TITUS LARTIUS, with his Power, from the pursuit.

Lart. O General,

Here is the steed, we the caparison.

Hadst thou beheld—

Mar. Pray now, no more ; my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood,
When she does praise me grieves me. I have done 15

As you have done—that's what I can ; induc'd

As you have been—that's for my country.
He that has but effected his good will Hath overta'en mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving ; Rome must know 20

The value of her own. 'Twere a concealment

Worse than a theft, no less than a traduce-
ment,
To hide your doings and to silence that Which, to the spire and top of praises
vouch'd,
Would seem but modest. Therefore, I
beseech you, 25
In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done, before our army
hear me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart

To hear themselves rememb'ed.

Com. Should they not, 29
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses—

Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store—of all

The treasure in this field achiev'd and city,
We render you the tenth ; to be ta'en forth
Before the common distribution at 35
Your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, General,
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword. I do refuse it,
And stand upon my common part with those

That have beheld the doing. 40

[A long flourish. They all cry ' Marcius, Marcius ! ' cast up their caps and lances. Cominius and Lartius stand bare.

May these same instruments which you profane

Never sound more ! When drums and trumpets shall

I' th' field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be

Made all of false-fac'd soothing. When steel grows 44

Soft as the parasite's silk, let him be made
An overture for th' wars. No more, I say.
For that I have not wash'd my nose that bled,

Or foil'd some debile wretch, which without note

Here's many else have done, you shout me
forth

In acclamations hyperbolical, 51
As if I lov'd my little should be dieted
In praises sauc'd with lies.

Com. Too modest are you ;
More cruel to your good report than
grateful 54

To us that give you truly. By your patience, If 'gainst yourself you be incens'd, we'll put you—

Like one that means his proper harm—in manacles,

Then reason safely with you. Therefore be it known,

As to us, to all the world, that Caius
Marcius

Wears this war's garland ; in token of the
which, 60

My noble steed, known to the camp, I give
him,

With all his trim belonging ; and from this
time,

For what he did before Corioli, call him
With all th' applause and clamour of the host,

Caius Marcius Coriolanus. 65

Bear th' addition nobly ever !

[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and drums.

All. Caius Marcius Coriolanus !

Cor. I will go wash ;

And when my face is fair you shall perceive Whether I blush or no. Howbeit, I thank
you ; 70

I mean to stride your steed, and at all times
To undercrest your good addition

To th' fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent ;

Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success. You, Titus

Lartius, 75

Must to Corioli back. Send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate
For their own good and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.

Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that
now

Refus'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg 80

Of my Lord General.

Com. Take't—'tis yours ; what is't ?

Cor. I sometime lay here in Corioli

At a poor man's house ; he us'd me kindly.

He cried to me ; I saw him prisoner ;

But then Aufidius was within my view, 85

And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity. I request
you

To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O, well begg'd !

Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.

Lart. Marcius, his name ?

Cor. By Jupiter, forgot ! 90

I am weary ; yea, my memory is tir'd.

Have we no wine here ?

Com. Go we to our tent.

The blood upon your visage dries ; 'tis
time

It should be look'd to. Come. [Exeunt.

SCENE X. The camp of the Volsces.

A flourish. Cornets. Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta'en.

1 Sol. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good condition.

Auf. Condition !

I would I were a Roman ; for I cannot,
Being a Volsce, be that I am. Condition ?
What good condition can a treaty find

I' th' part that is at mercy ? Five times,
 Marcus,

I have fought with thee ; so often hast
 thou beat me ;

And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter

As often as we eat. By th' elements, 10

If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,

He's mine or I am his. Mine emulation

Hath not that honour in't it had ; for where

I thought to crush him in an equal force,

True sword to sword, I'll potch at him some way, 15

Or wrath or craft may get him.

1 Sol. He's the devil.

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle. My valour's poison'd

With only suff'ring stain by him ; for him

Shall fly out of itself. Nor sleep nor sanctuary,

Being naked, sick, nor fane nor Capitol, 20

The prayers of priests nor times of sacrifice,

Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up

Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst

My hate to Marcus. Where I find him, were it

At home, upon my brother's guard, even
 there, 25

Against the hospitable canon, would I

Wash my fierce hand in's heart. Go you to th' city ;

Learn how 'tis held, and what they are that must

Be hostages for Rome.

1 Sol. Will not you go ?

Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove ;
 I pray you— 30

'Tis south the city mills—bring me word
 thither

How the world goes, that to the pace of it
 I may spur on my journey.

1 Sol. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.]

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Rome. A public place.

Enter MENENIUS, with the two Tribunes of the people, SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to-night.

Bru. Good or bad ?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcus.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their
 friends. 5

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love ?

Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him, as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcus.

Bru. He's a lamb indeed, that baes like a bear. 10

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men ; tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both Trib. Well, sir.

Men. In what enmity is Marcus poor in that you two have not in abundance ? 15

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stor'd with all.

Sic. Especially in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boast-
 ing.

Men. This is strange now. Do you two know how you are censured here in the city

—I mean of us o' th' right-hand file ? Do
 you ? 21

Both Trib. Why, how are we censur'd ?

Men. Because you talk of pride now—will you not be angry ?

Both Trib. Well, well, sir, well. 25

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter ; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience. Give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures—at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you in being so. You blame
 Marcus for being proud ? 30

Bru. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can do very little alone ;
 for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single : your abilities are too infant-like for doing much alone.
 You talk of pride. O that you could turn your eyes toward the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves ! O that you could ! 37

Both. What then, sir ?

Men. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates—alias fools—as any in Rome.

Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough too. 42

Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tiber in't ;
 said to be something imperfect in favouring
 the first complaint, hasty and tinder-like upon too trivial motion ; one that converses more with the buttock of the night than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such wealsmen as you are—I cannot call you Lycurguses—if the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say your worships have deliver'd the matter well, when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables ;
 and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, yet they lie deadly that tell you you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it that I am known well enough too ? What harm can your bisson conspectuities glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too ? 60

Bru. Come, sir, come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor any thing. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs; you wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller, and then rejourne the controversy of threepence to a second day of audience. When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinch'd with the colic, you make faces like mummers, set up the bloody flag against all patience, and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing. All the peace you make in their cause is calling both the parties knaves. You are a pair of strange ones. 74

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table than a necessary bencher in the Capitol. 77

Men. Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave as to stuff a botcher's cushion or to be entomb'd in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion; though peradventure some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen. God-den to your worships. More of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians. I will be bold to take my leave of you. 89

[Brutus and Sicinius go aside.]

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and VALERIA.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies—and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler—whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches; for the love of Juno let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcius coming home? 95

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius, and with most prosperous approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee. Hoo! Marcius coming home!

Vol., Vir. Nay, 'tis true. 100

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him; the state hath another, his wife another; and I think there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel to-night. A letter for me? 105

Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw't.

Men. A letter for me! It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician. The most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricute and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? He was wont to come home wounded. 112

Vir. O, no, no, no.

Vol. O, he is wounded, I thank the gods for't.

Men. So do I too, if it be not too much. Brings 'a victory in his pocket? The wounds become him. 117

Vol. On's brows, Menenius, he comes the third time home with the oaken garland.

Men. Has he disciplin'd Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Lartius writes they fought together, but Aufidius got off. 121

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that; an he had stay'd by him, I would not have been so fidius'd for all the chests in Corioli and the gold that's in them. Is the Senate possess'd of this? 125

Vol. Good ladies, let's go. Yes, yes, yes: the Senate has letters from the General, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war; he hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly. 129

Val. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous! Ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! pow, waw. 133

Men. True! I'll be sworn they are true. Where is he wounded? [To the Tribunes] God save your good worships! Marcius is coming home; he has more cause to be proud. Where is he wounded?

Vol. I' th' shoulder and i' th' left arm there will be large cicatrices to show the people when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i' th' body. 14

Men. One i' th' neck and two i' th' thigh—there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had before this last expedition twenty-five wounds upon him. 14

Men. Now it's twenty-seven; every gas was an enemy's grave. [A shout and flourish] Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius. Before him he carries noise, and behind him he leaves tears;

Death, that dark spirit, in's nery art doth lie,

Which, being advanc'd, declines, and the men die.

A sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter COMINIUS the General, and TITUS LARTIUS; between them, CORIOLANUS, crown'd with an oake garland; with Captains and Soldiers and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight

Within Corioli gates, where he hath won,
With fame, a name to Caius Marcius ; these
In honour follows Coriolanus. 156
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus !

[Flourish.
All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus !

Cor. No more of this, it does offend my
heart.

Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, sir, your mother !

Cor. O, 160

You have, I know, petition'd all the gods
For my prosperity ! [Kneels.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up ;
My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and
By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd—
What is it ? Coriolanus must I call thee ?
But, O, thy wife !

Cor. My gracious silence, hail !
Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd home, 167

That weep'st to see me triumph ? Ah, my
dear,

Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,
And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now the gods crown thee !

Cor. And live you yet ? [To Valeria] O my sweet lady, pardon. 171

Vol. I know not where to turn.

O, welcome home ! And welcome, General.
And y'are welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes. I could weep

And I could laugh ; I am light and heavy.
Welcome !

A curse begin at very root on's heart 176
That is not glad to see thee ! You are three

That Rome should dote on ; yet, by the faith of men,

We have some old crab trees here at home that will not

Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors. 180

We call a nettle but a nettle, and
The faults of fools but folly.

Com. Ever right.

Cor. Menenius ever, ever.

Her. Give way there, and go on.

Cor. [To his wife and mother] Your hand,
and yours.

Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visited ; 186
From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings,

But with them change of honours.

Vol. I have lived

To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy ; only 190
There's one thing wanting, which I doubt not but

Our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good mother,

I had rather be their servant in my way
Than sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol.
[Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before. Brutus and Sicinius come forward.]

Bru. All tongues speak of him and the bleared sights 195

Are spectacl'd to see him. Your prattling nurse

Into a rapture lets her baby cry

While she chats him ; the kitchen malkin pins

Her richest lockram 'bout her reechy neck, Clamb'ring the walls to eye him ; stalls,
bulks, windows, 200

Are smother'd up, leads fill'd and ridges
hors'd

With variable complexions, all agreeing
In earnestness to see him. Seld-shown flamens

Do press among the popular throngs and puff 204

To win a vulgar station ; our veil'd dames Commit the war of white and damask in Their nicely gawded cheeks to th' wanton
spoil

Of Phœbus' burning kisses. Such a pother,
As if that whatsoever god who leads him
Were sliely crept into his human powers, 210
And gave him graceful posture.

Sic. On the sudden
I warrant him consul.

Bru. Then our office may
During his power go sleep.

Sic. He cannot temp'rately transport his
honours

From where he should begin and end, but
will 215

Lose those he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort.

Sic. Doubt not
The commoners, for whom we stand, but they

Upon their ancient malice will forget
With the least cause these his new honours ;

which

That he will give them make I as little question 220

As he is proud to do't.

Bru. I heard him swear,
Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i' th' market-place, nor on him put
The napless vesture of humility ; 224

Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds
To th' people, beg their stinking breaths.

Sic. 'Tis right.

Bru. It was his word. O, he would miss it rather

Than carry it but by the suit of the gentry
to him

And the desire of the nobles.

Sic. I wish no better Than have him hold that purpose, and to put it 230

In execution.

Bru. 'Tis most like he will.

Sic. It shall be to him then as our good wills :

A sure destruction.

Bru. So it must fall out

To him or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people in what hatred
He still hath held them ; that to's power
he would ²³⁶

Have made them mules, silenc'd their pleaders, and

Disproportioned their freedoms ; holding
them

In human action and capacity
Of no more soul nor fitness for the world ²⁴⁰ Than camels in their war, who have their proband

Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggested
At some time when his soaring insolence Shall touch the people—which time shall not want, ²⁴⁵

If he be put upon't, and that's as easy
As to set dogs on sheep—will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble ; and their blaze

Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter ?

Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol.

'Tis thought

That Marcius shall be consul. ²⁵¹

I have seen the dumb men throng to see him and

The blind to hear him speak ; matrons flung gloves,

Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchers, ²⁵⁴

Upon him as he pass'd ; the nobles bended
As to Jove's statue, and the commons
made

A shower and thunder with their caps and shouts.

I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol,

And carry with us ears and eyes for th'
time, ²⁵⁹

But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Rome. The Capitol.

Enter two Officers, to lay cushions, as it were in the Capitol.

1 Off. Come, come, they are almost here.
How many stand for consulships ?

2 Off. Three, they say ; but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it.

1 Off. That's a brave fellow ; but he's vengeance proud and loves not the common people. ⁶

2 Off. Faith, there have been many great men that have flatter'd the people, who ne'er loved them ; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore ;
so that, if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition, and out of his noble carelessness lets them plainly see't. ¹⁴

1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he waded indifferently
'twixt doing them neither good nor harm ;
but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him, and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite. Now to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes—to flatter them for their love. ²²

2 Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country ; and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any further deed to have them at all, into their estimation and report ;
but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes and his actions in their hearts that for their tongues to be silent and not confess so much were a kind of ingrateful injury ;
to report otherwise were a malice that,
giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it. ³²

1 Off. No more of him ; he's a worthy man. Make way, they are coming.

A Sennet. Enter the Patricians and the Tribunes of the People, Lictors before them ; CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COM-INIUS the Consul. Sicinius and Brutus take their places by themselves. Coriolanus stands.

Men. Having determin'd of the Volsces and ³

To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting
To gratify his noble service that Hath thus stood for his country. Therefore
please you,

Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul and last general
In our well-found successes to report
A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caius Marcius Coriolanus ; whom We met here both to thank and to remember ⁴

With honours like himself. [Coriolanus sits.]

1 Sen. Speak, good Cominius Leave nothing out for length, and make u
think

Rather our state's defective for requital
Than we to stretch it out. Masters o' th
people,

We do request your kindest ears ; and,
after, 50
Your loving motion toward the common
body,
To yield what passes here.

Sic. We are convented
Upon a pleasing treaty, and have hearts
Inclinable to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.

Bru. Which the rather 55
We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people than He hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off ;
I would you rather had been silent. Please
you

To hear Cominius speak ?

Bru. Most willingly. 60
But yet my caution was more pertinent
Than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people ;
But tie him not to be their bedfellow.
Worthy Cominius, speak.

[Coriolanus rises, and offers to go away.

Nay, keep your place.

1 Sen. Sit, Coriolanus, never shame to
hear 65

What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your Honours' pardon.
I had rather have my wounds to heal again
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope
My words disbench'd you not.

Cor. No, sir ; yet oft,
When blows have made me stay, I fled from
words. 70

You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not. But your people,

I love them as they weigh—

Men. Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head i' th' sun

When the alarum were struck than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd. [Exit.

Men. Masters of the people, 75
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter—

That's thousand to one good one—when you now see

He had rather venture all his limbs for
honour

Than one on's ears to hear it ? Proceed,
Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice ; the deeds of Coriolanus 80

Should not be utter'd feebly. It is held That valour is the chiefest virtue and Most dignifies the haver. If it be,

The man I speak of cannot in the world 84
Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years,

When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought

Beyond the mark of others ; our then Dictator,

Whom with all praise I point at, saw him
fight

When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him ; he bestrid 90
An o'erpress'd Roman and i' th' consul's view

Slew three opposers ; Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee. In that day's feats,

When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i' th' field, and for his meed 95

Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupilage Man-ent'red thus, he waxed like a sea,
And in the brunt of seventeen battles since He lurch'd all swords of the garland. For this last,

Before and in Corioli, let me say 100
I cannot speak him home. He stopp'd the fliers,

And by his rare example made the coward
Turn terror into sport ; as weeds before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd
And fell below his stem. His sword, death's stamp, 105

Where it did mark, it took ; from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion

Was tim'd with dying cries. Alone he ent'red

The mortal gate of th' city, which he painted 109

With shunless destiny ; aidless came off,
And with a sudden re-enforcement struck Corioli like a planet. Now all's his.

When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce
His ready sense, then straight his doubled
spirit

Re-quick'ned what in flesh was fatigate, 115
And to the battle came he ; where he did Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if

'Twere a perpetual spoil ; and till we call'd
Both field and city ours he never stood

To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man ! 120

1 Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours

Which we devise him.

Com. Our spoils he kick'd at,
And look'd upon things precious as they were

The common muck of the world. He covets less

Than misery itself would give, rewards 125
His deeds with doing them, and is content
To spend the time to end it.

Men. He's right noble ;

Let him be call'd for.

1 Sen. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter CORIOLANUS.

Men. The Senate, Coriolanus, are well
pleas'd 130

To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life and services.

Men. It then remains
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you Let me o'erleap that custom ; for I cannot Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them ¹³⁵

For my wounds' sake to give their suffrage.
Please you

That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the people Must have their voices ; neither will they bate

One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't.
Pray you go fit you to the custom, and ¹⁴⁰
Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that ?

Cor. To brag unto them ' Thus I did, and thus ! ' ¹⁴⁵

Show them th' unaching scars which I should hide,

As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only !

Men. Do not stand upon't.
We recommend to you, Tribunes of the People,
Our purpose to them ; and to our noble consul ¹⁵⁰

Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and
honour !

[Flourish. Cornets. Then exeunt all but Sicinius and Brutus.]

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.

Sic. May they perceive's intent ! He will require them

As if he did contemn what he requested ¹⁵⁵
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here. On th' market-
place

I know they do attend us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Rome. The Forum.

Enter seven or eight Citizens.

1 Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

2 Cit. We may, sir, if we will. ³

3 Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do ; for if he show us his wounds and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds and speak for them ; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them.

Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful were to make a monster of the multitude ; of the which we being members should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve ; for once we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude. ¹⁶

3 Cit. We have been call'd so of many ;
not that our heads are some brown, some black, some abram, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely colour'd ; and truly I think if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south, and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o' th' compass.

2 Cit. Think you so ? Which way do you judge my wit would fly ? ²⁵

3 Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will—'tis strongly wedg'd up in a block-head ; but if it were at liberty 'twould sure southward.

2 Cit. Why that way ? ²⁹

3 Cit. To lose itself in a fog ; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews,
the fourth would return for conscience' sake,
to help to get thee a wife.

2 Cit. You are never without your tricks ;
you may, you may. ³⁴

3 Cit. Are you all resolv'd to give your voices ? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter CORIOLANUS, in a gown of humility, with MENENIUS.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility.
Mark his behaviour. We are not to stay all together, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes.
He's to make his requests by particulars,
wherein every one of us has a single honour,
in giving him our own voices with our own tongues ; therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him. ⁴¹

All. Content, content. [Exeunt Citizens.]

Men. O sir, you are not right ; have you not known

The worthiest men have don't ?

Cor. What must I say ?
' I pray, sir '—Plague upon't ! I cannot bring

My tongue to such a pace. ' Look, sir, my wounds ! ' ⁵⁰

I got them in my country's service, when Some certain of your brethren roar'd, and ran

From th' noise of our own drums.'

Men. O me, the gods !
You must not speak of that. You must desire them

To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me ? Hang 'em !
I would they would forget me, like the
virtues 56

Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men. You'll mar all.
I'll leave you. Pray you speak to 'em, I
pray you,
In wholesome manner. [Exit.

Re-enter three of the Citizens.

Cor. Bid them wash their faces And keep their teeth clean. So, here comes a brace. 60

You know the cause, sir, of my standing
here.

3 Cit. We do, sir ; tell us what hath brought you to't.

Cor. Mine own desert.

2 Cit. Your own desert ? 65

Cor. Ay, not mine own desire.

3 Cit. How, not your own desire ?

Cor. No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

3 Cit. You must think, if we give you anything, we hope to gain by you. 71

Cor. Well then, I pray, your price o' th' consulship ?

1 Cit. The price is to ask it kindly.

Cor. Kindly, sir, I pray let me ha't. I have wounds to show you, which shall be yours in private. Your good voice, sir ;
what say you ? 76

2 Cit. You shall ha' it, worthy sir.

Cor. A match, sir. There's in all two worthy voices begg'd. I have your alms.
Adieu.

3 Cit. But this is something odd. 80

2 Cit. An 'twere to give again—but 'tis no matter. [Exeunt the three Citizens.

Re-enter two other Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

4 Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma ? 87

4 Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies ; you have been a rod to her friends. You have not indeed loved the common people. 90

Cor. You should account me the more virtuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother, the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them ; 'tis a condition they account gentle ; and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod and be off to them most counterfeiting.
That is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitch-ment of some popular man and give it bountiful to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you I may be consul. 100

5 Cit. We hope to find you our friend ; and therefore give you our voices heartily.

4 Cit. You have received many wounds for your country. 104

Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no farther.

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily ! [Exeunt Citizens.

Cor. Most sweet voices !

Better it is to die, better to starve, 110
Than crave the hire which first we do deserve.

Why in this wolvisish toge should I stand
here

To beg of Hob and Dick that do appear Their needless vouches ? Custom calls me
to't.

What custom wills, in all things should we do't, 115

The dust on antique time would lie unswept,

And mountainous error be too highly heap'd

For truth to o'erpeer. Rather than fool
it so,

Let the high office and the honour go
To one that would do thus. I am half through : 120

The one part suffered, the other will I do.

Re-enter three Citizens more.

Here come moe voices.

Your voices. For your voices I have fought ;

Watch'd for your voices ; for your voices
bear

Of wounds two dozen odd ; battles thrice six 125

I have seen and heard of ; for your voices
have

Done many things, some less, some more.
Your voices ?

Indeed, I would be consul.

6 Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice. 130

7 Cit. Therefore let him be consul. The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people !

All. Amen, amen. God save thee, noble consul ! [Exeunt Citizens.

Cor. Worthy voices !

Re-enter MENENIUS with BRUTUS and SICINIUS.

Men. You have stood your limitation, and the tribunes

Endue you with the people's voice.
Remains 136

That, in th' official marks invested, you Anon do meet the Senate.

Cor. Is this done ?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharg'd.

The people do admit you, and are sum-mon'd 140

To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? At the Senate House?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do, and, knowing myself again,

Repair to th' Senate House. 145

Men. I'll keep you company. Will you along?

Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Menenius.]

He has it now; and by his looks methinks
'Tis warm at's heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore His humble weeds. Will you dismiss the people? 150

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters! Have you chose this man?

1 Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Bru. We pray the gods he may deserve your loves.

2 Cit. Amen, sir. To my poor unworthy notice,

He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices.

3 Cit. Certainly; 155

He flouted us downright.

1 Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech—he did not mock us.

2 Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says

He us'd us scornfully. He should have show'd us

His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for's
country. 160

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

All. No, no; no man saw 'em.

3 Cit. He said he had wounds which he could show in private,

And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,
'I would be consul;' says he 'aged custom 165

But by your voices will not so permit me;
Your voices therefore'. When we granted
that,

Here was 'I thank you for your voices.
Thank you,

Your most sweet voices. Now you have left
your voices,

I have no further with you'. Was not this mockery? 170

Sic. Why either were you ignorant to see't,

Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him—
As you were lesson'd—when he had no
power

But was a petty servant to the state, 175

844

He was your enemy; ever spake against Your liberties and the charters that you
bear

I' th' body of the weal; and now, arriving
A place of potency and sway o' th' state,
If he should still malignantly remain 180 Fast foe to th' plebeii, your voices might Be curses to yourselves? You should have said

That as his worthy deeds did claim no less Than what he stood for, so his gracious
nature 184

Would think upon you for your voices, and Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,
As you were fore-advis'd, had touch'd his
spirit

And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd Either his gracious promise, which you
might, 190

As cause had call'd you up, have held him
to;

Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article

Tying him to aught. So, putting him to
rage,

You should have ta'en th' advantage of his choler 195

And pass'd him unelected.

Bru. Did you perceive
He did solicit you in free contempt

When he did need your loves; and do you think

That his contempt shall not be bruising to
you

When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies 200

No heart among you? Or had you tongues to cry

Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you
Ere now denied the asker, and now again,
Of him that did not ask but mock, bestow
Your su'd-for tongues? 205

3 Cit. He's not confirm'd: we may deny him yet.

2 Cit. And will deny him;

I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.
1 Cit. I twice five hundred, and their friends to piece 'em.

Bru. Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends 210

They have chose a consul that will from them take

Their liberties, make them of no more voice Than dogs, that are as often beat for barking

As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble;
And, on a safer judgment, all revoke 215
Your ignorant election. Enforce his pride
And his old hate unto you; besides, forget
not

With what contempt he wore the humble weed ;
 How in his suit he scorn'd you ; but your loves,
 Thinking upon his services, took from you

Th' apprehension of his present portance,
 Which, most gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion

After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Bru. Lay
 A fault on us, your tribunes, that we labour'd,

No impediment between, but that you must

Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say you chose him
 More after our commandment than as guided

By your own true affections ; and that your minds,

Pre-occupied with what you rather must do
 Than what you should, made you against the grain

To voice him consul. Lay the fault on us.

Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say we read lectures to you,

How youngly he began to serve his country,
 How long continued ; and what stock he springs of—

The noble house o' th' Marcians ; from whence came

That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son,

Who, after great Hostilius, here was king ;
 Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,

That our best water brought by conduits hither ;

And Censorinus, nobly named so,
 Twice being by the people chosen censor,
 Was his great ancestor.

Sic. One thus descended,
 That hath beside well in his person wrought
 To be set high in place, we did commend
 To your remembrances ; but you have found,

Scaling his present bearing with his past,
 That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
 Your sudden approbation.

Bru. Say you ne'er had done't—
 Harp on that still—but by our putting on ;
 And presently, when you have drawn your number,

Repair to th' Capitol.

Citizens. We will so ; almost all Repent in their election. [Exeunt Plebeians.]

Bru. Let them go on ;
 This mutiny were better put in hazard
 Than stay, past doubt, for greater.

If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
 With their refusal, both observe and answer
 The vantage of his anger.

Sic. To th' Capitol, come.

We will be there before the stream o' th' people ;

And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,

Which we have goaded onward. [Exeunt.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Cornets. Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS,
 all the Gentry, COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, and other Senators.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius, then, had made new head ?

Lart. He had, my lord ; and that it was which caus'd

Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then the Volsces stand but as at first,

Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road

Upon's again.

Com. They are worn, Lord Consul, so That we shall hardly in our ages see
 Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius ?

Lart. On safeguard he came to me, and did curse

Against the Volsces, for they had so vilely Yielded the town. He is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me ?

Lart. He did, my lord.

Cor. How ? What ?

Lart. How often he had met you, sword to sword ;

That of all things upon the earth he hated

Your person most ; that he would pawn his fortunes

To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he ?

Lart. At Antium.

Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there,

To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Behold, these are the tribunes of the people,
 The tongues o' th' common mouth. I do despise them,

For they do prank them in authority,
 Against all noble sufferance.

Sic. Pass no further.

Cor. Ha ! What is that ?

Bru. It will be dangerous to go on—no further.

Cor. What makes this change ?

Men. The matter ?

Com. Hath he not pass'd the noble and the common ?

Bru. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's voices ?

1 Sen. Tribunes, give way : he shall to th'
market-place.

Bru. The people are incens'd against him.
Sic. Stop,

Or all will fall in broil.

Cor. Are these your herd ?
Must these have voices, that can yield them
now

And straight disclaim their tongues ? What are your offices ? ³⁵

You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth ?

Have you not set them on ?

Men. Be calm, be calm.

Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot,

To curb the will of the nobility ; ³⁹

Suffer't, and live with such as cannot rule
Nor ever will be rul'd.

Bru. Call't not a plot.

The people cry you mock'd them ; and of
late,

When corn was given them gratis, you
repin'd ;

Scandal'd the suppliants for the people,
call'd them ⁴⁴

Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.

Cor. Why, this was known before.

Bru. Not to them all.

Cor. Have you inform'd them sithence ?

Bru. How ? I inform them !

Com. You are like to do such business.

Bru. Not unlike

Each way to better yours.

Cor. Why then should I be consul ? By yond clouds, ⁵⁰

Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow tribune.

Sic. You show too much of that
For which the people stir ; if you will pass
To where you are bound, you must enquire your way, ⁵⁴

Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit,
Or never be so noble as a consul,

Nor yoke with him for tribune.

Men. Let's be calm.

Com. The people are abus'd ; set on. This palt'ring

Becomes not Rome ; nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely ⁶⁰

I' th' plain way of his merit.

Cor. Tell me of corn !

This was my speech, and I will speak't
again—

Men. Not now, not now.

1 Sen. Not in this heat, sir, now.

Cor. Now, as I live, I will.

My nobler friends, I crave their pardons. ⁶⁵

For the mutable, rank-scented meiny, let
them

Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves. I say again,

In soothing them we nourish 'gainst our Senate ⁶⁹

The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition,
Which we ourselves have plough'd for,
sow'd, and scatter'd,

By mingling them with us, the honour'd number,

Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that
Which they have given to beggars.

Men. Well, no more.

1 Sen. No more words, we beseech you.

Cor. How ? no more !

As for my country I have shed my blood, ⁷⁶

Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs

Coin words till their decay against those measles

Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought

The very way to catch them.

Bru. You speak o' th' people ⁸⁰

As if you were a god, to punish ; not

A man of their infirmity.

Sic. 'Twere well

We let the people know't.

Men. What, what ? his choler ?

Cor. Choler !

Were I as patient as the midnight sleep, ⁸⁵

By Jove, 'twould be my mind !

Sic. It is a mind

That shall remain a poison where it is,

Not poison any further.

Cor. Shall remain !

Hear you this Triton of the minnows ?

Mark you

His absolute 'shall' ?

Com. 'Twas from the canon.

Cor. 'Shall' ! ⁹⁰

O good but most unwise patricians ! Why,
You grave but reckless senators, have you
thus

Given Hydra here to choose an officer

That with his peremptory 'shall', being but The horn and noise o' th' monster's, wants not spirit ⁹⁵

To say he'll turn your current in a ditch,

And make your channel his ? If he have
power,

Then vail your ignorance ; if none, awake

Your dangerous lenity. If you are learn'd,

Be not as common fools ; if you are not, ¹⁰⁰

Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians,

If they be senators ; and they are no less,

When, both your voices blended, the great'st taste

Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate ; ¹⁰⁴

And such a one as he, who puts his 'shall',
His popular 'shall', against a graver bench

Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove
himself,

It makes the consuls base ; and my soul
aches

To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion 110
May enter 'twixt the gap of both and take
The one by th' other.

Com. Well, on to th' market-place.

Cor. Whoever gave that counsel to give
forth

The corn o' th' storehouse gratis, as 'twas us'd

Sometime in Greece—

Men. Well, well, no more of that. 115

Cor. Though there the people had more absolute pow'r—

I say they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.

Bru. Why shall the people give
One that speaks thus their voice ?

Cor. I'll give my reasons, More worthier than their voices. They know the corn 120

Was not our recompense, resting well assur'd

They ne'er did service for't ; being press'd to th' war.

Even when the navel of the state was
touch'd,

They would not thread the gates. This kind of service

Did not deserve corn gratis. Being i' th'
war, 125

Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd

Most valour, spoke not for them. Th accusation

Which they have often made against the Senate,

All cause unborn, could never be the native 129

Of our so frank Conat'ion. Well, what then ?

How shall this bosom multiplied digest

The Senate's courtesy ? Let deeds express

What's like to be their words : ' We did

request it ;

We are the greater poll, and in true fear
They gave us our demands'. Thus we debase 135

The nature of our seats, and make the rabble

Call our cares fears ; which will in time Break ope the locks o' th' Senate and bring in

The crows to peck the eagles.

Men. Come, enough.

Bru. Enough, with over measure.

Cor. No, take more. 140

What may be sworn by, both divine and human,

Seal what I end withal ! This double
worship,

Where one part does disdain with cause,
the other

Insult without all reason ; where gentry,
title, wisdom,

Cannot conclude but by the yea and no 145

Of general ignorance—it must omit Real necessities, and give way the while To unstable slightness. Purpose so barr'd, it follows

Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore,
beseech you— 149

You that will be less fearful than discreet ;
That love the fundamental part of state

More than you doubt the change on't ; that prefer

A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump a body with a dangerous physic

That's sure of death without it—at once pluck out 155

The multitudinous tongue ; let them not lick

The sweet which is their poison. Your dishonour

Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the
state

Of that integrity which should become't,
Not having the power to do the good it would, 160

For th' ill which doth control't.

Bru. Has said enough.

Sic. Has spoken like a traitor and shall answer

As traitors do.

Cor. Thou wretch, despite o'erwhelm
thee !

What should the people do with these bald
tribunes, 164

On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench ? In a rebellion,

When what's not meet, but what must be,
was law,

Then were they chosen ; in a better hour
Let what is meet be said it must be meet,

And throw their power i' th' dust. 170

Bru. Manifest treason !

Sic. This a consul ? No.

Bru. The ædiles, ho !

Enter an Ædile.

Let him be apprehended.

Sic. Go call the people, [Exit Ædile] in whose name myself

Attach thee as a traitorous innovator,
A foe to th' public weal. Obey, I charge

thee, 175
And follow to thine answer.

Cor. Hence, old goat !

Patricians. We'll surety him.

Com. Ag'd sir, hands off.

Cor. Hence, rotten thing ! or I shall shake thy bones

Out of thy garments.

Sic. Help, ye citizens !

Enter a rabble of Plebeians, with the Ædiles.

Men. On both sides more respect. 180

Sic. Here's he that would take from you all your power.

Bru. Seize him, ædiles.

Plebeians. Down with him ! down with him !

2 Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons !
[They all bustle about Coriolanus.]

All. Tribunes ! patricians ! citizens ! What, ho ! Sicinius ! Brutus ! Coriolanus ! Citizens !

Patricians. Peace, peace, peace ; stay, hold, peace ! 187

Men. What is about to be ? I am out of breath ;

Confusion's near ; I cannot speak. You Tribunes

To th' people—Coriolanus, patience ! 190 Speak, good Sicinius.

Sic. Hear me, people ; peace !

Plebeians. Let's hear our tribune. Peace !
Speak, speak, speak.

Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties. 194

Marcus would have all from you ; Marcus, Whom late you have nam'd for consul.

Men. Fie, fie, fie !

This is the way to kindle, not to quench.

1 Sen. To unbuild the city, and to lay all flat.

Sic. What is the city but the people ?

Plebeians. True, 200

The people are the city.

Bru. By the consent of all we were establish'd

The people's magistrates.

Plebeians. You so remain.

Men. And so are like to do.

Com. That is the way to lay the city flat,
To bring the roof to the foundation, 205

And bury all which yet distinctly ranges
In heaps and piles of ruin.

Sic. This deserves death.

Bru. Or let us stand to our authority
Or let us lose it. We do here pronounce,

Upon the part o' th' people, in whose power
We were elected theirs : Marcus is worthy

Of present death.

Sic. Therefore lay hold of him ; Bear him to th' rock Tarpeian, and from thence

Into destruction cast him.

Bru. Ædiles, seize him.

Plebeians. Yield, Marcus, yield.

Men. Hear me one word ; beseech you,
Tribunes, 215

Hear me but a word.

Æd. Peace, peace !

Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's friend,

And temporarily proceed to what you would Thus violently redress.

Bru. Sir, those cold ways, 220

That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous

Where the disease is violent. Lay hands upon him

And bear him to the rock.

[Coriolanus draws his sword.]

Cor. No : I'll die here.
There's some among you have beheld me
fighting ;

Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me. 225

Men. Down with that sword ! Tribunes, withdraw awhile.

Bru. Lay hands upon him.

Men. Help Marcus, help,

You that be noble ; help him, young and old.

Plebeians. Down with him, down with him ! [In this mutiny the Tribunes, the Ædiles, and the People are beat in.]

Men. Go, get you to your house ; be gone, away. 230

All will be nought else.

2 Sen. Get you gone.

Cor. Stand fast ;

We have as many friends as enemies.

Men. Shall it be put to that ?

1 Sen. The gods forbid !

I prithee, noble friend, home to thy house ;
Leave us to cure this cause.

Men. For 'tis a sore upon us 235

You cannot tent yourself ; be gone,
beseech you.

Com. Come, sir, along with us.

Cor. I would they were barbarians, as they are,

Though in Rome litter'd ; not Romans, as they are not, 239

Though ca ved i' th' porch o' th' Capitol.

Men. Be gone.

Put not your worthy rage into your tongue ;
One time will owe another.

Cor. On fair ground

I could beat forty of them.

Men. I could myself

Take up a brace o' th' best of them ; yea,
the two tribunes.

Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic, 245

And manhood is call'd foolery when it stands

Against a falling fabric. Will you hence,
Before the tag return ? whose rage doth rend

Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear
What they are us'd to bear.

Men. Pray you be gone. 250

I'll try whether my old wit be in request With those that have but little ; this must be patch'd

With cloth of any colour.

Com. Nay, come away.

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Cominius, with others.]

Pat. This man has marr'd his fortune.

Men. His nature is too noble for the
world : 255

He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,

Or Jove for's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth ;

What his breast forges, that his tongue
must vent ;

And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death. ²⁶⁰

[A noise within.]

Here's goodly work !

Pat. I would they were a-bed.

Men. I would they were in Tiber.

What the vengeance, could he not speak
'em fair ?

Re-enter BRUTUS and SICINIUS, with the Rabbie again.

Sic. Where is this viper
That would depopulate the city and ²⁶⁴
Be every man himself ?

Men. You worthy Tribunes—

Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock

With rigorous hands ; he hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further
trial

Than the severity of the public power,
Which he so sets at nought.

1 Cit. He shall well know ²⁷⁰

The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,
And we their hands.

Plebeians. He shall, sure on't.

Men. Sir, sir—

Sic. Peace !

Men. Do not cry havoc, where you should but hunt ²⁷⁵

With modest warrant.

Sic. Sir, how comes't that you Have help to make this rescue ?

Men. Hear me speak.

As I do know the consul's worthiness,
So can I name his faults.

Sic. Consul ! What consul ?

Men. The consul Coriolanus.

Bru. He consul ! ²⁸⁰

Plebeians. No, no, no, no, no.

Men. If, by the tribune's leave, and yours, good people,

I may be heard, I would crave a word or two ;

The which shall turn you to no further harm

Than so much loss of time.

Sic. Speak briefly, then, ²⁸⁵

For we are peremptory to dispatch
This viperous traitor ; to eject him hence
Were but one danger, and to keep him here
Our certain death ; therefore it is decreed
He dies to-night.

Men. Now the good gods forbid ²⁹⁰
That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude Towards her deserved children is enroll'd
In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam
Should now eat up her own !

Sic. He's a disease that must be cut away. ²⁹⁵

Men. O, he's a limb that has but a disease—

Mortal, to cut it off : to cure it, easy.

What has he done to Rome that's worthy
death ?

Killing our enemies, the blood he hath
lost—

Which I dare vouch is more than that he hath ³⁰⁰

By many an ounce—he dropt it for his
country ;

And what is left, to lose it by his country
Were to us all that do't and suffer it
A brand to th' end o' th' world.

Sic. This is clean kam.

Bru. Merely awry. When he did love his country, ³⁰⁵

It honour'd him.

Sic. The service of the foot,
Being once gangren'd, is not then respected
For what before it was.

Bru. We'll hear no more.
Pursue him to his house and pluck him
thence,

Lest his infection, being of catching nature, ³¹⁰

Spread further.

Men. One word more, one word !
This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
The harm of unscann'd swiftness, will, too
late,

Tie leaden pounds to's heels. Proceed by
process,

Lest parties—as he is belov'd—break out,
And sack great Rome with Romans. ³¹⁶

Bru. If it were so—

Sic. What do ye talk ?

Have we not had a taste of his obedience—
Our ædiles smote, ourselves resisted ?
Come !

Men. Consider this : he has been bred
i' th' wars

Since 'a could draw a sword, and is ill
school'd ³²¹

In bolted language ; meal and bran
together

He throws without distinction. Give me
leave,

I'll go to him and undertake to bring
him

Where he shall answer by a lawful form, ³²⁵
In peace, to his utmost peril.

1 Sen. Noble Tribunes,
It is the humane way ; the other course
Will prove too bloody, and the end of it Unknown to the beginning.

Sic. Noble Menenius,
Be you then as the people's officer. ³³⁰
Masters, lay down your weapons.

Bru. Go not home.

Sic. Meet on the market-place. We'll attend you there ;

Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed

In our first way.

Men. I'll bring him to you.

CORIOLANUS

[To the Senators] Let me desire your company ; he must come, 335
 Or what is worst will follow.
 1 Sen. Pray you let's to him.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Rome. The house of Coriolanus.

Enter CORIOLANUS with Nobles.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears, present me
 Death on the wheel or at wild horses' heels ;
 Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
 That the precipitation might down stretch
 Below the beam of sight ; yet will I still 5
 Be thus to them.

1 Pat. You do the nobler.

Cor. I muse my mother
 Does not approve me further, who was wont

To call them woollen vassals, things created
 To buy and sell with groats ; to show bare heads 10

In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder,

When one but of my ordinance stood up
 To speak of peace or war.

Enter VOLUMNIA.

I talk of you :
 Why did you wish me milder ? Would you have me

False to my nature ? Rather say I play 15
 The man I am.

Vol. O, sir, sir, sir,
 I would have had you put your power well on

Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.

Vol. You might have been enough the man you are 19

With striving less to be so ; lesser had been
 The thwartings of your dispositions, if You had not show'd them how ye were dispos'd,

Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Cor. Let them hang.

Vol. Ay, and burn too.

Enter MENENIUS with the Senators.

Men. Come, come, you have been too rough, something too rough ; 25
 You must return and mend it.

1 Sen. There's no remedy,
 Unless, by not so doing, our good city
 Cleave in the midst and perish.

Vol. Pray be counsell'd ;
 I have a heart as little apt as yours, 29
 But yet a brain that leads my use of anger
 To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman !
 Before he should thus stoop to th' herd,
 but that

The violent fit o' th' time craves it as physic

For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,

Which I can scarcely bear.

Cor. What must I do ? 35

Men. Return to th' tribunes.

Cor. Well, what then, what then ?

Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them ! I cannot do it to the gods ;

Must I then do't to them ?

Vol. You are too absolute ;
 Though therein you can never be too noble
 But when extremities speak. I have heard you say 41

Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends,
 I' th' war do grow together ; grant that, and tell me

In peace what each of them by th' other lose

That they combine not there.

Cor. Tush, tush !

Men. A good demand.

Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem
 The same you are not, which for your best ends 47

You adopt your policy, how is it less or worse

That it shall hold companionship in peace
 With honour as in war ; since that to both
 It stands in like request ?

Cor. Why force you this ?

Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak 52

To th' people, not by your own instruction,
 Nor by th' matter which your heart prompts you,

But with such words that are but roted in Your tongue, though but bastards and syllables 56

Of no allowance to your bosom's truth.

Now, this no more dishonours you at all
 Than to take in a town with gentle words,
 Which else would put you to your fortune and 60

The hazard of much blood.

I would dissemble with my nature where
 My fortunes and my friends at stake requir'd

I should do so in honour. I am in this
 Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles ; 65

And you will rather show our general louts
 How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon 'em

For the inheritance of their loves and safeguard

Of what that want might ruin.

Men. Noble lady !

Come, go with us, speak fair ; you may salve so, 70

Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
 Of what is past.

Vol. I prithee now, my son,
 Go to them with this bonnet in thy hand ;

And thus far having stretch'd it—here be
with them—
Thy knee bussing the stones—for in such
business 75
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of th' ignorant
More learned than the ears—waving thy
head,
Which often thus correcting thy stout heart,
Now humble as the ripest mulberry That will not hold the handling. Or say to
them 80
Thou art their soldier and, being bred in
broils,
Hast not the soft way which, thou dost
confess,
Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim,
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far 85
As thou hast power and person.

Men. This but done
Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were
yours;
For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free
As words to little purpose.

Vol. Prithee now, Go, and be rul'd; although I know thou hadst rather 90
Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf
Than flatter him in a bower.

Enter COMINIUS.

Here is Cominius.
Com. I have been i' th' market-place;
and, sir, 'tis fit
You make strong party, or defend yourself
By calmness or by absence; all's in anger.
Men. Only fair speech.
Com. I think 'twill serve, if he Can thereto frame his spirit.
Vol. He must and will.
Prithee now, say you will, and go about it.
Cor. Must I go show them my unbarb'd sconce? Must I
With my base tongue give to my noble
heart 100
A lie that it must bear? Well, I will do't;
Yet, were there but this single plot to lose,
This mould of Marcius, they to dust should grind it,
And throw't against the wind. To th'
market-place!
You have put me now to such a part which never 105
I shall discharge to th' life.
Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you.
Vol. I prithee now, sweet son, as thou hast said
My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.
Cor. Well, I must do't. 110
Away, my disposition, and possess me

Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,
Which quier'd with my drum, into a pipe
Small as an eunuch or the virgin voice That babies lulis asleep! The smiles of knaves 115
Tent in my cheeks, and schoolboys' tears take up
The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue Make motion through my lips, and my arm'd knees, 118
Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an alms! I will not do't, Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth,
And by my body's action teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice, then.
To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour Than thou of them. Come all to ruin. Let Thy mother rather feel thy pride than fear Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at
death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it
from me;
But owe thy pride thyself.

Cor. Pray be content. 120
Mother, I am going to the market-place; Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their
loves,
Cog their hearts from them, and come home
belov'd
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going.
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul, 125
Or never trust to what my tongue can do
I' th' way of flattery further.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit.
Com. Away! The tribunes do attend
you. Arm yourself
To answer mildly; for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong
Than are upon you yet. 131 Cor. The word is 'mildly'. Pray you let us go.
Let them accuse me by invention; I will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly. 144
Cor. Well, mildly be it then—mildly.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Rome. The Forum.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects Tyranical power. If he evade us there, Enforce him with his envy to the people,
And that the spoil got on the Antiates
Was ne'er distributed. 5

Enter an Ædile.

What, will he come?

Æd. He's coming
Bru. How accompanied?
Æd. With old Menenius, and those senators
 That always favour'd him.
Sic. Have you a catalogue
 Of all the voices that we have procur'd,
 Set down by th' poll?
Æd. I have; 'tis ready.
Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?
Æd. I have.
Sic. Assemble presently the people hither;
 And when they hear me say 'It shall be so I' th' right and strength o' th' commons' be it either
 For death, for fine, or banishment, then let
 them,
 If I say mine, cry 'Fine!'—if death, cry
 'Death!'
 Insisting on the old prerogative
 And power i' th' truth o' th' cause.
Æd. I shall inform them.
Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,
 Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd
 Enforce the present execution
 Of what we chance to sentence.
Æd. Very well.
Sic. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint,
 When we shall hap to give't them.
Bru. Go about it.
 [Exit Ædile.]
 Put him to choler straight. He hath been us'd
 Ever to conquer, and to have his worth Of contradiction; being once chaf'd, he cannot
 Be rein'd again to temperance; then he
 speaks
 What's in his heart, and that is there which looks
 With us to break his neck.
Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, and COM-INIUS, with Others.
Sic. Well, here he comes.
Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.
Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for th' poorest piece
 Will bear the knave by th' volume. Th' honour'd gods
 Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice
 Supplied with worthy men! plant love among's!
 Throng our large temples with the shows of
 peace,
 And not our streets with war!
1 Sen. Amen, amen!
Men. A noble wish.
Re-enter the Ædile, with the Plebeians.
Sic. Draw near, ye people.

Æd. List to your tribunes. Audience!
 peace, I say!
Cor. First, hear me speak.
Both Tri. Well, say. Peace, ho!
Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further than this present?
 Must all determine here?
Sic. I do demand,
 If you submit you to the people's voices,
 Allow their officers, and are content
 To suffer lawful censure for such faults
 As shall be prov'd upon you.
Cor. I am content.
Men. Lo, citizens, he says he is content.
 The warlike service he has done, consider;
 think
 Upon the wounds his body bears, which show
 Like graves i' th' holy churchyard.
Cor. Scratches with briers,
 Scars to move laughter only.
Men. Consider further,
 That when he speaks not like a citizen,
 You find him like a soldier: do not take
 His rougher accents for malicious sounds,
 But, as I say, such as become a soldier
 Rather than envy you.
Com. Well, well! No more.
Cor. What is the matter,
 That being pass'd for consul with full voice,
 I am so dishonour'd that the very hour
 You take it off again?
Sic. Answer to us.
Cor. Say then; 'tis true, I ought so.
Sic. We charge you that you have con-triv'd to take
 From Rome all season'd office, and to wind
 Yourself into a power tyrannical;
 For which you are a traitor to the people.
Cor. How—traitor?
Men. Nay, temperately! Your promise.
Cor. The fires i' th' lowest hell fold in the people!
 Call me their traitor! Thou injurious tribune!
 Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand
 deaths,
 In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say
 'Thou liest' unto thee with a voice as free
 As I do pray the gods.
Sic. Mark you this, people?
Plebeians. To th' rock, to th' rock, with
 him!
Sic. Peace!
 We need not put new matter to his charge.
 What you have seen him do and heard him
 speak,
 Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,
 Opposing laws with strokes, and here
 defying
 Those whose great power must try him—
 even this,

So criminal and in such capital kind,
Deserves th' extremest death.

Bru. But since he hath Serv'd well for Rome—

Cor. What do you prate of service?

Bru. I talk of that that know it. 85
Cor. You!

Men. Is this the promise that you made your mother?

Com. Know, I pray you—

Cor. I'll know no further.

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian
death,

Vagabond exile, flaying, pent to linger 90
But with a grain a day, I would not buy
Their mercy at the price of one fair word, Nor check my courage for what they can give,

To have't with saying 'Good-morrow'.

Sic. For that he has—

As much as in him lies—from time to time
Envied against the people, seeking means
To pluck away their power; as now at last Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence

Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers
That do distribute it—in the name o' th'
people, 100

And in the power of us the tribunes, we,
Ev'n from this instant, banish him our city,
In peril of precipitation

From off the rock Tarpeian, never more To enter our Rome gates. I th' people's
name, 105

I say it shall be so.

Plebeians. It shall be so, it shall be so!

Let him away!

He's banish'd, and it shall be so.

Com. Hear me, my masters and my common friends—

Sic. He's sentenc'd; no more hearing.

Com. Let me speak.

I have been consul, and can show for Rome
Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love My country's good with a respect more
tender,

More holy and profound, than mine own
life,

My dear wife's estimate, her womb's
increase 115

And treasure of my loins. Then if I would Speak that—

Sic. We know your drift. Speak what?

Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd,

As enemy to the people and his country.
It shall be so. 120

Plebeians. It shall be so, it shall be so.

Cor. You common cry of curs, whose breath I hate

As reek o' th' rotten fens, whose loves I prize

As the dead carcasses of unburied men
That do corrupt my air—I banish you. 125

And here remain with your uncertainty!
Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts;
Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes, Fan you into despair! Have the power still
To banish your defenders, till at length 130
Your ignorance—which finds not till it feels,

Making but reservation of yourselves
Still your own foes—deliver you
As most abated captives to some nation 134
That won you without blows! Despising
For you the city, thus I turn my back:
There is a world elsewhere.

[Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, Menenius, with the other Patricians.]

Æd. The people's enemy is gone, is gone!

[They all shout and throw up their caps.]

Plebeians. Our enemy is banish'd, he is gone! Hoo-oo!

Sic. Go see him out at gates, and follow
him, 140

As he hath follow'd you, with all despite;
Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard
Attend us through the city.

Plebeians. Come, come, let's see him out at gates; come!

The gods preserve our noble tribunes!
Come. [Exeunt.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Rome. Before a gate of the city.

Enter CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, with the young Nobility of Rome.

Cor. Come, leave your tears; a brief farewell. The beast

With many heads butts me away. Nay,
mother,

Where is your ancient courage? You were us'd

To say extremities was the trier of spirits;
That common chances common men could
bear; 5

That when the sea was calm all boats alike
Show'd mastership in floating; fortune's
blows,

When most struck home, being gentle wounded craves

A noble cunning. You were us'd to load me
With precepts that would make invincible
The heart that conn'd them. 11

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I prithee, woman—

Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome,

And occupations perish!

Cor. What, what, what!
I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay,

mother, 15

Resume that spirit when you were wont
to say,

If you had been the wife of Hercules,

Six of his labours you'd have done, and
sav'd

Your husband so much sweat. Cominius, Droop not ; adieu. Farewell, my wife, my mother. 20

I'll do well yet. Thou old and true
Menenius,

Thy tears are saltier than a younger man's
And venomous to thine eyes. My sometime
General,

I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld

Heart-hard'ning spectacles ; tell these sad
women 25

'Tis fond to wail inevitable strokes,
As 'tis to laugh at 'em. My mother, you wot
well

My hazards still have been your solace ;
and

Believe't not lightly—though I go alone,
Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen 30 Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen—your son

Will or exceed the common or be caught
With cautious baits and practice.

Vol. My first son,
Whither wilt thou go ? Take good
Cominius

With thee awhile ; determine on some
course 35

More than a wild exposture to each chance
That starts i' th' way before thee.

Vir. O the gods !
Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise
with thee

Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear of us, 39

And we of thee ; so, if the time thrust
forth

A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man,
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I' th' absence of the needer.

Cor. Fare ye well ;
Thou hast years upon thee, and thou art
too full 45

Of the wars' surfeits to go rove with one That's yet unbruish'd ; bring me but out at gate.

Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother,
and

My friends of noble touch ; when I am
forth,

Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you
come. 50

While I remain above the ground you shall Hear from me still, and never of me aught
But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear. Come, let's not weep.

If I could shake off but one seven years 55
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,

I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand.
Come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Rome. A street near the gate.

Enter the two Tribunes, SICINIUS and BRUTUS, with the Ædile.

Sic. Bid them all home ; he's gone, and we'll no further.

The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have sided

In his behalf.

Bru. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done
Than when it was a-doing.

Sic. Bid them home. 5 Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Bru. Dismiss them home.
[Exit Ædile.]

Here comes his mother.

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and MENENIUS.

Sic. Let's not meet her.
Bru. Why ?

Sic. They say she's mad.

Bru. They have ta'en note of us ; keep on your way. 10

Vol. O, y'are well met ; th' hoarded plague o' th' gods

Requite your love !

Men. Peace, peace, be not so loud.
Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear—

Nay, and you shall hear some. [To Brutus]
Will you be gone ?

Vir. [To Sicinius] You shall stay too. I would I had the power 15

To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind ?

Vol. Ay, fool ; is that a shame ? Note
but this, fool :

Was not a man my father ? Hadst thou foxship

To banish him that struck more blows for
Rome

Than thou hast spoken words ?

Sic. O blessed heavens ! 20
Vol. More noble blows than ever thou wise
words ;

And for Rome's good. I'll tell thee what—yet go !

Nay, but thou shalt stay too. I would my
son

Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then ?

Vir. What then ! 25

He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards and all.

Good man, the wounds that he does bear
for Rome !

Men. Come, come, peace.

Sic. I would he had continued to his country 30

As he began, and not unknit himself
The noble knot he made.

Bru. I would he had.

Vol. 'I would he had'! 'Twas you incens'd the rabble—

Cats that can judge as fitly of his worth
As I can of those mysteries which heaven 35
Will not have earth to know.

Bru. Pray, let's go.

Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone;

You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this:

As far as doth the Capitol exceed The meanest house in Rome, so far my
son— 40

This lady's husband here, this, do you
see?—

Whom you have banish'd does exceed you
all.

Bru. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sic. Why stay we to be baited
With one that wants her wits?

[Exeunt Tribunes.]

Vol. Take my prayers with you.
I would the gods had nothing else to do 45
But to confirm my curses. Could I meet 'em
But once a day, it would unclog my heart
Of what lies heavy to't.

Men. You have told them home,
And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup with me?

Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon
myself, 50

And so shall starve with feeding. Come, let's go.

Leave this faint puling and lament as I do.
In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.

[Exeunt Volumnia and Virgilia.]

Men. Fie, fie, fie! [Exit]

SCENE III. A highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Volsce, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir, and you know me: your name, I think, is Adrian.

Vols. It is so, sir. Truly, I have forgot
you.

Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against 'em. Know you me yet? 5

Vols. Nicanor? No!

Rom. The same, sir.

Vols. You had more beard when I last saw you, but your favour is well appear'd
by your tongue. What's the news in Rome?
I have a note from the Volscean state, to find you out there. You have well saved me a day's journey. 12

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrections: the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vols. Hath been! Is it ended, then?
Our state thinks not so; they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their dvision. 17

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again; for the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the vioient breaking out. 24

Vols. Coriolanus banish'd!

Rom. Banish'd, sir.

Vols. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor. 28

Rom. The day serves well for them now.
I have heard it said the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fall'n out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vols. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate 'thus accidentally to encounter you; you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home. 36

Rom. I shal between this and supper tell you most strange things from Rome, all tending to the good of their adversaries.
Have you an army ready, say you?

Vols. A most royal one: the centurions ad their charges, distinctly billeted, already in th' entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning. 42

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vols. You take my part from me, sir. I have the most cause to be glad of yours. 47

Rom. Well, let us go together. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Antium. Before Aufidius's
house.

Enter CORIOLANUS in mean apparel, disguis'd and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium. City,
'Tis I that made thy widows; many an
heir

Of these fair edifices fore my wars Have I heard groan and drop. Then know me not,

Lest that thy wives with spits and boys with stones, 5

In puny battle slay me.

Enter a Citizen.

Save you, sir.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will,

Where great Aufidius lies. Is he in Antium?

Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state

At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, beseech you?

Cit. This here before you.

Cor. Thank you, sir; farewell.
[Exit Citizen.]

O world, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn,

Whose double bosoms seems to wear one heart,

Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal and exercise

Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love

Unseparable, shall within this hour, On a dissension of a doit, break out

To bitterest enmity; so fellest foes, Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep

To take the one the other, by some chance, Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends

And interjoin their issues. So with me: My birthplace hate I, and my love's upon

This enemy town. I'll enter. If he slay me, He does fair justice: if he give me way,

I'll do his country service. [Exit.]

SCENE V. Antium. Aufidius's house.

Music plays. Enter a Servingman.

1 Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here! I think our fellows are asleep.

[Exit.]

Enter another Servingman.

2 Serv. Where's Cotus? My master calls for him. Cotus!

[Exit.]

Enter CORIOLANUS.

Cor. A goodly house. The feast smells well, but I Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the first Servingman.

1 Serv. What would you have, friend? Whence are you? Here's no place for you: pray go to the door.

[Exit.]

Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertainment

In being Coriolanus.

Re-enter second Servant.

2 Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray get you out.

Cor. Away!

2 Serv. Away? Get you away.

Cor. Now th' art troublesome.

2 Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talk'd with anon.

Enter a third Servingman. The first meets him.

3 Serv. What fellow's this?

1 Serv. A strange one as ever I look'd on. I cannot get him out o' th' house. Prithce call my master to him.

3 Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you avoid the house.

Cor. Let me but stand—I will not hurt your hearth.

3 Serv. What are you?

Cor. A gentleman.

3 Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

3 Serv. Pray you, poor gent'leman, take up some other station; here's no place for you. Pray you avoid. Come.

Cor. Follow your function, go and batten on cold bits. [Pushes him away from him.]

3 Serv. What, you will not? Prithce tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

2 Serv. And I shall.

[Exit.]

3 Serv. Where dwell'st thou?

Cor. Under the canopy.

3 Serv. Under the canopy?

Cor. Ay.

3 Serv. Where's that?

Cor. I' th' city of kites and crows.

3 Serv. I' th' city of kites and crows! What an ass it is! Then thou dwell'st with daws too?

Cor. No, I serve not thy master.

3 Serv. How, sir! Do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Ay; 'tis an honest service than to meddle with thy mistress. Thou prat'st and prat'st; serve with thy trencher; hence!

[Beats him away.]

Enter AUFIDIUS with the second Servingman.

Auf. Where is this fellow?

2 Serv. Here, sir; I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

Auf. Whence com'st thou? What wouldst thou? Thy name?

Why speak'st not? Speak, man. What's thy name?

Cor. [Unmuffling] If, Tullus, Not yet thou know'st me, and, seeing me, dost not Think me for the man I am, necessity Commands me name myself.

Auf. What is thy name?

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,

And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name?

Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face

Bears a command in't; though thy tackle's torn,

Thou show'st a noble vessel. What's thy name ?

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown—know'st thou me yet ?

Auf. I know thee not. Thy name ?

Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done

To thee particularly, and to all the Volsces, Great hurt and mischief ; thereto witness may

My surname, Coriolanus. The painful service,

The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood

Shed for my thankless country, are requited

But with that surname—a good memory And witness of the malice and displeasure Which thou shouldst bear me. Only that name remains ;

The cruelty and envy of the people, Permitted by our dastard nobles, who Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest, And suffer'd me by th' voice of slaves to be Whoop'd out of Rome. Now this extremity Hath brought me to thy hearth ; not out of hope,

Mistake me not, to save my life ; for if I had fear'd death, of all the men i' th' world

I would have 'voided thee ; but in mere spite,

To be full quit of those my banishers, Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast A heart of wreak in thee, that wilt revenge Thine own particular wrongs and stop those maims

Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight

And make my misery serve thy turn. So use it

That my revengeful services may prove As benefits to thee ; for I will fight Against my cank'red country with the spleen

Of all the under fiends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes

Th'art tir'd, then, in a word, I also am Longer to live most weary, and present My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice ; Which not to cut would show thee but a fool,

Since I have ever followed thee with hate. Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast,

And cannot live but to thy shame, unless It be to do thee service.

Auf. O Marcius, Marcius ! Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from my heart

A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter Should from yond cloud speak divine things,

And say ' 'Tis true', I'd not believe them more

Than thee, all noble Marcius. Let me twine Mine arms about that body, where against My grained ash an hundred times hath broke

And scarr'd the moon with splinters ; here I clip

The anvil of my sword, and do contest As hotly and as nobly with thy love

As ever in ambitious strength I did Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,

I lov'd the maid I married ; never man Sigh'd truer breath ; but that I see thee here,

Thou noble thing, more dances my rapt heart

Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars, I tell thee

We have a power on foot, and I had purpose Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn,

Or lose mine arm for't. Thou hast beat me out Twelve several times, and I have nightly since

Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me—

We have been down together in my sleep, Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat—

And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy Marcius,

Had we no other quarrel else to Rome but tha—

Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all

From twelve to seventy, and, pouring war Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome, Like a bold flood o'erbea . O, come, go in, And take our friendly senators by th' hands, Who now are here, taking their leaves of me Who am prepar'd against your territories, Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods !

Auf. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have

The leading of thine own revenges, take Th' one half of my commission, and set down—

As best thou art experienc'd, since thou know'st

Thy country's strength and weakness—thine own ways,

Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,

Or rudely visit them in parts remote To fright them ere destroy. But come in ;

Let me commend thee first to those that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes !

And more a friend than e'er an enemy ;

Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand ;
most welcome !

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Aufidius.]

The two Servingmen come forward.

1 Serv. Here's a strange alteration !

2 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have stricken him with a cudgel ; and yet my mind gave me his clothes made a false report of him. ¹⁵¹

1 Serv. What an arm he has ! He turn'd me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

2 Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him ; he had, sir, a kind of face, methought—I cannot tell how to term it. ¹⁵⁶

1 Serv. He had so, looking as it were—Would I were hang'd, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

2 Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn. He is simply the rarest man i' th' world. ¹⁶¹

1 Serv. I think he is ; but a greater soldier than he you wot one.

2 Serv. Who, my master ?

1 Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that. ¹⁶⁵

2 Serv. Worth six on him.

1 Serv. Nay, not so neither ; but I take him to be the greater soldier.

2 Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that ; for the defence of a town our general is excellent.

1 Serv. Ay, and for an assault too. ¹⁷¹

Re-enter the third Servingman.

3 Serv. O slaves, I can tell you news—news, you rascals !

Both. What, what, what ? Let's partake.

3 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations ; I had as lief be a condemn'd man.

Both. Wherefore ? wherefore ? ¹⁷⁷

3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general—Caius Marcius.

1 Serv. Why do you say ' thwack our general ' ? ¹⁸⁰

3 Serv. I do not say ' thwack our general ', but he was always good enough for him.

2 Serv. Come, we are fellows and friends. He was ever too hard for him, I have heard him say so himself.

1 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the troth on't ; before Corioli he scotch'd him and notch'd him like a carbonado. ¹⁸⁷

2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broil'd and eaten him too.

1 Serv. But more of thy news ! ¹⁹⁰

3 Serv. Why, he is so made on here within as if he were son and heir to Mars ; set at upper end o' th' table ; no question asked him by any of the senators but they stand bald before him. Our general himself makes a mistress of him, sanctifies himself with's hand, and turns up the white o' th' eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i' th' middle and but one half of what he was yesterday, for the other has half by the entreaty and grant of the whole table. He'll go, he says, and sowl the porter of Rome gates by th' ears ; he will mow all down before him, and leave his passage poll'd.

2 Serv. And he's as like to do't as any man I can imagine. ²⁰⁴

3 Serv. Do't ! He will do't ; for look you, sir, he has as many friends as enemies ; which friends, sir, as it were, durst not—look you, sir—show themselves, as we term it, his friends, whilst he's in directitude.

1 Serv. Directitude ? What's that ? ²⁰⁹

3 Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him.

1 Serv. But when goes this forward ? ²¹³

3 Serv. To-morrow, to-day, presently. You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon ; 'tis as it were a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

2 Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers. ²²⁰

1 Serv. Let me have war, say I ; it exceeds peace as far as day does night ; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy ; mull'd, deaf, sleepy, insensible ; a getter of more bastard children than war's a destroyer of men. ²²⁵

2 Serv. 'Tis so ; and as war in some sort may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.

1 Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.

3 Serv. Reason : because they then less need one another. The wars for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians. They are rising, they are rising. ²³²

Both. In, in, in, in ! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Rome. A public place.

Enter the two Tribunes, SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him.

His remedies are tame. The present peace And quietness of the people, which before Were in wild hurry, here do make his friends

Blush that the world goes well ; who rather had, ⁵
Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold

Dissentious numbers pest'ring streets than
see
Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and going
About their functions friendly.

Enter MENENIUS.

Bru. We stood to't in good time. Is this Menenius?

Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he. O, he is grown most kind 11

Of late. Hail, sir!

Men. Hail to you both!

Sic. Your Coriolanus is not much miss'd But with his friends. The commonwealth doth stand,

And so would do, were he more angry at it.

Men. All's well, and might have been much better if 16

He could have temporiz'd.

Sic. Where is he, hear you?

Men. Nay, I hear nothing; his mother and his wife

Hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

Citizens. The gods preserve you both!

Sic. God-den, our neighbours.

Bru. God-den to you all, god-den to you
all. 21

1 Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees

Are bound to pray for you both.

Sic. Live and thrive!

Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours; we wish'd Coriolanus

Had lov'd you as we did.

Citizens. Now the gods keep you! 25

Both Tri. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt Citizens.]

Sic. This is a happier and more comely
time

Than when these fellows ran about the streets

Crying confusion.

Bru. Caius Marcius was

A worthy officer i' th' war, but insolent, 30
O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking,

Self-loving—

Sic. And affecting one sole throne, Without assistance.

Men. I think not so.

Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation,

If he had gone forth consul, found it so. 35

Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and Rome

Sits safe and still without him.

Enter an Ædile.

Æd. Worthy tribunes,

There is a slave, whom we have put in prison,

Reports the Volscs with two several
powers

Are ent'red in the Roman territories, 40
And with the deepest malice of the war
Destroy what lies before 'em.

Men.

'Tis Aufidius,
Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment,
Thrusts forth his horns again into the world,
Which were inshell'd when Marcius stood for Rome, 45

And durst not once peep out.

Sic. Come, what talk you of Marcius?

Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd. It canno' be

The Volscs dare break with us.

Men.

Cannot be!
We have record that very well it can; 50
And three examples of the like hath been Within my age. But reason with the fellow Before you punish him, where he heard
this,

Lest you shall chance to whip your information

And beat the messenger who bids beware 55
Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. Tell not me.

I know this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going

All to the Senate House: some news is
come 59

That turns their countenances.

Sic.

'Tis this slave—
Go whip him fore the people's eyes—his raising,

Nothing but his report.

Mess.

Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded, and more.
More fearful, is deliver'd

Sic.

What more fearful?
Mess. It is spoke freely out of many
mouths— 65

How probable I do not know—that Marcius,
Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst
Rome

And vows revenge as spacious as between
The young'st and oldest thing.

Sic.

This is most likely!
Bru. Rais'd only that the weaker sort may wish 70

Good Marcius home again.

Sic.

The very trick on't.

Men. This is unlikely.

He and Aufidius can no more atone

Than violent'st contrariety.

Enter a second Messenger.

2 Mess. You are sent for to the Senate. 75
A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius
Associated with Aufidius, rag-s
Upon our territories, and have already

O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire and took What lay before them. 80

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. O, you have made good work!

Men. What news? what news?

Com. You have help to ravish your own daughters and

To melt the city leads upon your pates,
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses—

Men. What's the news? What's the news? 85

Com. Your temples burned in their cement, and

Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd

Into an auger's bore.

Men. Pray now, your news?
You have made fair work, I fear me. Pray, your news.

If Marcius should be join'd wi' th' Volscians—

Com. If! 90

He is their god; he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than Nature,
That shapes man better; and they follow him

Against us brats with no less confidence Than boys pursuing summer butterflies, 95
Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work,
You and your apron men; you that stood so much

Upon the voice of occupation and 98
The breath of garlic-eaters!

Com. He'll shake
Your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules
Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made fair work!

Bru. But is this true, sir?

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt, and who resists
Are mock'd for valiant ignorance, 105
And perish constant fools. Who is't can blame him?

Your enemies and his find something in him.

Men. We are all undone unless
The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?
The tribunes cannot do't for shame; the people 110

Deserve such pity of him as the wolf
Does of the shepherds; for his best friends, if they

Should say 'Be good to Rome'—they charg'd him even

As those should do that had deserv'd his
hate,

And therein show'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true; 115

If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face To say 'Beseech you, cease'. You have made fair hands,
You and your crafts! You have crafted
fair!

Com. You have brought
A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
S' incapable of help.

Both Tri. Say not we brought it.

Men. How! Was't we? We lov'd him, but, like beasts 122

And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your clusters,

Who did hoot him out o' th' city.

Com. But I fear

They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points

As if he were his officer. Desperation 127
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,

That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of Citizens.

Men. Here comes the clusters.
And is Aufidius with him? You are they That made the air unwholesome when you cast 131

Your stinking greasy caps in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming,
And not a hair upon a soldier's head
Which will not prove a whip; as many coxcombs 135

As you threw caps up will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no
matter;

If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.

Plebeians. Faith, we hear fearful news.

1 Cit. For mine own part,
When I said banish him, I said 'twas pity.

2 Cit. And so did I. 142

3 Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us. That we did, we did for the best; and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will. 146

Com. Y'are goodly things, you voices!

Men. You have made Good work, you and your cry! Shall's to the Capitol?

Com. O, ay, what else?

[Exeunt Cominius and Menenius.]

Sic. Go masters, get you home; be not dismay'd; 150

These are a side that would be glad to have This true which they so seem to fear. Go home,

And show no sign of fear.

1 Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said we were i'
th' wrong when we banish'd him. 156

2 Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home. [Exeunt Citizens.]

Bru. I do not like this news.

Sic. Nor I.
Bru. Let's to the Capitol. Would half my wealth 160
Would buy this for a lie!
Sic. Pray let's go. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. A camp at a short distance from Rome.

Enter AUFIDIUS with his Lieutenant.
Auf. Do they still fly to th' Roman?
Lieu. I do not know what witchcraft's in him, but
Your soldiers use him as the grace fore meat,
Their talk at table, and their thanks at end;
And you are dark'ned in this action, sir, 5
Even by your own.
Auf. I cannot help it now,
Unless by using means I lame the foot
Of our design. He bears himself more proudlie,
Even to my person, than I thought he would
When first I did embrace him; yet his
nature 10
In that's no changeling, and I must excuse
What cannot be amended.
Lieu. Yet I wish, sir—
I mean, for your particular—you had not Join'd in commission with him, but either
Had borne the action of yourself, or else 15
To him had left it solely.
Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure,
When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him. Although it seems,
And so he thinks, and is no less apparent 20
To th' vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly
And shows good husbandry for the Volscian
state,
Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword; yet he hath left undone
That which shall break his neck or hazard 25
mine
Whene'er we come to our account.
Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?
Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits
down,
And the nobility of Rome are his;
The senators and patricians love him too. 30
The tribunes are no soldiers, and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal as hasty
To expel him thence. I think he'll be to
Rome
As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature. First he was 35
A noble servant to them, but he could not Carry his honours even. Whether 'twas

pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man; whether defect of judgment,
To fail in the disposing of those chances 40
Which he was lord of; or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving From th' casque to th' cushion, but commanding peace
Even with the same austerity and garb
As he controll'd the war; but one of these— 45
As he hath spices of them all—not all,
For I dare so far free him—made him
fear'd,
So hated, and so banish'd. But he has a merit
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues
Lie in th' interpretation of the time; 50
And power, unto itself most commendable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair
T' extol what it hath done.
One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;
Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths do fail.
Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is
thine, 56
Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine. [Exeunt.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Rome. A public place.

Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SICINIUS and BRUTUS the two Tribunes, with Others.
Men. No, I'll not go. You hear what he hath said
Which was sometime his general, who lov'd
him
In a most dear particular. He call'd me
father;
But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd
him; 4
A mile before his tent fall down, and knee
The way into his mercy. Nay, if he coy'd
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.
Com. He would not seem to know me.
Men. Do you hear?
Com. Yet one time he did call me by my
name.
I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
That we have bled together. 'Coriolanus'
He would not answer to; forbad all names;
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forg'd himself a name i' th' fire
Of burning Rome.
Men. Why, so! You have made good
work. 15
A pair of tribunes that have wrack'd for
Rome
To make coals cheap—a noble memory!

Com. I minded him how royal 'twas to pardon
When it was less expected ; he replied,
It was a bare petition of a state ²⁰
To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well.
Could he say less ?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard For's private friends ; his answer to me
was,
He could not stay to pick them in a pile ²⁵
Of noisome musty chaff. He said 'twas folly,

For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt
And still to nose th' offence.

Men. For one poor grain or two !
I am one of those. His mother, wife, his child,
And this brave fellow too—we are the grains : ³⁰
You are the musty chaff, and you are smelt Above the moon. We must be burnt for
you.

Sic. Now, pray be patient ; if you refuse your aid
In this so never-needed help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress. But sure, if you ³⁵
Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue,
More than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.

Men. No ; I'll not meddle.

Sic. Pray you go to him.

Men. What should I do ?

Bru. Only make trial what your love can do ⁴⁰

For Rome, towards Marcius.

Men. Well, and say that Marcius Return me, as Cominius is return'd, Unheard—what then ?
But as a discontented friend, grief-shot
With his unkindness ? Say't be so ?

Sic. Yet your good will ⁴⁵ Must have that thanks from Rome atter the measure

As you intended well.

Men. I'll undertake't ;
I think he'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip
And hum at good Cominius much unhearts
me. ⁴⁹

He was not taken well : he had not din'd ;
The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and
then

We pout upon the morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive ; but when we have stuff'd

These pipes and these conveyances of our
blood

With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls ⁵⁵

Than in our priest-like fasts. Therefore I'll watch him

Till he be dieted to my request,

And then I'll set upon him.

Bru. You know the very road into his kindness

And cannot lose your way.

Men. Good faith, I'll prove him, ⁶⁰ Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge

Of my success. [Exit.]

Com. He'll never hear him.

Sic. Not ?

Com. I tell you he does sit in gold, his eye
Red as 'twould burn Rome, and his injury
The gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before him ;
'Twas very faintly he said ' Rise ' ; dismiss'd me ⁶⁶

Thus with his speechless hand. What he would do,

He sent in writing after me ; what he would not,

Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions ;

So that all hope is vain, ⁷⁰
Unless his noble mother and his wife,
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him

For mercy to his country. Therefore let's
hence,

And with our fair entreaties haste them on.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The Volscian camp before Rome.

Enter MENENIUS to the Watch on guard.

1 Watch. Stay. Whence are you ?

2 Watch. Stand, and go back.

Men. You guard like men, 'tis well ; but,
by your leave,

I am an officer of state and come

To speak with Coriolanus.

1 Watch. From whence ?

Men. From Rome.

1 Watch. You may not pass ; you must return. Our general ⁵

Will no more hear from thence.

2 Watch. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire before

You'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome ⁹

And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks
My name hath touch'd your ears : it is Menenius.

1 Watch. Be it so ; go back. The virtue of your name

Is not here passable.

Men. I tell thee, fellow,

Thy general is my lover. I have been The book of his good acts whence men have read ¹⁵

His fame unparallel'd haply amplified ;
For I have ever verified my friends—

Of whom he's chief—with all the size that verity

Would without lapsing suffer. Nay, sometimes,
 Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground, ²⁰
 I have tumbled past the throw, and in his praise
 Have almost stamp'd the leasing; therefore, fellow,
 I must have leave to pass.

1 Watch. Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here; no, though it were as virtuous to lie as to live chastely. Therefore go back.

Men. Prithee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general. ²⁹

2 Watch. Howsoever you have been his liar, as you say you have, I am one that, telling true under him, must say you cannot pass. Therefore go back.

Men. Has he din'd, canst thou tell? For
 I would not speak with him till after dinner.

1 Watch. You are a Roman, are you? ³⁵

Men. I am as thy general is.

1 Watch. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have push'd out your gates the very defender of them, and in a violent popular ignorance given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decay'd dotant as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceiv'd; therefore back to Rome and prepare for your execution. You are condemn'd; our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation. ⁵⁰

1 Watch. Come, my captain knows you
 not.

Men. I mean thy general.

1 Watch. My general cares not for you.
 Back, I say; go, lest I let forth your half pint of blood. Back—that's the utmost of your having. Back. ⁵⁵

Men. Nay, but fellow, fellow—

Enter CORIOLANUS with AUFIDIUS.

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now, you companion, I'll say an errand for you; you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack guardant cannot offend me from my son Coriolanus. Guess but by my entertainment with him if thou stand'st not i' th' state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship and crueller in suffering; behold now presently, and swoon for what's to come upon thee. The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us; look thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured none but myself could move thee,

 I have been blown out of your gates with sighs, and conjure thee to pardon Rome and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee. ⁷⁵

Cor. Away!

Men. How! away!

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not.
 My affairs

Are servanted to others. Though I owe
 My revenge properly, my remission lies ⁸⁰ In Volscean breasts. That we have been familiar,

Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison rather Than pity note how much. Therefore be gone.

Mine ears against your suits are stronger than

Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov'd thee, ⁸⁵

Take this along; I writ it for thy sake

[Gives a letter.]

And would have sent it. Another word,
 Menenius,

I will not hear thee speak. This man,
 Aufidius,

Was my belov'd in Rome; yet thou behold'st.

Auf. You keep a constant temper. ⁹⁰

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Aufidius.]

1 Watch. Now, sir, is your name Men-enius?

2 Watch. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much power! You know the way home again.

1 Watch. Do you hear how we are shent for keeping your greatness back? ⁹⁵

2 Watch. What cause, do you think, I have to swoon?

Men. I neither care for th' world nor your general; for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, y'are so slight.
 He that hath a will to die by himself fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long;
 and your misery increase with your age!
 I say to you, as I was said to: Away! [Exit.]

1 Watch. A noble fellow, I warrant him. ¹⁰³

2 Watch. The worthy fellow is our general; he's the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The tent of Coriolanus.

Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and Others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome
 to-morrow

Set down our host. My partner in this action,
You must report to th' Volscian lords how plainly
I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends
You have respected; stopp'd your ears against
The general suit of Rome; never admitted
A private whisper—no, not with such
friends
That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man, Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to
Rome,
Lov'd me above the measure of a father; 10
Nay, godded me indeed. Their latest refuge
Was to send him; for whose old love I
have—
Though I show'd sourly to him—once more offer'd

The first conditions, which they did refuse
And cannot now accept. To grace him
only, 15
That thought he could do more, a very little

I have yielded to; fresh embassies and suits,
Nor from the state nor private friends,
hereafter

Will I lend ear to. [Shout within] Ha! what shout is this?

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow 20
In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter, in mourning habits, VIRGILIA, VOLUMNIA, VALERIA, young MARCIUS, with Attendants.

My wife comes foremost, then the honour'd
mould

Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her
hand

The grandchild to her blood. But out, affection!

All bond and privilege of nature, break! 25
Let it be virtuous to be obstinate.

What is that curtsy worth? or those doves'
eyes,

Which can make gods forsworn? I melt, and am not

Of stronger earth than others. My mother
bows,

As if Olympus to a molehill should 30
In supplication nod; and my young boy

Hath an aspect of intercession which Great nature cries 'Deny not'. Let the Volsces

Plough Rome and harrow Italy; I'll never Be such a gosling to obey instinct, but stand 35

As if a man were author of himself
And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband!

Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow that delivers us thus chang'd

Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor now 40
I have forgot my part and I am out,
Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh,
Forgive my tyranny; but do not say,
For that, 'Forgive our Romans'. O, a kiss
Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge! 45
Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that
kiss

I carried from thee, dear, and my true lip Hath virgin'd it e'er since. You gods! I prate,

And the most noble mother of the world
Leave unsaluted. Sink, my knee, i' th' earth; [Kneels.]

Of thy deep duty more impression show 50
Than that of common sons.

Vol. O, stand up blest!
Whilst with no softer cushion than the flint
I kneel before thee, and improperly Show duty, as mistaken all this while 55
Between the child and parent. [Kneels.]

Cor. What's this?
Your knees to me, to your corrected son?
Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds

Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery
sun, 60

Murd'ring impossibility, to make
What cannot be slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior;
I help to frame thee. Do you know this lady?

Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome, chaste as the icicle 65
That's curdied by the frost from purest snow,

And hangs on Dian's temple—dear Valeria!

Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which by th' interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers, 70
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness, that thou mayst prove

To shame invulnerable, and stick i' th'
wars

Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,
And saving those that eye thee!

Vol. Your knee, sirrah. 75

Cor. That's my brave boy.

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and
myself,

Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace!
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before:

The thing I have forsworn to grant may never 80

Be held by you denials. Do not bid me

Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics. Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural; desire not T'allay my rages and revenges with 85
Your colder reasons.

Vol. O, no more, no more!
You have said you will not grant us any thing—

For we have nothing else to ask but that
Which you deny already; yet we will ask,
That, if you fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness; therefore hear us. 91

Cor. Aufidius, and you Volscres, mark;
for we'll

Hear nought from Rome in private. Your request?

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our raiment 94

And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself

How more unfortunate than all living
women

Are we come hither; since that thy sight, which should

Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,

Constrains them weep and shake with fear and sorrow, 100

Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing

His country's bowels out. And to poor we Thine enmity's most capital: thou bar'st
us 104

Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy. For how can we,
Alas, how can we for our country pray, Whereto we are bound, together with thy
victory,

Whereto we are bound? Alack, or we must lose

The country, our dear nurse, or else thy
person, 110

Our comfort in the country. We must find An evident calamity, though we had Our wish, which side should win; for either
thou

Must as a foreign recreant be led 114
With manacles through our streets, or else

Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin,
And bear the palm for having bravely shed Thy wife and children's blood. For myself,
son,

I purpose not to wait on fortune till These wars determine; if I can not persuade thee 120

Rather to show a noble grace to both parts
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner

March to assault thy country than to tread—

Trust to't, thou shalt not—on thy mother's womb

That brought thee to this world.

Vir. Ay, and mine, 125
That brought you forth this boy to keep your name

Living to time.

Boy. 'A shall not tread on me!
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll
fight.

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long. [Rising.]

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
If it were so that our request did tend

To save the Romans, thereby to destroy The Volscres whom you serve, you might condemn us 134

As poisonous of your honour. No, our suit
Is that you reconcile them: while the

Volscres
May say 'This mercy we have show'd', the

Romans
'This we receiv'd', and each in either side

Give the all-hail to thee, and cry 'Be blest

For making up this peace!' Thou know'st, great son, 140

The end of war's uncertain; but this
certain,

That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a
name

Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses;

Whose chronicle thus writ: 'The man was noble, 145

But with his last attempt he wip'd it out, Destroy'd his country, and his name
remains

To th' ensuing age abhorr'd'. Speak to me,
son.

Thou hast affected the fine strains of
honour,

To imitate the graces of the gods, 150
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o'
th' air,

And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?

Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, speak you: 155

He cares not for your weeping. Speak thou,
boy;

Perhaps thy childishness will move him
more

Than can our reasons. There's no man in the world

More bound to's mother, yet here he lets me prate

Like one i' th' stocks. Thou hast never in thy life 160

Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy,

When she, poor hen, fond of no second brood,
Has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home
Loaden with honour. Say my request's unjust,

And spurn me back ; but if it be not so, ¹⁶⁵
Thou art not honest, and the gods will plague thee,
That thou restrain'st from me the duty which

To a mother's part belongs. He turns away.
Down, ladies ; let us shame him with our knees.

To his surname Coriolanus 'longs more pride ¹⁷⁰

Than pity to our prayers. Down. An end ;
This is the last. So we will home to Rome,
And die among our neighbours. Nay, behold's !

This boy, that cannot tell what he would have

But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship, ¹⁷⁵

Does reason our petition with more strength
Than thou hast to deny't. Come, let us go.
This fellow had a Volscian to his mother ;
His wife is in Corioli, and his child
Like him by chance. Yet give us our dispatch. ¹⁸⁰

I am hush'd until our city be afire,
And then I'll speak a little.

[He holds her by the hand, silent.]

Cor. O mother, mother !

What have you done ? Behold, the heavens do ope,

The gods look down, and this unnatural scene ¹⁸⁴

They laugh at. O my mother, mother ! O !
You have won a happy victory to Rome ;
But for your son—believe it, O, believe it !—
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,

If not most mortal to him. But let it come.
Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good Aufidius, ¹⁹¹

Were you in my stead, would you have heard

A mother less, or granted less, Aufidius ?

Auf. I was mov'd withal.

Cor. I dare be sworn you were !

And, sir, it is no little thing to make ¹⁹⁵
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir,

What peace you'll make, advise me. For my part,

I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you ; and pray you Stand to me in this cause. O mother ! wife !

Auf. [Aside] I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour ²⁰⁰

At difference in thee. Out of that I'll work Myself a former fortune.

866

Cor. [To the ladies] Ay, by and by ;
But we will drink together ; and you shall bear

A better witness back than words, which we, ²⁰⁴

On like conditions, will have counter-seal'd.
Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
To have a temple built you. All the swords

In Italy, and her confederate arms,
Could not have made this peace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Rome. A public place.

Enter MENENIUS and SICINIUS.

Men. See you yond coign o' th' Capitol, yond corner-stone ?

Sic. Why, what of that ?

Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say there is no hope in't ; our throats are sentenc'd, and stay upon execution.

Sic. Is't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man ? ²⁰

Men. There is differency between a grub and a butterfly ; yet your butterfly was a grub.
This Marcius is grown from man to dragon ;
he has wings, he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He lov'd his mother dearly. ²⁵

Men. So did he me ; and he no more remembers his mother now than an eight-year-old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes ; when he walks, he moves like an engine and the ground shrinks before his treading. He is able to pierce a corslet with his eye, talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state as a thing made for Alexander.
What he bids be done is finish'd with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity, and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes—mercy, if you report him truly. ²⁵

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him. There is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger ; that shall our poor city find. And all this is 'long of you

Sic. The gods be good unto us ! ³⁰

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banish'd him we respected not them ; and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house. ³

The plebeians have got your fellow tribune
And hale him up and down ; all swearing i
The Roman ladies bring not comfort home
They'll give him death by inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Sic. What's the news ?

2 Mess. Good news, good news ! The ladies have prevail'd,
The Volscians are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone. ⁴⁰

A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not th' expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend,
Art thou certain this is true ? Is't most certain ?

2 Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire.

Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt of it ? ⁴⁵

Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide

As the recomforted through th' gates.

Why, hark you ! [Trumpets, haut-boys, drums beat, all together.]

The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes,

Tabors and cymbals, and the shouting Romans,

Make the sun dance. Hark you !

[A shout within.]

Men. This is good news. ⁵⁰

I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
A city full ; of tribunes such as you,
A sea and land full. You have pray'd well to-day :

This morning for ten thousand of your throats ⁵⁵

I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy ! [Sound still with the shouts.]

Sic. First, the gods bless you for your tidings ; next,

Accept my thankfulness.

2 Mess. Sir, we have all

Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city ?

Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We'll meet them, ⁶⁰

And help the joy. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Rome. A street near the gate.

Enter two Senators with VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, VALERIA, passing over the stage, with other Lords.

1 Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome !

Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,

And make triumphant fires ; strew flowers before them. ³

Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius,
Repeal him with the welcome of his mother ;
Cry ' Welcome, ladies, welcome ! '

All. Welcome, ladies,

Welcome ! [A flourish with drums and trumpets. Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Corioli. A public place.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords o' th' city I am here ;

Deliver them this paper ; having read it,
Bid them repair to th' market-place,
where I,

Even in theirs and in the commons' ears,
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse ⁵
The city ports by this hath enter'd and Intends t' appear before the people, hoping
To purge himself with words. Dispatch.

[Exeunt Attendants.]

Enter three or four Conspirators of Aufidius' faction.

Most welcome !

1 Con. How is it with our general ?

Auf. Even so ¹⁰
As with a man by his own alms empoison'd,
And with his charity slain.

2 Con. Most noble sir,
If you do hold the same intent wherein
You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you
Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell ; ¹⁵
We must proceed as we do find the people.

3 Con. The people will remain uncertain whilst

'Twixt you there's difference ; but the fall of either

Makes the survivor heir of all.

Auf. I know it ;
And my pretext to strike at him admits ²⁰
A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd

Mine honour for his truth ; who being so heighten'd,

He watered his new plants with dews of flattery,

Seducing so my friends ; and to this end
He bow'd his nature, never known before
But to be rough, unswayable, and free. ²⁶

3 Con. Sir, his stoutness
When he did stand for consul, which he lost
By lack of stooping—

Auf. That I would have spoke of.
Being banish'd for't, he came unto my hearth, ³⁰

Presented to my knife his throat. I took
him ;

Made him joint-servant with me ; gave him way

In all his own desires ; nay, let him choose
Out of my files, his projects to accomplish, My best and freshest men ; serv'd his designments ³⁵

In mine own person ; help to reap the fame
Which he did end all his, and took some
pride

To do myself this wrong. Till, at the last,
I seem'd his follower, not partner ; and

He wag'd me with his countenance as if 40
I had been mercenary.

1 Con. So he did, my lord.
The army marvell'd at it; and, in the last,
When he had carried Rome and that we look'd

For no less spoil than glory—

Auf. There was it;
For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon
him. 45

At a few drops of women's rheum, which
are

As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour

Of our great action; therefore shall he die,
And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark! 49

[Drums and trumpets sound, with great shouts of the people.]

1 Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,
And had no welcomes home; but he returns

Splitting the air with noise.

2 Con. And patient fools, Whose children he hath slain, their base throats tear

With giving him glory.

3 Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself or move the people With what he would say, let him feel your
sword, 56

Which we will second. When he lies along, After your way his tale pronounc'd shall bury

His reasons with his body.

Auf. Say no more:
Here come the lords. 60

Enter the Lords of the city.

Lords. You are most welcome home.

Auf. I have not deserv'd it.
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perused

What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.

1 Lord. And grieve to hear't.
What faults he made before the last, I think Might have found easy fines; but there to end 65

Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge, making a treaty
where

There was a yielding—this admits no excuse.

Auf. He approaches; you shall hear
him. 70

*Enter CORIOLANUS, marching with drum and colours; the Commoners being with
him.*

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier;

No more infected with my country's love

Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting

Under your great command. You are to
know 74

That prosperously I have attempted, and With bloody passage led your wars even to The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home

Doth more than counterpoise a full third part

The charges of the action. We have made
peace

With no less honour to the Antiates 80

Than shame to th' Romans; and we here
deliver,

Subscrib'd by th' consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o' th' Senate, what We have counterpounded on.

Auf. Read it not, noble lords;
But tell the traitor in the highest degree 85
He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor! How now?

Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius.

Cor. Marcius!

Auf. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius! Dost thou think

I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n
name

Coriolanus, in Corioli? 90

You lords and heads o' th' state, perfidiously

He has betray'd your business and given up,
For certain drops of salt, your city Rome—
I say your city—to his wife and mother;
Breaking his oath and resolution like 95

A twist of rotten silk; never admitting Counsel o' th' war; but at his nurse's
tears

He whin'd and roar'd away your victory,
That pages blush'd at him, and men of
heart

Look'd wond'ring each at others.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars? 100

Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears—

Cor. Ha!

Auf. —no more.

Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my
heart

Too great for what contains it. 'Boy'! O
slave!

Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever 105

I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords,

Must give this cur the lie; and his own notion—

Who wears my stripes impress'd upon him,
that

Must bear my beating to his grave—shall join

To thrust the lie unto him. 110

1 Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.

Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volsces; men and lads,

Stain all your edges on me. 'Boy'! False hound!

If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there
That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I ¹¹⁵
Flutter'd your Volscians in Corioli.
Alone I did it. 'Boy'!

Auf. Why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind
fortune,

Which was your shame, by this unholy
braggart,

Fore your own eyes and ears?

Conspirators. Let him die for't. ¹²⁰
All the people. Tear him to pieces. Do it presently. He kill'd my son. My daughter.
He kill'd my cousin Marcus. He kill'd my
father.

2 Lord. Peace, ho! No outrage—peace!
The man is noble, and his fame folds in ¹²⁵
This orb o' th' earth. His last offences to us Shall have judicious hearing. Stand,
Aufidius,

And trouble not the peace.

Cor. O that I had him,
With six Aufidiuses, or more—his tribe,
To use my lawful sword!

Auf. Insolent villain! ¹³⁰
Conspirators. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him!
[The Conspirators draw and kill Coriolanus, who falls. Aufidius stands on him.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold!

Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.

1 Lord. O Tullus!

2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.

3 Lord. Tread not upon him. Masters all,
be quiet;

Put up your swords. ¹³⁵

Auf. My lords, when you shall know—as in this rage,

Provok'd by him, you cannot—the great danger

Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice

That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours

To call me to your Senate, I'll deliver ¹⁴⁰
Myself your loyal servant, or endure

Your heaviest censure.

1 Lord. Bear from hence his body,
And mourn you for him. Let him be regarded

As the most noble corse that ever herald
Did follow to his urn.

2 Lord. His own impatience ¹⁴⁵ Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame.

Let's make the best of it.

Auf. My rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow. Take him up.
Help, three o' th' chiefest soldiers; I'll be
one.

Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully; ¹⁵⁰

Trail your steel pikes. Though in this city he

Hath widowed and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the injury,

Yet he shall have a noble memory. ¹⁵⁴

Assist. [Exeunt, bearing the body of Corio- lanus. A dead march sounded.

TITUS ANDRONICUS

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

SATURNINUS, son to the late Emperor of Rome, afterwards Emperor.

BASSIANUS, brother to Saturninus.

TITUS ANDRONICUS, a noble Roman.

MARCUS ANDRONICUS, Tribune of the People, and brother to Titus.

LUCIUS, }
QUINTUS, } sons to Titus Andronicus.
MARTIUS, }
MUTIUS, }

YOUNG LUCIUS, a boy, son to Lucius.

PUBLIUS, son to Marcus Andronicus.

SEMPRONIUS, }
CAIUS, } kinsmen to Titus.
VALENTINE, }

ÆMILIUS, a noble Roman.

ALARBUS,

DEMETRIUS, } sons to Tamora.

CHIRON,

AARON, a Moor, beloved by Tamora.

A Captain.

A Messenger.

A Clown.

TAMORA, Queen of the Goths.

LAVINIA, daughter to Titus Andronicus.

A Nurse, and a black Child.

Romans and Goths, Senators, Tribunes
Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

THE SCENE: Rome and the neighbourhood.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Rome. Before the Capitol.

Flourish. Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft; and then enter below SATURNINUS and his Followers at one door, and BASSIANUS and his Followers at the other, with drums and trumpets.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,

Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords.
I am his first-born son that was the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right,

If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol;
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility;
But let desert in pure election shine;
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS aloft, with the crown.

Marc. Princes, that strive by factions and by friends

Ambitiously for rule and empery, Know that the people of Rome, for whom we stand

A special party, have by common voice
In election for the Roman empery

Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius
For many good and great deserts to Rome
A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls.
He by the Senate is accited home,
From weary wars against the barbarous
Goths,

That with his sons, a terror to our foes, Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in
arms.

Ten years are spent since first he undertook This cause of Rome, and chastised with
arms

Our enemies' pride; five times he hath return'd

Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant son
In coffins from the field; and at this day
To the monument of that Andronicus Done sacrifice of expiation,

And slain the noblest prisoner of the Goths.

And now at last, laden with honour's spoil,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.

Let us entreat, by honour of his name Whom worthily you would have none succeed,

And in the Capitol and Senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,
That you withdraw you and abate your
strength,

Dismiss your followers, and, as suits
should,

Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the Tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affirm
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thin

Thy noble brother Titus and his sons, 50
And her to whom my thoughts are humbled
all,

Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving friends,
And to my fortunes and the people's favour Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.

[Exeunt the soldiers of Bassianus.]

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right, 56

I thank you all and here dismiss you all,
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and the cause.

[Exeunt the soldiers of Saturninus.]

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me 60
As I am confident and kind to thee.

Open the gates and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.

[Flourish. They go up into the Senate House.]

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans, make way. The good
Andronicus,

Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion, 65
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return'd From where he circumscribed with his
sword

And brought to yoke the enemies of Rome.

*Sound drums and trumpets, and then enter MARTIUS and MUTIUS, two of Titus' sons ; and then two Men bearing a coffin covered with black ; then LUCIUS and QUINTUS, two other sons ; then TITUS ANDRONICUS ;
and then TAMORA the Queen of Goths, with her three sons, ALARBUS, DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with AARON the Moor, and Others, as many as can be. Then set down the coffin and Titus speaks.*

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds ! 70

Lo, as the bark that hath discharg'd her fraught

Returns with precious lading to the bay
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,

Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,

To re-salute his country with his tears, 75
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend !
Romans, of five and twenty valiant sons,
Half of the number that King Priam had,
Behold the poor remains, alive and dead !
These that survive let Rome reward with
love ; 82

These that I bring unto their latest home,
With burial amongst their ancestors.
Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe
my sword. 85

Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx ?
Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[They open the tomb.]

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your country's
wars. 91

O sacred receptacle of my joys,
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
How many sons hast thou of mine in store

That thou wilt never render to me more ! 95

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths,

That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh
Before this earthy prison of their bones,
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd, 100
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you—the noblest that survives,

The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren ! Gracious
conqueror,

Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed, 105
A mother's tears in passion for her son ;
And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O, think my son to be as dear to me !
Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome
To beautify thy triumphs, and return 110
Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke ;
But must my sons be slaughtered in the streets

For valiant doings in their country's cause ?
O, if to fight for king and commonweal
Were piety in thine, it is in these. 115
Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood.
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods ?
Draw near them then in being merciful.
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge. 119
Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon
me.

These are their brethren, whom your Goths
beheld

Alive and dead ; and for their brethren
slain

Religiously they ask a sacrifice. 124
To this your son is mark'd, and die he must T' appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him, and make a fire
straight ;

And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.

[Exeunt Titus' sons, with Alarbus.]

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety ! 130

Chi. Was never Scythia half so barbarous !

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious
Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest, and we survive
To tremble under Titus' threat'ning look.

Then, madam, stand resolv'd, but hope
withal 135

The self-same gods that arm'd the Queen
of Troy

With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent
May favour Tamora, the queen of Goths—When Goths were Goths and Tamora was
queen— 140

To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, the sons of Andronicus, with their swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd

Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,

And entrails feed the sacrificing fire, Whose smoke like incense doth perfume the
sky. 145

Remaineth nought but to inter our brethren,
And with loud 'larums welcome them to
Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

Sound trumpets and lay the coffin in the tomb.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons; 150

Rome's readiest champions, repose you
here in rest,

Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned drugs, here are no
storms,

No noise, but silence and eternal sleep. 155
In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Enter LAVINIA.

Lav. In peace and honour live Lord Titus
long;

My noble lord and father, live in fame!

Lo, at this tomb my tributary tears
I render for my brethren's obsequies; 160

And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy Shed on this earth for thy return to Rome.

O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud!

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserv'd 165

The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!
Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

Enter, above, MARCUS ANDRONICUS and Tribunes; re-enter SATURNINUS, BASSI-ANUS, and Attendants.

Marc. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved
brother,

Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!

Tit. Thanks, gentle Tribune, noble brother Marcus. 171

Marc. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars,

You that survive and you that sleep in
fame.

Fair lords; your fortunes are alike in all That in your country's service drew your swords; 175

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp
That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness
And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome, Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been, 180

Send thee by me, their Tribune and their
trust,

This palliament of white and spotless hue;
And name thee in election for the empire
With these our late-deceased Emperor's
sons:

Be candidatus then, and put it on, 185
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits
Than his that shakes for age and feebleness.
What should I don this robe and trouble
you?

Be chosen with proclamations to-day, 190
To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all?
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully,
And buried one and twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country.
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world.
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery. 201

Sat. Proud and ambitious Tribune, canst thou tell?

Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans, do me right.
Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe
them not

Till Saturninus be Rome's Emperor. 205 Andronicus, would thou were shipp'd to
hell

Rather than rob me of the people's hearts!

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good

That noble-minded Titus means to thee!

Tit. Content thee, Prince; I will restore
to thee 210

The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die.
My faction if thou strengthen with thy
friends,

I will most thankful be; and thanks to
men 215

Of noble minds is honourable meed.

Tit. People of Rome, and people's Tribunes here,

I ask your voices and your suffrages :
Will ye bestow them friendly on Andronicus ?

Trib. To gratify the good Andronicus, 220
And gratulate his safe return to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you ; and this suit I make,

That you create our Emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine ; whose virtues will, I hope,
Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this commonweal.
Then, if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say 'Long live our Emperor !'

Marc. With voices and applause of every sort, 230

Patricians and plebeians, we create Lord Saturninus Rome's great Emperor ;
And say 'Long live our Emperor Saturnine !'

[A long flourish till they come down.]

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done

To us in our election this day 235

I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness ;
And for an onset, Titus, to advance

Thy name and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my empress, 240

Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse.

Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee ?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord, and in this match 244

I hold me highly honoured of your Grace,
And here in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,
King and commander of our commonweal,

The wide world's Emperor, do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners,

Presents well worthy Rome's imperious lord ; 250

Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life.

How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts
Rome shall record ; and when I do forget

The least of these unspeakable deserts, 256
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. [To Tamora] Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor ;

To him that for your honour and your state
Will use you nobly and your followers. 260

Sat. [Aside] A goodly lady, trust me ; of the hue

That I would choose, were I to choose anew.—

Clear up, fair Queen, that cloudy countenance ;

Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer,

Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome— 265

Princely shall be thy usage every way.
Rest on my word, and let not discontent

Daunt all your hopes. Madam, he comforts you

Can make you greater than the Queen of Goths. 269

Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this ?
Lav. Not I, my lord, sith true nobility

Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Romans, let us go.

Ransomless here we set our prisoners free.
Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and drum. [Flourish.]

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine. [Seizing Lavinia.]

Tit. How, sir ! Are you in earnest then, my lord ? 277

Bas. Ay, noble Titus, and resolv'd withal
To do myself this reason and this right.

Marc. Suum cuique is our Roman justice:
This prince in justice seizeth but his own.

Luc. And that he will and shall, if Lucius live.

Tit. Traitors, avaunt ! Where is the Emperor's guard ?

Treason, my lord—Lavinia is surpris'd !
Sat. Surpris'd ! By whom ?

Bas. By him that justly may 285
Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.

[Exeunt Bassianus and Marcus with Lavinia.]

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,

And with my sword I'll keep this door safe.
[Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.]

Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.

Mut. My lord, you pass not here.
Tit. What, villain boy ! 290

Bar'st me my way in Rome ?
Mut. Help, Lucius, help !

[Titus kills him. During the fray, exeunt Saturninus, Tamora, Demetrius, Chiron, and Aaron.]

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. My lord, you are unjust, and more than so :

In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou nor he are any sons of mine ;

My sons would never so dishonour me. 295

Re-enter aloft the EMPEROR with TAMORA and her two Sons, and AARON the Moor.

Traitor, restore Lavinia to the Emperor.
Luc. Dead, if you will ; but not to be his wife,

That is another's lawful promis'd love.

[Exit.]

Sat. No, Titus, no ; the Emperor needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock. ³⁰⁰
I'll trust by leisure him that mocks me
once ;

Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,
Confederates all thus to dishonour me.
Was there none else in Rome to make a stale

But Saturnine ? Full well, Andronicus, ³⁰⁵ Agree these deeds with that proud brag of
thine

That saidst I begg'd the empire at thy hands.

Tit. O monstrous ! What reproachful words are these ?

Sat. But go thy ways ; go, give that changing piece

To him that flourish'd for her with his sword. ³¹⁰

A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy ;
One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,
To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart.

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, Queen of Goths,

That, like the stately Phœbe 'mongst her nymphs, ³¹⁶

Dost overshadow the gallant'st dames of
Rome,

If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden
choice,

Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride

And will create thee Emperess of Rome. ³²⁰ Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice ?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods—
Sith priest and holy water are so near,

And tapers burn so bright, and everything

In readiness for Hymenæus stand— ³²⁵
I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,
Or climb my palace, till from forth this
place

I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

Tam. And here in sight of heaven to Rome I swear, ³²⁹

If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths,
She will a handmaid be to his desires,

A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon.
Lords, accompany

Your noble Emperor and his lovely bride,
Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine,

Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered ;
There shall we consummate our spousal rites. [Exeunt all but Titus.

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride.
Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone, Dishonoured thus, and challenged of wrongs ? ³⁴⁰

Re-enter MARCUS, and Titus' sons, LUCIUS,
QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Marc. O Titus, see, O, see what thou hast
done !

In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish Tribune, no ; no son of mine—

Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed

That hath dishonoured all our family ; ³⁴⁵
Unworthy brother and unworthy sons !

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes ;

Give Mutius burial with our bretheren.

Tit. Traitors, away ! He rests not in this
tomb.

This monument five hundred years hath stood, ³⁵⁰

Which I have sumptuously re-edified ;
Here none but soldiers and Rome's
servitors

Repose in fame ; none basely slain in brawls.

Bury him where you can, he comes not
here.

Marc. My lord, this is impiety in you. ³⁵⁵
My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him ;
He must be buried with his bretheren.

Quin. } And shall, or him we will accom-Mart. } pany.

Tit. 'And shall' ! What villain was it spake that word ?

Quin. He that would vouch it in any place but here. ³⁶⁰

Tit. What, would you bury him in my
despite ?

Marc. No, noble Titus, but entreat of
thee

To pardon Mutius and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest,

And with these boys mine honour thou hast wounded. ³⁶⁵

My foes I do repute you every one ;
So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Mart. He is not with himself ; let us withdraw.

Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.
[The brother and the sons kneel.

Marc. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead— ³⁷⁰

Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature speak—

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Marc. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul—

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all— ³⁷⁴

Marc. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter
His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,
That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.

Thou art a Roman—be not barbarous.

The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax,
That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son
Did graciously plead for his funerals. 381 Let not young Mutius, then, that was thy
joy,

Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise;
The dismal'st day is this that e'er I saw,
To be dishonoured by my sons in Rome!
Well, bury him, and bury me the next. 386

[They put Mutius in the tomb.]

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb.

All. [Kneeling] No man shed tears for noble Mutius;

He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

Marc. My lord—to step out of these dreary dumps— 391

How comes it that the subtle Queen of
Goths

Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus, but I know
it is—

Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell. 395

Is she not, then, beholding to the man
That brought her for this high good turn
so far?

Marc. Yes, and will nobly him remun-erate.

Flourish. Re-enter the EMPEROR, TAMORA and her two Sons, with the Moor, at one door; at the other door, BASSIANUS and LAVINIA, with Others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your
prize:

God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride!

Bas. And you of yours, my lord! I say
no more, 401

Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have
power,

Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own, 405

My true betrothed love, and now my wife?

But let the laws of Rome determine all;

Meanwhile am I possess'd of that is mine.

Sat. 'Tis good, sir. You are very short
with us;

But if we live we'll be as sharp with you. 410

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best
I may,

Answer I must, and shall do with my life.

Only thus much I give your Grace to know:

By all the duties that I owe to Rome,

This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here, 415

Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd,

That, in the rescue of Lavinia,

With his own hand did slay his youngest
son,

In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath

To be controll'd in that he frankly gave. 420
Receive him then to favour, Saturnine,
That hath express'd himself in all his deeds
A father and a friend to thee and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds.

'Tis thou and those that have dishonoured
me. 425

Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge

How I have lov'd and honoured Saturnine!

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora

Were gracious in those princely eyes of
thine, 429

Then hear me speak indifferently for all;

And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

Sat. What, madam! be dishonoured openly,

And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome
forfend

I should be author to dishonour you! 435

But on mine honour dare I undertake

For good Lord Titus' innocence in all,

Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs.

Then at my suit look graciously on him;

Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,

Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.

[Aside to Sat.] My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last; 442

Dissemble all your griefs and discontents.

You are but newly planted in your throne;

Lest, then, the people, and patricians too,

Upon a just survey take Titus' part, 446

And so supplant you for ingratitude,

Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin,

Yield at entreats, and then let me alone:

I'll find a day to massacre them all, 450

And raze their faction and their family,

The cruel father and his traitorous sons,

To whom I sued for my dear son's life;

And make them know what 'tis to let a
queen

Kneel in the streets and beg for grace in vain.— 455

Come, come, sweet Emperor; come,
Andronicus.

Take up this good old man, and cheer the
heart

That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my Empress hath prevail'd.

Tit. I thank your Majesty and her, my
lord; 460

These words, these looks, infuse new life in
me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily.

And must advise the Emperor for his good.

This day all quarrels die, Andronicus; 465

And let it be mine honour, good my lord,

That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.

For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass'd

My word and promise to the Emperor 469

That you will be more mild and tractable.
And fear not, lords—and you, Lavinia.
By my advice, all humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of his Majesty.

Luc. We do, and vow to heaven and to his Highness 474

That what we did was mildly as we might,
Tend'ring our sister's honour and our own.

Marc. That on mine honour here do I protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not ; trouble us no
more.

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet Emperor, we must all be friends.

The Tribune and his nephews kneel for
grace. 480

I will not be denied. Sweet heart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother's here,

And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous faults.

Stand up. 485

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend ; and sure as death I swore
I would not part a bachelor from the priest.
Come, if the Emperor's court can feast two brides,

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your
friends. 490

This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your
Majesty

To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound we'll give your Grace bonjour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too.

[Exeunt. Sound trumpets.]

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Rome. Before the palace.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,

Safe out of Fortune's shot, and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash, Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.

As when the golden sun salutes the morn, 5
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistening coach
And overlooks the highest-peering hills,
So Tamora.

Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait, 10
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.

Then, Aaron, arm thy heart and fit thy
thoughts

To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,
And mount her pitch whom thou in triumph
long

Hast prisoner held, fett'red in amorous chains, 15

And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.

Away with slavish weeds and servile
thoughts !

I will be bright and shine in pearl and gold,
To wait upon this new-made emperess. 20

To wait, said I ? To wanton with this
queen,

This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,
This siren that will charm Rome's

Saturnine,

And see his shipwreck and his common-weal's.

Hullo ! what storm is this ? 25

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years wants wit, thy wits wants edge

And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd,

And may, for aught thou knowest, affected
be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween
in all ;

And so in this, to bear me down with braves. 30

'Tis not the difference of a year or two Makes me less gracious or thee more
fortunate :

I am as able and as fit as thou

To serve and to deserve my mistress' grace ;
And that my sword upon thee shall approve,

And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. [Aside] Clubs, clubs ! These lovers will not keep the peace. 37

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvise'd,

Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side,
Are you so desperate grown to threat your

friends ? 40

Go to ; have your lath glued within your sheath

Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill
I have,

Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave ?

[They draw.]

Aar. [Coming forward] Why, how now,
lords ! 45

So near the Emperor's palace dare ye draw
And maintain such a quarrel openly ?

Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge:
I would not for a million of gold

The cause were known to them it most concerns ; 50

Nor would your noble mother for much
more

Be so dishonoured in the court of Rome.

For shame, put up.

Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd

My rapier in his bosom, and withal Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat 55
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour
here.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full
resolv'd,
Foul-spoken coward, that thund'rest with thy tongue,
And with thy weapon nothing dar'st
perform.

Aar. Away, I say ! 60
Now, by the gods that warlike Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all.

Why, lords, and think you not how
dangerous

It is to jet upon a prince's right ?
What, is Lavinia then become so loose, 65
Or Bassianus so degenerate, That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd

Without controlment, justice, or revenge ?
Young lords, beware ; an should the Empress know

This discord's ground, the music would not please. 70

Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the
world :

I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice :

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad, or know ye not
in Rome

How furious and impatient they be, 76
And cannot brook competitors in love ?

I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths Would I propose to achieve her whom I
love. 80

Aar. To achieve her—How ?

Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange ?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd ;

She is a woman, therefore may be won ;

She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.

What, man ! more water glideth by the mill
Than wots the miller of ; and easy it is 86

Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know.

Though Bassianus be the Emperor's
brother,

Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. [Aside] Ay, and as good as Saturninus may. 90

Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality ?

What, hast not thou full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose ?

Aar. Why, then, it seems some certain snatch or so

Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were served. 96

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. Would you had hit it too !
Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.
Why, hark ye, hark ye ! and are you such fools

To square for this ? Would it offend you,
then, 100

That both should speed ?

Chi. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one.

Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar.

'Tis policy and stratagem must do 104

That you affect ; and so must you resolve

That what you cannot as you would achieve,

You must perforce accomplish as you may.

Take this of me : Lucrece was not more chaste

Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.

A speedier course than ling'ring languish-
ment 110

Must we pursue, and I have found the path.

My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand ;

There will the lovely Roman ladies troop ;

The forest walks are wide and spacious,

And many unfrequented plots there are 115

Fitted by kind for rape and villainy.

Single you thither then this dainty doe,

And strike her home by force if not by
words.

This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.
Come, come, our Empress, with her sacred wit 120

To villainy and vengeance consecrate,
Will we acquaint with all what we intend ;

And she shall file our engines with advice

That will not suffer you to square yourselves,

But to your wishes' height advance you
both. 125

The Emperor's court is like the house of Fame,

The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and ears ;

The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull.

There speak and strike, brave boys, and take your turns ;

There serve your lust, shadowed from heaven's eye, 130

And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no
cowardice.

Dem. Sit fas aut nefas, till I find the stream

To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits, 134

Per Styga, per manes vehor. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A forest near Rome.

Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, and his three sons, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, making a noise with hounds and horns ; and MARCUS.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,
The fields are fragrant, and the woods are green.

Uncouple here, and let us make a bay,
And wake the Emperor and his lovely
bride,
And rouse the Prince, and ring a hunter's
peal,

That all the court may echo with the noise.
Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the Emperor's person carefully.
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

Here a cry of hounds, and wind horns in a peal. Then enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, CHIRON, DE-METRIUS, and their Attendants.

Many good morrows to your Majesty !
Madam, to you as many and as good !
I promised your Grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my
lords—

Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you ?

Lav. I say no ;

I have been broad awake two hours and
more.

Sat. Come on then, horse and chariots
let us have,

And to our sport. [To Tamora] Madam, now shall ye see

Our Roman hunting.

Marc. I have dogs, my lord,
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,

And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game

Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse
nor hound,

But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A lonely part of the forest.

Enter AARON alone, with a bag of gold.

Aar. He that had wit would think that I had none,

To bury so much gold under a tree
And never after to inherit it.

Let him that thinks of me so abjectly
Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,
Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villainy.

And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest
[Hides the gold.]

That have their alms out of the Empress' chest.

Enter TAMORA alone, to the Moor.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad

When everything doth make a gleeful boast ?

The birds chant melody on every bush ;
The snakes lie rolled in the cheerful sun ;
The green leaves quiver with the cooling
wind

And make a chequer'd shadow on the
ground ;

Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit
And whilst the babbling echo mocks the
hounds,

Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us sit down and mark their yellowing
noise ;

And—after conflict such as was suppos'd
The wand'ring prince and Dido once enjoyed,

When with a happy storm they were surpris'd,

And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave—

We may, each wreathed in the other's
arms,

Our pastimes done, possess a golder
slumber,

Whiles hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds

Be unto us as is a nurse's song
Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,

Saturn is dominator over mine.

What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence and my cloudy melancholy,

My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls
Even as an adder when she doth unroll

To do some fatal execution ?

No, madam, these are no venereal signs.
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my
hand,

Blood and revenge are hammering in my
head.

Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than rests
in thee—

This is the day of doom for Bassianus ;
His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day,

Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.

Seest thou this letter ? Take it up, I pray
thee,

And give the King this fatal-plotted scroll.
Now question me no more ; we are espied.

Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life !

Aar. No more, great Empress : Bassianus comes.

Be cross with him ; and I'll go fetch thy sons

To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be.

[Exit.

Bas. Who have we here ? Rome's royal Emperess,

Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop ?

Or is it Dian, habited like her,

Who hath abandoned her holy groves

To see the general hunting in this forest ?

Tam. Saucy controller of my private steps !

Had I the pow'r that some say Dian had,

Thy temples should be planted presently

With horns, as was Actæon's ; and the hounds

Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,

Unmannerly intruder as thou art !

Lav. Under your patience, gentle Emperess,

'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning,

And to be doubted that your Moor and you

Are singled forth to try thy experiments.

Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day !

'Tis pity they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, Queen, your swarth Cimmerian

Doth make your honour of his body's hue, Spotted, detested, and abominable.

Why are you sequest'ed from all your train,

Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,

And wand'red hither to an obscure plot,

Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor, If foul desire had not conducted you ?

Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport,

Great reason that my noble lord be rated

For sauciness. I pray you let us hence,

And let her joy her raven-coloured love ;

This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Bas. The King my brother shall have notice of this.

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long.

Good king, to be so mightily abused !

Tam. Why, I have patience to endure all this.

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother !

Why doth your Highness look so pale and wan ?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale ?

These two have 'ticed me hither to this place.

A barren detested vale you see it is :

The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,

Overcome with moss and baleful mistletoe ;

Here never shines the sun ; here nothing breeds,

Unless the nightly owl or fatal raven.

And when they show'd me this abhorred pit,

They told me, here, at dead time of the night,

A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,

Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,

Would make such fearful and confused cries

As any mortal body hearing it

Should straight fall mad or else die suddenly.

No sooner had they told this hellish tale

But straight they told me they would bind me here

Unto the body of a dismal yew,

And leave me to this miserable death.

And then they call'd me foul adulteress,

Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms

That ever ear did hear to such effect ;

And had you not by wondrous fortune come,

This vengeance on me had they executed.

Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,

Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

[Stabs Bassianus.

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength.

[Also stabs.

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis—nay, barbarous Tamora,

For no name fits thy nature but thy own !

Tam. Give me the poniard ; you shall know, my boys,

Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam, here is more belongs to her ;

First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw.

This minion stood upon her chastity,

Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,

And with that painted hope braves your mightiness ;

And shall she carry this unto her grave ?

Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.

Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,

And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when ye have the honey we desire,

Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.

Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy That nice-preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. O Tamora ! thou bearest a woman's face—

Tam. I will not hear her speak ; away with her !

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam : let it be your glory ¹³⁹

To see her tears ; but be your heart to them
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam ?

O, do not learn her wrath—she taught it thee ;

The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble, ¹⁴⁴

Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny.
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike :

[To Chiron] Do thou entreat her show a woman's pity.

Chi. What, wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard ?

Lav. 'Tis true, the raven doth not hatch a lark. ¹⁴⁹

Yet have I heard—O, could I find it now !—
The lion, mov'd with pity, did endure

To have his princely paws par'd all away.
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children,

The whilst their own birds famish in their nests ; ¹⁵⁴

O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful !

Tam. I know not what it means ; away with her !

Lav. O, let me teach thee ! For my father's sake,

That gave thee life when well he might have slain thee,

Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears. ¹⁶⁰

Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,

Even for his sake am I pitiless.
Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain

To save your brother from the sacrifice ;
But fierce Andronicus would not relent. ¹⁶⁵

Therefore away with her, and use her as you will ;

The worse to her the better lov'd of me.

Lav. O Tamora, be call'd a gentle queen,
And with thine own hands kill me in this place ! ¹⁶⁹

For 'tis not life that I have begg'd so long ;
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.

Tam. What beg'st thou, then ? Fond woman, let me go.

Lav. 'Tis present death I beg ; and one thing more,

That womanhood denies my tongue to tell :
O, keep me from their worse than killing lust, ¹⁷⁵

And tumble me into some loathsome pit,
Where never man's eye may behold my body ;

Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee ;

No, let them satisfy their lust on thee. ¹⁸⁰

Dem. Away ! for thou hast stay'd us here too long.

Lav. No grace ? no womanhood ? Ah, beastly creature,

The blot and enemy to our general name Confusion fall—

Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth.
Bring thou her husband. ¹⁸⁵

This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

[Demetrius throws the body of Bassianus into the pit ; then exeunt Demetrius and Chiron, dragging off Lavinia.]

Tam. Farewell, my sons ; see that you make her sure.

Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed
Till all the Andronici be made away. ¹⁸⁹

Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this trull

deflower. [Exit.]

Re-enter AARON, with two of Titus' sons,
QUINTUS and MARTIUS.

Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot before ;

Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit

Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes. ¹⁹⁵

Mart. And mine, I promise you ; were it not for shame,

Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.

[Falls into the pit.]

Quin. What, art thou fallen ? What subtle hole is this,

Whose mouth is covered with rude-growing briers,

Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood ²⁰⁰

As fresh as morning dew distill'd on flowers ?

A very fatal place it seems to me.

Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall ?

Mart. O brother, with the dismal'st object hurt

That ever eye with sight made heart lament ! ²⁰⁵

Aar. [Aside] Now will I fetch the King to find them here,

That he thereby may have a likely guess
How these were they that made away his brother. [Exit.]

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out

From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole ? ²¹⁰

Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth fear ;

A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints ;

My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

Mart. To prove thou hast a true divining heart, 214

Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quin. Aaron is gone, and my compassion-ate heart

Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise ;

O, tell me who it is, for ne'er till now 220
Was I a child to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies beray'd in blood,

All on a heap, like to a slaughtered lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he ? 225

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring that lightens all this hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks, 229

And shows the ragged entrails of this pit ;
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus
When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.

O brother, help me with thy fainting hand—

If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath—

Out of this fell devouring receptacle, 235
As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out,

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,

I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave. 240
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

Quin. Thy hand once more ; I will not loose again,

Till thou art here aloft, or I below.

Thou canst not come to me—I come to thee. [Falls in.]

Enter the EMPEROR and AARON the Moor.

Sat. Along with me ! I'll see what hole is here, 246

And what he is that now is leapt into it.
Say, who art thou that lately didst descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth ?

Mart. The unhappy sons of old Andronicus, 250

Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

Sat. My brother dead ! I know thou dost but jest :

He and his lady both are at the lodge 254

Upon the north side of this pleasant chase ;
'Tis not an hour since I left them there.

Mart. We know not where you left them all alive ;

But, out alas ! here have we found him dead.

Re-enter TAMORA, with Attendants ; TITUS ANDRONICUS and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord the King ?

Sat. Here, Tamora ; though griev'd with killing grief. 260

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus ?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound ;

Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ,

The complot of this timeless tragedy ; 265
And wonder greatly that man's face can fold

In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

[She giveth Saturnine a letter.]

Sat. [Reads] ' An if we miss to meet him handsomely,

Sweet huntsman—Bassianus 'tis we mean—
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him.

Thou know'st our meaning. Look for thy reward 271

Among the nettles at the elder-tree
Which overshades the mouth of that same pit

Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.

Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.' 275

O Tamora ! was ever heard the like ?

This is the pit and this the elder-tree.

Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out

That should have murdered Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold. 280

Sat. [To Titus] Two of thy whelps, fell curs of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life.

Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison ;

There let them bide until we have devis'd

Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them. 285

Tam. What, are they in this pit ? O wondrous thing !

How easily murder is discovered !

Tit. High Emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,

That this fell fault of my accursed sons—
Accursed if the fault be prov'd in them—

Sat. If it be prov'd ! You see it is apparent.

Who found this letter ? Tamora, was it you ?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord, yet let me be their bail ; 295

For, by my fathers' reverend tomb, I vow

They shall be ready at your Highness' will

To answer their suspicion with their lives.
Sal. Thou shalt not bail them; see thou follow me.

Some bring the murdered body, some the murderers;

Let them not speak a word—the guilt is plain;

For, by my soul, were there worse end than death,

That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the King.
 Fear not thy sons; they shall do well enough.

Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Another part of the forest.

Enter the Empress' sons, DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out, and ravish'd.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,

Who 'twas that cut thy tongue and ravish'd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so,

An if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe.

Dem. See how with signs and tokens she can scrawl.

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;

And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Chi. An 'twere my cause, I should go hang myself.

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.

[Exeunt Demetrius and Chiron.

Wind horns. Enter MARCUS, from hunting.

Marc. Who is this?—my niece, that flies away so fast?

Cousin, a word: where is your husband?

If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me!

If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
 That I may slumber an eternal sleep!

Speak, gentle niece. What stern ungentle hands

Hath lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare

Of her two branches—those sweet ornaments

Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,

And might not gain so great a happiness
 As half thy love? Why dost not speak to me?

Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,

Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,

Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,
 Coming and going with thy honey breath

But sure some Tereus hath deflowered thee
 And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy

tongue.

Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame!

And notwithstanding all this loss of blood—
 As from a conduit with three issuing

spouts—
 Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face

Blushing to be encount'rd with a cloud.
 Shall I speak for thee? Shall I say 'tis so?

O, that I knew thy heart, and knew thee beast,

That I might rail at him to ease my mind;
 Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,

Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.
 Fair Philomel, why she but lost her

tongue,
 And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind;

But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee.

A craftier Tereus, cousin, hast thou met,
 And he hath cut those pretty fingers off

That could have better sew'd than Philomel.

O, had the monster seen those lily hands
 Tremble like aspen leaves upon a lute

And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,

He would not then have touch'd them for his life!

Or had he heard the heavenly harmony
 Which that sweet tongue hath made,

He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep,

As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.
 Come, let us go, and make thy father

blind,
 For such a sight will blind a father's eye;

One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads,

What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes?

Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee;

O, could our mourning ease thy misery!

[Exeunt.

ACT THREE

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Enter the Judges, Tribunes, and Senators, with Titus' two sons MARTIUS and QUINTUS bound, passing on the stage to the place of execution, and TITUS going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers; noble Tribunes, stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent

In dangerous wars whilst you securely slept ;
 For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed,
 For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd, 5
 And for these bitter tears, which now you see Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks,
 Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
 Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought.
 For two and twenty sons I never wept, 10
 Because they died in honour's lofty bed.
[Andronicus lieth down, and the Judges pass by him with the prisoners, and exeunt.]
 For these, Tribunes, in the dust I write
 My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad tears.
 Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite ;
 My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush. 15
 O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain
 That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
 Than youthful April shall with all his show'rs.
 In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still ;
 In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow 20
 And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
 So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter LUCIUS with his weapon drawn.

O reverend Tribunes ! O gentle aged men !
 Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death,
 And let me say, that never wept before, 25
 My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain ;
 The Tribunes hear you not, no man is by,
 And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead ! 30

Grave Tribunes, once more I entreat of you.
Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man : if they did hear,

They would not mark me ; if they did mark,

They would not pity me ; yet plead I must,
 And bootless unto them. 36

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones ;
 Who though they cannot answer my distress,

Yet in some sort they are better than the Tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale. 40
 When I do weep, they humbly at my feet

Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me ;

And were they but attired in grave weeds,
 Rome could afford no tribunes like to these.
 A stone is soft as wax : tribunes more hard than stones. 45

A stone is silent and offendeth not,
 And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death. [Rises.]

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn ?

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death ;

For which attempt the judges have pronounced 50

My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man ! they have befriended thee.

Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive
 That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers ?

Tigers must prey, and Rome affords no prey 55

But me and mine ; how happy art thou then

From these devourers to be banished !

But who comes with our brother Marcus here ?

Enter MARCUS with LAVINIA.

Marc. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep,

Or if not so, thy noble heart to break. 60

I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me ? Let me see it then.

Marc. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Luc. Ay me ! this object kills me.

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her. 65

Speak, Lavinia, what accursed hand
 Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight ?

What fool hath added water to the sea,
 Or brought a fagot to bright-burning Troy ?
 My grief was at the height before thou cam'st, 70

And now like Nilus it disdaineth bounds.

Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too,

For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain ;

And they have nurs'd this woe in feeding life ; 74

In bootless prayer have they been held up,
 And they have serv'd me to effectless use.

Now all the service I require of them

Is that the one will help to cut the other.

'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands ;
 For hands to do Rome service is but vain.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee ? 81

Marc. O, that delightful engine of her thoughts

That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence

Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where like a sweet melodious bird it sung
Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear!

Luc. O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed?

Marc. O, thus I found her straying in the park,

Seeking to hide herself as doth the deer⁸⁹
That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.

Tit. It was my dear, and he that wounded her

Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me dead;

For now I stand as one upon a rock,
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea,
Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,⁹⁵

Expecting ever when some envious surge
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.

This way to death my wretched sons are gone;

Here stands my other son, a banish'd man,
And here my brother, weeping at my woes.
But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn¹⁰¹

Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,

It would have maddened me; what shall I do
Now I behold thy lively body so?¹⁰⁵

Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears,
Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee;

Thy husband he is dead, and for his death
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.

Look, Marcus! Ah, son Lucius, look on her!

When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears

Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey dew
Upon a gath'red lily almost withered.

Marc. Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband;

Perchance because she knows them innocent.¹¹⁵

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.

No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.

Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips,¹²⁰
Or make some sign how I may do thee ease.

Shall thy good uncle and thy brother Lucius

And thou and I sit round about some fountain,

Looking all downwards to behold our cheeks

How they are stain'd, like meadows yet not dry¹²⁵

With miry slime left on them by a flood?

And in the fountain shall we gaze so long,
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,

And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?
Or shall we cut away our hands like thine?

Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows¹³¹

Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
What shall we do? Let us that have our tongues

Plot some device of further misery
To make us wonder'd at in time to come.

Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for at your grief¹³⁶

See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Marc. Patience, dear niece. Good Titus, dry thine eyes.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! Brother, well I wot

Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,¹⁴⁰
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs.

Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say¹⁴⁴

That to her brother which I said to thee:
His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,

Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
O, what a sympathy of woe is this—

As far from help as Limbo is from bliss!

Enter AARON the Moor.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the Emperor¹⁵⁰

Sends thee this word, that, if thou love thy sons,

Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand

And send it to the King: he for the same
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive,

And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit. O gracious Emperor! O gentle Aaron!

Did ever raven sing so like a lark¹⁵⁸
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise?

With all my heart I'll send the Emperor my hand.

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?

Luc. Stay, father! for that noble hand of thine,

That hath thrown down so many enemies, Shall not be sent. My hand will serve the turn,¹⁶⁵

My youth can better spare my blood than you,

And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.

Marc. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome

And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle?

O, none of both but are of high desert! ¹⁷¹
 My hand hath been but idle; let it serve To ransom my two nephews from their
 death;
 Then have I kept it to a worthy end.
Aar. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along, ¹⁷⁵
 For fear they die before their pardon come.
Marc. My hand shall go.
Luc. By heaven, it shall not go!
Tit. Sirs, strive no more; such with'red herbs as these Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.
Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son, ¹⁸⁰
 Let me redeem my brothers both from
 death.
Marc. And for our father's sake and mother's care,
 Now let me show a brother's love to thee.
Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my
 hand.
Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe. ¹⁸⁵
Marc. But I will use the axe.
 [Exeunt Lucius and Marcus.
Tit. Come hither, Aaron, I'll deceive them both;
 Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee
 mine.
Aar. [Aside] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
 And never whilst I live deceive men so; ¹⁹⁰
 But I'll deceive you in another sort,
 And that you'll say ere half an hour pass.
 [He cuts off Titus' hand.
 Re-enter LUCIUS and MARCUS.
Tit. Now stay your strife. What shall be is dispatch'd.
 Good Aaron, give his Majesty my hand;
 Tell him it was a hand that warded him ¹⁹⁵
 From thousand dangers; bid him bury it.
 More hath it merited—that let it have.
 As for my sons, say I account of them
 As jewels purchas'd at an easy price;
 And yet dear too, because I bought mine
 own. ²⁰⁰
Aar. I go, Andronicus; and for thy hand
 Look by and by to have thy sons with thee.
 [Aside] Their heads I mean. O, how this villainy
 Doth fat me with the very thoughts of
 it!
 Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace: ²⁰⁵
 Aaron will have his soul black like his face.
 [Exit.
Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to
 heaven,
 And bow this feeble ruin to the earth;
 If any power pities wretched tears,
 To that I call! [To Lavinia] What, would'st
 thou kneel with me? ²¹⁰

Do, then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers,
 Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim
 And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds
 When they do hug him in their melting bosoms. ²¹⁴
Marc. O brother, speak with possibility,
 And do not break into these deep extremes.
Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no
 bottom?
 Then be my passions bottomless with them.
Marc. But yet let reason govern thy lament.
Tit. If there were reason for these miseries, ²²⁰
 Then into limits could I bind my woes.
 When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow?
 If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax
 mad, Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swol'n face? ²²⁴
 And wilt thou have a reason for this coil?
 I am the sea; hark how her sighs do
 blow.
 She is the weeping welkin, I the earth;
 Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;
 Then must my earth with her continual tears ²²⁹
 Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd;
 For why my bowels cannot hide her woes,
 But like a drunkard must I vomit them.
 Then give me leave; for losers will have
 leave
 To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.
 Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a
 hand.
Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid ²³⁵
 For that good hand thou sent'st the Emperor.
 Here are the heads of thy two noble sons;
 And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent
 back—
 Thy grief their sports, thy resolution
 mock'd,
 That woe is me to think upon thy woes, ²⁴⁰
 More than remembrance of my father's death. [Exit.
Marc. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily,
 And be my heart an ever-burning hell!
 These miseries are more than may be borne.
 To weep with them that weep doth ease
 some deal, ²⁴⁵
 But sorrow flouted at is double death.
Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a wound,
 And yet detested life not shrink thereat!
 That ever death should let life bear his
 name,

Where life hath no more interest but to breathe! [Lavinia kisses Titus.]

Marc. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is comfortless 251

As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end?

Marc. Now farewell, flatt'ry; die, Andronicus.

Thou dost not slumber: see thy two sons' heads, 255

Thy warlike hand, thy mangled daughter here;

Thy other banish'd son with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,

Even like a stony image, cold and numb.
Ah! now no more will I control thy griefs.
Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight

The closing up of our most wretched eyes.
Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha! 265

Marc. Why dost thou laugh? It fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed;

Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my wat'ry eyes
And make them blind with tributary tears.
Then which way shall I find Revenge's cave? 271

For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threat me I shall never come to bliss
Till all these mischiefs be return'd again
Even in their throats that have committed them. 275

Come, let me see what task I have to do.
You heavy people, circle me about,
That I may turn me to each one of you
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.

The vow is made. Come, brother, take a head, 280

And in this hand the other will I bear.
And, Lavinia, thou shalt be employ'd in this;

Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight; 284

Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay.
Hie to the Goths and raise an army there;
And if ye love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exeunt all but Lucius.]

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father,

The woeful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome. 290

Farewell, proud Rome; till Lucius come again,

He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.

886

Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;
O, would thou wert as thou tofore hast been!

But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives 295
But in oblivion and hateful griefs.

If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs
And make proud Saturnine and his emperess Beg at the gates like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a pow'
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. Rome. Titus' house.

A banquet. Enter TITUS, MARCUS, LAVINIA, and the boy YOUNG LUCIUS.

Tit. So so, now sit; and look you eat no more Than will preserve just so much strength in us

As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus, unknit that sorrow-wreathen knot;
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands, 5

And cannot passionate our tenfold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine

Is left to tyrannize upon my breast;
Who, when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh, 10
Then thus I thump it down.

[To Lavinia] Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs!

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,

Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.

Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans; 15

Or get some little knife between thy teeth
And just against thy heart make thou a hole,

That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall
May run into that sink and, soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears.

Marc. Fie, brother, fie! Teach her not thus to lay 21

Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Tit. How now! Has sorrow made thee dote already?

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.
What violent hands can she lay on her life?

Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands? 26

To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er
How Troy was burnt and he made miserable?

O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands,
Lest we remember still that we have none.

Fie, fie, how frantically I square my talk,
As if we should forget we had no hands,

If Marcus did not name the word of hands!
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this;

Here is no drink. Hark, Marcus, what she says—
 I can interpret all her martyr'd signs ;
 She says she drinks no other drink but tears,
 Brew'd with her sorrow, mesh'd upon her cheeks.
 Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought ;
 In thy dumb action will I be as perfect
 As begging hermits in their holy prayers.
 Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to heaven,
 Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
 But I of these will wrest an alphabet,
 And by still practice learn to know thy meaning.
 Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments ;
 Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.
 Marc. Alas, the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
 Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.
 Tit. Peace, tender sapling ; thou art made of tears,
 And tears will quickly melt thy life away.
 [Marcus strikes the dish with a knife.
 What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife ?
 Marc. At that that I have kill'd, my lord—a fly.
 Tit. Out on thee, murderer, thou kill'st my heart !
 Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny ;
 A deed of death done on the innocent Becomes not Titus' brother. Get thee gone ;
 I see thou art not for my company.
 Marc. Alas, my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.
 Tit. ' But ' ! How if that fly had a father and mother ?
 How would he hang his slender gilded wings
 And buzz lamenting doings in the air !
 Poor harmless fly,
 That with his pretty buzzing melody
 Came here to make us merry ! And thou hast kill'd him.
 Marc. Pardon me, sir ; it was a black ill-favour'd fly,
 Like to the Empress' Moor ; therefore I kill'd him.
 Tit. O, O, O !
 Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
 For thou hast done a charitable deed.
 Give me thy knife, I will insult on him,
 Flattering myself as if it were the Moor
 Come hither purposely to poison me.
 There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.
 Ah, sirrah !
 Yet, I think, we are not brought so low
 But that between us we can kill a fly

That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.
 Marc. Alas, poor man ! grief has so wrought on him,
 He takes false shadows for true substances.
 Tit. Come, take away. Lavinia, go with me ;
 I'll to thy closet, and go read with thee
 Sad stories chanced in the times of old.
 Come, boy, and go with me ; thy sight is young,
 And thou shalt read when mine begin to dazzle.
 [Exeunt.

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Rome. Titus' garden.

Enter YOUNG LUCIUS and LAVINIA running after him, and the boy flies from her with his books under his arm. Enter TITUS and MARCUS.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help ! my aunt Lavinia Follows me everywhere, I know not why.
 Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes !
 Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.
 Marc. Stand by me, Lucius ; do not fear thine aunt.
 Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm.
 Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome she did.
 Marc. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs ?
 Tit. Fear her not, Lucius ; somewhat doth she mean.
 See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee.
 Somewhither would she have thee go with her.
 Ah, boy, Cornelia never with more care
 Read to her sons than she hath read to thee
 Sweet poetry and Tully's Orator.
 Marc. Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus ?
 Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess,
 Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her ;
 For I have heard my grandsire say full oft Extremity of griefs would make men mad ;
 And I have read that Hecuba of Troy
 Ran mad for sorrow. That made me to fear ;
 Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,
 And would not, but in fury, fright my youth ;
 Which made me down to throw my books,
 and fly—
 Causeless, perhaps. But pardon me, sweet aunt ;
 And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,

I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Marc. Lucius, I will. [Lavinia turns over with her stumps the books which Lucius has let fall.]

Tit. How now, Lavinia! Marcus, what means this? ³⁰

Some book there is that she desires to see. Which is it, girl, of these?—Open them, boy.—

But thou art deeper read and better skill'd; Come and take choice of all my library, ³⁴ And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed. Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Marc. I think she means that there were more than one Confederate in the fact; ay, more there was, ³⁸

Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge. ⁴⁰

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?

Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphoses;

My mother gave it me.

Marc. For love of her that's gone, Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! So busily she turns the leaves! Help her. ⁴⁶

What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read?

This is the tragic tale of Philomel And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape; And rape, I fear, was root of thy annoy. ⁵⁰

Marc. See, brother, see! Note how she quotes the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl,

Ravish'd and wrong'd as Philomela was, Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?

See, see! ⁵⁵

Ay, such a place there is where we did hunt—

O, had we never, never hunted there!— Pattern'd by that the poet here describes, By nature made for murders and for rapes.

Marc. O, why should nature build so foul a den, ⁶⁰

Unless the gods delight in tragedies?

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none but friends.

What Roman lord it was durst do the deed. Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst, That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed?

Marc. Sit down, sweet niece; brother, sit down by me. ⁶⁶

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury, Inspire me, that I may this treason find! My lord, look here! Look here, Lavinia!

[He writes his name with his staff, and guides it with feet and mouth.]

This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst, ⁷⁰

This after me. I have writ my name Without the help of any hand at all. Curs'd be that heart that forc'd us to this shift!

Write thou, good niece, and here display at last

What God will have discover'd for revenge. Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain, ⁷⁶

That we may know the traitors and the truth! [She takes the staff in her mouth and guides it with her stumps, and writes.]

Tit. O, do ye read, my lord, what she hath writ?

'Stuprum—Chiron—Demetrius.'

Marc. What, what! the lustful sons of Tamora ⁸⁰

Performers of this heinous bloody deed?

Tit. Magni Dominator poli, Tam lentus audis scelera? tam lentus vides?

Marc. O, calm thee, gentle lord! although I know

There is enough written upon this earth ⁸⁵ To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts,

And arm the minds of infants to exclaims. My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel;

And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope;

And swear with me—as, with the woeful fere ⁹⁰

And father of that chaste dishonoured dame,

Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece rape—

That we will prosecute, by good advice, Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths,

And see their blood or die with this reproach. ⁹⁵

Tit. 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how; But if you hunt these bear-whelps, then beware:

The dam will wake; and if she wind ye once,

She's with the lion deeply still in league, And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back, ¹⁰⁰

And when he sleeps will she do what she list.

You are a young huntsman, Marcus; let alone;

And come, I will go get a leaf of brass, And with a gad of steel will write these words,

And lay it by. The angry northern wind ¹⁰⁵ Will blow these sands like Sibyl's leaves abroad,

And where's our lesson, then? Boy, what say you?

Boy. I say, my lord, that if I were a man

Their mother's bedchamber should not be safe

For these base bondmen to the yoke of Rome. 110

Marc. Ay, that's my boy! Thy father hath full oft

For his ungrateful country done the like.

Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury.

Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal my boy 115

Shall carry from me to the Empress' sons

Presents that I intend to send them both.

Come, come; thou'lt do my message, wilt thou not?

Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire.

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course. 120

Lavinia, come. Marcus, look to my house.

Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court;

Ay, marry, will we, sir! and we'll be waited on. [Exeunt Titus, Lavinia, and Young Lucius.]

Marc. O heavens, can you hear a good man groan

And not relent, or not compassion him? 125

Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy,

That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart

Than foemen's marks upon his batt'rd shield,

But yet so just that he will not revenge.

Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus! [Exit.]

SCENE II. Rome. The palace.

Enter AARON, DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, at one door; and at the other door, YOUNG LUCIUS and another with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius; He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,

I greet your honours from Andronicus— 5

[Aside] And pray the Roman gods confound you both!

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius. What's the news?

Boy. [Aside] That you are both decipher'd, that's the news,

For villains mark'd with rape.—May it please you,

My grandsire, well-advis'd, hath sent by me

The goodliest weapons of his armoury 11

To gratify your honourable youth,

The hope of Rome; for so he bid me say;

And so I do, and with his gifts present

Your lordships, that, whenever you have need, 15

You may be armed and appointed well.

And so I leave you both—[Aside] like bloody villains.

[Exeunt Young Lucius and Attendant.]

Dem. What's here? A scroll, and written round about.

Let's see:

[Reads] 'Integer vitae, scelerisque purus, 20
Non eget Mauri iaculis, nec arcu.'

Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace, I know it well;

I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just—a verse in Horace. Right, you have it. 24

[Aside] Now, what a thing it is to be an ass! Here's no sound jest! The old man hath found their guilt,

And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with lines

That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick.

But were our witty Empress well afoot, She would applaud Andronicus' conceit. 30

But let her rest in her unrest awhile—

And now, young lords, was't not a happy star

Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than 35

Captives, to be advanced to this height?

It did me good before the palace gate

To brave the Tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good to see so great a lord

Basely insinuate and send us gifts.

Aar. Had he not reason, Lord Demetrius?

Did you not use his daughter very friendly?

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames 41

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more. 45

Dem. Come, let us go and pray to all the gods

For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. [Aside] Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over.

[Trumpets sound.]

Dem. Why do the Emperor's trumpets flourish thus?

Chi. Belike, for joy the Emperor hath a son. 50

Dem. Soft! who comes here?

Enter Nurse, with a blackamoor Child.

Nur. Good morrow, lords.

O, tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor?

Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at all,

Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nur. O gentle Aaron, we are all undone!

Now help, or woe betide thee evermore ! 56

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep !

What dost thou wrap and fumble in thy arms ?

Nur. O, that which I would hide from heaven's eye :

Our Empress' shame and stately Rome's disgrace ! 60

She is delivered, lords ; she is delivered.

Aar. To whom ?

Nur. I mean she is brought a-bed.

Aar. Well, God give her good rest ! What hath he sent her ?

Nur. A devil.

Aar. Why, then she is the devil's dam ;

A joyful issue. 65

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue !

Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad Amongst the fair-fac'd breeders of our clime ;

The Empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,

And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point. 70

Aar. Zounds, ye whore ! Is black so base a hue ?

Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom sure.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done ?

Aar. That which thou canst not undo.

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother. 75

Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone her.

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choice !

Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend !

Chi. It shall not live. 80

Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must ; the mother wills it so.

Aar. What, must it, nurse ? Then let no man but I

Do execution on my flesh and blood.

Dem. I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier's point. 85

Nurse, give it me ; my sword shall soon dispatch it.

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up. [Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws.]

Stay, murderous villains, will you kill your brother !

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky
That shone so brightly when this boy was got, 90

He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point
That touches this my first-born son and heir.
I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,
With all his threat'ning band of Typhon's brood,

Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war, 95
Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.

What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys !

Ye white-lim'd walls ! ye alehouse painted signs !

Coal-black is better than another hue
In that it scorns to bear another hue ; 100

For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,

Although she lave them hourly in the flood.
Tell the Empress from me I am of age

To keep mine own—excuse it how she can.

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus ? 106

Aar. My mistress is my mistress : this my self,

The vigour and the picture of my youth.
This before all the world do I prefer ;

This maugre all the world will I keep safe,
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this our mother is for ever sham'd. 112

Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nur. The Emperor in his rage will doom her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy.

Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears : 116

Fie, treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing

The close enacts and counsels of thy heart !
Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer.

Look how the black slave smiles upon the father, 120

As who should say ' Old lad, I am thine own'.

He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed
Of that self-blood that first gave life to you ;

And from your womb where you imprisoned were

He is enfranchised and come to light. 125

Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face.

Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the Empress ?

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,

And we will all subscribe to thy advice. 130

Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.

Aar. Then sit we down and let us all consult.

My son and I will have the wind of you :
Keep there ; now talk at pleasure of your safety. [They sit.]

Dem. How many women saw this child of his ? 135

Aar. Why, so, brave lords ! When we join in league

I am a lamb ; but if you brave the Moor,
The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,

The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.
But say, again, how many saw the child? ¹⁴⁰
Nur. Cornelia the midwife and myself;
And no one else but the delivered Empress.
Aar. The Empress, the midwife, and
yourself.
Two may keep counsel when the third's
away:
Go to the Empress, tell her this I said. ¹⁴⁵
[He kills her.
Weeke weeke!
So cries a pig prepared to the spit.
Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron?
Wherefore didst thou this?
Aar. O Lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy.
Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours—
A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? No, lords,
no. ¹⁵¹
And now be it known to you my full intent:
Not far, one Muliteus, my countryman—
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed;
His child is like to her, fair as you are. ¹⁵⁵
Go pack with him, and give the mother
gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all,
And how by this their child shall be advanc'd,
And be received for the Emperor's heir
And substituted in the place of mine, ¹⁶⁰
To calm this tempest whirling in the court;
And let the Emperor dandle him for his
own.
Hark ye, lords. You see I have given her physic, [Pointing to the Nurse.
And you must needs bestow her funeral;
The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms. ¹⁶⁵
This done, see that you take no longer days,
But send the midwife presently to me.
The midwife and the nurse well made
away,
Then let the ladies tattle what they please.
Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air ¹⁷⁰
With secrets.
Dem. For this care of Tamora,
Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.
[Exeunt Demetrius and Chiron,
bearing off the dead Nurse.
Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies,
There to dispose this treasure in mine
arms,
And secretly to greet the Empress' friends.
Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear
you hence; ¹⁷⁵
For it is you that puts us to our shifts.
I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,
And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,
And cabin in a cave, and bring you up ¹⁸⁰
To be a warrior and command a camp.
[Exit with the child.

SCENE III. Rome. A public place.
Enter TITUS, bearing arrows with letters on the ends of them; with him MARCUS,
YOUNG LUCIUS, and other gentlemen, PUBLIUS, SEMPRONIUS, and CAIUS, with
bows.
Tit. Come, Marcus, come; kinsmen, this is the way.
Sir boy, let me see your archery;
Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there
straight.
Terras Astraea reliquit,
Be you rememb' red, Marcus; she's gone,
she's fled. ⁵
Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins,
shall
Go sound the ocean and cast your nets;
Happily you may catch her in the sea;
Yet there's as little justice as at land.
No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it; ¹⁰
'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade,
And pierce the inmost centre of the earth;
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
I pray you deliver him this petition.
Tell him it is for justice and for aid, ¹⁵
And that it comes from old Andronicus, Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.
Ah, Rome! Well, well, I made thee miserable
What time I threw the people's suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me. ²⁰
Go get you gone; and pray be careful all,
And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd.
This wicked Emperor may have shipp'd her
hence;
And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice. ²⁴
Marc. O Publius, is not this a heavy case,
To see thy noble uncle thus distract?
Pub. Therefore, my lords, it highly us concerns
By day and night t'attend him carefully,
And feed his humour kindly as we may
Till time beget some careful remedy. ³⁰ Marc. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
Join with the Goths, and with revengeful
war
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.
Tit. Publius, how now? How now, my masters? ³⁵
What, have you met with her?
Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you word,
If you will have Revenge from hell, you
shall.
Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd,
He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere else, ⁴⁰

So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays.

I'll dive into the burning lake below
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.
Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we, 45
No big-bon'd men fram'd of the Cyclops'
size ;

But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back, Yet wrung with wrongs more than our backs can bear ;

And, sith there's no justice in earth nor
hell,

We will solicit heaven, and move the gods
To send down Justice for to wreak our wrongs. 51

Come, to this gear. You are a good archer, Marcus. [He gives them the arrows.]

'Ad Jovem' that's for you ; here 'Ad Apollinem'.

'Ad Martem' that's for myself.

Here, boy, 'To Pallas' ; here 'To Mercury'. 55

'To Saturn' Caius—not to Saturnine :
You were as good to shoot against the wind.
To it, boy. Marcus, loose when I bid.
Of my word, I have written to effect ;
There's not a god left unsolicited. 60

Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into
the court ;

We will afflict the Emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot] O, well said, Lucius !

Good boy, in Virgo's lap ! Give it Pallas.

Marc. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon ; 65

Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha ! ha !

Publius, Publius, what hast thou done ?

See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Marc. This was the sport, my lord : when Publius shot, 70

The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock

That down fell both the Ram's horns in the court ;

And who should find them but the Empress'
villain ?

She laugh'd, and told the Moor he should not choose 74

But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes ! God give his lordship joy !

Enter the Clown, with a basket and two pigeons in it.

News, news from heaven ! Marcus, the post is come.

Sirrah, what tidings ? Have you any letters ? 78

Shall I have justice ? What says Jupiter ?

Clo. Ho, the gibbet-maker ? He says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hang'd till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee ?

Clo. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter ; I never drank with him in all my life. 85

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier ?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir ; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from
heaven ?

Clo. From heaven ! Alas, sir, I never came there. God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why,
I am going with my pigeons to the Tribunal
Plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the Emperial's men. 93

Marc. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration ; and let him deliver the pigeons to the Emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the Emperor with a grace ?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither. Make no more
ado, 100

But give your pigeons to the Emperor ;
By me thou shalt have justice at his hands.
Hold, hold ! Meanwhile here's money for thy charges.

Give me pen and ink. Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver up a supplication ? 105

Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you.
And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel ; then kiss his foot ; then deliver up your pigeons ; and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir ; see you do it bravely. 112

Clo. I warrant you, sir ; let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife ? Come, let me see it.

Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration ;

For thou hast made it like an humble
suppliant. 115

And when thou hast given it to the Emperor,

Knock at my door, and tell me what he says.

Clo. God be with you, sir ; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go. Publius, follow me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Rome. Before the palace.

*Enter the EMPEROR, and the EMPRESS and her two sons, DEMETRIUS and CHIRON ; Lords and Others. The Emperor brings the arrows in his hand that Titus shot at
him.*

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these !
Was ever seen

An emperor in Rome thus overborne, Troubled, confronted thus ; and, for the extent

Of legal justice, us'd in such contempt ?
 My lords, you know, as know the mightyful
 gods, 5
 However these disturbers of our peace
 Buzz in the people's ears, there nought hath pass'd
 But even with law against the wilful sons Of old Andronicus. And what an if His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits,
 Shall we be thus afflicted in his wrecks, 11
 His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness ?
 And now he writes to heaven for his redress.
 See, here's 'To Jove' and this 'To Mercury' ;
 This 'To Apollo' ; this 'To the God of
 War'— 15
 Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of
 Rome !

What's this but libelling against the Senate,
 And blazoning our injustice every where ?
 A goodly humour, is it not, my lords ?
 As who would say in Rome no justice were.
 But if I live, his feigned ecstasies 21
 Shall be no shelter to these outrages ;
 But he and his shall know that justice lives
 In Saturninus' health ; whom, if she sleep,
 He'll so awake as he in fury shall 25
 Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely
 Saturnine,

Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts,
 Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,
 Wh' effects of sorrow for his valiant sons, 30 Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep and scarr'd his heart ;

And rather comfort his distressed plight
 Than prosecute the meanest or the best For these contempts. [Aside] Why, thus it shall become

High-witted Tamora to gloze with all. 35
 But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,
 Thy life-blood out ; if Aaron now be wise,
 When is all safe, the anchor in the port.

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow ! Wouldst thou speak with us ?

Clo. Yes, forsooth, an your mistriship be Imperial. 40

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the Emperor.

Clo. 'Tis he.—God and Saint Stephen Give you godden. I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.

[Saturninus reads the letter.]

Sat. Go take him away, and hang him
 presently. 45

Clo. How much money must I have ?

Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hang'd.

Clo. Hang'd ! by'r lady, then I have rough't up a neck to a fair end.

[Exit guarded.]

Sat. Despiteful and intolerable wrongs !
 Shall I endure this monstrous villainy ? 51

I know from whence this same device proceeds.

May this be borne—as if his traitorous sons
 That died by law for murder of our brother Have by my means been butchered wrongfully ? 55

Go drag the villain hither by the hair ;
 Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege.
 For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughter-
 man,

Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me
 great,

In hope thyself should govern Rome and
 me. 60

Enter Nuntius ÆMILIUS.

What news with thee, Æmilius ?

Æmil. Arin, my lords ! Rome never had more cause.

The Goths have gathered head ; and with a power

Of high resolved men, bent to the spoil,
 They hither march amain, under conduct
 Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus ; 66

Who threats in course of this revenge to do
 As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths ?

These tidings nip me, and I hang the head
 As flowers with frost, or grass beat down with storms. 71

Ay, now begins our sorrows to approach.
 'Tis he the common people love so much ;

Myself hath often heard them say—

When I have walked like a private man—
 That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully,
 And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.

Tam. Why should you fear ? Is not your city strong ?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius,
 And will revolt from me to succour him. 80

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious like thy name !

Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it ?
 The eagle suffers little birds to sing,

And is not careful what they mean thereby,
 Knowing that with the shadow of his wings

He can at pleasure stint their melody ; 86
 Even so mayest thou the giddy men of
 Rome.

Then cheer thy spirit ; for know thou,
 Emperor,

I will enchant the old Andronicus
 With words more sweet, and yet more

dangerous, 90

Than baits to fish or honey-stalks to sheep,
 When as the one is wounded with the bait,

The other rotted with delicious feed.

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will ;
 For I can smooth and fill his aged ears 96

With golden promises, that, were his heart
 Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,

Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.

[To Æmilius] Go thou before to be our ambassador ; 100

Say that the Emperor requests a parley
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting
Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.

Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably ; 104

And if he stand on hostage for his safety,
Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.

Æmil. Your bidding shall I do effectually. [Exit.]

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him with all the art I have,
To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Goths. 110

And now, sweet Emperor, be blithe again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successantly, and plead to him. [Exeunt.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Plains near Rome.

Enter LUCIUS with an army of Goths with drums and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors and my faithful friends,
I have received letters from great Rome
Which signifies what hate they bear their Emperor

And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness, 5

Imperious and impatient of your wrongs ;
And wherein Rome hath done you any scath,

Let him make treble satisfaction.

1 Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,

Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort, 10

Whose high exploits and honourable deeds
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt,

Be bold in us : we'll follow where thou lead'st,

Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day,
Led by their master to the flow'ed fields,
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora. 16

All the Goths. And as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth ?

Enter a Goth, leading AARON with his Child in his arms.

2 Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd 20

To gaze upon a ruinous monastery ;
And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall.
I made unto the noise, when soon I heard
The crying babe controll'd with this discourse : 26

' Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam !

Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art,

Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,
Villain, thou mightst have been an emperor ; 30

But where the bull and cow are both milk-white,

They never do beget a coal-black calf.

Peace, villain, peace ! '—even thus he rates the babe—

' For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth,
Who, when he knows thou art the Empress' babe, 35

Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake'.
With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him,

Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hither

To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth, this is the incarnate devil 40

That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand ;
This is the pearl that pleas'd your Empress' eye ;

And here's the base fruit of her burning lust.

Say, wall-ey'd slave, whither wouldst thou convey

This growing image of thy fiend-like face ?
Why dost not speak ? What, deaf ? Not a word ? 46

A halter, soldiers ! Hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

Aar. Touch not the boy, he is of royal blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.
First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl— 50

A sight to vex the father's soul withal.
Get me a ladder. [A ladder brought, which Aaron is made to climb.]

Aar. Lucius, save the child,
And bear it from me to the Emperess.

If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things 55

That highly may advantage thee to hear ;
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,

I'll speak no more but ' Vengeance rot you all ! '

Luc. Say on ; an if it please me which thou speak'st,

Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd. 60

Aar. An if it please thee ! Why, assure thee, Lucius,

'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak ;

For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,

Acts of black night, abominable deeds,
Complots of mischief, treason, villainies, ⁶⁵
Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd ;
And this shall all be buried in my death,
Unless thou swear to me my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind ; I say thy child shall live.

Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin. ⁷⁰

Luc. Who should I swear by ? Thou believest no god ;

That granted, how canst thou believe an oath ?

Aar. What if I do not ?—as indeed I do not ;

Yet, for I know thou art religious
And hast a thing within thee called conscience, ⁷⁵

With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies
Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
Therefore I urge thy oath. For that I know
An idiot holds his bauble for a god,
And keeps the oath which by that god he swears, ⁸⁰

To that I'll urge him. Therefore thou shalt vow

By that same god—what god soe'er it be
That thou adorest and hast in reverence—
To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up ;

Or else I will discover nought to thee. ⁸⁵

Luc. Even by my god I swear to thee I will.

Aar. First know thou, I begot him on the Empress.

Luc. O most insatiate and luxurious woman !

Aar. Tut, Lucius, this was but a deed of charity

To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.
'Twas her two sons that murdered Bassianus ; ⁹¹

They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her,

And cut her hands, and trimm'd her as thou sawest.

Luc. O detestable villain ! Call'st thou that trimming ?

Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd, and 'twas ⁹⁵

Trim sport for them which had the doing of it.

Luc. O barbarous beastly villains like thyself !

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct them.

That coddling spirit had they from their mother,

As sure a card as ever won the set ; ¹⁰⁰

That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,

As true a dog as ever fought at head.

Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.
I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole
Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay ;
I wrote the letter that thy father found,
And hid the gold within that letter mention'd,

Confederate with the queen and her two sons ;

And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue, ¹⁰⁹

Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it ?
I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand,
And, when I had it, drew myself apart
And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pried me through the crevice of a wall,
When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads ; ¹¹⁵

Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily
That both mine eyes were rainy like to his ;
And when I told the Empress of this sport,
She swooned almost at my pleasing tale,
And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses.

Goth. What, canst thou say all this and never blush ? ¹²¹

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.

Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds ?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.

Even now I curse the day—and yet, I think, ¹²⁵

Few come within the compass of my curse—
Wherein I did not some notorious ill :

As kill a man, or else devise his death ;
Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it ;
Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself ;
Set deadly enmity between two friends ;
Make poor men's cattle break their necks ;
Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,

And bid the owners quench them with their tears.

Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves, ¹³⁵

And set them upright at their dear friends' door

Even when their sorrows almost was forgot,
And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,
Have with my knife carved in Roman letters

' Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead '. ¹⁴⁰

Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things

As willingly as one would kill a fly ;
And nothing grieves me heartily indeed
But that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luc. Bring down the devil, for he must not die ¹⁴⁵

So sweet a death as hanging presently.

Aar. If there be devils, would I were a devil,
To live and burn in everlasting fire,
So I might have your company in hell
But to torment you with my bitter tongue !
Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more. 151

Enter ÆMILIUS.

Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome Desires to be admitted to your presence.
Luc. Let him come near.

Welcome, Æmilius. What's the news from Rome ? 155

Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you Princes of the Goths,

The Roman Emperor greets you all by me ;
And, for he understands you are in arms,
He craves a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages, 160
And they shall be immediately deliver'd.

1 Goth. What says our general ?

Luc. Æmilius, let the Emperor give his pledges
Unto my father and my uncle Marcus. 164
And we will come. March away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Rome. Before Titus' house.

Enter TAMORA, and her two sons, DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habiliment,
I will encounter with Andronicus,
And say I am Revenge, sent from below
To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.

Knock at his study, where they say he keeps 5

To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge ;
Tell him Revenge is come to join with him,

And work confusion on his enemies.

They knock, and TITUS opens his study door, above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?
Is it your trick to make me ope the door, 10
That so my sad decrees may fly away
And all my study be to no effect ?

You are deceiv'd ; for what I mean to do
See here in bloody lines I have set down ;
And what is written shall be executed. 15

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.

Tit. No, not a word. How can I grace my talk,

Wanting a hand to give it that accord ?
Thou hast the odds of me ; therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me. 20

Tit. I am not mad, I know thee well enough :

Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines ;

Witness these trenches made by grief and care ;

Witness the tiring day and heavy night ;

Witness all sorrow that I know thee well 25

For our proud Empress, mighty Tamora.

Is not thy coming for my other hand ?

Tam. Know thou, sad man, I am not Tamora :

She is thy enemy and I thy friend.

I am Revenge, sent from th' infernal kingdom 30

To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind

By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes.

Come down and welcome me to this world's light ;

Confer with me of murder and of death ;

There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place,

No vast obscurity or misty vale, 36

Where bloody murder or detested rape

Can couch for fear but I will find them out ;

And in their ears tell them my dreadful name—

Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake. 40

Tit. Art thou Revenge ? and art thou sent to me

To be a torment to mine enemies ?

Tam. I am ; therefore come down and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service ere I come to thee.

Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands ; 45

Now give some surance that thou art Revenge—

Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot wheels ;

And then I'll come and be thy waggoner

And whirl along with thee about the globes

Provide thee two proper palfreys, black as jet, 50

To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,

And find out murderers in their guilty caves ;

And when thy car is loaden with their heads,

I will dismount, and by thy waggon wheel

Trot, like a servile footman, all day long, 55

Even from Hyperion's rising in the east

Until his very downfall in the sea.

And day by day I'll do this heavy task,

So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there

Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me. 60

Tit. Are they thy ministers ? What are they call'd ?

Tam. Rape and Murder ; therefore called so

'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord, how like the Empress sons they are !

And you the Empress ! But we worldly
men 65
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.
O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee ;
And, if one arm's embracement will content
thee,
I will embrace thee in it by and by.

[Exit above.

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy. 70
Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick
humours,
Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge ;
And, being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius his son, 75
And whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme. 80

Enter TITUS, below.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for
thee.

Welcome, dread Fury, to my woeful house.
Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too.
How like the Empress and her sons you are !
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor. 85
Could not all hell afford you such a devil ?
For well I wot the Empress never wags
But in her company there is a Moor ;
And, would you represent our queen
aright,

It were convenient you had such a devil. 90
But welcome as you are. What shall we do ?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do,
Andronicus ?

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with
him.

Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,

And I am sent to be reveng'd on him. 95

Tam. Show me a thousand that hath done thee wrong,

And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets
of Rome,

And when thou find'st a man that's like
thyself, 99

Good Murder, stab him ; he's a murderer.
Go thou with him, and when it is thy hap
To find another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine, stab him ; he is a ravisher.
Go thou with them ; and in the Emperor's
court

There is a queen, attended by a Moor ; 105 Vell shalt thou know her by thine own proportion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee.
Pray thee, do on them some violent death ;
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us ; this shall we do. 110

But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant son,
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike
Goths,

And bid him come and banquet at thy
house ; 114

When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,
I will bring in the Empress and her sons,
The Emperor himself, and all thy foes ;
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,

And on them shalt thou ease thy angry
heart.

What says Andronicus to this device ? 120

Tit. Marcus, my brother ! 'Tis sad Titus calls.

Enter MARCUS.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius ;
Thou shalt inquire him out among the
Goths. 123

Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths ;
Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are.
Tell him the Emperor and the Empress too Feast at my house, and he shall feast with
them.

This do thou for my love ; and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life. 130

Marc. This will I do, and soon return again. [Exit.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy
business,

And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay
with me,

Or else I'll call my brother back again, 135
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. [Aside to her sons] What say you, boys ? Will you abide with him,
Whiles I go tell my lord the Emperor
How I have govern'd our determin'd jest ?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him
fair, 140

And tarry with him till I turn again.

Tit. [Aside] I knew them all, though they suppos'd me mad,

And will o'er-reach them in their own devices,

A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam.

Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure ; leave us here. 145

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus ; Revenge
now goes

To lay a complot to betray thy foes.

Tit. I know thou dost ; and, sweet Revenge, farewell. [Exit Tamora.

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd ?

Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to
do. 150

Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine.

Enter PUBLIUS, CAIUS, and VALENTINE.

Pub. What is your will ?

Tit. Know you these two ?

Pub. The Empress' sons, I take them :
Chiron, Demetrius. 155

Tit. Fie, Publius, fie ! thou art too much deceiv'd.

The one is Murder, and Rape is the other's
name ;

And therefore bind them, gentle Publius—
Caius and Valentine, lay hands on them.

Oft have you heard me wish for such an
hour, 160

And now I find it ; therefore bind them
sure,

And stop their mouths if they begin to cry.

[Exit. They lay hold on Chiron and Demetrius.]

Chi. Villains, forbear ! we are the Empress' sons.

Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded.

Stop close their mouths, let them not speak
a word. 165

Is he sure bound ? Look that you bind them fast.

Re-enter TITUS ANDRONICUS with a knife, and LAVINIA with a basin.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia ; look, thy foes are bound.

Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak
to me ;

But let them hear what fearful words I utter.

O villains, Chiron and Demetrius ! 170

Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud ;

This goodly summer with your winter
mix'd.

You kill'd her husband ; and for that vile
fault

Two of her brothers were condemn'd to
death,

My hand cut off and made a merry jest ; 175

Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that more dear

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity, Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.

What would you say, if I should let you
speak ?

Villains, for shame you could not beg for
grace. 180

Hark, wretches ! how I mean to martyr you.
This one hand yet is left to cut your throats,
Whiles that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth
hold

The basin that receives your guilty blood.
You know your mother means to feast with
me, 185

And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me
mad.

Hark, villains ! I will grind your bones to dust,

And with your blood and it I'll make :
paste ;

And of the paste a coffin I will rear,
And make two pasties of your shameful
heads ; 19

And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam,

Like to the earth, swallow her own increase.

This is the feast that I have bid her to,
And this the banquet she shall surfeit on.

For worse than Philomel you us'd my
daughter. 19

And worse than Progne I will be reveng'd
And now prepare your throats. Lavinia
come,

Receive the blood ; and when that they are
dead,

Let me go grind their bones to powder
small,

And with this hateful liquor temper it ; 20

And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.

Come, come, be every one officious
To make this banquet, which I wish may prove

More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast. [He cuts their throats.]

So.

Now bring them in, for I will play the cook
And see them ready against their mother
comes. 20

[Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.]

SCENE III. The court of Titus' house.

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS, and the Goths, with AARON prisoner, and his Child in the arms of an Attendant.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind

That I repair to Rome, I am content.

1 Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor,

This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil ;
Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him

Till he be brought unto the Empress' face
For testimony of her foul proceedings.

And see the ambush of our friends be
strong ;

I fear the Emperor means no good to us. 1

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in my ears
And prompt me that my tongue may utter
forth

The venomous malice of my swelling heart

Luc. Away, inhuman dog, unhallow'd
slave !

Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in. 1

[Exeunt Goths with Aaron. Flourish
within]

The trumpets show the Emperor is at hand.

Sound trumpets. Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with ÆMILIUS, Tribunes, Senators, and Others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament moe suns than one ?

Luc. What boots it thee to call thyself a sun ?

Marc. Rome's Emperor, and nephew, break the parle ;

These quarrels must be quietly debated. 20
The feast is ready which the careful Titus Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,
For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome.

Please you, therefore, draw nigh and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will. [A table brought in. The company sit down.]

Trumpets sounding, enter TITUS like a cook, placing the dishes, and LAVINIA with a veil over her face ; also YOUNG LUCIUS, and Others.

Tit. Welcome, my lord ; welcome, dread Queen ; 26

Welcome, ye warlike Goths ; welcome, Lucius ;

And welcome all. Although the cheer be poor,

'Twill fill your stomachs ; please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus ? 30

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well

To entertain your Highness and your Empress.

Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus.

Tit. An if your Highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the Emperor, resolve me this : 35
Was it well done of rash Virginus

To slay his daughter with his own right hand,

Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd ?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord. 40

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,

And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual ;

A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant For me, most wretched, to perform the like.

Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee ; [He kills her.]

And with thy shame thy father's sorrow die !
Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind ?

Tit. Kill'd her for whom my tears have made me blind.

I am as woeful as Virginus was, 50
And have a thousand times more cause than he

To do this outrage ; and it now is done.

Sat. What, was she ravish'd ? Tell who did the deed.

Tit. Will't please you eat ? Will't please your Highness feed ?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus ? 55

Tit. Not I ; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius. They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue ;

And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are, both baked in this pie, 60

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed, Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.

'Tis true, 'tis true : witness my knife's sharp point. [He stabs the Empress.]

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed ! [He stabs Titus.]

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed ? 65

There's meed for meed, death for a deadly deed. [He stabs Saturninus. A great tumult. Lucius, Marcus, and their friends go up into the balcony.]

Marc. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,

By uproars sever'd, as a flight of fowl Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,

O, let me teach you how to knit again 70
This scattered corn into one mutual sheaf,

These broken limbs again into one body ;

Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself,

And she whom mighty kingdoms curtsy to,

Like a forlorn and desperate castaway, 75
Do shameful execution on herself.

But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,
Grave witnesses of true experience,

Cannot induce you to attend my words,
[To Lucius] Speak, Rome's dear friend, as 80
erst our ancestor,

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse

To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear
The story of that baleful burning night,

When subtle Greeks surpris'd King Priam's Troy. 84

Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in

That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.

My heart is not compact of flint nor steel ;
Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,

But floods of tears will drown my oratory 90
And break my utt'rance, even in the time

When it should move ye to attend me most
And force you to commiseration.

Here's Rome's young Captain, let him tell the tale;
While I stand by and weep to hear him
speak. 95
Luc. Then, gracious auditory, be it known
to you
That Chiron and the damn'd Demetrius Were they that murd'ed our Emperor's
brother;
And they it were that ravished our sister.
For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded, 100
Our father's tears despis'd, and basely
cozen'd
Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel out
And sent her enemies unto the grave.
Lastly, myself unkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping
out, 105
To beg relief among Rome's enemies;
Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
And op'd their arms to embrace me as a
friend.
I am the turned forth, be it known to
you,
That have preserv'd her welfare in my
blood 110
And from her bosom took the enemy's point,
Sheathing the steel in my advent'rous body.
Alas! you know I am no vaunter, I;
My scars can witness, dumb although they
are,
That my report is just and full of truth. 115
But, soft! methinks I do digress too much,
Citing my worthless praise. O, pardon me!
For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.
Marc. Now is my turn to speak. Behold the child. [Pointing to the child in an Attendant's arms.]
Of this was Tamora delivered, 120
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes.
The villain is alive in Titus' house,
Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true.
Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge
These wrongs unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now have you heard the truth: what say you, Romans?
Have we done aught amiss, show us where-
in,
And, from the place where you behold us
pleading, 130
The poor remainder of Andronici
Will hand in hand all headlong hurl ourselves,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our
souls,
And make a mutual closure of our house.
Speak, Romans, speak; and if you say we shall, 135

Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.
Æmil. Come, come, thou reverend man
of Rome,
And bring our Emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius our Emperor; for well I know
The common voice do cry it shall be so. 140
All. Lucius, all hail, Rome's royal
Emperor!
Marc. Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful
house,
And hither hale that misbelieving Moor
To be adjudg'd some direful slaught'ring
death,
As punishment for his most wicked life. 145
[*Exeunt some Attendants. Lucius,
Marcus, and the others descend.*]
All. Lucius, all hail, Rome's gracious governor!
Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans! May I govern so
To heal Rome's harms and wipe away her
woe!
But, gentle people, give me aim awhile,
For nature puts me to a heavy task. 150 Stand all aloof; but, uncle, draw you near
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk.
O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,
[Kisses Titus.]
These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-
stain'd face,
The last true duties of thy noble son! 155 Marc. True for tear and loving kiss for kiss
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips.
O, were the sum of these that I should pay Countless and infinite, yet would I pay
them!
Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us 160
To melt in showers. Thy grandsire lov'd
thee well;
Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee, Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
Many a story hath he told to thee,
And bid thee bear his pretty tales in mind
And talk of them when he was dead and
gone. 166
Marcus. How many thousand times hath these poor lips,
When they were living, warm'd themselves
on thine!
O, now, sweet boy, give them their latest
kiss!
Bid him farewell; commit him to the
grave; 170
Do them that kindness, and take leave of
them.
Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! ev'n with all my heart
Would I were dead, so you did live again!
O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping;
My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth.

Re-enter Attendants with AARON.

A Roman. You sad Andronici, have done with woes ; 176

Give sentence on this execrable wretch
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him ;

There let him stand and rave and cry for food. 180

If any one relieves or pities him,
For the offence he dies. This is our doom.
Some stay to see him fast'ned in the earth.

Aar. Ah, why should wrath be mute and fury dumb ?

I am no baby, I, that with base prayers 185
I should repent the evils I have done ;

Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
Would I perform, if I might have my will.
If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul. 190

Luc. Some loving friends convey the Emperor hence,

And give him burial in his father's grave.
My father and Lavinia shall forthwith
Be closed in our household's monument.

As for that ravenous tiger, Tamora, 195
No funeral rite, nor man in mourning weed,
No mournful bell shall ring her burial ;
But throw her forth to beasts and birds to prey.

Her life was beastly and devoid of pity,
And being dead, let birds on her take pity.
[Exeunt.]

THE PROLOGUE

Enter CHORUS.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.

From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their

life ;

Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Doth with their death bury their parents'

strife.

The fearful passage of their death-mark'd

love,

And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,

Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage ;
The which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

[Exit.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Verona. A public place.

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, of the house of Capulet, with swords and bucklers on.

Sam. Gregory, on my word, we'll not carry coals.

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of collar.

5

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.

Gre. To move is to stir, and to be valiant is to stand ; therefore, if thou art moved, thou run'st away.

10

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand. I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave ; for the weakest goes to the wall.

14

Sam. 'Tis true ; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall ; therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our master and us their men.

20

Sam. 'Tis all one ; I will show myself a tyrant. When I have fought with the men, I will be civil with the maids—I will cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids ?

24

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads ; take it in what sense thou wilt.

26

Gre. They must take it in sense that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand ; and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish ; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor-John. Draw thy tool ; here comes two of the house of Montagues.

32

Enter two other Servingmen, ABRAHAM and BALTHASAR.

Sam. My naked weapon is out ; quarrel,
I will back thee.

Gre. How ? turn thy back and run ? 35

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry ; I fear thee !

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides ;
let them begin.

Gre. I will frown as I pass by, and let them take it as they list. 40

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them, which is disgrace to them if they bear it.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir ?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir. 44

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir ?

Sam. [Aside to Gregory] Is the law of our side, if I say ay ?

Gre. [Aside to Sampson] No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir ; but I bite my thumb, sir.

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir ? 50

Abr. Quarrel, sir ! No, sir.

Sam. But if you do, sir, I am for you. I serve as good a man as you.

Abr. No better ?

Sam. Well, sir. 55

Enter BENVOLIO.

Gre. [Aside to Sampson] Say 'better' ;
here comes one of my master's kinsmen.

Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lie. 59

Sam. Draw, if you be men. Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. [They fight.]

Ben. Part, fools ! [Beats down their swords.] Put up your swords ; you know not what you do. 63

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds ?

Turn thee, Benvolio ; look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace ; put up thy sword, 66

Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace ! I hate the word, 68

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee.
Have at thee, coward ! [They fight.]

Enter an Officer, and three or four Citizens with clubs or partisans.

Officer. Clubs, bills, and partisans ! Strike ;
beat them down.

Citizens. Down with the Capulets !
Down with the Montagues !

Enter Old CAPULET in his gown, and his Wife.

Cap. What noise is this ? Give me my long sword, ho !

Lady C. A crutch, a crutch ! Why call you for a sword ?

Cap. My sword, I say ! Old Montague is
come, 75
And flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter Old MONTAGUE and his Wife.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet !—Hold me not, let me go.

Lady M. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter PRINCE ESCALUS, with his Train.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to
peace, 79

Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel—
Will they not hear ? What, ho ! you men, you beasts,

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage
With purple fountains issuing from your veins !

On pain of torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mistempered weapons to the
ground, 85

And hear the sentence of your moved
prince.

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,
By thee, old Capulet, and Montague, Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets

And made Verona's ancient citizens 90
Cast by their grave beseeching ornaments
To wield old partisans, in hands as old, Cank'red with peace, to part your cank'red
hate.

If ever you disturb our streets again, 94
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time all the rest depart away.

You, Capulet, shall go along with me ;
And, Montague, come you this afternoon,
To know our farther pleasure in this case,
To old Free-town, our common judgment-
place. 100

Once more, on pain of death, all men depart. [Exeunt all but Montague, his Wife, and Benvolio.]

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach ?

Speak, nephew ; were you by when it began ?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary 104

And yours, close fighting ere I did approach.
I drew to part them ; in the instant came
The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd ;
Which, as he breath'd defiance to my
ears,

He swung about his head and cut the winds,
Who, nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn. 110

While we were interchanging thrusts and
blows,

Came more and more, and fought on part
and part,

Till the Prince came, who parted either part.

Lady M. O, where is Romeo? Saw you him to-day?

Right glad I am he was not at this fray. 115

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun

Peer'd forth the golden window of the east,
A troubled mind drew me to walk abroad;
Where, underneath the grove of sycamore
That westward rooteth from this city side,
So early walking did I see your son. 121

Towards him I made; but he was ware of me

And stole into the covert of the wood.
I, measuring his affections by my own,
Which then most sought where most might not be found, 125

Being one too many by my weary self,
Pursu'd my humour, not pursuing his,
And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen,

With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew, 130

Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs;

But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the farthest east begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed, 134
Away from light steals home my heavy son,

And private in his chamber pens himself,
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,

And makes himself an artificial night.
Black and portentous must this humour
prove, 139

Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. Neither know it nor can learn of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means?

Mon. Both by myself and many other friends.

But he, his own affections' counsellor, 145
Is to himself—I will not say how true;

But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm,
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air, 150

Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,

We would as willingly give cure as know.

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. See where he comes. So please you step aside; 154

I'll know his grievance or be much denied.

Mon. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay

To hear true shrift. Come, madam, let's away.

[Exeunt Montague and his Wife.

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But new struck nine.

Rom. Ay me! sad hours seem long.
Was that my father that went hence so fast? 160

Ben. It was. What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours?

Rom. Not having that which having makes them short.

Ben. In love?

Rom. Out—

Ben. Of love? 165

Rom. Out of her favour where I am in love.

Ben. Alas that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof!

Rom. Alas that love, whose view is muffled still,

Should without eyes see pathways to his will! 170

Where shall we dine? O me! What fray was here?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.
Here's much to do with hate, but more with love.

Why then, O brawling love! O loving hate!
O anything, of nothing first create! 175

O heavy lightness! serious vanity!
Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!

Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!
This love feel I, that feel no love in this. 180

Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such is love's transgression.
Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast,

Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest
With more of thine. This love that thou hast shown 186

Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.

Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;

Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;

Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with loving tears. 190

What is it else? A madness most discreet,
A choking gall, and a preserving sweet.

Farewell, my coz.

Ben. Soft! I will go along;
An if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not here; 195

This is not Romeo, he's some other where

Ben. Tell me in sadness who is that you love.

Rom. What, shall I groan and tell thee ?

Ben. Groan ! Why, no ;

But sadly tell me who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will. 200

Ah, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill !

In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. A right good markman ! And she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit. 205

Rom. Well, in that hit you miss : she'll not be hit

With Cupid's arrow. She hath Dian's wit,
And in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From Love's weak childish bow she lives unharm'd. 209

She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bide th' encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold.
O, she is rich in beauty ; only poor
That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn that she will still live chaste ? 215

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste ;

For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair. 220
She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
Do I live dead that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me: forget to think of her.

Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think !

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes.
Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way 226

To call hers, exquisite, in question more.
These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows,
Being black, puts us in mind they hide the fair.

He that is stricken blind cannot forget 230
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost.
Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
What doth her beauty serve but as a note
Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair ? 234

Farewell ; thou canst not teach me to forget.

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine or else die in debt. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A street.

Enter CAPULET, COUNTY PARIS, and the Clown, his servant.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike ; and 'tis not hard, I think,

For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both,

And pity 'tis you liv'd at odds so long. 5

But now, my lord, what say you to my suit ?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before :

My child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years ;

Let two more summers wither in their pride 10

Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made.

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made.

Earth hath swallowed all my hopes but she ;
She is the hopeful lady of my earth. 15

But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart ;

My will to her consent is but a part.

And, she agreed, within her scope of choice
Lies my consent and fair according voice.

This night I hold an old accustom'd feast,
Whereto I have invited many a guest, 21

Such as I love ; and you among the store,
One more, most welcome, makes my number more.

At my poor house look to behold this night
Earth-treading stars that make dark heaven light. 25

Such comfort as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparell'd April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh female buds shall you this night

Inherit at my house. Hear all, all see, 30
And like her most whose merit most shall be ;

Which on more view of many, mine, being one,

May stand in number, though in reck'ning none.

Come, go with me. [To Servant, giving him a paper] Go, sirrah, trudge about

Through fair Verona ; find those persons out 35

Whose names are written there, and to them say

My house and welcome on their pleasure stay. [Exeunt Capulet and Paris.]

Serv. Find them out whose names are written here ! It is written that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil and the painter with his nets ; but I am sent to find those persons whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned. In good time ! 44

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

Ben. Tut, man, one fire burns out another's burning,

One pain is less'n'd by another's anguish ;
Turn giddy, and be help by backward turning ;

One desperate grief cures with another's Languish.

Take thou some new infection to thy
eye,

And the rank poison of the old will die. 50

Rom. Your plantain leaf is excellent for
that.

Ben. For what, I pray thee ?

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad ?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is ; 54

Shut up in prison, kept without my food, Whipt and tormented, and—God-den,
good fellow.

Serv. God gi' go'den. I pray, sir, can you
read ?

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.

Serv. Perhaps you have learned it without book. But I pray, can you read anything you see ? 60

Rom. Ay, if I know the letters and the language.

Serv. Ye say honestly ; rest you merry !

Rom. Stay, fellow ; I can read. 63

[He reads the list] ' Signior Martino and his wife and daughters ; County Anselme and his beauteous sisters ; the lady widow of Vitruvio ; Signior Placentio and his lovely nieces ; Mercutio and his brother Valentine ; mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters ; my fair niece Rosaline and Livia ; Signior Valentio and his cousin Tybalt ; Lucio and the lively Helena.' 70
A fair assembly. [Gives back the paper]

Whither should they come ?

Serv. Up.

Rom. Whither ?

Serv. To supper. To our house.

Rom. Whose house ? 75

Serv. My master's.

Rom. Indeed, I should have ask'd you that before.

Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking :
my master is the great rich Capulet ; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry ! [Exit.]

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's 82

Sups the fair Rosaline whom thou so loves,
With all the admired beauties of Verona.

Go thither, and with unattainted eye 85 Compare her face with some that I shall
show,

And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine
eye

Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires ;

And these, who, often drown'd, could never
die, 92

Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars !
One fairer than my love ! The all-seeing

sun

Ne'er saw her match since first the world
began.

Ben. Tut, you saw her fair, none else being by,

Herself pois'd with herself in either eye ; 93
But in that crystal scales let there be weigh'd

Your lady's love against some other maid
That I will show you shining at this feast,
And she shall scant show well that now seems best.

Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown, 100

But to rejoice in splendour of mine own.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Capulet's house.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady C. Nurse, where's my daughter ?
Call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now, by my maidenhead at twelve year old,

I bade her come. What, lamb ! what, lady-
bird !

God forbid ! Where's this girl ? What,
Juliet !

Enter JULIET.

Jul. How now, who calls ? 5

Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here. What is your will ?

Lady C. This is the matter. Nurse, give leave awhile,

We must talk in secret. Nurse, come back
again ;

I have rememb'rd me, thou's hear our counsel. 10

Thou knowest my daughter's of a pretty
age.

Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

Lady C. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth—
And yet, to my teen be it spoken, I have but four—

She's not fourteen. How long is it now 15
To Lammas-tide ?

Lady C. A fortnight and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year,

Come Lammas Eve at night shall she be fourteen.

Susan and she—God rest all Christian
souls !— 20

Were of an age. Well, Susan is with God.
She was too good for me. But, as I said,
On Lammas Eve at night shall she be
fourteen ;

That shall she, marry ; I remember it well.
'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years ;
And she was wean'd—I never shall forget it—²⁵

Of all the days of the year, upon that day ;
For I had then laid wormwood to my dug,
Sitting in the sun under the dove-house
wall ;

My lord and you were then at Mantua.
Nay, I do bear a brain. But, as I said, ³⁰
When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple

Of my dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool,
To see it tetchy, and fall out with the dug !

Shake, quoth the dove-house. 'Twas no need, I trow,

To bid me trudge. ³⁵

And since that time it is eleven years ;
For then she could stand high-lone ; nay,
by th' rood,

She could have run and waddled all about ;
For even the day before, she broke her
brow ;

And then my husband—God be with his soul ! ⁴⁰

'A was a merry man—took up the child.
'Yea,' quoth he 'dost thou fall upon thy
face ?

Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast
more wit,

Wilt thou not, Jule ? ' And, by my holidam,

The pretty wretch left crying, and said
'Ay'. ⁴⁵

To see, now, how a jest shall come about !
I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,

I never should forget it : ' Wilt thou not,
Jule ? ' quoth he ;

And, pretty fool, it stinted, and said 'Ay'.

Lady C. Enough of this ; I pray thee hold thy peace. ⁵⁰

Nurse. Yes, madam. Yet I cannot choose but laugh

To think it should leave crying and say
'Ay'.

And yet, I warrant, it had upon it brow
A bump as big as a young cock'rel's stone—

A perilous knock ; and it cried bitterly. ⁵⁵
'Yea,' quoth my husband 'fall'st upon thy
face ?

Thou wilt fall backward when thou comest
to age ;

Wilt thou not, Jule ? ' It stinted, and said
'Ay'.

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace ! ⁶⁰

Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I
nurs'd ;

An I might live to see thee married once,
I have my wish.

Lady C. Marry, that ' marry ' is the very theme ⁶⁴

I came to talk of. Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your dispositions to be married ?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour ! Were not I thine
only nurse,

I would say thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

Lady C. Well, think of marriage now.
Younger than you, ⁷⁰

Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers. By my count,

I was your mother much upon these years That you are now a maid. Thus, then, in brief :

The valiant Paris seeks you for his love. ⁷⁵

Nurse. A man, young lady ! lady, such a
man

As all the world—why, he's a man of wax.

Lady C. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower ; in faith, a very flower.

Lady C. What say you ? Can you love
the gentleman ? ⁸⁰

This night you shall behold him at our
feast ;

Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face,
And find delight writ there with beauty's
pen ;

Examine every married lineament,
And see how one another lends content ; ⁸⁵

And what obscur'd in this fair volume lies
Find written in the margin of his eyes.

This precious book of love, this unbound lover,

To beautify him, only lacks a cover.
The fish lives in the sea, and 'tis much pride ⁹⁰

For fair without the fair within to hide.
That book in many's eyes doth share the glory

That in gold clasps locks in the golden
story ;

So shall you share all that he doth possess,
By having him making yourself no less. ⁹⁵

Nurse. No less ! Nay, bigger ; women grow by men.

Lady C. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love ?

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking move ;

But no more deep will I endart mine eye
Than your consent gives strength to make it fly. ¹⁰⁰

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper serv'd up, you call'd, my young lady ask'd for, the nurse curs'd in the pantry, and everything in extremity. I must hence to wait ; I beseech you, follow straight.

Lady C. We follow thee. [Exit Serrant]
 Juliet, the County stays. 105 Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. A street.

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with five or six other Maskers; Torch-bearers.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?

Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity.
 We'll have no Cupid hoodwink'd with a scarf,

Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath, 5
 Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper;

Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke

After the prompter, for our entrance;
 But, let them measure us by what they will,
 We'll measure them a measure, and be
 gone. 10

Rom. Give me a torch; I am not for this ambling;

Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me. You have dancing shoes

With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead 15
 So stakes me to the ground I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's
 wings

And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore enpierced with his shaft

To soar with his light feathers; and so 20
 bound

I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe.
 Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And to sink in it should you burden
 love;

Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? It is too rough, 25

Too rude, too boist'rous, and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love;

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love
 down.

Give me a case to put my visage in.
 [Putting on a mask.]

A visor for a visor! What care I 30
 What curious eye doth quote deformities?

Here are the beetle brows shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock and enter; and no sooner in

But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me. Let wantons, light 35
 of heart,

Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels;

For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase;
 I'll be a candle-holder and look on;

The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut, dun's the mouse, the con-stable's own word; 40

If thou art Dun, we'll draw thee from the mire

Of this sir-reverence love, wherein thou stickest

Up to the ears. Come, we burn daylight, ho!

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay
 We waste our lights in vain—like lights by 45
 day.

Take our good meaning, for our judgment sits

Five times in that ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well in going to this mask;

But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask? 49

Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Weil, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie.

Rom. In bed asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O, then I see Queen Mab hath been
 with you.

She is the fairies' midwife, and she comes
 In shape no bigger than an agate stone 55

On the fore-finger of an alderman,
 Drawn with a team of little atomies

Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep;
 Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' 60
 legs;

The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;
 Her traces, of the smallest spider's web;

Her collars, of the moonshine's wat'ry
 beams;

Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash, of film;

Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,
 Not half so big as a round little worm 65

Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid.
 Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,

Made by the joiner squirrel or old grub,
 Time out o' mind the fairies' coachmakers.

And in this state she gallops night by
 night

Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love; 71

O'er courtiers' knees, that dream on curtsies
 straight;

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream
 on fees;

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses
 dream,

Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues, 75

Because their breaths with sweetmeats
 tainted are.
 Sometime she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
 And then dreams he of smelling out a suit;

And sometime comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,

Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep, 80
Then dreams he of another benefice.

Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,

Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon 85

Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes,

And, being thus frightened, swears a prayer or two,

And sleeps again. This is that very Mab
That plats the manes of horses in the night;
And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs,
Which once untangled much misfortune bodes. 91

This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,

That presses them and learns them first to bear,

Making them women of good carriage. 94
This is she—

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace!
Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams,
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air,
And more inconstant than the wind, who woos 100

Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
Turning his side to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind you talk of blows us from ourselves:

Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early; for my mind misgives 106

Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars,
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date

With this night's revels and expire the term
Of a despised life clos'd in my breast, 110

By some vile forfeit of untimely death.

But He that hath the steerage of my course
Direct my sail! On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum.

[They march about the stage. Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Capulet's house.

Enter the Maskers. Servingmen come forth with napkins.

1 Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? He shift a trencher! He scrape a trencher!

2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwash'd too, 'tis a foul thing. 4

1 Serv. Away with the join-stools, remove the court-cubbert, look to the plate. Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane; and as thou loves me let the porter let in Susan Grindstone and Nell. Antony, and Potpan!

2 Serv. Ay, boy, ready. 9

1 Serv. You are look'd for and call'd for, ask'd for and sought for, in the great chamber.

3 Serv. We cannot be here and there too. Cheerly, boys! Be brisk a while, and the longer liver take all! [Servants retire.]

Enter CAPULET, with all the Guests and Gentlewomen to the Maskers.

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen! Ladies that have their toes

Unplagu'd with corns will have a bout with you. 15

Ah ha, my mistresses! which of you all Will now deny to dance? She that makes dainty,

She I'll swear hath corns; am I come near ye now?

Welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day That I have worn a visor and could tell 20

A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear,
Such as would please. 'Tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone!

You are welcome, gentlemen. Come, musicians, play.

A hall, a hall! give room; and foot it, girls. [Music plays, and they dance.]

More light, you knaves; and turn the tables up, 25

And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.

Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.

Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet, For you and I are past our dancing days.

How long is't now since last yourself and I Were in a mask?

2 Cap. By'r Lady, thirty years. 31

Cap. What, man? 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much.

'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio, Come Pentecost as quickly as it will,

Some five and twenty years; and then we mask'd. 35

2 Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more: his son is elder, sir;

His son is thirty.

Cap. Will you tell me that? His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. [To a servant] What lady's that which doth enrich the hand

Of yonder knight? 40

Serv. I know not, sir.

Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn bright!

It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night As a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear—

Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear! So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows 46

As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.
The measure done, I'll watch her place of
stand,
And, touching hers, make blessed my rude
hand.

Did my heart love till now? Forswear it,
sight; 50

For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague.

Fetch me my rapier, boy. What, dares the slave

Come hither, cover'd with an antic face,
To fleer and scorn at our solemnity? 55

Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

Cap. Why, how now, kinsman! Wherefore storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;
A villain, that is hither come in spite 60

To scorn at our solemnity this night.

Cap. Young Romeo, is it?

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.

Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone.

'A bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him 65

To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth.

I would not for the wealth of all this town

Here in my house do him disparagement.

Therefore be patient, take no note of him;

It is my will; the which if thou respect, 70

Show a fair presence and put off these frowns,

An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest.
I'll not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endur'd. 74

What, Goodman boy! I say he shall. Go to;

Am I the master here or you? Go to.

You'll not endure him! God shall mend my soul!

You'll make a mutiny among my guests!

You will set cock-a-hoop! You'll be the
man!

Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.

Cap. Go to, go to; 80

You are a saucy boy. Is't so, indeed?

This trick may chance to scathe you. I know what:

You must contrary me. Marry, 'tis time.—

Well said, my hearts!—You are a princox;
go.

Be quiet, or—More light, more light!—For
shame! 85

I'll make you quiet. What!—Cheerly, my
hearts!

Tyb. Patience perforce with wilful choler
meeting

Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeting. 88

I will withdraw; but this intrusion shall,
Now seeming sweet, convert to bitt' rest

gall. [Exit.]

Rom. [To Juliet] If I profane with my un-worthiest hand 91

This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this:

My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand

To smooth that rough touch with a tender
kiss.

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much, 95

Which mannerly devotion shows in this;

For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands

do touch,

And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers too?

Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in pray'r. 100

Rom. O, then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do!

They pray; grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.

Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.

Rom. Then move not while my prayer's effect I take. 104

Thus from my lips by thine my sin is purg'd. [Kissing her.]

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.

Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly urg'd!

Give me my sin again. [Kissing her.]

Jul. You kiss by th' book.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you. 109

Rom. What is her mother?

Nurse. Marry, bachelor,

Her mother is the lady of the house,

And a good lady, and a wise and virtuous.

I nurs'd her daughter that you talk'd

withal.

I tell you, he that can lay hold of her 114

Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?

O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, be gone; the sport is at the best.

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.

Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone; 119

We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.

Is it e'en so? Why, then I thank you all;

I thank you, honest gentlemen; good

night.

More torches here! [Exeunt Maskers] Come on then, let's to bed.

Ah, sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late;

I'll to my rest. 125

[Exeunt all but Juliet and Nurse.]

Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is yond

gentleman?

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

Jul. What's he that now is going out of door?

Nurse. Marry, that I think be young Petruchio.

Jul. What's he that follows there, that would not dance ? 130

Nurse. I know not.

Jul. Go ask his name.—If he be married, My grave is like to be my wedding bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague ;

The only son of your great enemy. 135

Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate !

Too early seen unknown, and known too late !

Prodigious birth of love it is to me, That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this ? What's this ?

Jul. A rhyme I learnt even now Of one I danc'd withal.

[One calls within 'Juliet'.

Nurse.

Anon, anon ! 141

Come, let's away ; the strangers all are gone. [Exeunt.

ACT TWO

PROLOGUE

Enter CHORUS.

Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection gapes to be his heir ;
That fair for which love groan'd for and would die,

With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.
Now Romeo is belov'd, and loves again, 5
Alike bewitched by the charm of looks ;
But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks.

Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear ; 10

And she as much in love, her means much less

To meet her new beloved any where.
But passion lends them power, time means, to meet,

Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweet. [Exit.

SCENE I. A lane by the wall of Capulet's orchard.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is here ?

Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.

[He climbs the wall and leaps down within it.

Enter BENVOLIO with MERCUTIO.

Ben. Romeo ! my cousin, Romeo ! Romeo !

Mer. He is wise,

And, on my life, hath stol'n him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leapt this orchard wall. 5

Call, good Mercutio.

Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too.

Romeo ! humours ! madman ! passion ! lover !

Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh ;
Speak but one rhyme and I am satisfied ;
Cry but 'Ay me !' pronounce but 'love' and 'dove' ; 10

Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,
One nickname for her purblind son and heir,

Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim
When King Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid !

He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not ; 15

The ape is dead, and I must conjure him.
I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
By her high forehead and her scarlet lip,
By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh, 19

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,
That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him : 'twould anger him

To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle
Of some strange nature, letting it there stand 25

Till she had laid it and conjur'd it down ;
That were some spite. My invocation
Is fair and honest : in his mistress' name,
I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees 30

To be consorted with the humorous night :
Blind is his love, and best befits the dark.

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.

Now will he sit under a medlar tree,
And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit 35

As maids call medlars when they laugh alone.

O Romeo, that she were, O that she were An open et cetera, thou a pop'rin pear !
Romeo, good night. I'll to my truckle bed ;
This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep. 40
Come, shall we go ?

Ben. Go, then ; for 'tis in vain
To seek him here that means not to be found. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Capulet's orchard.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars that never felt a wound.

Enter JULIET above at a window.

But, soft! What light through yonder window breaks?

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun.
Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
Who is already sick and pale with grief
That thou her maid art far more fair than she.

Be not her maid, since she is envious;
Her vestal livery is but sick and green,
And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.
It is my lady; O, it is my love!
O that she knew she were!
She speaks, yet she says nothing. What of that?

Her eye discourses; I will answer it.
I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks;
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do entreat her eyes
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head?

The brightness of her cheek would shame
those stars,
As daylight doth a lamp; her eyes in
heaven
Would through the airy region stream so bright
That birds would sing, and think it were not night.

See how she leans her cheek upon her hand!
O that I were a glove upon that hand,
That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ay me!

Rom. She speaks.

O, speak again, bright angel, for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my
head,

As is a winged messenger of heaven
Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes
Of mortals that fall back to gaze on him,
When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds
And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?

Deny thy father and refuse thy name;
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. [Aside] Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy;
Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.
What's Montague? It is nor hand, nor
foot,

Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part Belonging to a man. O, be some other
name!

What's in a name? That which we call a rose

By any other name would smell as sweet;
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo
call'd,

Retain that dear perfection which he owes

Without that title. Romeo, doff thy name;
And for thy name, which is no part of thee,
Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd;
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night,
So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee;
Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words
Of thy tongue's uttering, yet I know the sound:

Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair maid, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me, and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high and hard to climb;

And the place death, considering who thou
art,

If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls,

For stony limits cannot hold love out;
And what love can do, that dares love attempt.

Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder
thee.

Rom. Alack, there lies more peril in thine
eye

Than twenty of their swords; look thou but sweet,

And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their eyes;

And but thou love me, let them find me
here.

My life were better ended by their hate
Than death prorogued wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By love, that first did prompt me to enquire;

He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.

I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far As that vast shore wash'd with the farthest sea,

I should adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou knowest the mask of night is on my face,

Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek

For that which thou hast heard me speak
to-night.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny
What I have spoke ; but farewell compliment !

Dost thou love me ? I know thou wilt say ay, ⁹⁰

And I will take thy word ; yet, if thou swear'st,

Thou mayst prove false ; at lovers' perjuries

They say Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully.
Or, if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee
nay, ⁹⁶

So thou wilt woo ; but else, not for the
world.

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond ;
And therefore thou mayst think my haviour light ;

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true ¹⁰⁰

Than those that have more cunning to be strange.

I should have been more strange, I must confess,

But that thou overheard'st, ere I was ware,

My true love's passion. Therefore pardon me, ¹⁰⁴

And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I
vow,

That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, th' inconstant moon, ¹⁰⁹

That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by ?
Jul. Do not swear at all ;

Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love— ¹¹⁵
Jul. Well, do not swear. Although I joy
in thee,

I have no joy of this contract to-night :
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden ;

Too like the lightning, which doth cease to
be

Ere one can say ' It lightens '. Sweet, good night ! ¹²⁰

This bud of love, by summer's ripening
breath,

May prove a beauteous flow'r when next
we meet.

Good night, good night ! As sweet repose and rest

Come to thy heart as that within my breast !
Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied ? ¹²⁵

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have
to-night ?

Rom. Th' exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst
request it ;

And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it ? For what purpose, love ? ¹³⁰

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee
again.

And yet I wish but for the thing I have.
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep : the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite. ¹³⁵

[Nurse calls within.

I hear some noise within. Dear love,
adieu !—

Anon, good nurse !—Sweet Montague, be true.

Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit.

Rom. O blessed, blessed night ! I am afeard,

Being in night, all this is but a dream, ¹⁴⁰
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter JULIET above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night indeed.

If that thy bent of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-
morrow,

By one that I'll procure to come to thee,
Where and what time thou wilt perform the rite ; ¹⁴⁶

And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,
And follow thee, my lord, throughout the
world.

Nurse. [Within] Madam !
Jul. I come anon.—But if thou meanest not well, ¹⁵⁰

I do beseech thee—
Nurse. [Within] Madam !

Jul. By and by, I come—
To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief.
To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul—
Jul. A thousand times good night ! [Exit.

Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light. ¹⁵⁵

Love goes toward love as school-boys from their books ;

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

Re-enter JULIET above.

Jul. Hist ! Romeo, hist !—O for a falc'ner's voice,

To lure this tassel-gentle back again !
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud ; ¹⁶⁰

Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies,
And make her airy tongue more hoarse than mine

With repetition of my Romeo's name.
Romeo !

Rom. It is my soul that calls upon my name.¹⁶⁵
How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest music to attending ears!

Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My dear?

Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow
Shall I send to thee?

Rom. By the hour of nine.

Jul. I will not fail. 'Tis twenty years till then.¹⁷⁰

I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember it.

Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,

Rememb'ring how I love thy company.

Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget,¹⁷⁵

Forgetting any other home but this.

Jul. 'Tis almost morning. I would have thee gone;

And yet no farther than a wanton's bird,
That lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.¹⁸²

Rom. I would I were thy bird.

Jul. Sweet, so would I.
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.
Good night, good night! Parting is such sweet sorrow¹⁸⁵

That I shall say good night till it be morrow. [Exit.

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!

Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!¹⁸⁸

Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell,
His help to crave and my dear hap to tell.

[Exit.

SCENE III. Friar Lawrence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE with a basket.

Fri. L. The gray-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning night,
Check'ring the eastern clouds with streaks of light;

And fleckel'd darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels.⁴

Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye
The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry,

I must up-fill this osier cage of ours
With baleful weeds and precious-juiced flowers.

The earth that's nature's mother is her tomb;

What is her burying grave, that is her womb.¹⁰

And from her womb children of divers kind

We sucking on her natural bosom find;
Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some, and yet all different.
O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies¹⁵
In plants, herbs, stones, and their true qualities;

For nought so vile that on the earth doth live

But to the earth some special good doth give;

Nor aught so good but, strain'd from that fair use,

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse:²⁰

Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied,
And vice sometime's by action dignified.

Within the infant rind of this weak flower
Poison hath residence, and medicine power;

For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each part;²⁵

Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed kings encamp them still

In man as well as herbs—grace and rude will;

And where the worser is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.³⁰

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good morrow, father!

Fri. L. Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?
Young son, it argues a distempered head

So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed.
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,³⁵

And where care lodges sleep will never lie;
But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain

Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign.

Therefore thy earliness doth me assure³⁹

Thou art uprousd with some distemp'rance;

Or if not so, then here I hit it right—
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true; the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. L. God pardon sin! Wast thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father?

No;⁴⁵

I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. L. That's my good son; but where hast thou been then?

Rom. I'll tell thee ere thou ask it me again.

I have been feasting with mine enemy;
Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me⁵⁰

That's by me wounded; both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies.

I bear no hatred, blessed man, for, lo,
My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. L. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift; 55
Riddling confession finds but riddling
shriff.
Rom. Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set
On the fair daughter of rich Capulet.
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
And all combin'd, save what thou must combine 60
By holy marriage. When, and where, and
how,
We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of
vow,
I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us to-day.
Fri. L. Holy Saint Francis! What a change is here! 65
Is Rosaline, that thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? Young men's love, then, lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jesu Maria, what a deal of brine Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosa-line! 70
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans yet ring in mine ancient
ears; 74
Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet.
If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes
thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline.
And art thou chang'd? Pronounce this sentence, then:
Women may fall, when there's no strength in men. 80
Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline.
Fri. L. For doting, not for loving, pupil
mine.
Rom. And bad'st me bury love.
Fri. L. Not in a grave
To lay one in, another out to have.
Rom. I pray thee chide me not; her I love now 85
Doth grace for grace and love for love allow;
The other did not so.
Fri. L. O, she knew well Thy love did read by rote that could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come, go with
me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be; 90
For this alliance may so happy prove To turn your households' rancour to pure
love.
Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden
haste.

Fri. L. Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. A street.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo
be?
Came he not home to-night?
Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his man.
Mer. Why, that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline, 4
Torments him so that he will sure run mad.
Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman to old Capulet,
Hath sent a letter to his father's house.
Mer. A challenge, on my life.
Ben. Romeo will answer it.
Mer. Any man that can write may answer a letter. 10
Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.
Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead: stabb'd with a white wench's black eye; run through the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft. And is he a man to encounter Tybalt? 17
Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?
Mer. More than Prince of Cats. O, he's the courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing pricksong: keeps time, distance, and proportion; he rests his minim rests, one, two, and the third in your bosom; the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause. Ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso!
the hay!— 26
Ben. The what?
Mer. The pox of such antic, lipping, affecting fantasticoes; these new tuners of accent!—'By Jesu, a very good blade!
a very tall man! a very good whore!'
Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grand-sire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardon me's, who stand so much on the new form that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bones, their bones! 35

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes
Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring.
O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in;
Laura, to his lady, was a kitchen-wench—marry, she had a better love to berhyme her; Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy;
Helen and Hero, hildings and harlots; Thisbe, a gray eye or so, but not to the purpose—Signior Romeo, bon jour! There's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night. 45

Rom. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio; my business was great, and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy. 50

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning, to curtsy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition. 55

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flower'd. 59

Mer. Sure wit! Follow me this jest now till thou hast worn out thy pump, that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, solely singular.

Rom. O single-sol'd jest, solely singular for the singleness! 65

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wits faints.

Rom. Swits and spurs, swits and spurs; or I'll cry a match. 68

Mer. Nay, if our wits run the wild-goose chase, I am done; for thou hast more of the wild goose in one of thy wits than, I am sure, I have in my whole five. Was I with you there for the goose? 72

Rom. Thou wast never with me for anything when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest. 75

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweetening; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not then well serv'd in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O, here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad! 81

Rom. I stretch it out for that word 'broad', which, added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose. 84

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? Now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art by art as well as by nature; for this drivelling love is like a great natural that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there. 90

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O, thou art deceiv'd: I would have made it short; for I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer. 96

Rom. Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and her man, PETER.

Mer. A sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt and a smock.

Nurse. Peter! 100

Peter. Anon.

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Mer. Good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer face. 104

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell ye; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! What a man are you? 110

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said. 'For himself to mar' quoth 'a! Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo? 115

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him. I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well. 120

Mer. Yea, is the worst well? Very well took, i' faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you. 124

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

[He walks by them and sings.]

An old hare hoar, 130

And an old hare hoar,

Is very good meat in Lent;

But a hare that is hoar

Is too much for a score,

When it hoars ere it be spent. 135

Romeo, will you come to your father's? We'll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, [Sings] lady, lady, lady. 140

[Exeunt Mercutio and Benvolio.]

Nurse. I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this that was so full of his ropery? 142

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An 'a speak anything against me, I'll take him down, an 'a were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skains-mates. And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure? 151

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you. I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side. 155

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vex'd that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!—Pray you, sir, a word; and as I told you, my young lady bid me enquire you out; what she bid me say I will keep to myself. But first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her in a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say; for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be off'rd to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing. 165

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee—

Nurse. Good heart, and, i' faith, I will tell her as much. Lord, Lord! she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? Thou dost not mark me. 171

Nurse. I will tell her, sir, that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentleman-like offer.

Rom. Bid her devise
Some means to come to shrift this afternoon; 175

And there she shall at Friar Lawrence' cell
Be shriv'd and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? Well, she shall be there. 180

Rom. And stay, good nurse—behind the abbey wall

Within this hour my man shall be with thee,

And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair;

Which to the high top-gallant of my joy
Must be my convoy in the secret night. 185

Farewell; be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains.
Farewell; commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee!—
Hark you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say 190

Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir. My mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, Lord! when 'twas a little prating thing! O, there is a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so she looks as pale as any clout in the versal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter? 201

Rom. Ay, nurse; what of that? Both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R is for the—no, I know it begins with some other letter. And she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy lady. 207

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times.—Peter!

Pet. Anon.

Nurse. [Handing him her fan] Before and apace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Capulet's orchard.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse;

In half an hour she promis'd to return.
Perchance she cannot meet him—that's not
so.

O, she is lame! Love's heralds should be
thoughts,

Which ten times faster glide than the sun's
beams 5

Driving back shadows over louring hills;
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw
Love,

And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid
wings.

Now is the sun upon the highmost hill
Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve 10

Is three long hours, yet she is not come.
Had she affections and warm youthful
blood,

She would be as swift in motion as a ball;
My words would bandy her to my sweet
love,

And his to me. 15
But old folks—many feign as they were
dead;

Unwieldy, slow, heavy, and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse and PETER.

O God, she comes! O honey nurse, what
news?

Hast thou met with him? Send thy man
away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. 20
[Exit Peter.]

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse—O Lord, why look'st thou sad ?
Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily ;
If good, thou shamest the music of sweet
news

By playing it to me with so sour a face.
Nurse. I am aweary, give me leave a while ; 25

Fie, how my bones ache ! What a jaunce have I had !

Jul. I would thou hadst my bones and I
thy news.

Nay, come, I pray thee speak ; good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jesu, what haste ? Can you not stay a while ?

Do you not see that I am out of breath ? 30

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath

To say to me that thou art out of breath ?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay 33

Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy news good or bad ? Answer to that ;
Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance.
Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad ? 37

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice ; you know not how to choose a man. Romeo ! no, not he ; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's ; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body, though they be not to be talk'd on, yet they are past compare. He is not the flower of courtesy, but I'll warrant him as gentle as a lamb. Go thy ways, wench ; serve God. What, have you din'd at home ?

Jul. No, no. But all this did I know
before. 46

What says he of our marriage ? What of
that ?

Nurse. Lord, how my head aches ! What a head have I !

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.
My back a t' other side—ah, my back, my
back ! 50

Beshrew your heart for sending me about
To catch my death with jauncing up and
down !

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not
well.

Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love ? 54

Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman, and a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome, and, I warrant, a virtuous
—Where is your mother ?

Jul. Where is my mother ! Why, she is within ;

Where should she be ? How oddly thou repliest !

' Your love says like an honest gentleman, 60

Where is your mother ? '

Nurse. O God's lady dear !

Are you so hot ? Marry, come up, I trow ;
Is this the poultice for my aching bones ?
Henceforward, do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil ! Come, what says
Romeo ? 65

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift
to-day ?

Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to Friar Lawrence' cell ;

There stays a husband to make you a wife.
Now comes the wanton blood up in your
cheeks ; 70

They'll be in scarlet straight at any news.
Hie you to church ; I must another way,
To fetch a ladder, by the which your love Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dark. 74

I am the drudge, and toil in your delight ;
But you shall bear the burden soon at
night.

Go ; I'll to dinner ; hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune ! Honest nurse,
farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Friar Lawrence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. L. So smile the heavens upon this holy act

That after-hours with sorrow chide us not !

Rom. Amen, amen ! But come what sorrow can,

It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her
sight. 5

Do thou but close our hands with holy
words,

Then love-devouring death do what he
dare ;

It is enough I may but call her mine.

Fri. L. These violent delights have violent ends,

And in their triumph die ; like fire and powder, 10

Which, as thy kiss, consume. The sweetest honey

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness,
And in the taste confounds the appetite.

Therefore love moderately : long love doth
so ;

Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow. 15

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady. O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint.
A lover may bestride the gossamer
That idles in the wanton summer air
And yet not fall, so light is vanity. 20

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.

Fri. L. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

Jul. As much to him, else is his thanks
too much.

Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be
more 25

To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let rich music's
tongue

Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in
words, 30

Braggs of his substance, not of ornament.
They are but beggars that can count their
worth;

But my true love is grown to such excess
I cannot sum up sum of half my wealth.

Fri. L. Come, come with me, and we will make short work; 35

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay
alone

Till holy church incorporate two in one.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. A public place.

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire.

The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And if we meet we shall not scape a brawl;
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring. 4

Mer. Thou art like one of these fellows that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table, and says 'God send me no need of thee!'
and by the operation of the second cup draws him on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow? 10

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to? 14

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more or a hair less in his beard than thou hast.
Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes. What eye but such an eye would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling.
Thou hast quarrell'd with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun.
Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter?
With another for tying his new shoes with old riband? And yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling! 29

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The fee simple! O simple!

Enter TYBALT and Others.

Ben. By my head, here comes the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not. 35

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to
them.

Gentlemen, good den; a word with one of
you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us?
Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, an you will give me occasion. 41

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consortest with
Romeo.

Mer. Consort! What, dost thou make us minstrels? An thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords. Here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance. Zounds, consort! 47

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of
men;

Either withdraw unto some private place,
Or reason coldly of your grievances, 50
Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze;

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter ROMEO.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir. Here comes my man.

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery. 55

Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower;

Your worship in that sense may call him
man.

Tyb. Romeo, the love I bear thee can afford

No better term than this: thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee 60

Doth much excuse the appertaining rage
To such a greeting. Villain am I none; Therefore, farewell; I see thou knowest
me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries

That thou hast done me; therefore turn and draw. 65

Rom. I do protest I never injur'd thee,
But love thee better than thou canst devise Till thou shalt know the reason of my love;

And so, good Capulet—which name I tender

As dearly as mine own—be satisfied. 70

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!

Alla stoccata carries it away. [Draws.

Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Mer. Good King of Cats, nothing but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher by the ears? Make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out. 79

Tyb. I am for you. [Draws.

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.

Rom. Draw, Benvolio; beat down their weapons.

Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage!

Tybalt! Mercutio! the Prince expressly hath 85

Forbid this bandying in Verona streets.

Hold, Tybalt! Good Mercutio!

[Tybalt under Romeo's arm thrusts Mercutio in, and flies with his friends.

Mer. I am hurt.

A plague a both your houses! I am sped. Is he gone and hath nothing?

Ben. What, art thou hurt?

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, 'tis enough. 90

Where is my page? Go, villain, fetch a surgeon. [Exit Page.

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much. 92

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door, but 'tis enough, 'twill serve. Ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world. A plague a both your houses! Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! A braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic! Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm. 100

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio, or I shall faint.

A plague a both your houses!

They have made worms' meat of me. 104

I have it, and soundly too—Your houses! [Exeunt Mercutio and Benvolio.

Rom. This gentleman, the Prince's near ally,

My very friend, hath got this mortal hurt In my behalf; my reputation stain'd With Tybalt's slander—Tybalt, that an hour

Hath been my cousin. O sweet Juliet, Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, And in my temper soft'ned valour's steel! 110

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio is dead!

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds, Which too untimely here did scorn the earth. 115

Rom. This day's black fate on moe days doth depend;

This but begins the woe others must end.

Re-enter TYBALT.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Rom. Alive in triumph and Mercutio slain!

Away to heaven respective lenity, 120

And fire-ey'd fury be my conduct now!

Now, Tybalt, take the 'villain' back again That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul

Is but a little way above our heads, Staying for thine to keep him company. 125

Either thou or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort him here,

Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

[They fight; Tybalt falls.

Ben. Romeo, away, be gone.

The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain. 130

Stand not amaz'd. The Prince will doom thee death

If thou art taken. Hence, be gone, away!

Rom. O, I am fortune's fool!

Ben. Why dost thou stay? [Exit Romeo.

Enter Citizens.

1 Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutio? 134

Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

1 Cit. Up, sir, go with me;

I charge thee in the Prince's name, obey.

Enter PRINCE, attended; MONTAGUE, CAPULET, their Wives, and All.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray? 138

Ben. O noble Prince, I can discover all The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl: There lies the man, slain by young Romeo, That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

Lady C. Tybalt, my cousin! O my brother's child!

O Prince! O husband! O, the blood is spill'd

Of my dear kinsman! Prince, as thou art true, 145

For blood of ours shed blood of Montague. O cousin, cousin!

Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?

Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay;

Romeo that spoke him fair, bid him bethink 150

How nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal
Your high displeasure. All this, uttered With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,

Could not take truce with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt, deaf to peace, but that he tilts
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's
breast; 156

Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to
point,

And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats

Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity 160
Retorts it. Romeo he cries aloud

'Hold, friends! friends, part!' and,
swifter than his tongue,

His agile arm beats down their fatal points,
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm 164

An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio; and then Tybalt fled;
But by and by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,
And to't they go like lightning; for ere I Could draw to part them was stout Tybalt
slain; 170

And as he fell did Romeo turn and fly.
This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

Lady C. He is a kinsman to the Montague,

Affection makes him false, he speaks not
true;

Some twenty of them fought in this black
strife, 175

And all those twenty could but kill one life.
I beg for justice, which thou, Prince, must give:

Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prin. Romeo slew him; he slew Mercutio.
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe? 180

Mon. Not Romeo, Prince; he was Mercutio's friend;

His fault concludes but what the law should
end,

The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offence,
Immediately we do exile him hence. 184
I have an interest in your hate's proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie
a-bleeding;

But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine
That you shall all repent the loss of mine.
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses,
Nor tears nor prayers shall purchase out abuses; 190

Therefore use none. Let Romeo hence in
haste,

Else when he is found that hour is his last.

Bear hence this body, and attend our will:
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Capulet's orchard.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds Towards Phœbus' lodging; such a waggoner

As Phaethon would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately.
Spread thy close curtain, love-performing
night, 5

That runaways' eyes may wink, and
Romeo

Leap to these arms, untalk'd of and unseen.
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites
By their own beauties; or if love be blind,
It best agrees with night. Come, civil night,
Thou sober-suited matron, all in black, 11
And learn me how to lose a winning match,
Play'd for a pair of stainless maidenhoods; Hood my unmann'd blood, bating in my
cheeks,

With thy black mantle, till strange love,
grown bold, 15

Think true love acted simple modesty.
Come, night; come, Romeo; come, thou day in night;

For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night
Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.

Come, gentle night, come, loving blackbrow'd night, 20

Give me my Romeo; and, when he shall
die,

Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish sun. 25
O, I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess'd it; and though I am
sold,

Not yet enjoy'd. So tedious is this day
As is the night before some festival 29

To an impatient child that hath new robes,
And may not wear them. O, here comes my nurse,

Enter Nurse with cords.

And she brings news; and every tongue that speaks

But Romeo's name speaks heavenly eloquence.

Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there? The cords

That Romeo bid thee fetch?

Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords. 35
[Throws them down.]

Jul. Ay, me! what news? Why dost thou wring thy hands?

Nurse. Ah, well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead.

We are undone, lady, we are undone.

Alack the day ! he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead.

Jul. Can heaven be so envious ?

Nurse. Romeo can, 40
Though heaven cannot. O Romeo,
Romeo !

Who ever would have thought it ? Romeo !

Jul. What devil art thou that dost torment me thus ?

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself ? Say thou but 'I', 45

And that bare vowel I shall poison more Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice.
I am not I if there be such an 'I' ;
Or those eyes shut that makes thee answer
'I'. 49

If he be slain, say 'I' ; or if not, 'No' ;
Brief sounds determine of my weal or woe.

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes—
God save the mark !—here on his manly breast.

A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse ;
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood, 55
All in gore-blood. I swooned at the sight.

Jul. O, break, my heart ! poor bankrupt, break at once !

To prison, eyes ; ne'er look on liberty.
Vile earth, to earth resign ; end motion
here ; 59

And thou and Romeo press one heavy bier !

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend
I had !

O courteous Tybalt ! honest gentleman !
That ever I should live to see thee dead !

Jul. What storm is this that blows so
contrary ? 64

Is Romeo slaught' red, and is Tybalt dead ?
My dearest cousin and my dearer lord ?
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom ;

For who is living if those two are gone ?

Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished ;

Romeo that kill'd him, he is banished. 70

Jul. O God ! Did Romeo's hand shed
Tybalt's blood ?

Nurse. It did, it did ; alas the day, it did !

Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flow'ring
face !

Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave ?
Beautiful tyrant ! fiend angelical ! 75

Dove-feather'd raven ! wolfish-ravens
lamb !

Despised substance of divinest show !
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned saint, an honourable villain !

O nature, what hadst thou to do in hell, 80
When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend

In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh ?
Was ever book containing such vile matter

So fairly bound ? O, that deceit should dwell

In such a gorgeous palace !

Nurse. There's no trust, 85
No faith, no honesty in men ; all perjur'd,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.
Ah, where's my man ? Give me some aqua vitæ.

These griefs, these woes, these sorrows,
make me old.

Shame come to Romeo !

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue 90
For such a wish ! He was not born to
shame :

Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit ;
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd

Sole monarch of the universal earth.
O, what a beast was I to chide at him ! 95

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin ?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband ?

Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth
thy name,

When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled it ?

But wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin ? 100

That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband.

Back, foolish tears, back to your native
spring ;

Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.

My husband lives that Tybalt would have
slain, 105

And Tybalt's dead that would have slain
my husband.

All this is comfort ; wherefore weep I
then ?

Some word there was, worser than Tybalt's
death,

That murd' red me ; I would forget it fain,
But, O, it presses to my memory 110

Like damned guilty deeds to sinners'
minds :

'Tybalt is dead, and Romeo banished'.
That 'banished', that one word 'banished',

Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's
death

Was woe enough, if it had ended there ; 115
Or if sour woe delights in fellowship

And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,
Why followed not, when she said 'Tybalt's
dead',

Thy father or thy mother, nay, or both,
Which modern lamentation might have mov'd ? 120

But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's
death,

'Romeo is banished'—to speak that word
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,

All slain, all dead. 'Romeo is banished'—

There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that word's death; no words can that woe sound. 126

Where is my father and my mother, nurse?
Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse.

Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears!
Mine shall be spent, 130

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banish-
ment.

Take up those cords. Poor ropes, you are beguil'd,

Both you and I, for Romeo is exil'd;
He made you for a highway to my bed,

But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed. 135

Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding-bed;

And death, not Romeo, take my maiden-
head!

Nurse. Hie to your chamber; I'll find
Romeo

To comfort you. I wot well where he is.
Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night.

I'll to him; he is hid at Lawrence's cell.

Jul. O, find him! give this ring to my true knight, 142

And bid him come to take his last farewell.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Friar Lawrence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE.

Fri. L. Romeo, come forth; come forth,
thou fearful man;

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Father, what news? What is the Prince's doom?

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my
hand 5

That I yet know not?
Fri. L. Too familiar

Is my dear son with such sour company;
I bring thee tidings of the Prince's doom.

Rom. What less than doomsday is the Prince's doom?

Fri. L. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lips— 10

Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha, banishment! Be merciful, say
'death';

For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death. Do not say 'banish-
ment'.

Fri. L. Here from Verona art thou banished. 15

Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona
walls,

But purgatory, torture, hell itself.

Hence banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death. Then 'banished'
Is death mis-term'd; calling death 'banished', 21

Thou cut'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smilest upon the stroke that murders
me.

Fri. L. O deadly sin! O rude unthank-fulness!

Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind
Prince, 25

Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banishment.

This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy;
heaven is here 29

Where Juliet lives, and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,

Live here in heaven and may look on her;
But Romeo may not. More validity,

More honourable state, more courtship
lives

In carrion flies than Romeo. They may seize 35

On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips;

Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses
sin;

But Romeo may not—he is banished. 40

This may flies do, when I from this must fly;
They are free men, but I am banished.

And sayest thou yet that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-

ground knife,
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean, 45

But 'banished' to kill me—'banished'?
O friar, the damned use that word in hell;

Howling attends it; how hast thou the
heart,

Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd, 50

To mangle me with that word 'banished'?

Fri. L. Thou fond mad man, hear me a little speak.

Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banish-
ment.

Fri. L. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy, 55

To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet 'banished'? Hang up philosophy;

Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,

It helps not, it prevails not. Talk no more.

Fri. L. O, then I see that madmen have no ears. 61

Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. L. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel.
Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love, 65
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then mightst thou speak, then mightst thou tear thy hair,
And fall upon the ground, as I do now, 69
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.
[Knocking within.
Fri. L. Arise; one knocks. Good Romeo, hide thyself.
Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick groans,
Mist-like, enfold me from the search of eyes.
[Knocking.
Fri. L. Hark how they knock! Who's there? Romeo, arise;
Thou wilt be taken.—Stay awhile.—Stand up;
Run to my study.—By and by.—God's will, 76
What simpleness is this!—I come, I come.
[Knocking.
Who knocks so hard? Whence come you? What's your will?
Nurse. [Within] Let me come in and you shall know my errand;
I come from Lady Juliet.
Fri. L. Welcome, then. 80
Enter Nurse.
Nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar, Where's my lady's lord, where's Romeo?
Fri. L. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.
Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress' case, Just in her case!
Fri. L. O woeful sympathy! Piteous predicament!
Nurse. Even so lies she, 85
Blubb'ring and weeping, weeping and blubb'ring.
Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man;
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O? 90
Rom. Nurse!
Nurse. Ah, sir! ah, sir! Well, death's the end of all.
Rom. Spakest thou of Juliet? How is it with her?
Doth not she think me an old murderer, 94
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood remov'd but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says
My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?
Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;
And now falls on her bed, and then starts up, 100

And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.
Rom. As if that name, Shot from the deadly level of a gun, Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand Murder'd her kinsman. O, tell me, friar, tell me, 105
In what vile part of this anatomy Doth my name lodge? Tell me that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Drawing his sword.
Fri. L. Hold thy desperate hand. Art thou a man? Thy form cries out thou art:
Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote 110
The unreasonable fury of a beast. Unseemly woman in a seeming man! And ill-beseeming beast in seeming both! Thou hast amaz'd me. By my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd. Hast thou slain Tybalt? Wilt thou slay thyself? 116
And slay thy lady that in thy life lives, By doing damned hate upon thyself? Why raillest thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?
Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet 120
In thee at once; which thou at once wouldst lose.
Fie, fie! thou shamest thy shape, thy love, thy wit;
Which, like a usurer, abound'st in all, And usest none in that true use indeed
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit. 125
Thy noble shape is but a form of wax, Digressing from the valour of a man; Thy dear love sworn but hollow perjury, Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish;
Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love, Misshapen in the conduct of them both, Like powder in a skillless soldier's flask, Is set afire by thine own ignorance, And thou dismemb'rd with thine own defence. 134
What, rouse thee, man! Thy Juliet is alive, For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy. Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slewest Tybalt; there art thou happy too.
The law, that threat'ned death, becomes thy friend,
And turns it to exile; there art thou happy. 140
A pack of blessings lights upon thy back; Happiness courts thee in her best array;

But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench,
Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love.
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable. 145

Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed, Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort
her.

But look thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua,
Where thou shalt live till we can find a
time 150

To blaze your marriage, reconcile your
friends,

Beg pardon of the Prince, and call thee
back

With twenty hundred thousand times more
joy

Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.
Go before, nurse; commend me to thy
lady; 155

And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto;
Romeo is coming.

Nurse. O Lord, I could have stay'd here
all the night 159

To hear good counsel; O, what learning is!
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you, sir.

Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.
[Exit.]

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by
this! 165

Fri. L. Go hence; good night; and here stands all your state:

Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguis'd from
hence.

Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time 170
Every good hap to you that chances here.
Give me thy hand. 'Tis late; farewell;
good night.

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out
on me,

It were a grief so brief to part with thee.
Farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Capulet's house.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and PARIS.

Cap. Things have fall'n out, sir, so unluckily

That we have had no time to move our
daughter.

Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt
dearly,

And so did I. Well, we were born to die.
'Tis very late; she'll not come down to-
night. 5

I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been abed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo.

Madam, good night; commend me to your
daughter.

Lady C. I will, and know her mind early
to-morrow; 10

To-night she's mew'd up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate
tender

Of my child's love. I think she will be rul'd

In all respects by me; nay, more, I doubt
it not.

Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed; 15
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love

And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday
next—

But, soft! what day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord.

Cap. Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon.

A Thursday let it be; a Thursday, tell
her, 20

She shall be married to this noble earl.
Will you be ready? Do you like this haste?

We'll keep no great ado—a friend or two;
For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,

It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much; 26

Therefore we'll have some half a dozen
friends,

And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone; a Thursday be
it then. 30

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed;
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day.

Farewell, my lord. Light to my chamber,
ho!

Afore me, it is so very very late
That we may call it early by and by. 35

Good night. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Capulet's orchard.

Enter ROMEO and JULIET, aloft.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? It is not yet near day;

It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yond pomegranate tree.

Believe me, love, it was the nightingale. 5

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,

No nightingale. Look, love, what envious streaks

Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east; Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund
day 9

Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops.
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. Yond light is not daylight ; I know it, I :

It is some meteor that the sun exhales
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua ; 15
Therefore stay yet ; thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death ;

I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
I'll say yon grey is not the morning's eye,
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow ;
Nor that is not the lark whose notes do beat
The vaulty heaven so high above our heads.
I have more care to stay than will to go.
Come death, and welcome ! Juliet wills it so.

How is't, my soul ? Let's talk—it is not day. 25

Jul. It is, it is ; hie hence, be gone, away !
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.

Some say the lark makes sweet division ;
This doth not so, for she divideth us. 30
Some say the lark and loathed toad change eyes ;

O, now I would they had chang'd voices too !

Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,

Hunting thee hence with hunts-up to the day.

O, now be gone ! More light and light it grows. 35

Rom. More light and light—more dark and dark our woes !

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam !

Jul. Nurse ?

Nurse. Your lady mother is coming to your chamber.

The day is broke ; be wary, look about. 40
[Exit.]

Jul. Then, window, let day in and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell ! One kiss, and I'll descend. [He goeth down.]

Jul. Art thou gone so, love—lord, ay, husband, friend !

I must hear from thee every day in the hour,

For in a minute there are many days ; 45
O, by this count I shall be much in years

Ere I again behold my Romeo !

Rom. Farewell !

I will omit no opportunity

That may convey my greetings, love, to thee. 50

Jul. O, think'st thou we shall ever meet again ?

Rom. I doubt it not ; and all these woes shall serve

For sweet discourses in our times to come.

Jul. O God, I have an ill-divining soul !
Methinks I see thee, now thou art below, 55
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb ;
Either my eyesight fails or thou look'st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you ;

Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu, adieu !
[Exit below.]

Jul. O Fortune, Fortune ! all men call thee fickle. 60

If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith ? Be fickle, Fortune ;

For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,

But send him back.

Lady C. [Within] Ho, daughter ! are you up ?

Jul. Who is't that calls ? It is my lady mother. 65

Is she not down so late, or up so early ?
What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither ?

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady C. Why, how now, Juliet !

Jul. Madam, I am not well.

Lady C. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death ?

What, wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears ? 70

An if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live ;

Therefore have done. Some grief shows much of love ;

But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

Lady C. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend 75

Which you weep for.

Jul. Feeling so the loss,
I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

Lady C. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death

As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.

Jul. What villain, madam ?

Lady C. That same villain, Romeo.

Jul. [Aside] Villain and he be many miles asunder !— 80

God pardon him ! I do, with all my heart ;
And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart.

Lady C. That is because the traitor murderer lives.

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands. 85

Would none but I might venge my cousin's death !

Lady C. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not;

Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua—

Where that same banish'd runagate doth
live—

Shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram
That he shall soon keep Tybalt company;
And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo till I behold him—dead—
Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd. 95
Madam, if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it,
That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof, Soon sleep in quiet. O, how my heart abhors

To hear him nam'd, and cannot come to
him, 100

To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him!

Lady C. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.

But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.

Jul. And joy comes well in such a needy
time. 105

What are they, beseech your ladyship?

Lady C. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child;

One who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy

That thou expects not, nor I look'd not for. 110

Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is
that?

Lady C. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn

The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
The County Paris, at Saint Peter's Church, Shall happily make thee there a joyful
bride. 115

Jul. Now, by Saint Peter's Church, and Peter too,

He shall not make me there a joyful bride.
I wonder at this haste, that I must wed

Ere he that should be husband comes to
woo. 119

I pray you tell my lord and father, madam,
I will not marry yet; and when I do, I
swear

It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
Rather than Paris. These are news indeed!

Lady C. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself, 124

And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter CAPULET and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew;

But for the sunset of my brother's son
It rains downright.

How now! a conduit, girl? What, still in
tears? 129

Evermore show'ring? In one little body

Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind;
For still thy eyes, which I may call the
sea,

Do ebb and flow with tears. The bark thy body is,

Sailing in this salt flood; the winds thy
sighs,

Who, raging with thy tears, and they with
them, 135

Without a sudden calm will overset
Thy tempest-tossed body. How now, wife!

Have you delivered to her our decree?

Lady C. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks. 139

I would the fool were married to her grave!

Cap. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife.

How will she none? Doth she not give us
thanks?

Is she not proud? Doth she not count her
blest,

Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom? 145

Jul. Not proud you have, but thankful that you have.

Proud can I never be of what I hate,
But thankful even for hate that is meant
love.

Cap. How how, how how, chopt logic!
What is this?

'Proud'—and 'I thank you'—and 'I thank you not'— 150

And yet 'not proud'? Mistress minion,
you,

Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no
prouds,

But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday
next,

To go with Paris to Saint Peter's Church,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither. 155

Out, you green-sickness carrion! Out, you baggage!

You tallow-face!

Lady C. Fie, fie! what, are you mad?

Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,

Hear me with patience but to speak a word.

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch! 160

I tell thee what—get thee to church a
Thursday,

Or never after look me in the face.

Speak not, reply not, do not answer me;
My fingers itch. Wife, we scarce thought us blest 164

That God had lent us but this only child;
But now I see this one is one too much,

And that we have a curse in having her.
Out on her, hilding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!
You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my Lady Wisdom? Hold your tongue, 170

Good Prudence ; smatter with your gossips,
go.

Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. O, God-i-goden !

Nurse. May not one speak ?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool !
Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,
For here we need it not.

Lady C. You are too hot. 175

Cap. God's bread ! it makes me mad :
Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play, Alone, in company, still my care hath been
To have her match'd ; and having now provided

A gentleman of noble parentage, 180
Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd,

Stuff'd, as they say, with honourable parts, Proportion'd as one's thought would wish a
man—

And then to have a wretched puling fool,
A whining mammet, in her fortune's
tender, 185

To answer ' I'll not wed, I cannot love,
I am too young, I pray you pardon me ' !
But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you.
Graze where you will, you shall not house
with me. 189

Look to 't, think on't ; I do not use to jest.
Thursday is near ; lay hand on heart,
advise :

An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend ;
An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die in the
streets,

For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge
thee, 194

Nor what is mine shall never do thee good.
Trust to 't, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn.

[Exit.

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds
That sees into the bottom of my grief ?
O, sweet my mother, cast me not away !
Delay this marriage for a month, a week ;
Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed 201
In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

Lady C. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word ;

Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

[Exit.

Jul. O God !—O nurse ! how shall this be prevented ? 205

My husband is on earth, my faith in
heaven ;

How shall that faith return again to earth,
Unless that husband send it me from
heaven

By leaving earth ? Comfort me, counsel
me.

Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems 210

Upon so soft a subject as myself !
What say'st thou ! Hast thou not a word of joy ?

Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse.

Faith, here it is :

Romeo is banished ; and all the world to nothing

That he dares ne'er come back to challenge
you ; 215

Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then, since the case so stands as now it
doth,

I think it best you married with the County.

O, he's a lovely gentleman !

Romeo 's a dishclout to him ; an eagle,
madam, 220

Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye
As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,

I think you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your first ; or, if it did not,

Your first is dead, or 'twere as good he
were 225

As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speak'st thou from thy heart ?

Nurse. And from my soul too, else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen !

Nurse. What ? 230

Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much.

Go in ; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeas'd my father, to Lawrence's cell

To make confession, and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will ; and this is wisely done. [Exit. 236

Jul. Ancient damnation ! O most wicked
fiend ! 236

Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn,
Or to dispraise my lord with that same
tongue

Which she hath prais'd him with above compare 239

So many thousand times ? Go, counsellor !
Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be
twain.

I'll to the friar to know his remedy ;

If all else fail, myself have power to die.
[Exit. 240

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Friar Lawrence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE and COUNTY PARIS.

Fri. L. On Thursday, sir ? The time is very short.

Par. My father Capulet will have it so,
And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.

Fri. L. You say you do not know the lady's mind ;

Uneven is the course ; I like it not. 5

Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's
death,

And therefore have I little talk'd of love ;
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.

Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous
That she do give her sorrow so much sway,

And in his wisdom hastes our marriage, 11
To stop the inundation of her tears ;
Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society.

Now do you know the reason of this haste.

Fri. L. [Aside] I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.— 16

Look, sir, here comes the lady toward my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady and my wife !

Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.

Par. That may be must be, love, on Thursday next. 20

Jul. What must be shall be.

Fri. L. That's a certain text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this
father ?

Jul. To answer that, I should confess to
you.

Par. Do not deny to him that you love
me. 24

Jul. I will confess to you that I love him.

Par. So will ye, I am sure, that you love
me.

Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price Being spoke behind your back than to your face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.

Jul. The tears have got small victory by
that, 30

For it was bad enough before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it more than tears with that report.

Jul. That is no slander, sir, which is a
truth ;

And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast sland'ed it. 35

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.

Are you at leisure, holy father, now,
Or shall I come to you at evening mass ?

Fri. L. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now.

My lord, we must entreat the time alone. 40

Par. God shield I should disturb devotion !

Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse ye ;
Till then, adieu, and keep this holy kiss. [Exit.

Jul. O, shut the door, and when thou hast done so,

Come weep with me—past hope, past cure,
past help. 45

Fri. L. O, Juliet, I already know thy
grief ;

It strains me past the compass of my wits.
I hear thou must, and nothing may pro-
rogate it,

On Thursday next be married to this County.

Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st
of this, 50

Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it ;
If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help,
Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife I'll help it presently.

God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands ; 55

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo's seal'd,
Shall be the label to another deed,

Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
Turn to another, this shall slay them both.

Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time,
Give me some present counsel ; or, behold,

'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody
knife

Shall play the umpire, arbitrating that
Which the commission of thy years and art

Could to no issue of true honour bring. 65

Be not so long to speak ; I long to die,
If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.

Fri. L. Hold, daughter ; I do spy a kind of hope,

Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desperate which we would prevent. 70

If, rather than to marry County Paris, Thou hast the strength of will to slay
thyself,

Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,

That cop'st with death himself to scape
from it ; 75

And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry
Paris,

From off the battlements of any tower,
Or walk in thievish ways, or bid me lurk

Where serpents are ; chain me with roaring
bears, 80

Or hide me nightly in a charnel house,
O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling
bones,

With reeky shanks and yellow chapless
skulls ;

Or bid me go into a new-made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud— 85

Things that, to hear them told, have made me tremble—

And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.

Fri. L. Hold, then ; go home, be merry, give consent 89

To marry Paris. Wednesday is to-morrow ;
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,

Let not the nurse lie with thee in thy chamber.

Take thou this vial, being then in bed,
And this distilled liquor drink thou off ;

When presently through all thy veins shall
run 95

A cold and drowsy humour ; for no pulse
Shall keep his native progress, but surcease ;

No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou livest ;

The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To paly ashes, thy eyes' windows fall, ¹⁰⁰
Like death when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, depriv'd of supple government, Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like
death ;

And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death ¹⁰⁴

Thou shalt continue two and forty hours,
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
Now, when the bridegroom in the morning
comes

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou
dead.

Then, as the manner of our country is,
In thy best robes, uncovered on the bier, Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault ¹¹¹

Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
In the meantime, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come ; and he and I
Will watch thy waking, and that very night
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present
shame,

If no inconstant toy nor womanish fear
Abate thy valour in the acting it. ¹²⁰

Jul. Give me, give me ! O, tell not me of fear !

Fri. L. Hold ; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve. I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love give me strength ! and strength shall help afford. ¹²⁵

Farewell, dear father ! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Capulet's house.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, Nurse, and two or three Servingmen.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ. [Exit a Servingman.]

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

Serv. You shall have none ill, sir ; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so ? ⁵

Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers ; therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with
me.

Cap. Go, be gone.

[Exit second Servingman.]

We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time. ¹⁰

What, is my daughter gone to Friar Lawrence ?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her :

A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See where she comes from shrift with merry look. ¹⁵

Cap. How now, my headstrong ! Where have you been gadding ?

Jul. Where I have learnt me to repent the sin

Of disobedient opposition

To you and your behests ; and am enjoin'd
By holy Lawrence to fall prostrate here, ²⁰
'lo beg your pardon. Pardon, I beseech
you.

Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.

Cap. Send for the County ; go tell him
of this.

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Lawrence's cell, ²⁵

And gave him what becomed love I might,
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on't ; this is well—
stand up—

This is as't should be. Let me see the County ; ²⁹

Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.
Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar,
All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet

To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow ?

Lady C. No, not till Thursday ; there is time enough. ³⁶

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her. We'll to church to-morrow.

[Exeunt Juliet and Nurse.]

Lady C. We shall be short in our provision ;

'Tis now near night.

Cap. Tush, I will stir about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee,
wife. ⁴⁶

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her ;
I'll not to bed to-night ; let me alone.

I'll play the huswife for this once. What ho !

They are all forth ; well, I will walk myself
To County Paris, to prepare up him ⁴

Against to-morrow. My heart is wondrous light

Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd
[Exeunt]

SCENE III. Juliet's chamber.

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best ; but gentle nurse,

I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night,
For I have need of many orisons

To move the heavens to smile upon my
state,

Which well thou knowest is cross and full of sin. 5

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady C. What, are you busy, ho? Need you my help?

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries

As are behoveful for our state to-morrow.
So please you, let me now be left alone, 9
And let the nurse this night sit up with
you;

For I am sure you have your hands full all
In this so sudden business.

Lady C. Good night.

Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast
need.

[Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.]

Jul. Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins, 15

That almost freezes up the heat of life;
I'll call them back again to comfort me.

Nurse!—What should she do here?

My dismal scene I needs must act alone.

Come, vial. 20

What if this mixture do not work at all?

Shall I be married, then, to-morrow morning?

No, no; this shall forbid it. Lie thou there.

[Laying down her dagger.]

What if it be a poison which the friar

Subtly hath minist'ring to have me dead, 25

Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,

Because he married me before to Romeo?
I fear it is; and yet methinks it should
not,

For he hath still been tried a holy man.

How if, when I am laid into the tomb, 30

I wake before the time that Romeo

Come to redeem me? There's a fearful point.

Shall I not then be stifled in the vault,

To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in,

And there die strangled ere my Romeo
comes? 35

Or, if I live, is it not very like

The horrible conceit of death and night,

Together with the terror of the place—

As in a vault, an ancient receptacle

Where for this many hundred years the bones 40

Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;

Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in
earth,

Lies fest'ring in his shroud; where, as they
say,

At some hours in the night spirits resort—

Alack, alack, is it not like that I, 45

So early waking—what with loathsome smells,

And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the
earth,

That living mortals, hearing them, run
mad—

O, if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environed with all these hideous fears, 50

And madly play with my forefathers'
joints,

And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his
shroud,

And, in this rage, with some great kins-man's bone,

As with a club, dash out my desp'rate brains? 54

O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body

Upon a rapier's point. Stay, Tybalt, stay.
Romeo, I come. This do I drink to thee.

[She drinks and falls upon her bed within the curtains.]

SCENE IV. Capulet's house.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady C. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! The second cock hath crow'd,

The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock.

Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica; 5

Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, you cot-quean, go,

Get you to bed; faith, you'll be sick tomorrow

For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit; what! I have watch'd ere now

All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick. 10

Lady C. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time;

But I will watch you from such watching
now.

[Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.]

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!

Enter three or four Servingmen with spits and logs and baskets.

Now, fellow,

What is there?

1 Fellow. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what. 15

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit
1 Fellow] Sirrah, fetch drier logs;

Call Peter; he will show thee where they are.

2 Fellow. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter.

Cap. Mass, and well said; a merry whoreson, ha! 20

Thou shalt be logger-head. [Exit 2 Fellow]
 Good faith, 'tis day ;
 The County will be here with music straight,
 For so he said he would. [Play music] I hear him near.
 Nurse ! Wife ! What, ho ! What, nurse,
 I say !

Re-enter Nurse.

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up ;
 I'll go and chat with Paris. Hie, make
 haste,
 Make haste. The bridegroom he is come
 already.
 Make haste, I say. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Juliet's chamber.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress ! What, mistress ! Juliet !
 Fast, I warrant her, she.
 Why, lamb ! Why, lady ! Fie, you slug-a-
 bed !
 Why, love, I say ! madam ! sweetheart !
 Why, bride !
 What, not a word ? You take your pennyworths now.
 Sleep for a week ; for the next night, I warrant,
 The County Paris hath set up his rest
 That you shall rest but little. God forgive
 me !
 Marry, and amen. How sound is she asleep !
 I needs must wake her. Madam, madam,
 madam !
 Ay, let the County take you in your bed ;
 He'll fright you up, i' faith. Will it not be ?
 [Draws the curtains.]
 What, dress'd, and in your clothes, and down again !
 I must needs wake you. Lady ! lady ! lady !
 Alas, alas ! Help, help ! my lady's dead !
 O well-a-day that ever I was born !
 Some aqua-vitæ, ho ! My lord ! My lady !

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady C. What noise is here ?
Nurse. O lamentable day !
Lady C. What is the matter ?
Nurse. Look, look ! O heavy day !
Lady C. O me, O me ! My child, my only
 life,
 Revive, look up, or I will die with thee !
 Help, help ! Call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth ; her lord is come.
Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead ;
 alack the day !
Lady C. Alack the day, she's dead, she's dead, she's dead !
Cap. Ha ! let me see her. Out, alas ! she's
 cold ;

Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff.
 Life and these lips have long been separated.
 Death lies on her like an untimely frost
 Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Nurse. O lamentable day !
Lady C. O woeful time !
Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,
 Ties up my tongue and will not let me
 speak.

*Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE and COUNTY
 PARIS, with Musicians.*

Fri. L. Come, is the bride ready to go to church ?
Cap. Ready to go, but never to return.
 O son, the night before thy wedding day Hath Death lain with thy wife. There she lies,
 Flower as she was, deflowered by him.
 Death is my son-in-law, Death is my heir ;
 My daughter he hath wedded ; I will die,
 And leave him all ; life, living, all is Death's.
Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's face,
 And doth it give me such a sight as this ?
Lady C. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day !
 Most miserable hour that e'er time saw
 In lasting labour of his pilgrimage !
 But one, poor one, one poor and loving
 child,
 But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
 And cruel Death hath catch'd it from my
 sight !
Nurse. O woe ! O woeful, woeful, woeful
 day !
 Most lamentable day, most woeful day
 That ever, ever, I did yet behold !
 O day ! O day ! O day ! O hateful day !
 Never was seen so black a day as this.
 O woeful day, O woeful day !
Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited,
 slain !
 Most detestable Death, by thee beguil'd,
 By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown !
 O love ! O life !—not life, but love in
 death !
Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, mar-tyr'd, kill'd !—
 Uncomfortable time, why cam'st thou now
 To murder, murder our solemnity ?
 O child ! O child ! my soul, and not my child !
 Dead art thou ; alack, my child is dead,
 And with my child my joys are buried.
Fri. L. Peace, ho, for shame ! Confusion's cure lives not
 In these confusions. Heaven and yourself Had part in this fair maid ; now heaven hath all,
 And all the better is it for the maid.

Your part in her you could not keep from death,

But heaven keeps his part in eternal life. 70
The most you sought was her promotion,
For 'twas your heaven she should be advanc'd ;

And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself ?
O, in this love, you love your child so ill 75
That you run mad, seeing that she is well.

She's not well married that lives married long,
But she's best married that dies married young.

Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse, and, as the custom is, 80
In all her best array bear her to church ;
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things that we ordained festival
Turn from their office to black funeral : 85
Our instruments to melancholy bells,
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast,
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change ;
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse ;
And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. L. Sir, go you in ; and, madam, go with him ; 91

And go, Sir Paris. Every one prepare
To follow this fair corse unto her grave.
The heavens do lour upon you for some ill ;
Move them no more by crossing their high will. 95

[Exeunt all but Nurse and Musicians.]

1 Mus. Faith, we may put up our pipes and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up, put up ;

For well you know this is a pitiful case. [Exit.]

1 Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended. 99

Enter PETER.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, 'Heart's ease', 'Heart's ease' ! O, an you will have me live, play 'Heart's ease'.

1 Mus. Why 'Heart's ease' ?

Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays 'My heart is full of woe'. O, play me some merry dump to comfort me. 105

1 Mus. Not a dump we ! 'Tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not, then ?

1 Mus. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

1 Mus. What will you give us ? 110

Pet. No money, on my faith, but the gleek. I will give you the minstrel.

1 Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no

crotchets : I'll re you, I'll fa you ; do you note me ? 116

1 Mus. An you re us and fa us, you note us.

2 Mus. Pray you put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit ! I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger. Answer me like men.

'When griping grief the heart doth wound
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music with her silver sound'— 125

Why 'silver sound' ? Why 'music with her silver sound' ? What say you, Simon Catling ?

1 Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty ! What say you, Hugh Rebeck ? 130

2 Mus. I say 'silver sound' because musicians sound for silver.

Pet. Pretty too ! What say you, James Soundpost ?

3 Mus. Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy, you are the singer ; I will say for you. It is 'music with her silver sound' because musicians have no gold for sounding. 137

'Then music with her silver sound
With speedy help doth lend redress.'

[Exit.]

1 Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same !

2 Mus. Hang him, Jack ! Come, we'll in here ; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner. [Exeunt.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Mantua. A street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,

My dreams presage some joyful news at hand.

My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne,
And all this day an unaccustom'd spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts. 5

I dreamt my lady came and found me dead—

Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave to think !—

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips

That I reviv'd, and was an emperor. 9

Ah me ! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy !

Enter BALTHASAR, Romeo's man.

News from Verona ! How now, Balthasar !

Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar ?

How doth my lady ? Is my father well ?
How fares my Juliet ? That I ask again, 15
For nothing can be ill if she be well.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill.

Her body sleeps in Capels' monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives.
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault, 20
And presently took post to tell it you.
O, pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it e'en so ? Then I defy you, stars.

Thou knowest my lodging : get me ink and paper, 25

And hire post-horses ; I will hence to-night.

Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience ;
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import 28

Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd ;
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do.
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar ?

Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter ; get thee gone,
And hire those horses ; I'll be with thee straight. [Exit Balthasar.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let's see for means. O mischief, thou art swift 35

To enter in the thoughts of desperate men !
I do remember an apothecary,
And hereabouts 'a dwells, which late I noted

In tatt'ed weeds, with overwhelming brows, 39

Culling of simples. Meagre were his looks ;
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones ;
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes ; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes, 45
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,

Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,

Were thinly scattered, to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said
'An if a man did need a poison now, 50
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him'.

O, this same thought did but forerun my need ;

And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house. 55
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.
What, ho ! Apothecary !

Enter Apothecary.

Ap.

Who calls so loud ?

Rom. Come hither, man. I see that thou art poor. 58

Hold, there is forty ducats ; let me have A dram of poison, such soon-speeding gear
As will disperse itself through all the veins
That the life-weary taker may fall dead,
And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath

As violently as hasty powder fir'd 64
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have ; but Mantua's law

Is death to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretchedness

And fearest to die ? Famine is in thy cheeks, 69

Need and oppression starveth in thy eyes,
Contempt and beggary hangs upon thy back,

The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law ;

The world affords no law to make thee rich ;
Then be not poor, but break it and take this.

Ap. My poverty but not my will consents. 75

Rom. I pay thy poverty and not thy will.

Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will
And drink it off ; and if you had the strength

Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold—worse poison to men's souls, 80

Doing more murder in this loathsome world
Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell.

I sell thee poison : thou hast sold me none.
Farewell ; buy food, and get thyself in flesh. 84

Come, cordial and not poison, go with me
To Juliet's grave ; for there must I use thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Friar Lawrence's cell.

Enter FRIAR JOHN.

Fri. J. Holy Franciscan friar ! Brother, ho !

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE.

Fri. L. This same should be the voice of Friar John.

Welcome from Mantua ! What says Romeo ?

Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter

Fri. J. Going to find a barefoot brother out,

One of our order, to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign

Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth, 11

So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Fri. L. Who bare my letter, then, to Romeo?

Fri. J. I could not send it—here it is again—

Nor get a messenger to bring it thee, 15
So fearful were they of infection.

Fri. L. Unhappy fortune! By my brotherhood,

The letter was not nice, but full of charge
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger. Friar John, go hence; 20

Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight Unto my cell.

Fri. J. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee. [Exit.

Fri. L. Now must I to the monument alone.

Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake; 25

She will beshrew me much that Romeo Hath had no notice of these accidents.

But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come—

Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb! [Exit.

SCENE III. Verona. A churchyard; in it the tomb of the Capulets.

Enter PARIS, and his Page bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy; hence, and stand aloof;

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yond yew trees lay thee all along,

Holding thy ear close to the hollow ground;
So shall no foot upon the churchyard

tread— 5
Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves—

But thou shalt hear it. Whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hearest something

approach.

Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. [Aside] I am almost afraid to stand alone 10

Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure. [Retires.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I strew—

O woe, thy canopy is dust and stones!—
Which with sweet water nightly I will dew;

Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans. 15

The obsequies that I for thee will keep,
Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep. [The Page whistles.

The boy gives warning something doth approach.

What cursed foot wanders this way to-night 19

To cross my obsequies and true love's rite?
What, with a torch! Muffle me, night, awhile. [Retires.

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR, with a torch, a mattock, and a crow of iron.

Rom. Give me that mattock and the wrenching iron.

Hold, take this letter; early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
Give me the light; upon thy life I charge thee, 25

Whate'er thou hearest or seest, stand all aloof

And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death

Is partly to behold my lady's face,
But chiefly to take thence from her dead

finger 30
A precious ring—a ring that I must use
In dear employment; therefore hence, be gone.

But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I farther shall intend to do,

By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint, 35
And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs.

The time and my intents are savage-wild,
More fierce and more inexorable far

Than empty tigers or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble ye. 40

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.
Take thou that;

Live and be prosperous; and farewell, good fellow.

Bal. [Aside] For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout;

His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt. [Retires.

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death, 45

Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,

[Breaking open the tomb.
And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food.

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague

That murd'ed my love's cousin—with which grief 50

It is supposed the fair creature died—
And here is come to do some villainous shame

To the dead bodies. I will apprehend him.
Stop thy unhallowed toil, vile Montague.

Can vengeance be pursued further than death? 55

Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee.
Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must indeed; and therefore came I hither.

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desp'rate man ;

Fly hence, and leave me. Think upon these gone ; 60

Let them affright thee. I beseech thee, youth,

Put not another sin upon my head By urging me to fury ; O, be gone !

By heaven, I love thee better than myself, For I come hither arm'd against myself. 65

Stay not, be gone ; live, and hereafter say A madman's mercy bid thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjuration, And apprehend thee for a felon here. 69

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me ? Then have at thee, boy ! [They fight.]

Page. O lord, they fight ! I will go call the watch. [Exit. Paris falls.]

Par. O, I am slain ! If thou be merciful, Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.]

Rom. In faith, I will. Let me peruse this face. 74

Mercutio's kinsman, noble County Paris ! What said my man, when my betossed soul

Did not attend him as we rode ? I think He told me Paris should have married Juliet.

Said he not so, or did I dream it so ? Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet, 80

To think it was so ? O, give me thy hand, One writ with me in sour misfortune's book !

I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave. A grave ? O no ! A lantern, slaught' red

youth ; 84

For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes This vault a feasting presence full of light.

Death, he thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying Paris in the tomb.]

How oft when men are at the point of death

Have they been merry ! Which their keepers call

A lightning before death. O, how may I 90

Call this a lightning ? O my love ! my wife ! Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy

breath,

Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty. Thou art not conquer'd ; beauty's ensign

yet

Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks, 95

And death's pale flag is not advanced there. Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet ?

O, what more favour can I do to thee Than with that hand that cut thy youth in

twain

To sunder his that was thine enemy ? 100

Forgive me, cousin. Ah, dear Juliet, Why art thou yet so fair ? Shall I believe That unsubstantial Death is amorous,

And that the lean abhorred monster keeps Thee here in dark to be his paramour ? 105

For fear of that I still will stay with thee,

And never from this palace of dim night Depart again. Here, here will I remain With worms that are thy chambermaids. O, here

Will I set up my everlasting rest, 110

And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars From this world-wearied flesh. Eyes, look your last.

Arms, take your last embrace. And, lips, O you

The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss

A dateless bargain to engrossing death ! 115

Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide.

Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark.

Here's to my love ! [Drinks] O true apothecary ! 119

Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die. [Falls.]

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE, with lantern, crow, and spade.

Fri. L. Saint Francis be my speed ! How oft to-night

Have my old feet stumbled at graves ! Who's there ?

Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. L. Bliss be upon you ! Tell me, good my friend,

What torch is yond that vainly lends his light 125

To grubs and eyeless skulls ? As I discern, It burneth in the Capels' monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy sir ; and there's my master,

One that you love.

Fri. L. Who is it ?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. L. How long hath he been there ?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. L. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir. 131

My master knows not but I am gone hence,

And fearfully did menace me with death, If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. L. Stay, then, I'll go alone ; fear comes upon me ; 135

O, much I fear some ill unthrifty thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew tree here,

I dreamt my master and another fought, And that my master slew him.

Fri. L. Romeo !

Alack, alack, what blood is this which stains 140

The stony entrance of this sepulchre ?

What mean these masterless and gory swords

To lie discolour'd by this place of peace ?

[Enters the tomb.]

Romeo ! O, pale ! Who else ? What, Paris too ?

And steep'd in blood ? Ah, what an unkind hour ¹⁴⁵

Is guilty of this lamentable chance !

The lady stirs. [Juliet wakes.

Jul. O comfortable friar ! Where is my lord ?

I do remember well where I should be, And there I am. Where is my Romeo ? ¹⁵⁰ [Noise within.

Fri. L. I hear some noise. Lady, come from that nest

Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep ; A greater power than we can contradict Hath thwarted our intents. Come, come away ; ¹⁵⁴

Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead ; And Paris too. Come, I'll dispose of thee Among a sisterhood of holy nuns.

Stay not to question, for the watch is coming ;

Come, go, good Juliet. I dare no longer stay. ¹⁵⁹

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away. [Exit Friar Laurence.

What's here ? A cup, clos'd in my true love's hand ?

Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end. O churl ! drunk all, and left no friendly drop

To help me after ? I will kiss thy lips ; Haply some poison yet doth hang on them, To make me die with a restorative. ¹⁶⁶ [Kisses him.

Thy lips are warm.

1 Watch. [Within] Lead, boy. Which way ?

Jul. Yea, noise ? Then I'll be brief. O happy dagger !

[Snatching Romeo's dagger.

This is thy sheath ; there rust, and let me die.

[She stabs herself and falls on Romeo's body.

Enter Watch, with Paris's Page.

Page. This is the place ; there, where the torch doth burn. ¹⁷⁰

1 Watch. The ground is bloody ; search about the churchyard.

Go, some of you, whoe'er you find attach. [Exeunt some of the Watch.

Pitiful sight ! here lies the County slain ; And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead, Who here hath lain this two days buried. Go, tell the Prince ; run to the Capulets ; Raise up the Montagues ; some others search. [Exeunt others of the Watch.

We see the ground whereon these woes do lie ;

But the true ground of all these piteous woes ¹⁷⁹

We cannot without circumstance describ.

Re-enter some of the Watch with BALTHASAR.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man ; we found him in the churchyard.

1 Watch. Hold him in safety till the Prince come hither.

Re-enter FRIAR LAWRENCE and another Watchman.

3 Watch. Here is a friar that trembles, sighs, and weeps ; We took this mattock and this spade from him,

As he was coming from this churchyard's side. ¹⁸⁵

1 Watch. A great suspicion ; stay the friar too.

Enter the PRINCE and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up, That calls our person from our morning rest ?

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and Others.

Cap. What should it be that is so shriek'd abroad ?

Lady C. The people in the street cry ' Romeo ', ¹⁹⁰

Some ' Juliet ' and some ' Paris ' ; and all run,

With open outcry, toward our monument. Prince. What fear is this which startles in our ears ?

1 Watch. Sovereign, here lies the County Paris slain ; ¹⁹⁴

And Romeo dead ; and Juliet, dead before, Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

1 Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man,

With instruments upon them fit to open These dead men's tombs. ²⁰⁰

Cap. O heavens ! O wife, look how our daughter bleeds !

This dagger hath mista'en, for, lo, his house Is empty on the back of Montague,

And it mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.

Lady C. O me ! this sight of death is as a bell ²⁰⁵

That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and Others.

Prince. Come, Montague, for thou art early up

To see thy son and heir more early down. Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night ;

Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath. ²¹⁰

What further woe conspires against mine age ?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught ! what manners is in this,
To press before thy father to a grave ?
Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while, ²¹⁵
Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent ;
And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death. Meantime forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience. ²²⁰
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.
Fri. L. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place Doth make against me, of this direful
murder ;
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge ²²⁵
Myself condemned and myself excus'd.
Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.
Fri. L. I will be brief, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.
Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet ; ²³⁰
And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful
wife.
I married them ; and their stol'n marriage-
day
Was Tybalt's doomsday, whose untimely
death
Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city ; ²³⁴
For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.
You, to remove that siege of grief from
her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her
perforce,
To County Paris. Then comes she to me,
And with wild looks bid me devise some
mean
To rid her from this second marriage, ²⁴⁰
Or in my cell there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,
A sleeping potion ; which so took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death. Meantime I writ to Romeo ²⁴⁵
That he should hither come as this dire
night
To help to take her from her borrowed
grave,
Being the time the potion's force should cease. ²⁴⁸
But he which bore my letter, Friar John,
Was stay'd by accident, and yesternight
Return'd my letter back. Then all alone
At the prefixed hour of her waking ²⁵²
Came I to take her from her kindred's vault ;
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo.
But when I came, some minute ere the time

Of her awakening, here untimely lay ²⁵⁷
The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
She wakes ; and I entreated her come forth,
And bear this work of heaven with patience.
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb, ²⁶¹
And she, too desperate, would not go with
me,
But, as it seems, did violence on herself.
All this I know, and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy ; and if ought in this ²⁶⁵
Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrific'd, some hour before his time,
Unto the rigour of severest law.
Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.
Where's Romeo's man ? What can he say to this ? ²⁷⁰
Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's
death ;
And then in post he came from Mantua
To this same place, to this same monument.
This letter he early bid me give his father ;
And threat'ned me with death, going in the vault, ²⁷⁵
If I departed not and left him there.
Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on
it.
Where is the County's page that rais'd the watch ?
Sirrah, what made your master in this
place ?
Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave ; ²⁸⁰
And bid me stand aloof, and so I did.
Anon comes one with light to ope the
tomb ;
And by and by my master drew on him ;
And then I ran away to call the watch.
Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words, ²⁸⁵
Their course of love, the tidings of her
death ;
And here he writes that he did buy a poison
Of a poor pothecary, and therewithal Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.
Where be these enemies ? Capulet,
Montague, ²⁹⁰
See what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
That heaven finds means to kill your joys
with love !
And I, for winking at your discords too, Have lost a brace of kinsmen. All are punish'd.
Cap. O brother Montague, give me thy hand. ²⁹⁵
This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
Can I demand.
Mon. But I can give thee more ;
For I will raise her statue in pure gold,
That whiles Verona by that name is known,
There shall no figure at such rate be set ³⁰⁰
As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo's by his lady's lie— Poor sacrifices of our enmity! Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings; The sun for sorrow will not show his head.	Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things; Some shall be pardon'd and some punished; For never was a story of more woe Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. 309 [Exeunt.]

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Athens. Timon's house.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Mercer, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Pain. I am glad y'are well.

Poet. I have not seen you long; how goes the world?

Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known.

But what particular rarity? What strange,
Which manifold record not matches? See,
Magic of bounty, all these spirits thy power Hath conjur'd to attend! I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both; th' other's a jeweller.

Mer. O, 'tis a worthy lord!

Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man;
breath'd, as it were,

To an untirable and continue goodness. ¹¹
He passes.

Jew. I have a jewel here—

Mer. O, pray let's see't. For the Lord
Timon, sir?

Jew. If he will touch the estimate. But for that—

Poet. When we for recompense have prais'd the vile,

It stains the glory in that happy verse ¹⁷
Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. [Looking at the jewel] 'Tis a good form.

Jew. And rich. Here is a water, look ye.

Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication ²¹

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.
Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes
From whence 'tis nourish'd. The fire i' th' flint

Shows not till it be struck: our gentle flame ²⁵

Provokes itself, and like the current flies
Each bound it chafes. What have you
there?

Pain. A picture, sir. When comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment,
sir.

Let's see your piece.

Pain. 'Tis a good piece. ³⁰

Poet. So 'tis; this comes off well and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable. How this grace Speaks his own standing! What a mental
power

This eye shoots forth! How big imagination ³⁵

Moves in this lip! To th' dumbness of the gesture

One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life.
Here is a touch; is't good?

Poet. I will say of it
It tutors nature. Artificial strife ⁴⁰
Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord is followed!

Poet. The senators of Athens—happy man!

Pain. Look, moe!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors. 45

I have in this rough work shap'd out a man

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug

With amplest entertainment. My free drift Halts not particularly, but moves itself

In a wide sea of tax. No levell'd malice 50

Infects one comma in the course I hold,

But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on, Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I will unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds— 55

As well of glib and slipp'ry creatures as

Of grave and austere quality, tender down

Their services to Lord Timon. His large fortune,

Upon his good and gracious nature hanging, Subdues and properties to his love and

tendance 60

All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer

To Apemantus, that few things loves better

Than to abhor himself; even he drops down

The knee before him, and returns in peace Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together. 65

Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill

Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd. The base o' th' mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures

That labour on the bosom of this sphere

To propagate their states. Amongst them all 70

Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd

One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame,

Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her;

Whose present grace to present slaves and servants

Translates his rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope. 75

This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,

With one man beckon'd from the rest below,

Bowing his head against the steepy mount To climb his happiness, would be well express'd In our condition.

Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on. 80

All those which were his fellows but of late—

Some better than his value—on the moment

Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance,

Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear, Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him 85

Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?

Poet. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood

Spurns down her late beloved, all his dependants,

Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top

Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down, 90

Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. 'Tis common.

A thousand moral paintings I can show That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's More pregnant than words. Yet you do well 95

To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have seen

The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter TIMON, addressing himself courteously to every suitor, a Messenger from Ventidius talking with him; LUCILIUS and other Servants following.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Mess. Ay, my good lord. Five talents is his debt;

His means most short, his creditors most strait.

Your honourable letter he desires 100

To those have shut him up; which failing, Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well. I am not of that feather to shake off

My friend when he must need me. I do know him

A gentleman that well deserves a help, 105

Which he shall have. I'll pay the debt, and free him.

Mess. Your lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him; I will send his ransom;

And being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me.

'Tis not enough to help the feeble up, 110

But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mess. All happiness to your honour! 1Exit.

Enter an Old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so; what of him? 115

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no ? Lucilius !
Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.
Old Ath. This fellow here, Lord Timon, this thy creature, ¹¹⁹
 By night frequents my house. I am a man That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift,

And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd
 Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well ; what further ?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin else,
 On whom I may confer what I have got. ¹²⁵
 The maid is fair, o' th' youngest for a
 bride,

And I have bred her at my dearest cost
 In qualities of the best. This man of thine Attempts her love ; I prithee, noble lord,
 Join with me to forbid him her resort ; ¹³⁰
 Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon.
 His honesty rewards him in itself ;
 It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him ?

Old Ath. She is young and apt : ¹³⁵
 Our own precedent passions do instruct us
 What levity's in youth.

Tim. Love you the maid ?

Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts
 of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,

I call the gods to witness I will choose ¹⁴⁰ Mine heir from forth the beggars of the
 world,

And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
 If she be mated with an equal husband ?

Old Ath. Three talents on the present ; in future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me long ;

To build his fortune I will strain a little, ¹⁴⁶ For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy
 daughter :

What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
 And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord,

Pawn me to this your honour, she is his. ¹⁵⁰

Tim. My hand to thee ; mine honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship.
 Never may

That state or fortune fall into my keeping
 Which is not owed to you !

[Exeunt Lucilius and Old Athenian.]

Poet. [Presenting his poem] Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship ! ¹⁵⁵

Tim. I thank you ; you shall hear from me anon ;

Go not away. What have you there, my friend ?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech

Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.

The painting is almost the natural man ; ¹⁶⁰
 For since dishonour traffics with man's
 nature,

He is but outside ; these pencill'd figures
 are

Even such as they give out. I like your
 work,

And you shall find I like it ; wait attendance

Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve ye ! ¹⁶⁵

Tim. Well fare you, gentleman. Give me
 your hand ;

We must needs dine together. Sir, your jewel

Hath suffered under praise.

Jew. What, my lord ! Dispraise ?

Tim. A mere satiety of commendations ;
 If I should pay you for't as 'tis extoll'd, ¹⁷⁰
 It would unclew me quite.

Jew. My lord, 'tis rated

As those which sell would give ; but you well know

Things of like value, differing in the owners,
 Are prized by their masters. Believe't, dear
 lord,

You mend the jewel by the wearing it. ¹⁷⁵

Tim. Well mock'd.

Enter APEMANTUS.

Mer. No, my good lord ; he speaks the common tongue,

Which all men speak with him.

Tim. Look who comes here ; will you be chid ?

Jew. We'll bear, with your lordship.

Mer. He'll spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus ! ¹⁸¹

Apem. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy
 good morrow ;

When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest.

Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves ?
 Thou know'st them not.

Apem. Are they not Athenians ? ¹⁸⁵

Tim. Yes.

Apem. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus ?

Apem. Thou know'st I do ; I call'd thee
 by thy name.

Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus. ¹⁹⁰

Apem. Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whither art going ?

Apem. To knock out an honest Athen-ian's brains.

Tim. That's a deed thou't die for. ¹⁹⁵

Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by th' law.

Tim. How lik'st thou this picture, Apemantus ?

Apem. The best, for the innocence.

Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it ?

Apem. He wrought better that made the painter ; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. Y'are a dog.

Apem. Thy mother's of my generation ; what's she, if I be a dog ?

Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus ?

Apem. No ; I eat not lords.

Tim. An thou shouldst, thou'dst anger ladies.

Apem. O, they eat lords ; so they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.

Apem. So thou apprehend'st it take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus ?

Apem. Not so well as plain dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth ?

Apem. Not worth my thinking. How now, poet !

Poet. How now, philosopher !

Apem. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one ?

Apem. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet ?

Poet. Yes.

Apem. Then thou liest. Look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feign'd—he is so.

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour. He that loves to be flattered is worthy o' th' flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord !

Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus ?

Apem. E'en as Apemantus does now ; hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself ?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore ?

Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord.—Art not thou a merchant ?

Mer. Ay Apemantus.

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not !

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound thee !

Trumpet sounds. Enter a Messenger.

Tim. What trumpet's that ?

Mess. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse,

All of companionship.

Tim. Pray entertain them ; give them guide to us.

[Exeunt some Attendants.]

You must needs dine with me. Go not you hence

Till I have thank'd you. When dinner's done

Show me this piece. I am joyful of your sights.

Enter ALCIBIADES, with the rest.

Most welcome, sir ! [They salute.]

Apem. So, so, there !

Aches contract and starve your supple joints !

That there should be small love amongst these sweet knaves,

And all this courtesy ! The strain of man's bred out

Into baboon and monkey.

Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed

Most hungrily on your sight.

Tim. Right welcome, sir !

Ere we depart we'll share a bounteous time in different pleasures. Pray you, let us in.

[Exeunt all but Apemantus.]

Enter two Lords.

1 Lord. What time o' day is't, Apemantus ?

Apem. Time to be honest.

1 Lord. That time serves still.

Apem. The more accursed thou that still omit'st it.

2 Lord. Thou art going to Lord Timon's feast.

Apem. Ay ; to see meat fill knaves and wine head fools.

2 Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.

Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.

2 Lord. Why, Apemantus ?

Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.

1 Lord. Hang thyself.

Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding ; make thy requests to thy friend.

2 Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn thee hence.

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels o' th' ass.

1 Lord. He's opposite to humanity.

Come, shall we in

And taste Lord Timon's bounty ? He outgoes

The very heart of kindness.

2 Lord. He pours it out : Plutus, the god of gold,

Is but his steward ; no meed but he repays Sevenfold above itself ; no gift to him

But breeds the giver a return exceeding All use of quittance.

1 Lord. The noblest mind he carries That ever govern'd man.

2 Lord. Long may he live in fortunes ! Shall we in ?

1 Lord. I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A room of state in Timon's house.

Hautboys playing loud music. A great banquet serv'd in; FLAVIUS and Others attending; and then enter LORD TIMON, the States, the Athenian Lords, VENTIDIUS, which Timon redeem'd from prison. Then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS, discontentedly, like himself.

Ven. Most honoured Timon,
It hath pleas'd the gods to remember my father's age,

And call him to long peace.

He is gone happy, and has left me rich.

Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound 5
To your free heart, I do return those talents, Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help

I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O, by no means,
Honest Ventidius! You mistake my love;
I gave it freely ever; and there's none 10
Can truly say he gives, if he receives.

If our betters play at that game, we must not dare

To imitate them: faults that are rich are fair.

Ven. A noble spirit!

Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony was but devis'd at first 15

To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,

Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown;
But where there is true friendship there needs none.

Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes

Than my fortunes to me. [They sit. 20

1 Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it.

Apem. Ho, ho, confess'd it! Hang'd it, have you not?

Tim. O, Apemantus, you are welcome.

Apem. No; 20

You shall not make me welcome. 24

I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fie, th'art a churl; ye have got a humour there

Does not become a man; 'tis much to blame.

They say, my lords, Ira furor brevis est;
but yond man is ever angry. Go, let him have a table by himself; for he does neither affect company nor is he fit for't
indeed. 31

Apem. Let me stay at thine apperil, Timon.

I come to observe; I give thee warning
on't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee. Th'art an Athenian, therefore welcome. I myself would have no power; prithee let my meat make thee silent. 36

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for I should ne'er flatter thee. O you gods, what a number of men eats Timon, and he sees 'em not! It grieves me to see so many dip their meat in one man's blood;
and all the madness is, he cheers them up
too. 41

I wonder men dare trust themselves with
men.

Methinks they should invite them without knives:

Good for their meat and safer for their lives.
There's much example for't; the fellow that sits next him now, parts bread with him, pledges the breath of him in a divided draught, is the readiest man to kill him.

'T has been proved. If I were a huge man
I should fear to drink at meals,

Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes. 50

Great men should drink with harness on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart! and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it flow this way, my good
lord.

Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow!
He keeps his tides well. Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.
Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner, honest water, which ne'er left man i' th' mire.

This and my food are equals; there's no
odds.

Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

Apemantus' Grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf; 60

I pray for no man but myself.

Grant I may never prove so fond

To trust man on his oath or bond,

Or a harlot for her weeping,

Or a dog that seems a-sleeping, 65

Or a keeper with my freedom,

Or my friends, if I should need 'em.

Amen. So fall to't.

Rich men sin, and I eat root.

[Eats and drinks.]

Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus! 70

Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service,
my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends.

Alcib. So they were bleeding new, my lord, there's no meat like 'em; I could wish my best friend at such a feast. 77

Apem. Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then, that then thou mightst kill 'em, and bid me to 'em.

1 Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect. 83

Tim. O, no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you. How had you been my friends else? Why have you that charitable title from thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O you gods, think I, what need we have any friends if we should ne'er have need of 'em? They were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for 'em; and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wish'd myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits; and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O, what a precious comfort 'tis to have so many like brothers commanding one another's fortunes! O, joy's e'en made away ere't can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks. To forget their faults, I drink to you. 103

Apem. Thou weep'st to make them drink, Timon.

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes,

And at that instant like a babe sprung up.

Apem. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard. 107

3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

Apem. Much! [Sound tucket.

Tim. What means that trumpet?

Enter a Servant.

How now? 110

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies! What are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a fore-runner, my lord, which bears that office to signify their pleasures. 115

Tim. I pray let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon, and to all

That of his bounties taste! The five best Senses

Acknowledge thee their patron, and come freely 119

To gratulate thy plenteous bosom. Th' Ear, Taste, Touch, Smell, pleas'd from thy table rise;

They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They're welcome all; let 'em have kind admittance.

Music. make their welcome. [Exit Cupid.

1 Lord. You see, my lord, how ample y'are below'd. 125

Music. Re-enter CUPID, with a Masque of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hoy-day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way!

They dance? They are mad women. Like madness is the glory of this life, As this pomp shows to a little oil and root. We make ourselves fools to disport ourselves, 130

And spend our flatteries to drink those men Upon whose age we void it up again With poisonous spite and envy.

Who l'ves that's not depraved or depraves? Who dies that bears not one spurn to their graves 135

Of their friends' gift?

I should fear those that dance before me now

Would one day stamp upon me. 'T has been done:

Men shut their doors against a setting sun.

The Lords rise from table, with much adoring of Timon; and to show their loves, each single out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies, 140

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment, Which was not half so beautiful and kind; You have added worth unto't and lute, And entertain'd me with mine own device; I am to thank you for't. 145

1 Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem. Faith, for the worst is filthy, and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends you;

Please you to dispose yourselves. 150

All Ladies. Most thankfully, my lord.

[Exeunt Cupid and Ladies.

Tim. Flavius!

Flav. My lord?

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

Flav. Yes, my lord. [Aside] More jewels yet!

There is no crossing him in's humour, 155 Else I should tell him—well i' faith, I should—

When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, and he could.

'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind, That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind. [Exit. 160

1 Lord. Where be our men?

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

2 Lord. Our horses!

Re-enter FLAVIUS, with the casket.

Tim. O my friends,

I have one word to say to you. Look you,
my good lord,

I must entreat you honour me so much 165
As to advance this jewel; accept it and wear it,

Kind my lord.

1 Lord. I am so far already in your gifts—

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the Senate newly alighted and come to visit you. 171

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

[Exit Servant.]

Flav. I beseech your honour, vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.

Tim. Near! Why then, another time I'll hear thee. I prithee let's be provided to show them entertainment.

Flav. [Aside] I scarce know how. 177

Enter another Servant.

2 Serv. May it please your honour, Lord Lucius, out of his free love, hath presented to you four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.

Tim. I shall accept them fairly. Let the presents 181

Be worthily entertain'd. [Exit Servant.]

Enter a third Servant.

How now! What news?

3 Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds. 186

Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be receiv'd,

Not without fair reward. [Exit Servant.]

Flav. [Aside] What will this come to?
He commands us to provide and give great gifts,

And all out of an empty coffer; 190

Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this,
To show him what a beggar his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wishes good.
His promises fly so beyond his state 194

That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes
For ev'ry word. He is so kind that he now Pays interest for't; his land's put to their books.

Well, would I were gently put out of office
Before I were forc'd out!

Happier is he that has no friend to feed 200
Than such that do e'en enemies exceed.

I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit.]

Tim. You do yourselves much wrong;

You bate too much of your own merits.
Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

2 Lord. With more than common thanks
I will receive it. 206

3 Lord. O, he's the very soul of bounty!

Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave good words the other day of a bay courser I rode on. 'Tis yours because you lik'd it. 210

3 Lord. O, I beseech you pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord:
I know no man

Can justly praise but what he does affect.
I weigh my friend's affection with mine
own.

I'll tell you true; I'll call to you. 216

All Lords. O, none so welcome!

Tim. I take all and your several visita-
tions

So kind to heart 'tis not enough to give;
Methinks I could deal kingdoms to my
friends 220

And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades,
Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich.

It comes in charity to thee; for all thy living

Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast

Lie in a pitch'd field. 225

Alcib. Ay, defil'd land my lord.

1 Lord. We are so virtuously bound—

Tim. And so am I to you.

2 Lord. So infinitely endear'd—

Tim. All to you. Lights, more lights! 230

1 Lord. The best of happiness, honour, and fortunes, keep with you, Lord Timon!

Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Exeunt all but Apemantus and Timon.]

Apem. What a coil's here!

Serving of becks and jutting-out of bums!

I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums 235

That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs:

Methinks false hearts should never have sound legs.

Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on curtsies.

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen

I would be good to thee. 240

Apem. No, I'll nothing; for if I should be brib'd too, there would be none left to rail upon thee, and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou giv'st so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly. What needs these feasts, pumps, and vainglories? 245

Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you.
Farewell; and come with better music.

[Exit.]

Apem. So. Thou wilt not hear me now :
thou shalt not then. I'll lock thy heaven
from thee. 250
O that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery ! [Exit.

ACT TWO

SCENE I. A Senator's house.

Enter a Senator, with papers in his hand.
Sen. And late, five thousand. To Varro and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand ; besides my former
sum,
Which makes it five and twenty. Still in motion
Of raging waste ? It cannot hold ; it will not.
If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog 5
And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold.
If I would sell my horse and buy twenty mœe Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon,
Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me
straight,
And able horses. No porter at his gate, 10
But rather one that smiles and still invites
All that pass by. It cannot hold ; no reason
Can sound his state in safety. Caphis, ho !
Caphis, I say !

Enter CAPHIS.

Cap. Here, sir ; what is your pleasure ?
Sen. Get on your cloak and haste you to Lord Timon ; 15
Importune him for my moneys ; be not
ceas'd
With slight denial, nor then silenc'd when 'Commend me to your master ' and the cap
Plays in the right hand, thus ; but tell him
My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn 20 Out of mine own ; his days and times are past,
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have smit my credit. I love and honour
him,
But must not break my back to heal his finger.
Immediate are my needs, and my relief 25 Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in
words,
But find supply immediate. Get you gone ;
Put on a most importunate aspect,
A visage of demand ; for I do fear, 29
When every feather sticks in his own wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone.
Caph. I go, sir.
Sen. Take the bonds along
with you,
And have the dates in compt.
Caph. I will, sir.
Sen. Go. 35
[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Before Timon's house.

Enter FLAVIUS, Timon's steward, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop ! So senseless of expense
That he will neither know how to maintain it
Nor cease his flow of riot ; takes no account
How things go from him, nor resumes no
care
Of what is to continue. Never mind 5
Was to be so unwise to be so kind.
What shall be done ? He will not hear till feel.
I must be round with him. Now he comes from hunting.
Fie, fie, fie, fie !

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of Isidore and Varro.

Caph. Good even, Varro. What, you come for money ? 10
Var. Serv. Is't not your business too ?
Caph. It is. And yours too, Isidore ?
Isid. Serv. It is so.
Caph. Would we were all discharg'd ! 14
Var. Serv. I fear it.
Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON and his Train, with ALCIBIADES.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done we'll forth
again,
My Alcibiades.—With me ? What is your
will ?
Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.
Tim. Dues ! Whence are you ?
Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.
Tim. Go to my steward. 21 Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off
To the succession of new days this month.
My master is awak'd by great occasion
To call upon his own, and humbly prays
you 25
That with your other noble parts you'll suit
In giving him his right.
Tim. Mine honest friend,
I prithee but repair to me next morning.
Caph. Nay, good my lord—
Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.
Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my good
lord— 30
Isid. Serv. From Isidore : he humbly pravs your speedy payment—Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants—Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks and past. 35 Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord ; and I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath.
I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on ;
I'll wait upon you instantly.

[Exeunt Alcibiades and Lords.]

[To Flavius] Come hither. Pray you, ⁴⁰ How goes the world that I am thus encount'ed

With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds

And the detention of long-since-due debts,
Against my honour ?

Flav. Please you, gentlemen,
The time is unagreeable to this business. ⁴⁵
Your importunacy cease till after dinner,
That I may make his lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends.
See them well entertain'd. [Exit.]

Flav. Pray draw near. [Exit.]

Enter APEMANTUS and Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apemantus. Let's ha' some sport with
'em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us !

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog !

Var. Serv. How dost, fool ? ⁵⁵

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow ?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apem. No, 'tis to thyself. [To the Fool]
Come away.

Isid. Serv. [To Var. Serv.] There's the fool hangs on your back already.

Apem. No, thou stand'st single ; th'art not on him yet.

Caph. Where's the fool now ? ⁶¹

Apem. He last ask'd the question. Poor rogues and usurers' men ! Bawds between gold and want !

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus ?

Apem. Asses. ⁶⁵

All Serv. Why ?

Apem. That you ask me what you are,
and do not know yourselves. Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen ?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool. How does your mistress ? ⁷¹

Fool. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth !

Apem. Good ! gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page. ⁷⁵

Page [To the Fool] Why, how now, Captain ? What do you in this wise company ? How dost thou, Apemantus ?

Apem. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably !

Page. Prithee, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters ; I know not which is which. ⁸¹

Apem. Canst not read ?

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die, then, that day thou art hang'd. This is to Lord Timon ; this to Alcibiades. Go ; thou wast born a bastard, and thou't die a bawd. ⁸⁷

Page. Thou wast whelp'd a dog, and thou shalt famish a dog's death. Answer not :
I am gone. [Exit Page.]

Apem. E'en so thou outrun'st grace.
Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's. ⁹¹

Fool. Will you leave me there ?

Apem. If Timon stay at home. You three serve three usurers ?

All Serv. Ay ; would they serv'd us ! ⁹⁵

Apem. So would I—as good a trick as ever hangman serv'd thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers' men ?

All Serv. Ay, fool. ⁹⁹

Fool. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant. My mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly and go away merry ; but they enter my mistress' house merrily and go away sadly. The reason of this ?

Var. Serv. I could render one. ¹⁰⁵

Apem. Do it then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knave ; which notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed. ¹⁰⁸

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool ?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit. Sometime 't appears like a lord ; sometime like a lawyer ; sometime like a philosopher, with two stones moe than's artificial one. He is very often like a knight ; and, generally, in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in. ¹¹⁵

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man.
As much foolery as I have, so much wit
thou lack'st.

Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus.

Var. Serv. Aside, aside ; here comes Lord
Timon. ¹²⁰

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Apem. Come with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman ; sometime the philosopher. [Exeunt Apemantus and Fool.]

Flav. Pray you walk near ; I'll speak with you anon. [Exeunt Servants.]

Tim. You make me marvel wherefore ere this time ¹²⁵

Had you not fully laid my state before me,
That I might so have rated my expense
As I had leave of means.

Flav. You would not hear me
At many leasures I propos'd.

Tim. Go to ; 129
Perchance some single vantages you took
When my indisposition put you back,
And that unaptness made your minister
Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. O my good lord,
At many times I brought in my accounts, Laid them before you ; you would throw them off 135

And say you found them in mine honesty.
When, for some trifling present, you have bid me

Return so much, I have shook my head and
wept ;

Yea, 'gainst th' authority of manners,
pray'd you 139

To hold your hand more close. I did endure Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I
have

Prompted you in the ebb of your estate
And your great flow of debts. My lov'd
lord,

Though you hear now—too late !—yet
now's a time :

The greatest of your having lacks a half 145
To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flav. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and
gone ;

And what remains will hardly stop the mouth

Of present dues. The future comes apace ; What shall defend the interim ? And at length 150

How goes our reck'ning ?

Tim. To Lacedæmon did my land extend.

Flav. O my good lord, the world is but a world ;

Were it all yours to give it in a breath,
How quickly were it gone !

Tim. You tell me true. 155

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry or falsehood,

Call me before th' exactest auditors
And set me on the proof. So the gods bless
me,

When all our offices have been oppress'd
With riotous feeders, when our vaults have
wept 160

With drunken spilth of wine, when every room

Hath blaz'd with lights and bray'd with minstrelsy,

I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock
And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prithee no more.

Flav. 'Heavens,' have I said 'the bounty of this lord !

How many prodigal bits have slaves and
peasants 166

This night englutted ! Who is not Lord Timon's ?

What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is Lord Timon's ?

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon !'
Ah ! when the means are gone that buy this praise, 170

The breath is gone whereof this praise is
made.

Feast-won, fast-lost ; one cloud of winter
show'rs,

These flies are couch'd.

Tim. Come, sermon me no further.
No villanous bounty yet hath pass'd my
heart ;

Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given. 175

Why dost thou weep ? Canst thou the conscience lack

To think I shall lack friends ? Secure thy
heart :

If I would broach the vessels of my love,
And try the argument of hearts by borrow-
ing, 179

Men and men's fortunes could I frankly use
As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts !

Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd

That I account them blessings ; for by these Shall I try friends. You shall perceive how
you

Mistake my fortunes ; I am wealthy in my
friends. 185

Within there ! Flaminus ! Servilius !

Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and another Servant.

Servants. My lord ! my lord !

Tim. I will dispatch you severally—you to Lord Lucius ; to Lord Lucullus you ; I hunted with his honour to-day. You to Sempronius. Commend me to their loves ;
and I am proud, say, that my occasions have found time to use 'em toward a supply of money. Let the request be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord.

[Exeunt Servants.]

Flav. [Aside] Lord Lucius and Lucullus ?
Humh ! 195

Tim. Go you, sir, to the senators,
Of whom, even to the state's best health,
I have

Deserv'd this hearing. Bid 'em send o' th' instant

A thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold,
For that I knew it the most general way, 200
To them to use your signet and your name ;
But they do shake their heads, and I am
here

No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true ? Can't be ?

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,

That now they are at fall, want treasure,
cannot 205

Do what they would, are sorry—you are honourable—

But yet they could have wish'd—they know not—

Something hath been amiss—a noble nature

May catch a wrench—would all were well!—'tis pity—

And so, intending other serious matters, ²¹⁰ After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,

With certain half-caps and cold-moving nods,

They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them! Prithee, man, look cheerly. These old fellows ²¹⁴

Have their ingratitude in them hereditary. Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flows;

'Tis lack of kindly warmth they are not kind;

And nature, as it grows again toward earth, Is fashion'd for the journey dull and heavy.

Go to Ventidius. Prithee be not sad, ²²⁰ Thou art true and honest; ingeniously I speak,

No blame belongs to thee. Ventidius lately Buried his father, by whose death he's stepp'd

Into a great estate. When he was poor, Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends, ²²⁵ I clear'd him with five talents. Greet him from me,

Bid him suppose some good necessity Touches his friend, which craves to be rememb'red

With those five talents. That had, give't these fellows

To whom 'tis instant due. Nev'r speak or think ²³⁰

That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would I could not think it. That thought is bounty's foe;

Being free itself, it thinks all others so. [Exeunt.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. Lucullus' house.

FLAMINIUS waiting to speak with Lucullus.
Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter LUCULLUS.

Serv. Here's my lord. ⁴

Lucul. [Aside] One of Lord Timon's men? A gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night—Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are very respectively welcome, sir. Fill me some wine. [Exit Servant] And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master? ¹¹

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir. And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius? ¹⁵

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir, which in my lord's behalf I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein. ²⁰

Lucul. La, la, la, la! 'Nothing doubting' says he? Alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha' din'd with him and told him on't; and come again to supper to him of purpose to have him spend less; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his. I ha' told him on't, but I could ne'er get him from't.

Re-enter Servant, with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine. ³⁰

Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knows what belongs to reason, and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well. Good parts in thee. [To Servant] Get you gone, sirrah. [Exit Servant] Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman; but thou art wise, and thou know'st well enough, although thou com'st to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship without security. Here's three solidares for thee. Good boy, wink at me, and say thou saw'st me not. Fare thee well. ⁴⁴

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ,

And we alive that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness,

To him that worships thee.

[Throwing the money back.]
Lucul. Ha! Now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit.]

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee! ⁵⁰

Let molten coin be thy damnation, Thou disease of a friend and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart It turns in less than two nights? O you gods,

I feel my master's passion ! This slave 55 Unto his honour has my lord's meat in
him ;

Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment
When he is turn'd to poison ?

O, may diseases only work upon't !

And when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature 60

Which my lord paid for be of any power
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour !

[Exit.

SCENE II. A public place.

Enter LUCIUS, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the Lord Timon ? He is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

1 Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours : now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie, no : do not believe it ; he cannot want for money. 9

2 Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that not long ago one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus to borrow so many talents ; nay, urg'd extremely for't, and showed what necessity belong'd to't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How ?

2 Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord. 15

Luc. What a strange case was that !
Now, before the gods, I am asham'd on't.
Denied that honourable man ! There was very little honour show'd in't. For my own part, I must needs confess I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such-like trifles, nothing comparing to his ; yet, had he mistook him and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents. 23

Enter SERVILIUS.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord ;
I have sweat to see his honour.—My honour'd lord ! 25

Luc. Servilius ? You are kindly met, sir.
Fare thee well ; commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend. 28

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha ! What has he sent ? I am so much endeared to that lord ; he's ever sending. How shall I thank him, think'st thou ? And what has he sent now ?

Ser. Has only sent his present occasion now, my lord, requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry
with me ; 36

He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord.

If his occasion were not virtuous
I should not urge it half so faithfully. 40

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius ?
Ser. Upon my soul 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to dis-furnish myself against such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honourable !
How unluckily it happ'n'd that I should purchase the day before for a little part and undo a great deal of honour ! Servilius, now before the gods, I am not able to do—the more beast, I say ! I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness ; but I would not for the wealth of Athens I had done't now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship, and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind. And tell him this from me : I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words
to him ? 57

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn,
Servilius. [Exit Servilius.

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed ;
And he that's once denied will hardly speed.
[Exit.

1 Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius ?

2 Stran. Ay, too well.

1 Stran. Why, this is the world's soul ;
and just of the same piece Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him his friend

That dips in the same dish ? For, in my knowing, 65

Timon has been this lord's father,
And kept his credit with his purse ;
Supported his estate ; nay, Timon's money Has paid his men their wages. He ne'er drinks

But Timon's silver treads upon his lip ; 70
And yet—O, see the monstrousness of man
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape !—
He does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars.

3 Stran. Religion groans at it.

1 Stran. For mine own part,
I never tasted Timon in my life, 76
Nor came any of his bounties over me
To mark me for his friend ; yet I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue,
And honourable carriage, 80
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return'd to
him, 83

So much I love his heart. But I perceive Men must learn now with pity to dispense ;
For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Sempronius' house.

Enter SEMPRONIUS and a Servant of Timon's.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't ?
Hum ! 'Bove all others ?

He might have tried Lord Lucius or Lucullus ;

And now Ventidius is wealthy too, Whom he redeem'd from prison. All these Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. My lord, 5
They have all been touch'd and found base metal, for

They have all denied him.

Sem. How ! Have they denied him ?
Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him ?
And does he send to me ? Three ? Humh !
It shows but little love or judgment in him.
Must I be his last refuge ? His friends, like physicians, 11

Thrice give him over. Must I take th' cure upon me ?

Has much disgrac'd me in't ; I'm angry
at him,

That might have known my place. I see no sense for't,

But his occasions might have woo'd me
first ; 15

For, in my conscience, I was the first man
That e'er received gift from him.

And does he think so backwardly of me now
That I'll requite it last ? No ;

So it may prove an argument of laughter 20
To th' rest, and I 'mongst lords be thought a fool.

I'd rather than the worth of thrice the sum
Had sent to me first, but for my mind's
sake ;

I'd such a courage to do him good. But now return, 24

And with their faint reply this answer join :
Who bates mine honour shall not know my coin. [Exit.]

Serv. Excellent ! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic—he cross'd himself by't ; and I cannot think but, in the end, the villainies of man will set him clear.
How fairly this lord strives to appear foul !
Takes virtuous copies to be wicked, like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire.

Of such a nature is his politic love.

This was my lord's best hope ; now all are
fled, 35

Save only the gods. Now his friends are
dead,

Doors that were ne'er acquainted with their wards

Many a bounteous year must be employ'd
Now to guard sure their master.

And this is all a liberal course allows : 40

Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. A hall in Timon's house.

Enter two of Varro's Men, meeting Lucius' Servant, and Others, all being servants of Timon's creditors, to wait for his coming out. Then enter TITUS and HORTENSIVS.

1 Var. Serv. Well met ; good morrow,
Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor. Lucius ! What, do we meet together ?

Luc. Serv. Ay, and I think one business does command us all ; for mine is money.

Tit. So is theirs and ours. 6

Enter PHILOTUS.

Luc. Serv. And Sir Philotus too !

Phi. Good day at once.

Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother, what do you think the hour ?

Phi. Labouring for nine.

Luc. Serv. So much ?

Phi. Is not my lord seen yet ?

Luc. Serv. Not yet.

Phi. I wonder on't ; he was wont to shine at seven.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are wax'd shorter with him ; 11

You must consider that a prodigal course
Is like the sun's, but not like his recoverable.

I fear

'Tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse ;
That is, one may reach deep enough and yet Find little.

Phi. I am of your fear for that. 17

Tit. I'll show you how t' observe a strange event.

Your lord sends now for money.

Hor. Most true, he does.

Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift, 20

For which I wait for money.

Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Serv. Mark how strange it shows Timon in this should pay more than he owes ;

And e'en as if your lord should wear rich
jewels

And send for money for 'em. 25

Hor. I'm weary of this charge, the gods can witness ;

I know my lord hath spent of Timon's
wealth,

And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

1 Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns ; what's yours ?

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine. 30

1 Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep ; and it should seem by th' sum

Your master's confidence was above mine,

Else surely his had equall'd.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

Tit. One of Lord Timon's men.

Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word. Pray, is my lord ready to come forth? 36

Flam. No, indeed, he is not.

Tit. We attend his lordship; pray signify so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent. [Exit. 40]

Enter FLAVIUS, in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! Is not that his steward muffled so? He goes away in a cloud. Call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, sir?

2 Var. Serv. By your leave, sir. 44

Flav. What do ye ask of me, my friend?

Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.

Flav. Ay,

If money were as certain as your waiting, 'Twere sure enough.

Why then preferr'd you not your sums and bills

When your false masters eat of my lord's meat? 50

Then they could smile, and fawn upon his debts,

And take down th' int'rest into their glutt'nous maws.

You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up; Let me pass quietly.

Believe't, my lord and I have made an end: I have no more to reckon, he to spend. 56

Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.

Flav. If 'twill not serve, 'tis not so base as you,

For you serve knaves. [Exit. 61]

1 Var. Serv. How! What does his cashier'd worship mutter?

2 Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? Such may rail against great buildings. 65

Enter SERVILIUS.

Tit. O, here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Ser. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from't; for take't of my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsook him; he's much out of health and keeps his chamber.

Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers are not sick;

And if it be so far beyond his health, Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts, 75

And make a clear way to the gods.

Ser. Good gods!

Tit. We cannot take this for answer, sir.

Flam. [Within] Servilius, help! My lord! my lord!

Enter TIMON, in a rage, FLAMINIUS following.

Tim. What, are my doors oppos'd against my passage?

Have I been ever free, and must my house be my retentive enemy, my gaol?

The place which I have feasted, does it now, Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill. 85

Luc. Serv. Here's mine

Hor. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em; cleave me to the girdle.

Luc. Serv. Alas, my lord— 91

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Tit. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that.

What yours? and yours? 96

1 Var. Serv. My lord—

2 Var. Serv. My lord—

Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you! [Exit.]

Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money. These debts may well be call'd desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves.

Creditors? Devils! 106

Flav. My dear lord—

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flam. My lord—

Tim. I'll have it so. My steward! 110

Flav. Here, my lord.

Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again:

Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius—all. I'll once more feast the rascals. 113

Flav. O my lord,
You only speak from your distracted soul; There is not so much left to furnish out A moderate table.

Tim. Be it not in thy care.
Go, I charge thee, invite them all; let in the tide 119
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The Senate House.

Enter three Senators at one door, ALCIBIADES meeting them, with Attendants.

1 Sen. My lord, you have my voice to't: the fault's bloody.

'Tis necessary he should die :

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

2 Sen. Most true ; the law shall bruise him.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion, to the Senate !

1 Sen. Now, Captain ?

Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues ;

For pity is the virtue of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who in hot blood Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth

To those that without heed do plunge into't.

He is a man, setting his fate aside,
Of comely virtues ;
Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice—
An honour in him which buys out his fault—

But with a noble fury and fair spirit,
Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his foe ;
And with such sober and unnoted passion
He did behave his anger ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but prov'd an argument.

1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair ;
Your words have took such pains as if they labour'd

To bring manslaughter into form and set Quarrelling upon the head of valour ; which,
indeed,

Is valour misbegot, and came into the
world

When sects and factions were newly born.
He's truly valiant that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe,
And make his wrongs his outsides,
To wear them like his raiment, carelessly,
And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.

If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,
What folly 'tis to hazard life for ill !

Alcib. My lord—

1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look
clear :

To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour,
pardon me

If I speak like a captain :

Why do fond men expose themselves to
battle,

And not endure all threats ? Sleep upon't,
And let the foes quietly cut their throats,
Without repugnancy ? If there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad ? Why, then, women are more valiant,

That stay at home, if bearing carry it ;
And the ass more captain than the lion ;
the fellow

Loaden with irons wiser than the judge, 50
If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,
As you are great, be pitifully good.
Who cannot condemn rashness in cold
blood ?

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust ;
But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just. 55
To be in anger is impiety ;
But who is man that is not angry ?
Weigh but the crime with this.

2 Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain ! His service done
At Lacedaemon and Byzantium
Were a sufficient briber for his life. 60

1 Sen. What's that ?

Alcib. Why, I say, my lords, has done fair service,
And slain in fight many of your enemies ;
How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last conflict, and made plenteous
wounds ! 65

2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em.

He's a sworn rioter ; he has a sin that often Drowns him and takes his valour prisoner.
If there were no foes, that were enough
To overcome him. In that beastly fury 70
He has been known to commit outrages
And cherish factions. 'Tis inferr'd to us
His days are foul and his drink dangerous.

1 Sen. He dies.

Alcib. Hard fate ! He might have died in war.

My lords, if not for any parts in him— 75
Though his right arm might purchase his own time,

And be in debt to none—yet, more to move
you,

Take my deserts to his, and join 'em both ;
And, for I know your reverend ages love
Security, I'll pawn my victories, all 80
My honours to you, upon his good returns.
If by this crime he owes the law his life,
Why, let the war receive't in valiant gore ;
For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

1 Sen. We are for law : he dies. Urge it
no more 85

On height of our displeasure. Friend or
brother,

He forfeits his own blood that spills another.

Alcib. Must it be so ? It must not be. My
lords,

I do beseech you, know me.

2 Sen. How ! 90

Alcib. Call me to your remembrances.

3 Sen. What !

Alcib. I cannot think but your age has forgot me ;

It could not else be I should prove so base
To sue, and be denied such common grace.
My wounds ache at you.

1 Sen. Do you dare our anger ?
'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect : 97

We banish thee for ever.

Alcib. Banish me !
Banish your dotage ! Banish usury
That makes the Senate ugly. 100

1 Sen. If after two days' shine Athens contain thee, Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit,
He shall be executed presently.

[Exeunt Senators.] Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough that you may live 104
Only in bone, that none may look on you !
I'm worse than mad ; I have kept back their foes,

While they have told their money and let
out

Their coin upon large interest, I myself 108 Rich only in large hurts. All those for
this ?

Is this the balsam that the usuring Senate
Pours into captains' wounds ? Banishment !
It comes not ill ; I hate not to be banish'd ;
It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up
My discontented troops, and lay for hearts.
'Tis honour with most lands to be at odds ;
Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods. [Exit.]

SCENE VI. A banqueting hall in Timon's
house.

Music. Tables set out ; Servants attending.
En'er divers Lords, friends of Timon, at several doors.

1 Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.

2 Lord. I also wish it to you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other
day.

1 Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encount'ed. I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends. 6

2 Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

1 Lord. I should think so. He hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off ; but he hath conjur'd me beyond them, and I must needs appear. 12

2 Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

1 Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

2 Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you ? 20

1 Lord. A thousand pieces.

2 Lord. A thousand pieces !

1 Lord. What of you ?

2 Lord. He sent to me, sir—here he comes.

Enter TIMON and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both !
And how fare you ? 26

1 Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

2 Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship. 30

Tim. [Aside] Nor more willingly leaves winter ; such summer-birds are men—Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay ; feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' th' trumpet's sound ; we shall to't presently. 35

1 Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I return'd you an empty messenger.

Tim. O sir, let it not trouble you.

2 Lord. My noble lord— 39

Tim. Ah, my good friend, what cheer ?

2 Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on't, sir.

2 Lord. If you had sent but two hours
before— 45

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. [The banquet brought in.] Come, bring in all together.

2 Lord. All cover'd dishes !

1 Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

3 Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it. 51

1 Lord. How do you ? What's the news ?

3 Lord. Alcibiades is banish'd. Hear you
of it ?

1 & 2 Lords. Alcibiades banish'd !

3 Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it. 55

1 Lord. How ? how ?

2 Lord. I pray you, upon what ?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near ?

3 Lord. I'll tell you more anon Here's a noble feast toward. 60

2 Lord. This is the old man still.

3 Lord. Will't hold ? Will't hold ?

2 Lord. It does ; but time will—and so—

3 Lord. I do conceive. 64

Tim. Each man to his stool with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress ; your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place. Sit, sit. The gods require our thanks : 69

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts make yourselves prais'd ; but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised.
Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another ; for were your god-heads to borrow of men, men would forsake

the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains. If there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are. The rest of your foes, O gods, the Senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people, what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes are uncovered and seen to be full of warm water.]

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold,

You knot of mouth-friends! Smoke and lukewarm water

Is your perfection. This is Timon's last; 90
Who, stuck and spangled with your flatteries,

Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces

[Throwing the water in their faces.]
Your reeking villainy. Live loath'd and long,

Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears,

You fools of fortune, trencher friends, 95
time's flies,

Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks!

Of man and beast the infinite malady
Crust you quite o'er! What, dost thou go?
Soft, take thy physic first; thou too, and thou. 100

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.

[Throws the dishes at them, and drives them out.]

What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast

Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.

Burn house! Sink Athens! Henceforth hated be

Of Timon man and all humanity! [Exit.]

Re-enter the Lords.

1 Lord. How now, my lords!

2 Lord. Know you the quality of Lord Timon's fury?

3 Lord. Push! Did you see my cap?

4 Lord. I have lost my gown. 109

1 Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humours sways him. He gave me a jewel th' other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat. Did you see my jewel?

3 Lord. Did you see my cap?

2 Lord. Here 'tis. 115

4 Lord. Here lies my gown.

1 Lord. Let's make no stay.

2 Lord. Lord Timon's mad.

3 Lord. I feel't upon my bones.

4 Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. [Exeunt.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Without the walls of Athens.

Enter TIMON.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee. O thou wall

That girdles in those wolves, dive in the earth

And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent.

Obedience, fail in children! Slaves and
fools,

Pluck the grave wrinkled Senate from the bench

And minister in their steads. To general filth

Convert, o' th' instant, green virginity.
Do't in your parents' eyes. Bankrupts,

hold fast;

Rather than render back, out with your knives

And cut your trusters' throats. Bound servants, steal: 10

Large-handed robbers your grave masters
are,

And pill by law. Maid, to thy master's bed:
Thy mistress is o' th' brothel. Son of sixteen,

Pluck the lin'd crutch from thy old limping
sire, 14

With it beat out his brains. Piety and fear,
Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth,

Domestic awe, night-rest, and neighbourhood,

Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades,
Degrees, observances, customs and laws,

Decline to your confounding contraries 20
And let confusion live. Plagues incident to men,

Your potent and infectious fevers heap
On Athens, ripe for stroke. Thou cold sciatica,

Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt

As lamely as their manners. Lust and liberty, 25

Creep in the minds and marrows of our
youth,

That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive

And drown themselves in riot. Itches, blains, 28

Sow all th' Athenian bosoms, and their crop
Be general leprosy! Breath infect breath,

That their society, as their friendship, may Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from

thee

But nakedness, thou detestable town !
 Take thou that too, with multiplying bans.
 Timon will to the woods, where he shall find
 Th' unkindest beast more kinder than mankind. 36
 The gods confound—hear me, you good gods
 all—
 The Athenians both within and out that wall !
 And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow
 To the whole race of mankind, high and low ! 40
 Amen. [Exit.

SCENE II. Athens. Timon's house.

Enter FLAVIUS, with two or three Servants.

1 Serv. Hear you, Master Steward, where's our master ?
 Are we undone, cast off, nothing remaining?
 Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you ?
 Let me be recorded by the righteous gods,
 I am as poor as you.

1 Serv. Such a house broke ! 5
 So noble a master fall'n ! All gone, and not
 One friend to take his fortune by the arm
 And go along with him ?

2 Serv. As we do turn our backs From our companion, thrown into his
 grave,
 So his familiars to his buried fortunes 10
 Slink all away ; leave their false vows with
 him,
 Like empty purses pick'd ; and his poor
 self,
 A dedicated beggar to the air,
 With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty, Walks, like contempt, alone. More of our fellows. 15

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd
 house.

3 Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery ;
 That see I by our faces. We are fellows still,
 Serving alike in sorrow. Leak'd is our bark ;
 And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck, 20
 Hearing the surges threat. We must all part
 Into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all,
 The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst
 you.
 Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake,
 Let's yet be fellows ; let's shake our heads and say, 25
 As 'twere a knell unto out master's fortune,
 ' We have seen better days'. Let each take some. [Giving them money.

Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word
 more !

Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.
 [Embrace, and part several ways.
 O the fierce wretchedness that glory brings
 us ! 30

Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
 Since riches point to misery and contempt ?
 Who would be so mock'd with glory, or to
 live

But in a dream of friendship,
 To have his pomp, and all what state compounds, 35

But only painted, like his varnish'd friends?
 Poor honest lord, brought low by his own
 heart,

Undone by goodness ! Strange, unusual
 blood,

When man's worst sin is he does too much
 good ! 39

Who then dares to be half so kind again ?
 For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar
 men.

My dearest lord—blest to be most accurst,

Rich only to be wretched—thy great fortunes

Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind
 lord ! 44

He's flung in rage from this ingrateful seat
 Of monstrous friends ; nor has he with him to Supply his life, or that which can command it.

I'll follow and enquire him out. 48

I'll ever serve his mind with my best
 will ;

Whilst I have gold, I'll be his steward still.
 [Exit.

SCENE III. The woods near the sea-shore.
Before Timon's cave.

Enter TIMON in the woods.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth

Rotten humidity ; below thy sister's orb Infect the air ! Twinn'd brothers of one womb—

Whose procreation, residence, and birth, Scarce is dividant—touch them with several fortunes ; 5

The greater scorns the lesser. Not nature,
 To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great
 fortune

But by contempt of nature.
 Raise me this beggar and deny't that lord :
 The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,
 The beggar native honour. 11

It is the pasture lards the rother's sides,
 The want that makes him lean. Who dares,
 who dares,

In purity of manhood stand upright,

And say 'This man's a flatterer' ? If one
be, 15

So are they all ; for every guise of fortune
Is smooth'd by that below. The learned pate

Ducks to the golden fool. All's oblique ;
There's nothing level in our cursed natures
But direct villainy. Therefore be abhorr'd
All feasts, societies, and throngs of men ! 21
His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains.
Destruction fang mankind ! Earth, yield me roots. [Digging.]

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate

With thy most operant poison. What is
here ? 25

Gold ? Yellow, glittering, precious gold ?
No, gods,

I am no idle votarist. Roots, you clear
heavens !

Thus much of this will make black white,
foul fair,

Wrong right, base noble, old young, coward vaillant.

Ha, you gods ! why this ? What, this, you gods ? Why, this 30

Will lug your priests and servants from your sides,

Pluck stout men's pillows from below their heads—

This yellow slave
Will knit and break religions, bless th'
accurs'd, 34

Make the hoar leprosy ador'd, place thieves
And give them title, knee, and approbation,
With senators on the bench. This is it That makes the wappen'd widow wed
again—

She whom the spital-house and ulcerous sores

Would cast the gorge at this embalms and spices 40

To th' April day again. Come, damn'd
earth,

Thou common whore of mankind, that puts odds

Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
Do thy right nature. [March afar off.]

Ha ! a drum ? Th'art quick,
But yet I'll bury thee. Thou't go, strong thief, 45

When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand.
Nay, stay thou out for earnest.

[Keeping some gold.]

Enter ALCIBIADES, with drum and fife, in warlike manner ; and PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA.

Alcib. What art thou there ? Speak.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart

For showing me again the eyes of man !

Alcib. What is thy name ? Is man so hateful to thee

That art thyself a man ? 51

Tim. I am Misanthropos, and hate mankind.

For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,
That I might love thee something.

Alcib. I know thee well ;
But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and
strange. 55

Tim. I know thee too ; and more than that I know thee

I not desire to know. Follow thy drum ;
With man's blood paint the ground, gules,
gules.

Religious canons, civil laws, are cruel ;
Then what should war be ? This fell whore of thine 60

Hath in her more destruction than thy
sword

For all her cherubin look.

Phry. Thy lips rot off !

Tim. I will not kiss thee ; then the rot
returns

To thine own lips again.

Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change ? 65

Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give.

But then renew I could not, like the moon ;
There were no suns to borrow of.

Alcib. Noble Timon,
What friendship may I do thee ?

Tim. None, but to Maintain my opinion.

Alcib. What is it, Timon ? 71

Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none. If thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man ! If thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art
a man ! 75

Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

Tim. Thou saw'st them when I had prosperity.

Alcib. I see them now ; then was a blessed time.

Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots.

Timan. Is this th' Athenian minion whom
the world

Voic'd so regardfully ?

Tim. Art thou Timandra ? 81

Timan. Yes.

Tim. Be a whore still ; they love thee not that use thee.

Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.

Make use of thy salt hours. Season the slaves 85

For tubs and baths ; bring down rosecheek'd youth

To the tub-fast and the diet.

Timan. Hang thee, monster !

Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra, for his wits

Are drown'd and lost in his calamities. 89
I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof doth daily make revolt
In my penurious band. I have heard, and griev'd,

How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth, Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon
them— 95

Tim. I prithee beat thy drum and get thee gone.

Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear
Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble ?

I had rather be alone.

Alcib. Why, fare thee well ;
Here is some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep it : I cannot eat it. 100

Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap—

Tim. War'st thou 'gainst Athens ?

Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all in thy
conquest ;

And thee after, when thou hast conquer'd !

Alcib. Why me, Timon ?

Tim. That by killing of villains 105

Thou wast born to conquer my country.
Put up thy gold. Go on. Here's gold. Go
on.

Be as a planetary plague, when Jove Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison 109

In the sick air ; let not thy sword skip one.
Pity not honour'd age for his white beard :
He is an usurer. Strike me the counterfeit matron :

It is her habit only that is honest,
Herself's a bawd. Let not the virgin's cheek Make soft thy trenchant sword ; for those milk paps 115

That through the window bars bore at men's
eyes

Are not within the leaf of pity writ,
But set them down horrible traitors. Spare not the babe

Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy ;

Think it a bastard whom the oracle 120
Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut,

And mince it sans remorse. Swear against abstracts ;

Put armour on thine ears and on thine eyes,
Whose proof nor yells of mothers, maids,
nor babes,

Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding, 125

Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers.

Make large confusion ; and, thy fury spent,
Confounded be thyself ! Speak not, be gone.

Alcib. Hast thou gold yet ? I'll take the gold thou givest me,

Not all thy counsel. 130

Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee !

Phr. & Timan. Give us some gold, good Timon. Hast thou more ?

Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,

And to make whores a bawd. Hold up, you sluts,

Your aprons mountant ; you are not oathable, 135

Although I know you'll swear, terribly
swear,

Into strong shudders and to heavenly agues,
Th' immortal gods that hear you. Spare your oaths ;

I'll trust to your conditions. Be whores
still ;

And he whose pious breath seeks to convert
you— 140

Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him
up ;

Let your close fire predominate his smoke,
And be no turncoats. Yet may your pains six months

Be quite contrary ! And thatch your poor thin roofs

With burdens of the dead—some that were
hang'd, 145

No matter. Wear them, betray with them.
Whore still ;

Paint till a horse may mire upon your face.
A pox of wrinkles !

Phr. & Timan. Well, more gold. What
then ?

Believe't that we'll do anything for gold.

Tim. Consumptions sow 150

In hollow bones of man ; strike their sharp
shins,

And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's
voice,

That he may never more false title plead, Nor sound his quilllets shrilly. Hoar the flamen,

That scolds against the quality of flesh 155

And not believes himself. Down with the nose,

Down with it flat, take the bridge quite
away

Of him that, his particular to foresee, Smells from the general weal. Make curl'dpate ruffians bald, 159

And let the unscarr'd braggarts of the war Derive some pain from you. Plague all,
That your activity may defeat and quell
The source of all erection. There's more gold.

Do you damn others, and let this damn
you,

And ditches grave you all ! 165

Phr. & Timan. More counsel with more money, bounteous Timon.

Tim. More whore, more mischief first ; I have given you earnest.
Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens. Farewell, Timon ;
If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.
Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee more. 170
Alcib. I never did thee harm.
Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.
Alcib. Call'st thou that harm ?
Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away, and take Thy beagles with thee.
Alcib. We but offend him. Strike. [Drum beats. Exeunt all but Timon.]
Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkindness, 175
 Should yet be hungry ! Common mother, thou, [Digging.]
 Whose womb unmeasurable and infinite breast
 Teems and feeds all ; whose self-same mettle,
 Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd, 179
 Engenders the black toad and adder blue,
 The gilded newt and eyeless venom'd worm,
 With all th' abhorred births below crisp heaven
 Whereon Hyperion's quick'ning fire doth shine—
 Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate,
 From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root ! 185
 Ensear thy fertile and conception womb,
 Let it no more bring out ingrateful man !
 Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears ;
 Teem with new monsters whom thy upward face
 Hath to the marbled mansion all above 190
 Never presented !—O, a root ! Dear thanks !—
 Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-torn leas,
 Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts
 And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
 That from it all consideration slips— 195

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man ? Plague, plague !
Apem. I was directed hither. Men report Thou dost affect my manners and dost use them.
Tim. 'Tis, then, because thou dost not keep a dog,
 Whom I would imitate. Consumption catch thee ! 200
Apem. This is in thee a nature but infected,
 A poor unmanly melancholy sprung

From change of fortune. Why this spade, this place ?
 This slave-like habit and these looks of care ?
 Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft, 205
 Hug their diseas'd perfumes, and have forgot
 That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods
 By putting on the cunning of a carper.
 Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
 By that which has undone thee : hinge thy knee, 210
 And let his very breath whom thou'lt observe Blow off thy cap ; praise his most vicious strain,
 And call it excellent. Thou wast told thus ;
 Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters that bade welcome,
 To knaves and all approachers. 'Tis most just 215
 That thou turn rascal ; hadst thou wealth again
 Rascals should have't. Do not assume my likeness.
Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself.
Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself ;
 A madman so long, now a fool. What, think'st 220
 That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
 Will put thy shirt on warm ? Will these moist trees,
 That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels
 And skip when thou point'st out ? Will the cold brook, 224
 Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste
 To cure thy o'ernight's surfeit ? Call the creatures Whose naked natures live in all the spite
 Of wreakful heaven, whose bare unhoused trunks,
 To the conflicting elements expos'd, 229
 Answer mere nature—bid them flatter thee.
 O, thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee. Depart.
Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.
Tim. I hate thee worse.
Apem. Why ?
Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.
Apem. I flatter not, but say thou art a caitiff.
Tim. Why dost thou seek me out ?
Apem. To vex thee. 235
Tim. Always a villain's office or a fool's.
 Dost please thyself in't ?
Apem. Ay.
Tim. What, a knave too ?
Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on

To castigate thy pride, 'twere well ; but thou

Dost it enforcedly. Thou'dst courtier be
again 240

Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outlives incertain pomp, is crown'd before.
The one is filling still, never complete ;
The other, at high wish. Best state, contentless, 244

Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content.
Thou should'st desire to die, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath that is more miserable.

Thou art a slave whom Fortune's tender
arm 249

With favour never clasp'd, but bred a dog.
Hadst thou, like us from our first swath, proceeded

The sweet degrees that this brief world affords

To such as may the passive drugs of it Freely command, thou wouldst have plung'd thyself

In general riot, melted down thy youth 255
In different beds of lust, and never learn'd
The icy precepts of respect, but followed
The sug'red game before thee. But myself,
Who had the world as my confectionary ;
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men

At duty, more than I could frame employment ; 261

That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush

Fell from their boughs, and left me open,
bare 264

For every storm that blows—I to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden.
Thy nature did commence in sufferance ;
time

Hath made thee hard in't. Why shouldst thou hate men ?

They never flatter'd thee. What hast thou
given ? 269

If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag, Must be thy subject ; who, in spite, put stuff

To some she-beggar and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence, be gone.
If thou hadst not been born the worst of
men,

Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet ?

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem. I, that I was 276

No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now.

Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee, I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee
gone. 279

That the whole life of Athens were in this !

Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root.

Apem. Here ! I will mend thy feast.
[Offering him food.

Tim. First mend my company : take away thyself.

Apem. So I shall mend mine own by th'
lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so ; it is but botch'd.

If not, I would it were. 285

Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens ?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,

Tell them there I have gold ; look, so I
have. 288

Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best and truest ;
For here it sleeps and does no hired harm.

Apem. Where liest a nights, Timon ?

Tim. Under that's above me.
Where feed'st thou a days, Apemantus ?

Apem. Where my stomach finds meat ;
or rather, where I eat it. 295

Tim. Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind !

Apem. Where wouldst thou send it ?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes.

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume, they mock'd thee for too much curiosity ; in thy rags thou know'st none, but art despis'd for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee ; eat it.

Tim. On what I hate I feed not.

Apem. Dost hate a medlar ? 305

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An th'hadst hated medlars sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better
now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift that was beloved after his means ?

Tim. Who, without those means thou talk'st of, didst thou ever know belov'd ?

Apem. Myself. 312

Tim. I understand thee : thou hadst some means to keep a dog.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers ? 316

Tim. Women nearest ; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power ?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the
men. 320

Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts ?

Apem. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee t' attain to ! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee ; if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee ; if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accus'd by the ass. If thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee; and still thou liv'dst but as a breakfast to the wolf. If thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner. Wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury. Wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be kill'd by the horse; wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seiz'd by the leopard; wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life. All thy safety were remotion, and thy defence absence. What beast couldst thou be that were not subject to a beast? And what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation!

Apem. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here. The commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts. 345

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

Apem. Yonder comes a poet and a painter. The plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way. When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again. 351

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog than Apemantus.

Apem. Thou art the cap of all the fools alive. 355

Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon!

Apem. A plague on thee! thou art too bad to curse.

Tim. All villains that do stand by thee are pure.

Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee. 360
I'll beat thee—but I should infect my hands

Apem. I would my tongue could rot them off!

Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy dog! Cholera does kill me that thou art alive; I swoon to see thee.

Apem. Would thou wouldst burst!

Tim. Away,
Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry I shall lose

A stone by thee. [Throws a stone at him.]

Apem. Beast!

Tim. Slave!

Apem. Toad!

Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue!

I am sick of this false world, and will love nought

But even the mere necessities upon't. 374
Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave;

Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat

Thy gravestone daily; make thine epitaph, That death in me at others' lives may laugh. [Looks at the gold] O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce

'Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler 380

Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars! Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate wooer,

Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow

That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible god,

That sold'st close impossibilities, 385
And mak'st them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue

To every purpose! O thou touch of hearts! Think thy slave man rebels, and by thy virtue

Set them into confounding odds, that beasts

May have the world in empire!

Apem. Would 'twere so! 390

But not till I am dead. I'll say th' hast gold. Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.

Tim. Throng'd to?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Thy back, I prithee.

Apem. Live, and love thy misery!

Tim. Long live so, and so die! [Exit Apemantus] I am quit.

Moe things like men? Eat, Timon, and abhor them. 399

Enter the Banditti.

1 Ban. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender ore of his remainder. The mere want of gold and the falling-from of his friends drove him into this melancholy. 399

2 Ban. It is nois'd he hath a mass of treasure.

3 Ban. Let us make the assay upon him if he care not for't, he will supply us easily if he covetously reserve it, how shall's get it?

2 Ban. True; for he bears it not about him. 'Tis hid.

1 Ban. Is not this he?

Banditti. Where?

2 Ban. 'Tis his description.

3 Ban. He; I know him.

Banditti. Save thee, Timon!

Tim. Now, thieves?

Banditti. Soldiers, not thieves. 41

Tim. Both too, and women's sons.

Banditti. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat.

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots;

Within this mile break forth a hundred springs ; 416

The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips ;
The bounteous housewife Nature on each bush

Lays her full mess before you. Want ! Why want ?

1 Ban. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water, 421
As beasts and birds and fishes.

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes ;

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con

That you are thieves profess'd, that you work not

In holier shapes ; for there is boundless theft 425

In limited professions. Rascal thieves, Here's gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o'
th' grape

Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth,

And so scape hanging. Trust not the physician ;

His antidotes are poison, and he slays 430
More than you rob. Take wealth and lives
together ;

Do villainy, do, since you protest to do't, Like workmen. I'll example you with thievery :

The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction

Robs the vast sea ; the moon's an arrant
thief, 435

And her pale fire she snatches from the sun ;
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves

The moon into salt tears ; the earth's a
thief,

That feeds and breeds by a composture
stol'n

From gen'ral excrement—each thing's a thief. 440

The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power

Has uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves ;
away,

Rob one another. There's more gold. Cut
throats ;

All that you meet are thieves. To Athens
go, 444

Break open shops ; nothing can you steal
But thieves do lose it. Steal not less for this I give you ; and gold confound you howsoe'er !

Amen.

3 Ban. Has almost charm'd me from my profession by persuading me to it. 450

1 Ban. 'Tis in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us ; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

2 Ban. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade. 454

1 Ban. Let us first see peace in Athens.
There is no time so miserable but a man may be true. [Exeunt Thieves.

Enter FLAVIUS, to Timon.

Flav. O you gods !
Is yond despis'd and ruinous man my lord ?

Full of decay and failing ? O monument
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd !

What an alteration of honour 461
Has desp'rate want made !

What viler thing upon the earth than
friends,

Who can bring noblest minds to basest
ends !

How rarely does it meet with this time's guise, 465

When man was wish'd to love his enemies !
Grant I may ever love, and rather woo

Those that would mischief me than those that do !

Has caught me in his eye ; I will present
My honest grief unto him, and as my lord

Still serve him with my life. My dearest
master ! 471

Tim. Away ! What art thou ?
Flav. Have you forgot me, sir ?

Tim. Why dost ask that ? I have forgot all men ;

Then, if thou grant'st th'art a man, I have forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.
Tim. Then I know thee not. 476

I never had honest man about me, I.
All I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness, 479
Nev'r did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep ? Come nearer. Then I love thee

Because thou art a woman and disclaim'st
Flinty mankind, whose eyes do never give

But thorough lust and laughter. Pity's sleeping. 485

Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping !

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my
lord,

T' accept my grief, and whilst this poor wealth lasts

To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward 490
So true, so just, and now so comfortable ?
It almost turns my dangerous nature mild.

Let me behold thy face. Surely, this man
Was born of woman. 494

Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
You perpetual-sober gods ! I do proclaim

One honest man—mistake me not, but one ;
No more, I pray—and he's a steward.

How fain would I have hated all mankind !
And thou redeem'st thyself. But all, save
thee, 500

I fell with curses.
 Methinks thou art more honest now than wise ;
 For by oppressing and betraying me
 Thou mightst have sooner got another service ;
 For many so arrive at second masters 505
 Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true,
 For I must ever doubt though ne'er so sure,
 Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
 If not a usuring kindness, and as rich men deal gifts,
 Expecting in return twenty for one ? 510
Flav. No, my most worthy master, in whose breast Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late!
 You should have fear'd false times when you did feast :
 Suspect still comes where an estate is least.
 That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love, 515
 Duty, and zeal, to your unmatched mind,
 Care of your food and living ; and believe it,
 My most honour'd lord,
 For any benefit that points to me,
 Either in hope or present, I'd exchange 520
 For this one wish, that you had power and wealth
 To requite me by making rich yourself.
Tim. Look thee, 'tis so ! Thou singly honest man,
 Here, take. The gods, out of my misery,
 Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy, 525
 But thus condition'd : thou shalt build from men ;
 Hate all, curse all, show charity to none,
 But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone
 Ere thou relieve the beggar. Give to dogs
 What thou deniest to men ; let prisons swallow 'em, 530 Debts wither 'em to nothing. Be men like blasted woods,
 And may diseases lick up their false bloods !
 And so, farewell and thrive.
Flav. O, let me stay
 And comfort you, my master.
Tim. If thou hat'st curses,
 Stay not ; fly whilst thou art blest and free. 535
 Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee.
 [Exeunt severally.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. The woods. Before Timon's cave.Enter Poet and Painter.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him ?

Does the rumour hold for true that he's so full of gold ? 4

Pain. Certain. Alcibiades reports it ; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him. He likewise enrich'd poor straggling soldiers with great quantity. 'Tis said he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends ? 10

Pain. Nothing else. You shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore 'tis not amiss we tender our loves to him in this suppos'd distress of his ; it will show honestly in us, and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travail for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having. 16

Poet. What have you now to present unto him ?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation ; only I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too, tell him of an intent that's coming toward him. 21

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' th' time ; it opens the eyes of expectation. Performance is ever the duller for his act, and but in the plainer and simpler kind of people the deed of saying is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable ; performance is a kind of will or testament which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it.

Enter TIMON from his cave.

Tim. [Aside] Excellent workman ! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself. 30

Poet. I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him. It must be a personating of himself ; a satire against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulency. 34

Tim. [Aside] Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work ? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men ? Do so, I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him ;
 Then do we sin against our own estate
 When we may profit meet and come too late. 40

Pain. True ;
 When the day serves, before black-corner'd night,
 Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.

Come.

Tim. [Aside] I'll meet you at the turn.
 What a god's gold, 45

That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple
 Than where swine feed !
 'Tis thou that rig'st the bark and plough'st
 the foam.

Settlest admired reverence in a slave. 49
To thee be worship! and thy saints for aye
Be crown'd with plagues, that thee alone
obey!

Fit I meet them. [Advancing from his cave.]

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!

Pain. Our late noble master!

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest
men?

Poet. Sir, 55

Having often of your open bounty tasted, Hearing you were retir'd, your friends
fall'n off,

Whose thankless natures—O abhorred
spirits!—

Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—

What! to you, 60

Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence

To their whole being! I am rapt, and cannot cover

The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked: men may see't the better. 65

You that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen and known.

Pain. He and myself

Have travail'd in the great show'r of your gifts,

And sweetly felt it.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men.

Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service. 70

Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I requite you?

Can you eat roots, and drink cold water—
No?

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you
service.

Tim. Y'are honest men. Y'have heard that I have gold;

I am sure you have. Speak truth; y'are honest men. 75

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord; but therefore

Came not my friend nor I.

Tim. Good honest men! Thou draw'st a counterfeit

Best in all Athens. Th'art indeed the best;
Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord. 80

Tim. E'en so, sir, as I say. [To the Poet]
And for thy fiction,

Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth

That thou art even natural in thine art.
But for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,

I must needs say you have a little fault. 85 Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you; neither wish I

You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your honour

To make it known to us.

Tim. You'll take it ill.

Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Will you indeed?

Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord. 90

Tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave

That mightily deceives you.

Both. Do we, my lord?

Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him
dissemble,

Know his gross patchery, love him, feed
him,

Keep in your bosom; yet remain assur'd 95
That he's a made-up villain.

Pain. I know not such, my lord.

Poet. Nor I.

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you gold,

Rid me these villains from your companies.
Hang them or stab them, drown them in a draught, 100

Confound them by some course, and come
to me,

I'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord; let's know
them.

Tim. You that way, and you this—but two in company;

Each man apart, all single and alone, 105
Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.

[To the Painter] If, where thou art, two villains shall not be,

Come not near him. [To the Poet] If thou wouldst not reside

But where one villain is, then him abandon.—

Hence, pack! there's gold; you came for gold, ye slaves. 110

[To the Painter] You have work for me;
there's payment; hence!

[To the Poet] You are an alchemist; make gold of that.—

Out, rascal dogs!

[Beats and drives them out.]

Enter FLAVIUS and two Senators.

Flav. It is vain that you would speak with Timon;

For he is set so only to himself 115
That nothing but himself which looks like
man

Is friendly with him.

1 Sen. Bring us to his cave.

It is our part and promise to th' Athenians
To speak with Timon.

2 Sen. At all times alike

Men are not still the same; 'twas time and
griefs 120

That fram'd him thus. Time, with his fairer
hand,

Offering the fortunes of his former days,
The former man may make him. Bring us
to him,

And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave.

Peace and content be here! Lord Timon!

Timon! 125

Look out, and speak to friends. Th'
Athenians

By two of their most reverend Senate greet
thee.

Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter TIMON out of his cave.

Tim. Thou sun that comforts, burn.

Speak and be hang'd! 129

For each true word a blister, and each false
Be as a cauterizing to the root o' th' tongue,
Consuming it with speaking!

1 Sen. Worthy Timon—

Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

1 Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee,
Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague, 135

Could I but catch it for them.

1 Sen. O, forget

What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
The senators with one consent of love Entreat thee back to Athens, who have thought

On special dignities, which vacant lie 140
For thy best use and wearing.

2 Sen. They confess

Toward thee forgetfulness too general,
gross;

Which now the public body, which doth seldom

Play the recanter, feeling in itself
A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal 145

Of it own fail, restraining aid to Timon,
And send forth us to make their sorrowed render,

Together with a recompense more fruitful Than their offence can weigh down by the dram;

Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and
wealth 150

As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs

And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;

Surprise me to the very brink of tears. 154

Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes,
And I'll bewep these comforts, worthy senators.

1 Sen. Therefore so please thee to return
with us,

And of our Athens, thine and ours, to take The captainship, thou shalt be met with
thanks,

Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good
name 160

Live with authority. So soon we shall drive
back

Of Alcibiades th' approaches wild,
Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.

2 Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword Against the walls of Athens.

1 Sen. Therefore, Timon—

Tim. Well, sir, I will. Therefore I will, sir, thus: 166

If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,

That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair
Athens,

And take our goodly aged men by th'
beards, 170

Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war,

Then let him know—and tell him Timon speaks it

In pity of our aged and our youth— 174

I cannot choose but tell him that I care
not,

And let him take't at worst; for their knives care not,

While you have throats to answer. For
myself,

There's not a whittle in th' unruly camp
But I do prize it at my love before

The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave you 180

To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not, all's in vain.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph;
It will be seen to-morrow. My long sickness

Of health and living now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live

still; 186

Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

1 Sen. We speak in vain.

Tim. But yet I love my country, and am
not

One that rejoices in the common wreck, 190
As common bruit doth put it.

1 Sen. That's well spoke.

Tim. Commend me to my loving country-
men—

1 Sen. These words become your lips as they pass thorough them.

2 Sen. And enter in our ears like great triumphers

In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them, 195
And tell them that, to ease them of their

griefs,

Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches,
losses,

Their pangs of love, with other incident
throes

That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them— 200

I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades'
wrath.

1 Sen. I like this well ; he will return again.

Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,

That mine own use invites me to cut down, And shortly must I fell it. Tell my friends, Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree ²⁰⁶ From high to low throughout, that whoso please

To stop affliction, let him take his haste, Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe, And hang himself. I pray you do my greeting. ²¹⁰

Flav. Trouble him no further ; thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again ; but say to Athens

Timon hath made his everlasting mansion Upon the beached verge of the salt flood, Who once a day with his embossed froth ²¹⁵ The turbulent surge shall cover. Thither come,

And let my gravestone be your oracle. Lips, let sour words go by and language end :

What is amiss, plague and infection mend ! Graves only be men's works and death their gain ! ²²⁰

Sun, hide thy beams. Timon hath done his reign. [Exit Timon into his cave.]

1 Sen. His discontents are unremovably Coupled to nature.

2 Sen. Our hope in him is dead. Let us return ²²⁴

And strain what other means is left unto us In our dear peril.

1 Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Before the walls of Athens.

Enter two other Senators with a Messenger.

1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd ; are his files

As full as thy report ?

Mess. I have spoke the least. Besides, his expedition promises Present approach.

2 Sen. We stand much hazard if they bring not Timon. ⁵

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend,

Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,

Yet our old love had a particular force, And made us speak like friends. This man was riding

From Alcibiades to Timon's cave ¹⁰ With letters of entreaty, which imported His fellowship i' th' cause against your city, In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter the other Senators, from Timon.

1 Sen. Here come our brothers.

3 Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.

The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring

Doth choke the air with dust. In, and prepare. ¹⁵

Ours is the fall, I fear ; our foes the snare. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The woods. Timon's cave, and a rude tomb seen.

Enter a Soldier in the woods, seeking Timon.

Sold. By al' description this should be the place.

Who's here ? Speak, ho ! No answer ? What is this ?

Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span.

Some beast rear'd this ; here does not live a man.

Dead, sure ; and this his grave. What's on this tomb

I cannot read ; the character I'll take with wax. ⁶

Our captain hath in every figure skill, An ag'd interpreter, though young in days ; Before proud Athens he's set down by this, Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. ¹⁰ [Exit.]

SCENE IV. Before the walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter ALCIBIADES with his Powers before Athens.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town

Our terrible approach.

Sound a parley. The Senators appear upon the walls.

Till now you have gone on and fill'd the time

With all licentious measure, making your wills

The scope of justice ; till now, myself, and such ⁵

As slept within the shadow of your power, Have wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd

Our sufferance vainly. Now the time is flush,

When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,

Cries of itself ' No more ! ' Now breathless wrong ¹⁰

Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease,

And pury insolence shall break his wind With fear and horrid flight.

1 Sen. Noble and young, When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,

Ere thou hadst power or we had cause of fear, ¹⁵

We sent to thee, to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

2 Sen. So did we woo Transformed Timon to our city's love
By humble message and by promis'd
means. 20

We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

1 Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands from whom You have receiv'd your griefs; nor are they such

That these great tow'rs, trophies, and schools, should fall
For private faults in them.

2 Sen. Nor are they living 26
Who were the motives that you first went
out;

Shame, that they wanted cunning, in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread. 30

By decimation and a tithed death—
If thy revenges hunger for that food Which nature loathes—take thou the destin'd tenth,

And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted.

1 Sen. All have not offended; 35
For those that were, it is not square to take,

On those that are, revenge: crimes, like
lands,

Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman, Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy
rage;

Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin 40
Which, in the bluster of thy wrath, must
fall

With those that have offended. Like a shepherd

Approach the fold and cull th' infected
forth,

But kill not all together.

2 Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile
Than hew to't with thy sword.

1 Sen. Set but thy foot Against our rampir'd gates and they shall
ope, 47

So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before
To say thou't enter friendly.

2 Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else, 50

That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress
And not as our confusion, all thy powers Shall make their harbour in our town till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports. 55
Those enemies of Timon's and mine own, Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,

Fall, and no more. And, to atone your fear
With my more noble meaning, not a man Shall pass his quarter or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds, 61
But shall be render'd to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.
Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

[The Senators descend and open the gates]

Enter a Soldier as a Messenger.

Sol. My noble General, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' th' sea; 66
And on his grave-stone this insculpture,
which

With wax I brought away, whose soft impression

Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcibiades reads the Epitaph.

'Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft; 70

Seek not my name. A plague consume you wicked caitiffs left!

Here lie I, Timon, who alive all living men did hate.

Pass by, and curse thy fill; but pass, and stay not here thy gait.'

These well express in thee thy latter spirits
Though thou abhorr'dst in us our humar
griefs, 71

Scorn'dst our brain's flow, and those our droplets which

From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye

On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon, of whose memory 8

Hereafter more. Bring me into your city
And I will use the olive, with my sword;

Make war breed peace, make peace stin war, make each

Prescribe to other, as each other's leech.
Let our drums strike. [Exeunt]

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and certain Commoners over the stage.

Flav. Hence ! home, you idle creatures, get you home.

Is this a holiday ? What ! know you not, Being mechanical, you ought not walk Upon a labouring day without the sign Of your profession ? Speak, what trade art thou ? 5

1 Cit. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron and thy rule ?

What dost thou with thy best apparel on ? You, sir, what trade are you ?

2 Cit. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler. 11

Mar. But what trade art thou ? Answer me directly.

2 Cit. A trade, sir, that I hope I may use with a safe conscience, which is indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

Mar. What trade, thou knave ? Thou naughty knave, what trade ? 15

2 Cit. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me ; yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What mean'st thou by that ? Mend me, thou saucy fellow !

2 Cit. Why, sir, cobble you. 20

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou ?

2 Cit. Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl. I meddle with no tradesman's matters nor women's matters, but with awl. I am indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes. When they are in great danger, I re-cover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day ?

Why dost thou lead these men about the streets ? 29

2 Cit. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But indeed, sir, we make holiday to see Cæsar, and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice ? What conquest brings he home ?

What tributaries follow him to Rome, To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels ? 35

You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things !

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, Knew you not Pompey ? Many a time and oft

Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,

To tow'rs and windows, yea, to chimney-tops, 40

Your infants in your arms, and there have sat

The livelong day, with patient expectation, To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome.

And when you saw his chariot but appear,
Have you not made an universal shout, 45
That Tiber trembled underneath her banks,
To hear the replication of your sounds
Made in her concave shores ?
And do you now put on your best attire ?
And do you now cull out a holiday ? 50
And do you now strew flowers in his way
That comes in triumph over Pompey's
blood ?

Be gone !
Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague 55
That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and for this fault

Assemble all the poor men of your sort ; Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your
tears

Into the channel, till the lowest stream 60
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

[Exeunt all the Commoners.
See whe'r their basest metal be not mov'd ;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol ;
This way will I. Disrobe the images 65
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.

Mar. May we do so ?
You know it is the feast of Lupercal.

Flav. It is no matter ; let no images 69
Be hung with Cæsar's trophies. I'll about,
And drive away the vulgar from the streets ;
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.

These growing feathers pluck'd from Cæsar's wing
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch, Who else would soar above the view of
men, 75

And keep us all in servile fearfulness.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Rome. A public place.

Music. Enter CÆSAR ; ANTONY, for the course ; CALPHURNIA, PORTIA, DECIUS, CICERO, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCA ;
a great crowd following, among them a Soothsayer ; after them, MARULLUS and FLAVIUS.

Cæs. Calphurnia.

Casca. Peace, ho ! Cæsar speaks.
[Music ceases.]

Cæs. Calphurnia.

Cal. Here, my lord.

Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonius'
way

When he doth run his course. Antonius !
Ant. Cæsar, my lord. 5

Cæs. Forget not in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calphurnia ; for our elders say,
The barren, touched in this holy chase, 8
Shake off their sterile curse.

Ant. I shall remember.

When Cæsar says 'Do this', it is perform'd
Cæs. Set on, and leave no ceremony out.
[Music.]

Sooth. Cæsar !

Cæs. Ha ! Who calls ?

Casca. Bid every noise be still. Peace yet again. [Music ceases.]

Cæs. Who is it in the press that calls on
me ?

I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music Cry 'Cæsar !' Speak. Cæsar is turn'd to hear.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cæs. What man is that ?

Bru. A soothsayer bids you beware the ides of March.

Cæs. Set him before me ; let me see his face. 20

Cas. Fellow, come from the throng ; look upon Cæsar.

Cæs. What say'st thou to me now ? Speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cæs. He is a dreamer ; let us leave him.
Pass. [Sennet. Exeunt all but Brutus
and Cassius.]

Cas. Will you go see the order of the course ? 25

Bru. Not I.

Cas. I pray you do.

Bru. I am not gamesome : I do lack some part

Of that quick spirit that is in Antony. 29
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires ;
I'll leave you.

Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of
late ;

I have not from your eyes that gentleness
And show of love as I was wont to have.

You bear too stubborn and too strange a
hand 35

Over your friend that loves you.

Bru. Cassius,

Be not deceiv'd. If I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance

Merely upon myself. Vexed I am
Of late with passions of some difference, 40

Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil, perhaps, to my behaviours ;

But let not therefore my good friends be

griev'd—
Among which number, Cassius, be you

one—
Nor construe any further my neglect 45

Than that poor Brutus, with himself at
war,

Forgets the shows of love to other men.
Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion,

By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried

Thoughts of great value, worthy cogita-
tions. 50

Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face ?

Bru. No, Cassius ; for the eye sees not itself

But by reflection, by some other things.

Cas. 'Tis just ;

And it is very much lamented, Brutus, 55
That you have no such mirrors as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,

Where many of the best respect in Rome—Except immortal Cæsar—speaking of Brutus, 60

And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,

That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me ? 65

Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear ;

And since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of. 70

And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus :
Were I a common laughter, or did use
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protester ; if you know 74
That I do fawn on men and hug them hard,
And after scandal them ; or if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

[Flourish and shout.]

Bru. What means this shouting ? I do fear the people

Choose Cæsar for their king.

Cas. Ay, do you fear it ? 80

Then must I think you would not have it so.

Bru. I would not, Cassius ; yet I love him well.

But wherefore do you hold me here so long ?
What is it that you would impart to me ?
If it be aught toward the general good, 85
Set honour in one eye and death i' th' other,

And I will look on both indifferently ;
For let the gods so speed me as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus, 90

As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, honour is the subject of my story.
I cannot tell what you and other men
Think of this life ; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be as live to be 95
In awe of such a thing as I myself.

I was born free as Cæsar ; so were you.
We both have fed as well, and we can both Endure the winter's cold as well as he.

For once, upon a raw and gusty day, 100

The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores,
Cæsar said to me ' Dar'st thou, Cassius, now
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point ? ' Upon the word,

Accoutred as I was, I plunged in 105

And bade him follow. So indeed he did.
The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews, throwing it aside

And stemming it with hearts of controversy ;
But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,
Cæsar cried ' Help me, Cassius, or I sink ! ' 112

I, as Æneas, our great ancestor, Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder

The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber

Did I the tired Cæsar. And this man 115

Is now become a god ; and Cassius is A wretched creature, and must bend his body

If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him.

He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And when the fit was on him I did mark 120

How he did shake. 'Tis true, this god did shake.

His coward lips did from their colour fly,
And that same eye, whose bend doth awe
the world,

Did lose his lustre. I did hear him groan.
Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the Romans 125

Mark him, and write his speeches in their
books,

Alas ! it cried ' Give me some drink,
Titinius '—

As a sick girl. Ye gods ! it doth amaze me
A man of such a feeble temper should

So get the start of the majestic world, 130
And bear the palm alone. [Shout. Flourish.]

Bru. Another general shout !

I do believe that these applauses are
For some new honours that are heap'd on Cæsar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world 135

Like a Colossus, and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.

Men at some time are masters of their fates :
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.

' Brutus ' and ' Cæsar '. What should be in that ' Cæsar ' ? 142

Why should that name be sounded more than yours ?

Write them together : yours is as fair a
name.

Sound them : it doth become the mouth as
well. 145

Weigh them : it is as heavy. Conjure with
'em :

' Brutus ' will start a spirit as soon as
' Cæsar '.

Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd! 150

Rome, thou has lost the breed of noble bloods!

When went there by an age, since the great
flood,

But it was fam'd with more than with one
man?

When could they say, till now, that talk'd
of Rome,

That her wide walls encompass'd but one
man? 155

Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough,
When there is in it but one only man.

O! you and I have heard our fathers say There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd

Th' eternal devil to keep his state in Rome
As easily as a king. 161

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;

What you would work me to, I have some aim;

How I have thought of this, and of these times, 164

I shall recount hereafter. For this present,
I would not, so with love I might entreat
you,

Be any further mov'd. What you have said
I will consider; what you have to say
I will with patience hear; and find a time Both meet to hear and answer such high
things. 170

Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this:
Brutus had rather be a villager
Than to repute himself a son of Rome
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us. 175

Cas. I am glad that my weak words Have struck but thus much show of fire from Brutus.

Re-enter CÆSAR and his Train.

Bru. The games are done, and Cæsar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve, 179

And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note to-day.

Bru. I will do so. But, look you, Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Cæsar's brow,
And all the rest look like a chidden train;
Calphurnia's cheek is pale, and Cicero 185
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol, Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.

Cas. Antonius! 190

Ant. Cæsar?

Cas. Let me have men about me that are fat;

Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o'
nights.

Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much. Such men are
dangerous. 195

Ant. Fear him not, Cæsar, he's not
dangerous;

He is a noble Roman, and well given.

Cas. Would he were fatter! But I fear him not.

Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid 200
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads
much,

He is a great observer, and he looks Quite through the deeds of men. He loves no plays,

As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music.
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort
As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his
spirit 206

That could be mov'd to smile at anything.
Such men as he be never at heart's ease
Whiles they behold a greater than themselves,

And therefore are they very dangerous. 210
I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd

Than what I fear; for always I am Cæsar.
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

[Sennet. Exeunt Cæsar and his Train.]

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak.
Would you speak with me? 215

Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc'd to-day,

That Cæsar looks so sad?

Casca. Why, you were with him, were you not?

Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanc'd. 219

Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him; and being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a-shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too. 224

Cas. They shouted thrice; what was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offer'd him thrice?

Casca. Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting by mine honest neighbours shouted. 230

Cas. Who offer'd him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle
Casca. 233

Casca. I can as well be hang'd as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown—yet 'twas not a crown neither,
'twas one of these coronets—and, as I told you, he put it by once; but for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offered it to him again; then he put it by again; but to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time; he put it the third time by; and still as he refus'd it, the rabblement hooted, and clapp'd their chopt hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Cæsar refus'd the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar; for he swooned and fell down at it. And for mine own part I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But soft, I pray you. What, did Cæsar swoon?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like. He hath the falling sickness.

Cas. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you, and I,

And honest Casca, we have the falling sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that, but I am sure Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him, according as he pleas'd and displeas'd them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Bru. What said he when he came unto himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he refus'd the crown, he pluckt me ope his doublet, and offer'd them his throat to cut. An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said anything amiss, he desir'd their worships to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried 'Alas, good soul!' and forgave him with all their hearts. But there's no heed to be taken of them; if Cæsar had stabb'd their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that, he came thus sad away?

Casca. Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say anything?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' th' face again. But those that understood him smil'd at one another, and shook their heads; but for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promis'd forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Cas. Good; I will expect you.

Casca. Do so. Farewell, both. [Exit.

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be!

He was quick mettle when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now, in execution Of any bold or noble enterprise, However he puts on this tardy form.

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit, Which gives men stomach to digest his words

With better appetite.

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave you.

To-morrow, if you please to speak with me, I will come home to you; or, if you will, Come home to me, and I will wait for you,

Cas. I will do so. Till then, think of the world. [Exit Brutus.

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see, Thy honourable metal may be wrought From that it is dispos'd. Therefore it is meet

That noble minds keep ever with their likes;

For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd? Cæsar doth bear me hard; but he loves Brutus.

If I were Brutus now and he were Cassius, He should not humour me. I will this night, In several hands, in at his windows throw, As if they came from several citizens, Writings, all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscurely Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at. And, after this, let Cæsar seat him sure; For we will shake him, or worse days endure. [Exit.

SCENE III. Rome. A street.

Thunder and lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CASCA, with his sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Casca. Brought you Cæsar home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?

Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero, I have seen tempests when the scolding winds

Have riv'd the knotty oaks, and I have seen Th' ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam,

To be exalted with the threat'ning clouds;
But never till to-night, never till now,
Did I go through a tempest dropping fire. 10
Either there is a civil strife in heaven,
Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave—you know him well by sight— 15

He'd up his left hand, which did flame and burn

Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand,

Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd. Besides—I ha' not since put up my sword—

Against the Capitol I met a lion, 20

Who glaz'd upon me, and went surly by Without annoying me; and there were drawn

Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women, Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw

Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets. 25

And yesterday the bird of night did sit, Even at noon-day, upon the market-place, Hooting and shrieking. When these prodigies

Do so conjointly meet, let not men say 'These are their reasons—they are natural', For I believe they are portentous things 31 Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time; But men may construe things after their fashion,

Clean from the purpose of the things themselves. 35

Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow?

Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius Send word to you he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good night, then, Casca; this disturbed sky 39

Is not to walk in.

Casca. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit Cicero.]

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Casca, by your voice.

Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this!

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace so?

Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults. 45

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,

Submitting me unto the perilous night, And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see, Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone;

And when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open 50

The breast of heaven, I did present myself Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble When the most mighty gods by tokens send Such dreadful heralds to astonish us. 56

Cas. You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of life

That should be in a Roman you do want, Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,

And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder, 60

To see the strange impatience of the heavens;

But if you would consider the true cause— Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,

Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind; 64

Why old men, fools, and children calculate; Why all these things change from their ordinance,

Their natures and preformed faculties, To monstrous quality—why, you shall find That heaven hath infus'd them with these spirits,

To make them instruments of fear and warning 70

Unto some monstrous state.

Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man Most like this dreadful night

That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars

As doth the lion in the Capitol; 75

A man no mightier than thyself or me, In personal action, yet prodigious grown,

And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.

Casca. 'Tis Cæsar that you mean, is it not, Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is; for Romans now 80

Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors.

But woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,

And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits;

Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish.

Casca. Indeed they say the senators to-morrow 85

Mean to establish Cæsar as a king; And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,

In every place save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger then; 89

Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius. Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;

Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat.

Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass, Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron, 94

Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.

If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do bear,
I can shake off at pleasure. [Thunder still.]

Casca. So can I; 100

So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Cæsar be a tyrant,
then? 103

Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep;
He were no lion, were not Romans hinds.
Those that with haste will make a mighty
fire

Begin it with haste will make a mighty
fire
Begin it with haste will make a mighty
fire
Begin it with haste will make a mighty
fire

What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves

For the base matter to illuminate 110

So vile a thing as Cæsar! But, O grief, Where hast thou led me? I perhaps speak
this

Before a willing bondman; then I know
My answer must be made. But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent. 115

Casca. You speak to Casca, and to such a man

That is no fleering tell-tale. Hold, my hand.
Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far
As who goes farthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made. 120

Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd
already

Some certain of the noblest-minded
Romans

To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know by this they stay for me 125
In Pompey's porch; for now, this fearful
night,

There is no stir or walking in the streets,
And the complexion of the element
In favour's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible. 130

Enter CINNA.

Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait;

He is a friend. Cinna, where haste you so?

Cin. To find out you. Who's that?
Metellus Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca, one incorporate 135
To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this!

There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.

Cas. Am I not stay'd for? Tell me. 139

Cin. Yes, you are. O Cassius, if you could
But win the noble Brutus to our party—

Cas. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this paper,

And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it; and throw
this

In at his window; set this up with wax 145

Upon old Brutus' statue. All this done, Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.

Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?

Cin. All but Metellus Cimber, and he's gone 149

To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie,
And so bestow these papers as you bade me.

Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre. [Exit Cinna.]

Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day

See Brutus at his house. Three parts of him

Is ours already, and the man entire 155

Upon the next encounter yields him ours.

Casca. O, he sits high in all the people's
hearts;

And that which would appear offence in us

His countenance, like richest alchemy,

Will change to virtue and to worthiness. 160

Cas. Him and his worth and our great need of him

You have right well conceited. Let us go,

For it is after midnight; and ere day

We will awake him and be sure of him.

[Exeunt.]

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Rome.

Enter BRUTUS in his orchard.

Bru. What, Lucius, ho!

I cannot by the progress of the stars

Give guess how near to day. Lucius, I say!

I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.

When, Lucius, when? Awake, I say!

What, Lucius! 5

Enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?

Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius;

When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit.]

Bru. It must be by his death; and for my part,

I know no personal cause to spurn at him,

But for the general: he would be crown'd.

How that might change his nature, there's the question.

It is the bright day that brings forth the adder,

And that craves wary walking. Crown him

—that! 15

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him

That at his will he may do danger with.
Th' abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins Remorse from power; and to speak truth of Cæsar,

I have not known when his affections
sway'd 20

More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof

That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost
round,

He then unto the ladder turns his back, 25
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees

By which he did ascend. So Cæsar may.
Then, lest he may, prevent. And since the quarrel

Will bear no colour for the thing he is, Fashion it thus—that what he is, augmented, 30

Would run to these and these extremities;
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg,
Which, hatch'd, would as his kind grow mischievous,

And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet,
sir. 35

Searching the window for a flint, I found
This paper, thus seal'd up; and I am sure
It did not lie there when I went to bed.

[Giving him a letter.]

Bru. Get you to bed again, it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March?

Luc. I know not, sir. 41

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me
word.

Luc. I will, sir. [Exit.]

Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air, Give so much light that I may read by them. [Opens the letter and reads.]

'Brutus, thou sleep'st. Awake, and see
thyself.

Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress!
Brutus, thou sleep'st; awake.'

Such instigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up. 50

'Shall Rome, &c.' Thus must I piece it out:
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe?
What, Rome?

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a
king. 54

'Speak, strike, redress!' Am I entreated To speak and strike? O Rome, I make thee promise,

If the redress will follow, thou receivest
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fifteen days.

[Knocking within.]

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks. [Exit LUCIUS.]

Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar, 61

I have not slept.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma or a hideous dream. 65

The Genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door 70

Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.

Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears

And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them 75
By any mark of favour

Bru. Let 'em enter.
[Exit LUCIUS.]

They are the faction. O conspiracy, Sham'st thou to show thy dang'rous brow
by night, 78

When evils are most free? O, then by day
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough
To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy;

Hide it in smiles and affability!
For if thou path, thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention. 85

Enter the conspirators, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest.

Good morrow, Brutus. Do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all
night.

Know I these men that come along with
you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here 90

But honours you; and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself
Which every noble Roman bears of you.
This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too. 95

Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna;
And this, Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.
What watchful cares do interpose themselves

Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word ? 100

[They whisper.

Dec. Here lies the east. Doth not the day break here ?

Casca. No.

Cin. O, pardon, sir, it doth ; and yon grey lines

That fret the clouds are messengers of day.

Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceiv'd. 105

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises ; Which is a great way growing on the south, Weighing the youthful season of the year. Some two months hence up higher toward the north

He first presents his fire ; and the high east Stands as the Capitol, directly here. 111

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.

Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath. If not the face of men,

The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse, 115

If these be motives weak, break off betimes,

And every man hence to his idle bed.

So let high-sighted tyranny range on, Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,

As I am sure they do, bear fire enough 120

To kindle cowards, and to steel with valour The melting spirits of women, then, countrymen,

What need we any spur but our own cause To prick us to redress ? What other bond Than secret Romans that have spoke the word 125

And will not palter ? And what other oath Than honesty to honesty engag'd

That this shall be or we will fall for it ?

Swear priests and cowards and men cautelous, 129

Old feeble carriages and such suffering souls That welcome wrongs ; unto bad causes swear

Such creatures as men doubt ; but do not stain

The even virtue of our enterprise, Nor th' insuppressive mettle of our spirits, To think that or our cause or our performance 135

Did need an oath ; when every drop of blood

That every Roman bears, and nobly bears, Is guilty of a several bastardy,

If he do break the smallest particle 139

Of any promise that hath pass'd from him.

Cas. But what of Cicero ? Shall we sound him ?

I think he will stand very strong with us.

Casca. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means.

Met. O, let us have him ; for his silver hairs

Will purchase us a good opinion, 145
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds.

It shall be said his judgment rul'd our hands ;

Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,

But all be buried in his gravity.

Bru. O, name him not ! Let us not break with him ; 150

For he will never follow any thing

That other men begin.

Cas.

Then leave him out.

Casca. Indeed he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but only Cæsar ?

Cas. Decius, well urg'd. I think it is not meet 155

Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar, Should outlive Cæsar We shall find of him

A shrewd contriver ; and you know his means,

If he improve them, may well stretch so far As to annoy us all ; which to prevent, 160

Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius,

To cut the head off and then hack the limbs—

Like wrath in death and envy afterwards ; For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar. 165

Let's be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius. We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar,

And in the spirit of men there is no blood. O that we then could come by Cæsar's spirit,

And not dismember Cæsar ! But, alas, 170

Cæsar must bleed for it ! And, gentle friends,

Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully ; Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,

Not hew him as a carcase fit for hounds ; And let our hearts, as subtle masters do, 175

Stir up their servants to an act of rage, And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make

Our purpose necessary, and not envious ; Which so appearing to the common eyes,

We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers. And for Mark Antony, think not of him ;

For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm When Cæsar's head is off.

Cas.

Yet I fear him ;

For in the engrafted love he bears to Cæsar—

Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him ! 185

If he love Cæsar, all that he can do

Is to himself take thought and die for Cæsar ;

And that were much he should, for he is given

To sports, to wildness, and much company.

Treb. There is no fear in him. Let him not die ;
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter. ¹⁹⁰

[Clock strikes.]

Bru. Peace ! Count the clock.

Cas. The clock hath stricken three.

Treb. 'Tis time to part.

Cas. But it is doubtful yet Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day or
no ;

For he is superstitious grown of late, ¹⁹⁵
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies.
It may be these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustom'd terror of this night,
And the persuasion of his augurers, ²⁰⁰
May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that. If he be so resolv'd,
I can o'ersway him ; for he loves to hear
That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes, ²⁰⁵

Lions with toils, and men with flatterers ;
But when I tell him he hates flatterers,
He says he does, being then most flattered.
Let me work ;

For I can give his humour the true bent, ²¹⁰
And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.

Bru. By the eighth hour. Is that the uttermost ?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not
then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard, ²¹⁵

Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey.

I wonder none of you have thought of him.

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by
him.

He loves me well, and I have given him reasons ; ²¹⁹

Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.

Cas. The morning comes upon's. We'll leave you, Brutus.

And, friends, disperse yourselves ; but all
remember

What you have said, and show yourselves true Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily ;

Let not our looks put on our purposes, ²²⁵
But bear it as our Roman actors do,

With untir'd spirits and formal constancy.
And so good morrow to you every one.

[Exeunt all but Brutus.]

Boy ! Lucius ! Fast asleep ? It is no
matter ;

Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber. ²³⁰

Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies Which busy care draws in the brains of
men ;

Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter PORTIA.

Por. Brutus, my lord !

Bru. Portia, what mean you ? Wherefore rise you now ?

It is not for your health thus to commit ²³⁵
Your weak condition to the raw cold
morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. Y'have un-gently, Brutus,

Stole from my bed ; and yesternight at supper

You suddenly arose and walk'd about, ²³⁹
Musing and sighing, with your arms across ;

And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd upon me with ungentle looks.

I urg'd you further ; then you scratch'd
your head

And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot.

Yet I insisted ; yet you answer'd not, ²⁴⁵
But with an angry wafture of your hand

Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did,
Fearing to strengthen that impatience

Which seem'd too much enkindled ; and
withal

Hoping it was but an effect of humour, ²⁵⁰
Which sometime hath his hour with every
man.

It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep ;
And, could it work so much upon your
shape

As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,

I should not know you Brutus. Dear my lord, ²⁵⁵

Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and, were he not in health,

He would embrace the means to come by it.

Bru. Why, so I do. Good Portia, go to bed. ²⁶⁰

Por. Is Brutus sick, and is it physical
To walk unbraced and suck up the humours

Of the dank morning ? What, is Brutus
sick,

And will he steal out of his wholesome bed,
To dare the vile contagion of the night, ²⁶⁵

And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air
To add unto his sickness ? No, my Brutus ;

You have some sick offence within your
mind,

Which by the right and virtue of my
place

I ought to know of ; and upon my knees ²⁷⁰
I charm you, by my once-commended
beauty,

By all your vows of love, and that great
vow

Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, your self, your half,

Why you are heavy—and what men to-night

Have had resort to you ; for here have been Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.

Within the bond of marriage, tell me,
Brutus,

Is it excepted I should know no secrets
That appertain to you ? Am I your self
But, as it were, in sort or limitation ?
To keep with you at meals, comfort your
bed,

And talk to you sometimes ? Dwell I but in the suburbs

Of your good pleasure ? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable
wife,

As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.

I grant I am a woman ; but withal
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife.

I grant I am a woman ; but withal
A woman well reputed, Cato's daughter.

Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father'd and so husbanded ?

Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose
'em.

I have made strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound

Here, in the thigh. Can I bear that with patience,

And not my husband's secrets ?

Bru. O ye gods,

Render me worthy of this noble wife !
[Knocking within.

Hark, hark ! one knocks. Portia, go in awhile,

And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.

All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the charactery of my sad brows.

Leave me with haste. [Exit Portia.

Lucius, who's that knocks ?

Enter LUCIUS and LIGARIUS.

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak
with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake
of.

Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius, how ?

Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Bru. O, what a time have you chose out,
brave Caius,

To wear a kerchief ! Would you were not sick !

Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand

Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand,
Ligarius,

Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow
before,

I here discard my sickness. [Pulls off his kerchief] Soul of Rome !

Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins !
Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up

My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible ;

Yea, get the better of them. What's to do ?
Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick ?

Bru. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,

I shall unfold to thee, as we are going
To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fir'd I follow you

To do I know not what ; but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on. [Thunder.

Bru. Follow me, then.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Rome. Cæsar's house.

Thunder and lightning. Enter JULIUS CÆSAR in his night-gown.

Cæs. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night.

Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried
out

' Help, ho ! They murder Cæsar ! ' Who's within ?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord ?

Cæs. Go bid the priests do present
sacrifice,

And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Enter CALPHURNIA.

Cal. What mean you, Cæsar ? Think you to walk forth ?

You shall not stir out of your house to-day.
Cæs. Cæsar shall forth ; the things that threaten'd me

Ne'er look'd but on my back. When they shall see

The face of Cæsar, they are vanished.

Cal. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies, Yet now they fright me. There is one within,

Besides the things that we have heard and
seen,

Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.

A lioness hath whelped in the streets,
And graves have yawn'd and yielded up their dead ;

Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of
war,

Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol;
The noise of battle hurtled in the air;
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan,
And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.

O Cæsar, these things are beyond all use, 25
And I do fear them!

Cæs. What can be avoided,
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth; for these predictions

Are to the world in general as to Cæsar.

Cal. When beggars die there are no
comets seen: 30

The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Cæs. Cowards die many times before their deaths:

The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear, 35

Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

Re-enter Servant.

What say the augurers?

Serv. They would not have you to stir
forth to-day.

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast. 40

Cæs. The gods do this in shame of cowardice.

Cæsar should be a beast without a heart,
If he should stay at home to-day for fear.
No, Cæsar shall not. Danger knows full well
That Cæsar is more dangerous than he: 45
We are two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible;
And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas, my lord,
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day. Call it my fear 50
That keeps you in the house, and not your
own.

We'll send Mark Antony to the Senate
House,

And he shall say you are not well to-day.
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Cæs. Mark Antony shall say I am not
well; 55

And for thy humour I will stay at home.

Enter DECIVS.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Dec. Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Cæsar.

I come to fetch you to the Senate House.

Cæs. And you are come in very happy
time, 60

To bear my greeting to the senators
And tell them that I will not come to-day.
Cannot, is false; and that I dare not,
falsely;

I will not come to-day. Tell them so,
Decius.

Cal. Say he is sick.

Cæs. Shall Cæsar send a lie? 65
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm
so far,

To be afraid to tell greybeards the truth?
Decius, go tell them Cæsar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some cause,

Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so. 70

Cæs. The cause is in my will: I will not
come.

That is enough to satisfy the Senate.
But for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know:
Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at
home. 75

She dreamt to-night she saw my statua,
Which, like a fountain with an hundred
spouts,

Did run pure blood; and many lusty
Romans

Came smiling and did bathe their hands
in it.

And these does she apply for warnings and portents 80

And evils imminent, and on her knee Hath begg'd that I will stay at home today.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted;
It was a vision fair and fortunate. 84

Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd, Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck

Reviving blood, and that great men shall press

For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.
This by Calphurnia's dream is signified. 90

Cæs. And this way have you well expounded it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say—

And know it now: the Senate have concluded

To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar.
If you shall send them word you will not
come, 95

Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock

Apt to be render'd, for some one to say
'Break up the Senate till another time,

When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better dreams'.

If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not
whisper 100

'Lo, Cæsar is afraid'?

Pardon me, Cæsar; for my dear dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this,

And reason to my love is liable.

Cæs. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calphurnia!

I am ashamed I did yield to them. 106

Give me my robe, for I will go.

Enter BRUTUS, LIGARIUS, METELLUS, CASCA, TREBONIUS, CINNA, and PUBLIUS.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow, Cæsar.

Cæs. Welcome, Publius.

What, Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?

Good morrow, Casca. Caius Ligarius, 111

Cæsar was ne'er so much your enemy

As that same ague which hath made you lean.

What is't o'clock?

Bru. Cæsar, 'tis stricken eight.

Cæs. I thank you for your pains and courtesy. 115

Enter ANTONY.

See! Antony, that revels long o' nights,
Is notwithstanding up. Good morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Cæsar.

Cæs. Bid them prepare within.

I am to blame to be thus waited for.

Now, Cinna. Now, Metellus. What,
Trebinius! 120

I have an hour's talk in store for you.

Remember that you call on me to-day;

Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Cæsar, I will. [Aside] And so near will I be,

That your best friends shall wish I had been further. 125

Cæs. Good friends, go in and taste some wine with me;

And we, like friends, will straightway go
together.

Bru. [Aside] That every like is not the same, O Cæsar,

The heart of Brutus earns to think upon!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Rome. A street near the Capitol.

Enter ARTEMIDORUS reading a paper.

Art. 'Cæsar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca;
have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wong'd Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar. If thou beest not immortal, look about you. Security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! 6

Thy lover,

ARTEMIDORUS.'

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this.
My heart laments that virtue cannot live 10

Out of the teeth of emulation.

If thou read this, O Cæsar, thou mayest
live;

If not, the fates with traitors do contrive.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV. Rome. Before the house of Brutus.

Enter PORTIA and LUCIUS.

Por. I prithee, boy, run to the Senate
House.

Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone.
Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

Por. I would have had thee there and here again,

Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do
there. 5

[Aside] O constancy, be strong upon my side!

Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and
tongue!

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.
How hard it is for women to keep counsel!—
Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do? 10

Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?

And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well,

For he went sickly forth; and take good
note

What Cæsar doth, what suitors press to
him. 15

Hark, boy! What noise is that?

Luc. I hear none, madam.

Por. Prithee listen well.

I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow, 20

Which way hast thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.

Por. What is't o'clock?

Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.

Por. Is Cæsar yet gone to the Capitol?

Sooth. Madam, not yet. I go to take my
stand,

To see him pass on to the Capitol. 25

Por. Thou hast some suit to Cæsar, hast thou not?

Sooth. That I have, lady. If it will please
Cæsar

To be so good to Cæsar as to hear me,
I shall beseech him to befriend himself.

Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him? 30

Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.

Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow;

The throng that follows Cæsar at the heels,
Of senators, of prætors, common suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death. 35
I'll get me to a place more void, and there
Speak to great Cæsar as he comes along.

[Exit.

Por. I must go in. [Aside] Ay me, how weak a thing

The heart of woman is ! O Brutus, 39
The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise !
Sure the boy heard me.—Brutus hath a suit
That Cæsar will not grant.—O, I grow faint.—

Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord ;
Say I am merry. Come to me again, 44
And bring me word what he doth say to thee. [Exeunt severally.

ACT THREE.

SCENE I. Rome. A street before the Capitol.

Flourish. Enter CÆSAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, ARTEMI-DORUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and the Soothsayer.

Cæs. The ides of March are come.

Sooth. Ay, Cæsar, but not gone.

Art. Hail, Cæsar ! Read this schedule.

Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-
read,

At your best leisure, this his humble suit. 5

Art. O Cæsar, read mine first ; for mine's a suit

That touches Cæsar nearer. Read it, great
Cæsar.

Cæs. What touches us ourself shall be last serv'd.

Art. Delay not, Cæsar ; read it instantly.

Cæs. What, is the fellow mad ?

Pub. Sirrah, give place. 10

Cæs. What, urge you your petitions in the street ?

Come to the Capitol.

Cæsar enters the Capitol, the rest following.

Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.

Cæs. What enterprise, Popilius ?

Pop. Fare you well.

[Advances to Cæsar.

Bru. What said Popilius Lena ? 15

Cæs. He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive.

I fear our purpose is discovered.

Bru. Look how he makes to Cæsar.
Mark him.

Cæs. Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention.

Brutus, what shall be done ? If this be known, 20

Cassius or Cæsar never shall turn back,
For I will slay myself.

Bru. Cassius, be constant.
Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes ;
For look, he smiles, and Cæsar doth not change.

Cas. Trebonius knows his time ; for look you, Brutus, 25

He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

[Exeunt Antony and Trebonius.

Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber ? Let him
go

And presently prefer his suit to Cæsar.

Bru. He is address'd ; press near and second him.

Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears
your hand. 30

Cæs. Are we all ready ? What is now amiss

That Cæsar and his Senate must redress ?

Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Cæsar, 33

Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
An humble heart. [Kneeling.

Cæs. I must prevent thee, Cimber.

These couchings and these lowly courtesies

Might fire the blood of ordinary men,

And turn pre-ordinance and first decree

Into the law of children. Be not fond 39

To think that Cæsar bears such rebel blood

That will be thaw'd from the true quality

With that which melteth fools—I mean,

sweet words,

Low-crook'd curtsies, and base spaniel
fawning.

Thy brother by decree is banished ;

If thou dost bend, and pray, and fawn for
him, 45

I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.

Know, Cæsar doth not wrong ; nor without cause

Will he be satisfied.

Met. Is there no voice more worthy than
my own 49

To sound more sweetly in great Cæsar's ear
For the repealing of my banish'd brother ?

Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery,
Cæsar,

Desiring thee that Publius Cimber may Have an immediate freedom of repeal. 54

Cæs. What, Brutus !

Cas. Pardon, Cæsar ! Cæsar, pardon !
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,

To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

Cæs. I could be well mov'd, if I were as
you ;

If I could pray to move, prayers would move me ;

But I am constant as the northern star, 60

Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality

There is no fellow in the firmament.

The skies are painted with unnumb'red
sparks,

They are all fire, and every one doth shine ;
But there's but one in all doth hold his
place. 65

So in the world: 'tis furnish'd well with men,
 And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;
 Yet in the number I do know but one
 That unassailable holds on his rank,
 Unshak'd of motion; and that I am he, 70
 Let me a little show it, even in this—
 That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,
 And constant do remain to keep him so.
Cin. O Cæsar!
Cæs. Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus?
Dec. Great Cæsar!
Cæs. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel? 75
Casca. Speak, hands, for me!
[They stab Cæsar. Casca strikes the first, Brutus the last blow.]
Cæs. Et tu, Brute?—Then fall, Cæsar! [Dies.]
Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!
 Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.
Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out 80
 'Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!'
Bru. People and Senators, be not affrighted.
 Fly not; stand still. Ambition's debt is paid.
Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.
Dec. And Cassius too. 85
Bru. Where's Publius?
Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.
Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsar's Should chance—
Bru. Talk not of standing. Publius, good cheer! 90
 There is no harm intended to your person,
 Nor to no Roman else. So tell them, Publius.
Cas. And leave us, Publius, lest that the people,
 Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief.
Bru. Do so; and let no man abide this deed 95
 But we the doers.
 Re-enter TREBONIUS.
Cas. Where is Antony?
Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd.
 Men, wives, and children, stare, cry out, and run,
 As it were doomsday.
Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures.
 That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time, 100

And drawing days out, that men stand upon.
Cas. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life
 Cuts off so many years of fearing death.
Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit.
 So are we Cæsar's friends, that have abridg'd 105
 His time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans, stoop,
 And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood
 Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords.
 Then walk we forth, even to the marketplace, 109
 And waving our red weapons o'er our heads,
 Let's all cry 'Peace, freedom, and liberty!'
Cas. Stoop then, and wash. How many ages hence Shall this our lofty scene be acted over
 In states unborn and accents yet unknown!
Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport, 115
 That now on Pompey's basis lies along
 No worthier than the dust!
Cas. So oft as that shall be,
 So often shall the knot of us be call'd
 The men that gave their country liberty.
Dec. What, shall we forth?
Cas. Ay, every man away. 120
 Brutus shall lead, and we will grace his heels
 With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.
 Enter a Servant.
Bru. Soft, who comes here? A friend of Antony's.
Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel; 124
 Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down;
 And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:
 Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
 Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving.
 Say I love Brutus, and I honour him;
 Say I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd him. 130
 If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony
 May safely come to him, and be resolv'd
 How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death,
 Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead
 So well as Brutus living; but will follow 135
 The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus
 Thorough the hazards of this untrod state
 With all true faith. So says my master Antony.
Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman;
 I never thought him worse. 140
 Tell him, so please him come unto this place,
 He shall be satisfied and, by my honour,
 Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit.
Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish we may. But yet have I a mind ¹⁴⁵
That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Bru. But here comes Antony. Welcome, Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, ¹⁵⁰
Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well.

I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank.
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death's hour; nor no instrument ¹⁵⁵

Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich

With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,
Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek
and smoke, ¹⁵⁹

Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die.
No place will please me so, no mean of death,

As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off, ¹⁶³
The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,

As by our hands and this our present act
You see we do; yet see you but our hands,
And this the bleeding business they have done. ¹⁶⁹

Our hearts you see not; they are pitiful;
And pity to the general wrong of Rome,
As fire drives out fire, so pity pity,
Hath done this deed on Cæsar. For your part,

To you our swords have leaden points,
Mark Antony;

Our arms in strength of malice, and our hearts ¹⁷⁵

Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's

In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient till we have appeas'd ¹⁸⁰

The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cause
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,

Have thus proceeded. ¹⁸³

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand.
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours,
Metellus;

Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Casca, yours.

Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius. ¹⁹⁰

Gentlemen all—alas, what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground

That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,

Either a coward or a flatterer.

That I did love thee, Cæsar, O, 'tis true! ¹⁹⁵
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death

To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood, ²⁰²

It would become me better than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart;

Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand, ²⁰⁶

Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethe.

O world, thou wast the forest to this hart;
And this indeed, O world, the heart of thee!
How like a deer strucken by many princes
Dost thou here lie! ²¹¹

Cas. Mark Antony—

Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius.
The enemies of Cæsar shall say this;
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Cæsar so; ²¹⁵

But what compact mean you to have with us?

Will you be prick'd in number of our friends,

Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands; but was indeed

Sway'd from the point by looking down on Cæsar. ²²⁰

Friends am I with you all, and love you all,
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons

Why and wherein Cæsar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle.
Our reasons are so full of good regard ²²⁵
That were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek;
And am moreover suitor that I may Produce his body to the market-place

And, in the pulpit, as becomes a friend, ²³⁰
 Speak in the order of his funeral.

Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.

Cas. Brutus, a word with you.

[Aside to Brutus] You know not what you do. Do not consent

That Antony speak in his funeral.

Know you how much the people may be mov'd ²³⁵

By that which he will utter ?

Bru. [Aside to Cassius] By your pardon—
 I will myself into the pulpit first,
 And show the reason of our Cæsar's
 death.

What Antony shall speak, I will protest
 He speaks by leave and by permission ; ²⁴⁰
 And that we are contented Cæsar shall Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies.
 It shall advantage more than do us wrong.

Cas. I know not what may fall : I like it
 not.

Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you
 Cæsar's body. ²⁴⁵

You shall not in your funeral speech blame
 us,

But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar ;

And say you do't by our permission ;
 Else shall you not have any hand at all
 About his funeral. And you shall speak ²⁵⁰
 In the same pulpit whereto I am going,
 After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so ;

I do desire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow us. [Exeunt all but Antony.]

Ant. O, pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth, ²⁵⁵

That I am meek and gentle with these butchers !

Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
 That ever lived in the tide of times.
 Woe to the hand that shed this costly
 blood !

Over thy wounds now do I prophesy— ²⁶⁰ Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips

To beg the voice and utterance of my
 tongue—

A curse shall light upon the limbs of men ;
 Domestic fury and fierce civil strife
 Shall cumber all the parts of Italy ; ²⁶⁵
 Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
 And dreadful objects so familiar,
 That mothers shall but smile when they
 behold

Their infants quartered with the hands of war, ²⁶⁹

All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds ;
 And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
 With Atë by his side come hot from hell, Shall in these confines with a monarch's
 voice

Cry ' Havoc ! ' and let slip the dogs of war,

That this foul deed shall smell above the earth ²⁷⁵

With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter Octavius' Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not ?

Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to Rome.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming, ²⁸⁰

And bid me say to you by word of mouth—
 O Cæsar ! [Seeing the body.]

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.

Passion, I see, is catching ; for mine eyes,
 Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
 Began to water. Is thy master coming ?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues
 of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd.

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous
 Rome,

No Rome of safety for Octavius yet ; ²⁹⁰
 Hie hence and tell him so. Yet stay awhile ;
 Thou shalt not back till I have borne this
 corse

Into the market-place. There shall I try,
 In my oration, how the people take
 The cruel issue of these bloody men ; ²⁹⁵
 According to the which thou shalt discourse
 To young Octavius of the state of things.
 Lend me your hand.

[Exeunt with Cæsar's body.]

SCENE II. Rome. The Forum.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, with the Plebeians.

Citizens. We will be satisfied ! Let us be satisfied !

Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends.

Cassius, go you into the other street,
 And part the numbers.

Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here ; ⁵

Those that will follow Cassius, go with him ;
 And public reasons shall be rendered
 Of Cæsar's death.

1 Pleb. I will hear Brutus speak.

2 Pleb. I will hear Cassius, and compare their reasons,

When severally we hear them rendered. ¹⁰
 [Exit Cassius, with some of the Plebeians.]

Brutus goes into the pulpit.

3 Pleb. The noble Brutus is ascended.
 Silence !

Bru. Be patient till the last.

Romans, countrymen, and lovers ! hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear. Believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe. Censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than his. If then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer: Not that I lov'd Cæsar less, but that I lov'd Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar lov'd me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but—as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

All. None, Brutus, none.

Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enroll'd in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforc'd, for which he suffered death.

Enter MARK ANTONY and Others with Cæsar's body.

Here comes his body, mourn'd by Mark Antony, who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth, as which of you shall not? With this I depart, that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

All. Live, Brutus! live, live!

1 Pleb. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

2 Pleb. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

3 Pleb. Let him be Cæsar.

4 Pleb. Cæsar's better parts shall be crown'd in Brutus.

1 Pleb. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen—

2 Pleb. Peace, silence! Brutus speaks.

1 Pleb. Peace, ho!

Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone,

And for my sake stay here with Antony.

Do grace to Cæsar's corpse, and grace his speech

Tending to Cæsar's glories, which Mark Antony,

By our permission, is allow'd to make.

I do entreat you, not a man depart Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.]

1 Pleb. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.

3 Pleb. Let him go up into the public chair. We'll hear him. Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus' sake I am beholding to you.

[Goes up.]

4 Pleb. What does he say of Brutus?

3 Pleb. He says, for Brutus' sake He finds himself beholding to us all.

4 Pleb. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

1 Pleb. This Cæsar was a tyrant.

3 Pleb. Nay, that's certain. We are blest that Rome is rid of him.

2 Pleb. Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans—

All. Peace, ho! let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;

I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him.

The evil that men do lives after them;

The good is oft interred with their bones;

So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus

Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious.

If it were so, it was a grievous fault;

And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it.

Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest—

For Brutus is an honourable man;

So are they all, all honourable men—

Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral.

He was my friend, faithful and just to

me;

But Brutus says he was ambitious,

And Brutus is an honourable man.

He hath brought many captives home to

Rome,

Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill;

Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious?

When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath

wept;

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff.

Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;

And Brutus is an honourable man.

You all did see that on the Lupercal

I thrice presented him a kingly crown,

Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition?

Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;

And sure he is an honourable man.

I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,

But here I am to speak what I do know.

You all did love him once, not without

cause;

What cause withholds you, then, to mourn

for him?

O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts,

And men have lost their reason! Bear with

me;

My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar,

And I must pause till it come back to me.

1 Pleb. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.

2 Pleb. If thou consider rightly of the matter,

Cæsar has had great wrong.

3 Pleb. Has he, masters! 110

I fear there will a worse come in his place.

4 Pleb. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;

Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.

1 Pleb. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.

2 Pleb. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping. 115

3 Pleb. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.

4 Pleb. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday the word of Cæsar might

Have stood against the world: now lies he there,

And none so poor to do him reverence. 120

O masters, if I were dispos'd to stir

Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,

I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,

Who, you all know, are honourable men.

I will not do them wrong; I rather choose

To wrong the dead, to wrong myself and you, 126

Than I will wrong such honourable men.

But here's a parchment with the seal of Cæsar;

I found it in his closet—'tis his will. 129

Let but the commons hear this testament,

Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read,

And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds

And dip their napkins in his sacred blood;

Yea, beg a hair of him for memory

And, dying, mention it within their wills, 135

Bequeathing it as a rich legacy

Unto their issue.

4 Pleb. We'll hear the will. Read it, Mark Antony.

All. The will, the will! We will hear Cæsar's will.

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it; 140

It is not meet you know how Cæsar lov'd you.

You are not wood, you are not stones, but men;

And being men, hearing the will of Cæsar,

It will inflame you, it will make you mad.

'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs; 145

For if you should, O, what would come of it?

4 Pleb. Read the will; we'll hear it, Antony!

You shall read us the will—Cæsar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay awhile?

I have o'ershot myself to tell you of it. 150

I fear I wrong the honourable men

Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar; I do fear it.

4 Pleb. They were traitors. Honourable men!

All. The will! the testament!

2 Pleb. They were villains, murderers.

The will! Read the will. 156

Ant. You will compel me, then, to read the will?

Then make a ring about the corpse of Cæsar,

And let me show you him that made the will.

Shall I descend? and will you give me leave? 160

All. Come down.

2 Pleb. Descend. [Antony comes down.]

3 Pleb. You shall have leave.

4 Pleb. A ring! Stand round.

1 Pleb. Stand from the hearse, stand from the body.

2 Pleb. Room for Antony, most noble Antony! 166

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.

All. Stand back. Room! Bear back.

Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now. 169

You all do know this mantle. I remember

The first time ever Cæsar put it on;

'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent,

That day he overcame the Nervii.

Look! in this place ran Cassius' dagger through; 174

See what a rent the envious Casca made;

Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd,

And as he pluck'd his curs'd steel away,

Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it,

As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd

If Brutus so unkindly knock'd or no; 180

For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel.

Judge, O you gods, how dearly Cæsar lov'd him!

This was the most unkindest cut of all;

For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,

Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms, 185

Quite vanquish'd him. Then burst his mighty heart;

And in his mantle muffling up his face,

Even at the base of Pompey's statua,

Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell. 189

O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!

Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,

Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.

O, now you weep, and I perceive you feel

The dint of pity. These are gracious drops.

Kind souls, what weep you when you but behold 195

Our Cæsar's vesture wounded ? Look you here,

Here is himself, marr'd as you see with traitors.

1 Pleb. O piteous spectacle !

2 Pleb. O noble Cæsar !

3 Pleb. O woeful day ! 200

4 Pleb. O traitors, villains !

1 Pleb. O most bloody sight !

2 Pleb. We will be reveng'd.

All. Revenge ! About ! Seek ! Burn ! Fire ! Kill ! Slay ! Let not a traitor live ! 205

Ant. Stay, countrymen.

1 Pleb. Peace there ! Hear the noble Antony.

2 Pleb. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up 210

To such a sudden flood of mutiny.

They that have done this deed are honourable.

What private griefs they have, alas, I know not,

That made them do it ; they are wise and honourable,

And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you. 215

I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts ;

I am no orator, as Brutus is,

But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man, That love my friend ; and that they know full well 219

That gave me public leave to speak of him. For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,

Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,

To stir men's blood ; I only speak right on. I tell you that which you yourselves do know ;

Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor poor dumb mouths,

And bid them speak for me. But were I Brutus,

And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony 226

Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue

In every wound of Cæsar, that should move The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny. 230

All. We'll mutiny.

1 Pleb. We'll burn the house of Brutus.

3 Pleb. Away, then ! Come seek the conspirators.

Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen ; yet hear me speak.

All. Peace, ho ! Hear Antony, most noble Antony.

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what.

Wherein hath Cæsar thus deserv'd your loves ? 237

Alas, you know not ! I must tell you, then : You have forgot the will I told you of.

All. Most true. The will ! Let's stay and hear the will. 240

Ant. Here is the will, and under Cæsar's seal :

To every Roman citizen he gives, To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.

2 Pleb. Most noble Cæsar ! We'll revenge his death.

3 Pleb. O royal Cæsar ! 245

Ant. Hear me with patience.

All. Peace, ho !

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,

His private arbours, and new-planted orchards, 249

On this side Tiber ; he hath left them you, And to your heirs for ever—common pleasures,

To walk abroad and recreate yourselves. Here was a Cæsar ! When comes such another ?

1 Pleb. Never, never ! Come away, away ! We'll burn his body in the holy place, 255

And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.

Take up the body.

2 Pleb. Go, fetch fire.

3 Pleb. Pluck down benches.

4 Pleb. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing. [Exeunt Plebeians with the body.]

Ant. Now let it work. Mischief, thou art afoot, 261

Take thou what course thou wilt.

Enter a Servant.

How now, fellow !

Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he ?

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cæsar's house. 265

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him.

He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry, And in this mood will give us any thing.

Serv. I heard him say Brutus and Cassius Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome. 270

Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people,

How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Rome. A street.

Enter CINNA the Poet, and after him the Plebeians.

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Cæsar,

And things unluckily charge my fantasy.
I have no will to wander forth of doors,
Yet something leads me forth.

1 Pleb. What is your name? 5

2 Pleb. Whither are you going?

3 Pleb. Where do you dwell?

4 Pleb. Are you a married man or a bachelor?

2 Pleb. Answer every man directly.

1 Pleb. Ay, and briefly. 10

4 Pleb. Ay, and wisely.

3 Pleb. Ay, and truly, you were best.

Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man or a bachelor? Then to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly: wisely, I say I am a bachelor. 16

2 Pleb. That's as much as to say they are fools that marry. You'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Cæsar's funeral. 20

1 Pleb. As a friend or an enemy?

Cin. As a friend.

2 Pleb. That matter is answered directly.

4 Pleb. For your dwelling—briefly.

Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol. 25

3 Pleb. Your name, sir, truly.

Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.

1 Pleb. Tear him to pieces; he's a conspirator!

Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

4 Pleb. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses! 31

Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.

4 Pleb. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

3 Pleb. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, ho! fire-brands! To Brutus', to Cassius! Burn all! Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius'. Away, go! 38

[Exeunt all the Plebeians with Cinna.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Rome. Antony's house.

Enter ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS.

Ant. These many, then, shall die; their names are prick'd.

Oct. Your brother too must die. Consent you, Lepidus?

Lep. I do consent.

Oct. Prick him down, Antony.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live,

Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony. 5

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house; Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lep. What, shall I find you here? 10

Oct. Or here or at the Capitol.

[Exit Lepidus.]

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man, Meet to be sent on errands. Is it fit, The threefold world divided, he should stand

One of the three to share it?

Oct. So you thought him, 15 And took his voice who should be prick'd to die

In our black sentence and proscription.

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you;

And though we lay these honours on this man, 19

To ease ourselves of divers sland'rous loads, He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,

To groan and sweat under the business, Either led or driven as we point the way; And having brought our treasure where we will,

Then take we down his load, and turn him off, 25

Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears

And graze in commons.

Oct. You may do your will; But he's a tried and valiant soldier.

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius, and for that I do appoint him store of provender. 30

It is a creature that I teach to fight, To wind, to stop, to run directly on,

His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit. And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so:

He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth; 35

A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds On abjects, orts, and imitations,

Which, out of use and stal'd by other men, Begin his fashion. Do not talk of him

But as a property. And now, Octavius, 40 Listen great things: Brutus and Cassius

Are levying powers; we must straight make head;

Therefore let our alliance be combin'd, Our best friends made, our means stretch'd;

And let us presently go sit in council 45 How covert matters may be best disclos'd,

And open perils surest answered.

Oct. Let us do so; for we are at the stake, And bay'd about with many enemies;

And some that smile have in their hearts, I fear, 50

Millions of mischiefs. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The Camp near Sardis. Before the tent of Brutus.

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, and the Army. TITINIUS and PINDARUS meet them.

Bru. Stand, ho!

Lucil. Give the word, ho! and stand.

Bru. What now, Lucilius ? Is Cassius near ?
Lucil. He is at hand, and Pindarus is come
 To do you salutation from his master. 5
Bru. He greets me well. Your master, Pindarus,
 In his own change, or by ill officers,
 Hath given me some worthy cause to wish Things done undone ; but if he be at hand
 I shall be satisfied.
Pin. I do not doubt 10
 But that my noble master will appear
 Such as he is, full of regard and honour.
Bru. He is not doubted. A word, Lucilius,
 How he receiv'd you ; let me be resolv'd.
Lucil. With courtesy and with respect
 enough, 15
 But not with such familiar instances
 Nor with such free and friendly conference
 As he hath us'd of old.
Bru. Thou hast describ'd
 A hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius,
 When love begins to sicken and decay, 20
 It useth an enforced ceremony.
 There are no tricks in plain and simple
 faith ;
 But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
 Make gallant show and promise of their mettle ;
 But when they should endure the bloody spur, 25
 They fall their crests, and like deceitful
 jades
 Sink in the trial. Comes his army on ?
Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd.
 The greater part, the horse in general,
 Are come with Cassius. [Low march within.]
Bru. Hark ! he is arriv'd : 30
 March gently on to meet him.
Enter CASSIUS and his Powers.
Cas. Stand, ho !
Bru. Stand, ho ! Speak the word along.
 1 Sold. Stand !
 2 Sold. Stand ! 35
 3 Sold. Stand !
Cas. Most noble brother, you have done
 me wrong.
Bru. Judge me, you gods ! wrong I mine enemies ?
 And, if not so, how should I wrong a
 brother ?
Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs ; 40
 And when you do them—
Bru. Cassius, be content ;
 Speak your griefs softly ; I do know you
 well.
 Before the eyes of both our armies here,
 Which should perceive nothing but love
 from-us,

Let us not wrangle. Bid them move away ;
 Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your
 griefs, 46
 And I will give you audience.
Cas. Pindarus,
 Bid our commanders lead their charges off
 A little from this ground.
Bru. Lucilius, do you the like ; and let no man 50
 Come to our tent till we have done our conference.
 Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The Camp near Sardis. Within the tent of Brutus.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this :
 You have condemn'd and noted Lucius
 Pella
 For taking bribes here of the Sardians ;
 Wherein my letters, praying on his side, 4
 Because I knew the man, were slighted off.
Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.
Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet That every nice offence should bear his comment.
Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
 Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm, 10
 To sell and mart your offices for gold
 To undeservers.
Cas. I an itching palm !
 You know that you are Brutus that speaks
 this,
 Or, by the gods, this speech were else your
 last.
Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption, 15
 And chastisement doth therefore hide his
 head.
Cas. Chastisement !
Bru. Remember March, the ides of March remember :
 Did not great Julius bleed for justice sake ?
 What villain touch'd his body, that did stab, 20
 And not for justice ? What, shall one of us,
 That struck the foremost man of all this
 world
 But for supporting robbers, shall we now
 Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
 And sell the mighty space of our large
 honours 25
 For so much trash as may be grasped thus ?
 I had rather be a dog and bay the moon
 Than such a Roman.
Cas. Brutus, bait not me !
 I'll not endure it. You forget yourself,
 To hedge me in. I am a soldier, I, 30

Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.

Bru. Go to ; you are not, Cassius.

Cas. I am.

Bru. I say you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself ; 35

Have mind upon your health, tempt me no farther.

Bru. Away, slight man !

Cas. Is't possible ?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.

Must I give way and room to your rash choler ? 39

Shall I be frighted when a madman stares ?

Cas. O ye gods, ye gods ! must I endure all this ?

Bru. All this ? Ay, more ! Fret till your proud heart break.

Go show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge ?

Must I observe you ? Must I stand and crouch 45

Under your testy humour ? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen
Though it do split you ; for from this day forth

I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this ? 50

Bru. You say you are a better soldier.
Let it appear so ; make your vaunting true,

And it shall please me well. For mine own part,

I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cas. You wrong me every way ; you wrong me, Brutus ; 55

I said an elder soldier, not a better.

Did I say ' better ' ?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Cæsar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.

Bru. Peace, peace ! You durst not so have tempted him.

Cas. I durst not ? 60

Bru. No.

Cas. What, durst not tempt him ?

Bru. For your life you durst not.

Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love ;

I may do that I shall be sorry for.

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for. 65

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats ;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me ; 70

For I can raise no money by vile means.
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,

And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring

From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash

By any indirection. I did send 75

To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me ; was that done like Cassius ?

Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so ?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,

To lock such rascal counters from his friends, 80

Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces !

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not. He was but a fool
That brought my answer back.

Brutus hath riv'd my heart.
A friend should bear his friend's infirmities, 85

But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults.

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do appear 90

As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,

Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is aweary of the world :

Hated by one he loves ; brav'd by his brother ; 95

Check'd like a bondman ; all his faults observ'd,

Set in a notebook, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,

To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes ! There is my dagger,

And here my naked breast ; within, a heart 100

Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold ;
If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth.

I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart.
Strike as thou didst at Cæsar ; for I know,

When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst him better 105

Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Bru. Sheathe your dagger.

Be angry when you will, it shall have scope ;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.

O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb,
That carries anger as the flint bears fire ; 110

Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,

When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth him ?

Bru. When I spoke that I was ill-temper'd too. 115

Cas. Do you confess so much ? Give me your hand.

Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus !

Bru. What's the matter ?

Cas. Have not you love enough to bear with me,

When that rash humour which my mother gave me

Makes me forgetful ? 119

Bru. Yes, Cassius ; and from henceforth, When you are over-earnest with your Brutus, He'll think your mother chides, and leave you so.

Enter a Poet, followed by LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, and LUCIUS.

Poet. Let me go in to see the generals. There is some grudge between 'em ; 'tis not meet

They be alone.

Lucil. You shall not come to them. 125

Poet. Nothing but death shall stay me.

Cas. How now ! What's the matter ?

Poet. For shame, you generals ! What do you mean ?

Love, and be friends, as two such men should be ;

For I have seen more years, I'm sure, than ye. 130

Cas. Ha, ha ! How vilely doth this cynic rhyme !

Bru. Get you hence, sirrah ; saucy fellow, hence !

Cas. Bear with him, Brutus : 'tis his fashion.

Bru. I'll know his humour when he knows his time.

What should the wars do with these jiggling fools ? 135

Companion, hence !

Cas. Away, away, be gone !

[Exit Poet.]

Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders

Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.

Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala with you

Immediately to us.

[Exeunt Lucilius and Titinius.]

Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine !

Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry. 141

Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs !

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use, If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better. Portia is dead. 145

Cas. Ha ! Portia ?

Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How scap'd I killing when I cross'd you so ?

O insupportable and touching loss !

Upon what sickness ?

Bru. Impatient of my absence, 150 And grief that young Octavius with Mark Antony

Have made themselves so strong ; for with her death

That tidings came. With this she fell distract,

And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so ?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods ! 155

Enter LUCIUS with wine and tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her. Give me a bowl of wine.

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks.]

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.

Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup ; I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love. 160

[Drinks. Exit Lucius.]

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Bru. Come in, Titinius ! Welcome, good Messala !

Now sit we close about this taper here, And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone ?

Bru. No more, I pray you.

Messala, I have here received letters, 165 That young Octavius and Mark Antony

Come down upon us with a mighty power, Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

Bru. With what addition ? 170

Mes. That, by proscription and bills of outlawry,

Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus, Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree ; Mine speak of seventy senators that died

By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one !

Mes. Cicero is dead, 177

And by that order of proscription. Had you your letters from your wife, my lord ?

Bru. No, Messala. 180

Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her ?

Bru. Nothing, Messala.

Mes. That, methinks, is strange.

Bru. Why ask you ? Hear you aught of her in yours ?

Mes. No, my lord.

Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true. 185

Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell :

For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Bru. Why, farewell, Portia. We must die, Messala.

With meditating that she must die once, I have the patience to endure it now. 190

Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure.

Cas. I have as much of this in art as you, But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think

Of marching to Philippi presently ? 195

Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason ?

Cas. This it is :

'Tis better that the enemy seek us ;

So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,

Doing himself offence, whilst we, lying still,

Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness. 200

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground Do stand but in a forc'd affection ;

For they have grudg'd us contribution.

The enemy, marching along by them, 205

By them shall make a fuller number up, Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encourag'd ;

From which advantage shall we cut him off,

If at Philippi we do face him there,

These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother. 210

Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside

That we have tried the utmost of our friends,

Our legions are brim full, our cause is ripe.

The enemy increaseth every day :

We, at the height, are ready to decline. 215

There is a tide in the affairs of men

Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune ;

Omitted, all the voyage of their life

Is bound in shallows and in miseries.

On such a full sea are we now afloat, 220

And we must take the current when it serves,

Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on ; We'll along ourselves and meet them at Philippi.

Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our talk,

And nature must obey necessity, 225

Which we will niggard with a little rest. There is no more to say ?

Cas. No more. Good night :

Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Bru. Lucius ! [Enter LUCIUS] My gown.

[Exit Lucius] Farewell, good Messala.

Good night, Titinius. Noble, noble Cassius, Good night, and good repose !

Cas. O my dear brother, This was an ill beginning of the night !

Never come such division 'tween our souls ! Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Everything is well. 234

Cas. Good night, my lord.

Bru. Good night, good brother.

Tit. and Mes. Good night, Lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one.

[Exeunt Cassius, Titinius, and Messala.]

Re-enter LUCIUS with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument ?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What, thou speak'st drowsily ? Poor knave, I blame thee not ; thou art o'erwatch'd.

Call Claudius and some other of my men ; 240

I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro and Claudius !

Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.

Var. Calls my lord ?

Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and sleep ;

It may be I shall raise you by and by 245

On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you we will stand and watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so. Lie down, good sirs ;

It may be I shall otherwise bethink me. Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so ; 250

I put it in the pocket of my gown.

[Varro and Claudius lie down.]

Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile, And touch thy instrument a strain or two ?

Luc. Ay, my lord, an't please you.

Bru. It does, my boy. I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing. 257

Luc. It is my duty, sir.

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might ;

I know young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already. 261

Bru. It was well done ; and thou shalt sleep again ;

I will not hold thee long. If I do live, I will be good to thee.

[Music and a song. Lucius falls asleep.] This is a sleepy tune. O murd'rous slumber ! Layest thou thy leaden mace upon my boy,

That plays thee music ? Gentle knave, good night. ²⁶⁷

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.

If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument ;

I'll take it from thee ; and, good boy, good night. ²⁷⁰

Let me see, let me see ; is not the leaf turn'd down

Where I left reading ? Here it is, I think.
 [Sits down.]

Enter the Ghost of CÆSAR.

How ill this taper burns ! Ha ! who comes here ?

I think it is the weakness of mine eyes That shapes this monstrous apparition. ²⁷⁵

It comes upon me. Art thou any thing ? Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,

That mak'st my blood cold and my hair to stare ?

Speak to me what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru. Why com'st thou ? ²⁸⁰

Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well ; then I shall see thee again ?

Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.

Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi, then.
 [Exit Ghost.]

Now I have taken heart thou vanishest. ²⁸⁵

Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.

Boy !, Lucius ! Varro ! Claudius ! Sirs, awake !

Claudius !

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

Bru. He thinks he still is at his instrument. ²⁹⁰

Lucius, awake !

Luc. My lord !

Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criest out ?

Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.

Bru. Yes, that thou didst. Didst thou see any thing ?

Luc. Nothing, my lord. ²⁹⁶

Bru. Sleep again, Lucius. Sirrah Claudius !

[To Varro] Fellow thou, awake !

Var. My lord ?

Clau. My lord ? ³⁰⁰

Bru. Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep ?

Both. Did we, my lord ?

Bru. Ay. Saw you any thing ?

Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Clau. Nor I, my lord.

Bru. Go and commend me to my brother Cassius ; ³⁰⁴

Bid him set on his pow'rs betimes before,

And we will follow.

Var. and Clau. It shall be done, my lord.
 [Exeunt.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Near Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered.

You said the enemy would not come down, But keep the hills and upper regions ; It proves not so. Their battles are at hand ; They mean to warn us at Philippi here, Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know

Wherefore they do it. They could be content

To visit other places, and come down With fearful bravery, thinking by this face

To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage ;

But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals :

The enemy comes on in gallant show ; Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,

And something to be done immediately. ¹⁵

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on, Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I : keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent ? ¹⁹

Oct. I do not cross you ; but I will do so.
 [March.]

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army ; LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and Others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.

Cas. Stand fast, Titinius ; we must out and talk.

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle ?

Ant. No, Cæsar, we will answer on their charge.

Make forth ; the generals would have some words. ²⁵

Oct. Stir not until the signal.

Bru. Words before blows. Is it so, countrymen ?

Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.

Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words ; ³⁰

Witness the hole you made in Cæsar's heart, Crying ' Long live ! Hail, Cæsar ! '

Cas. Antony,
 The posture of your blows are yet unknown ;

But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.
Ant. Not stingless too? 35
Bru. O yes, and soundless too;
For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely threat before you sting.
Ant. Villains, you did not so when your vile daggers
Hack'd one another in the sides of Cæsar. 40
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,
And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's feet;
Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind Struck Cæsar on the neck. O you flatterers!
Cas. Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank yourself: 45
This tongue had not offended so to-day
If Cassius might have rul'd.
Oct. Come, come, the cause. If arguing make us sweat,
The proof of it will turn to redder drops.
Look, 50
I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again?
Never till Cæsar's three and thirty wounds
Be well aveng'd, or till another Cæsar
Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors. 55
Bru. Cæsar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands, Unless thou bring'st them with thee.
Oct. So I hope.
I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.
Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable. 60
Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour, Join'd with a masker and a reveller!
Ant. Old Cassius still!
Oct. Come, Antony; away!
Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth.
If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;
If not, when you have stomachs. [Exeunt Octavius, Antony, and their Army.]
Cas. Why, now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark! 67
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.
Bru. Ho, Lucilius! hark, a word with you.
Lucil. My lord.
[Brutus and Lucilius converse apart.]
Cas. Messala.
Mes. What says my general?
Cas. Messala, 70
This is my birth-day; as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand
Messala.
Be thou my witness that against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set

Upon one battle all our liberties. 75
You know that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion; now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign
Two mighty eagles fell; and there they perch'd, 80
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands,
Who to Philippi here consorted us.
This morning are they fled away and gone,
And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites,
Fly o'er our heads and downward look on us 85
As we were sickly prey. Their shadows seem A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.
Mes. Believe not so.
Cas. I but believe it partly;
For I am fresh of spirit and resolv'd 90
To meet all perils very constantly.
Bru. Even so, Lucilius.
Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But, since the affairs of men rest still incertain, 95
Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together.
What are you then determined to do? 99
Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself—I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life—arming myself with patience 105
To stay the providence of some high powers
That govern us below.
Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?
Bru. No, Cassius, no. Think not, thou noble Roman, 110
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome;
He bears too great a mind. But this same day
Must end that work the ides of March began,
And whether we shall meet again I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take: 115
For ever and for ever farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
If not, why then this parting was well made.
Cas. For ever and for ever farewell, Brutus!
If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed; 120
If not, 'tis true this parting was well made.

Bru. Why then, lead on. O that a man might know

The end of this day's business ere it come !
But it sufficeth that the day will end, ¹²⁴
And then the end is known. Come, ho !
away ! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Near Philippi. The field of battle.

Alarum. Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills

Unto the legions on the other side :

[Loud alarum.]

Let them set on at once ; for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing, ⁴
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
Ride, ride, Messala ; let them all come down. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Another part of the field.

Alarums. Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS.

Cas. O, look, Titinius, look, the villains fly !

Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy.
This ensign here of mine was turning back ;
I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Tit. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early, ⁵

Who, having some advantage on Octavius, 'Took it too eagerly. His soldiers fell to
spoil,

Whilst we by Antony are all enclos'd.

Enter PINDARUS.

Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off ;

Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord ; ¹⁰
Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius.

Are those my tents where I perceive the fire ?

Tit. They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lovest me, Mount thou my horse and hide thy spurs
in him, ¹⁵

Till he have brought thee up to yonder
troops

And here again, that I may rest assur'd
Whether yond troops are friend or enemy.

Tit. I will be here again even with a thought. [Exit.]

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill ; ²⁰

My sight was ever thick ; regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not'st about the field. [Pindarus goes up.]

This day I breathed first. Time is come
round,

And where I did begin there shall I end ;
My life is run his compass. Sirrah, what news ? ²⁵

Pin. [Above] O my lord !

Cas. What news ?

Pin. Titinius is enclosed round about With horsemen that make to him on the
spur ;

Yet he spurs on. Now they are almost on him. ³⁰

Now Titinius ! Now some light. O, he lights too !

He's ta'en.

[Shout.]

And hark ! They shout for joy.

Cas. Come down ; behold no more.

O, coward that I am to live so long ³⁴
To see my best friend ta'en before my face !

Enter PINDARUS.

Come hither, sirrah.

In Parthia did I take thee prisoner ;
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath ;

Now be a freeman, and with this good sword, ⁴¹

That ran through Cæsar's bowels, search this bosom.

Stand not to answer ; here, take thou the hilts ;

And when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now,
Guide thou the sword. [Pindarus stabs him.]

Cæsar, thou art reveng'd, ⁴⁵

Even with the sword that kill'd thee. [Dies.]

Pin. So, I am free ; yet would not so have been,

Durst I have done my will. O Cassius ! ⁴⁸
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him.

[Exit.]

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius ; for Octavius

Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort
Cassius.

Mes. Where did you leave him ?

Tit. All disconsolate, ⁵⁵

With Pindarus, his bondman, on this hill.
Mes. Is not that he that lies upon the ground ?

Tit. He lies not like the living. O my
heart !

Mes. Is not that he ?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala ;
But Cassius is no more. O setting sun, ⁶⁰

As in thy red rays thou dost sink to night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set !

The sun of Rome is set. Our day is gone ; Clouds, dews, and dangers come ; our deeds are done. ⁶⁴

Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed.

O hateful error, melancholy's child,
 Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men
 The things that are not? O error, soon conceiv'd,
 Thou never com'st unto a happy birth, 70
 But kill'st the mother that engend'red thee!

Tit. What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pindarus?

Mes. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet

The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
 Into his ears. I may say 'thrusting' it; 75
 For piercing steel and darts envenomed
 Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus
 As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie you, Messala,
 And I will seek for Pindarus the while.
 [Exit Messala.]

Why didst thou send me forth, brave
 Cassius? 80

Did I not meet thy friends, and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
 And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?

Alas, thou hast misconstrued every thing!
 But hold thee, take this garland on thy
 brow; 85

Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace,
 And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.
 By your leave, gods. This is a Roman's part.
 Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart. [Dies.]

Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, YOUNG CATO, STRATO, VOLUMNIUS, and LUCILIUS.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie? 91

Mes. Lo yonder, and Titinius mourning it.

Bru. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Bru. O Julius Cæsar, thou art mighty yet!
 Thy spirit walks abroad and turns our
 swords 95

In our own proper entrails. [Low alarums.]

Cato. Brave Titinius!

Look whe'r he have not crown'd dead
 Cassius!

Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
 It is impossible that ever Rome 100 Should breed thy fellow. Friends, I owe moe tears

To this dead man than you shall see me pay.
 I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.
 Come, therefore, and to Thasos send his body.

His funerals shall not be in our camp, 105
 Lest it discomfort us. Lucilius, come;
 And come, young Cato; let us to the field.

Labeo and Flavius set our battles on.
 'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere
 night
 We shall try fortune in a second fight. 110
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter BRUTUS, MESSALA, YOUNG
 CATO, LUCILIUS, and FLAVIUS.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O, yet hold up your heads!

Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?

I will proclaim my name about the field:

I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend. 5

I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

Enter Soldiers and fight.

Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I!
 Brutus, my country's friend! Know me for Brutus! [Exit. Young Cato falls.]

Lucil. O young and noble Cato, art thou
 down? 9

Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius,
 And mayst be honour'd, being Cato's son.

1 Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Lucil. Only I yield to die.
 [Offering money] There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight. 13

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

1 Sold. We must not. A noble prisoner!

Enter ANTONY.

2 Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony Brutus is ta'en.

1 Sold. I'll tell the news. Here comes the general.

Brutus is ta'en! Brutus is ta'en, my lord!

Ant. Where is he?

Lucil. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe
 enough. 20

I dare assure thee that no enemy

Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus.

The gods defend him from so great a shame!

When you do find him, or alive or dead,

He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you, 26

A prize no less in worth. Keep this man safe;

Give him all kindness. I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. Go on,

And see whe'r Brutus be alive or dead; 30

And bring us word unto Octavius' tent

How everything is chanc'd. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Another part of the field.

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Cli. Statilius show'd the torch-light; but,
 my lord,

He came not back. He is or ta'en or slain.

Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus. Slaying is the word ;

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus. 5 [Whispering.

Cli. What, I, my lord ? No, not for all the world.

Bru. Peace, then, no words.

Cli. I'll rather kill myself.

Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius !

Dar. Shall I do such a deed ?

Cli. O Dardanius !

Dar. O Clitus ! 10

Cli. What ill request did Brutus make to thee ?

Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Cli. Now is that noble vessel full of grief, That it runs over even at his eyes.

Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius ; list a word. 15

Vol. What says my lord ?

Bru. Why, this, Volumnius :

The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me
Two several times by night—at Sardis once,
And this last night here in Philippi fields.
I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord. 20

Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.
Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes :

Our enemies have beat us to the pit ;

[Low alarums.

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves
Than tarry till they push us. Good

Volumnius, 25

Thou know'st that we two went to school
together ;

Even for that our love of old, I prithee,
Hold thou my sword-hilts whilst I run on it.

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord.

[Alarum still.

Cli. Fly, fly, my lord ; there is no tarrying here. 30

Bru. Farewell to you ; and you ; and you, Volumnius.

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep ;
Farewell to thee too, Strato. Countrymen,

My heart doth joy that yet in all my life
I found no man but he was true to me. 35

I shall have glory by this losing day,
More than Octavius and Mark Antony

By this vile conquest shall attain unto.
So fare you well at once ; for Brutus'

tongue

Hath almost ended his life's history. 40

Night hangs upon mine eyes ; my bones would rest,

That have but labour'd to attain this hour.
[Alarum. Cry within ' Fly, fly, fly ! '

Cli. Fly, my lord, fly.

Bru. Hence ! I will follow

[Exeunt Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius

I prithee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord ;
Thou art a fellow of a good respect ; 4

Thy life hath had some smatch of honour
in it.

Hold then my sword, and turn away thy
face,

While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato ?

Str. Give me your hand first. Fare you well, my lord.

Bru. Farewell, good Strato. Cæsar, now be still. 5

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will.

[He runs on his sword, and dies

Alarum. Retreat. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, MESSALA, LUCILIUS, and the Army

Oct. What man is that ?

Mes. My master's man. Strato, where is thy master ?

Str. Free from the bondage you are in Messala.

The conquerors can but make a fire of him
For Brutus only overcame himself, 5

And no man else hath honour by his death.

Lucil. So Brutus should be found.
thank thee, Brutus,

That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true

Oct. All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain them. 6

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me,
Str. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you

Oct. Do so, good Messala.

Mes. How died my master, Strato ?

Str. I held the sword, and he did run on it. 6

Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow
thee,

That did the latest service to my master.
Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them
all.

All the conspirators save only he Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar

He only in a general honest thought 7

And common good to all made one of them
His life was gentle ; and the elements

So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world ' This was a man !

Oct. According to his virtue let us use
him, 7

With all respect and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall
lie,

Most like a soldier, ordered honourably.
So call the field to rest, and let's away 8

To part the glories of this happy day.
[Exeunt

THE SCENE : Scotland and England.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. An open place.

Thunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

1 Witch. When shall we three meet again ?

In thunder, lightning, or in rain ?

2 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won.

3 Witch. That will be ere the set of sun. 5

1 Witch. Where the place ?

2 Witch. Upon the heath.

3 Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.

1 Witch. I come, Graymalkin.

2 Witch. Paddock calls.

3 Witch. Anon !

All. Fair is foul, and foul is fair : 10
Hover through the fog and filthy air.

[Witches vanish.]

SCENE II. A camp near Forres.

Alarum within. Enter KING DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Sergeant.

Dun. What bloody man is that ? He can report,

As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant
Who like a good and hardy soldier fought Gainst my captivity. Hail, brave friend !
Say to the King the knowledge of the broil
As thou didst leave it.

Serg. Doubtful it stood,

As two spent swimmers that do cling
together

And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald—

Worthy to be a rebel, for to that 10

The multiplying villainies of nature

Do swarm upon him—from the Western Isles

Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied ;

And Fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,

Show'd like a rebel's whore. But all's too weak ; 15

For brave Macbeth—well he deserves that
name—

Disdaining Fortune, with his brandish'd
steel

Which smok'd with bloody execution, Like valour's minion, carv'd out his passage

Till he fac'd the slave ; 20

Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell
to him,

Till he unseam'd him from the nave to th'
chaps,

And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O valiant cousin ! worthy gentle-
man !

Serg. As whence the sun gins his reflection 25

Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders
break,

So from that spring whence comfort seem'd to come

Discomfort swells. Mark, King of Scotland, mark :

MACBETH

No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd, Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their heels, ³⁰

But the Norway lord, surveying vantage, With furbish'd arms and new supplies of
men,

Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Serg. Yes;
As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion. ³⁵
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks;

So they doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe.

Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds, ⁴⁰

Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell—

But I am faint; my gashes cry for help.

Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds; ⁴⁴

They smack of honour both.—Go get him surgeons. [Exit Sergeant, attended.]

Enter Ross.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy Thane of Ross.

Len. What a haste looks through his
eyes!

So should he look that seems to speak things strange.

Ross. God save the King!

Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthy
thane?

Ross. From Fife, great King, Where the Norway banners flout the sky ⁵⁰

And fan our people cold.

Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor
The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict,

Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof, ⁵⁵

Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point rebellious, arm 'gainst
arm,

Curbing his lavish spirit; and to conclude,
The victory fell on us.

Dun. Great happiness!

Ross. That now ⁶⁰
Sweno, the Norways' king, craves composition;

Nor would we deign him burial of his men
Till he disbursed, at Saint Colme's Inch,
Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive ⁶⁵

Our bosom interest. Go pronounce his present death,

And with his former title greet Macbeth.

Ross. I'll see it done.

Dun. What he hath lost, noble Macbeth hath won. [Exit

SCENE III. A blasted heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Where hast thou been, sister

2 Witch. Killing swine.

3 Witch. Sister, where thou?

1 Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts her lap,

And mounch'd, and mounch'd, an mounch'd.

'Give me' quoth I.

'Aroint thee, witch!' the rump-fe
ronyon cries.

Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master
th' Tiger;

But in a sieve I'll thither sail

And, like a rat without a tail,

I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

2 Witch. I'll give thee a wind.

1 Witch. Th'art kind.

3 Witch. And I another.

1 Witch. I myself have all the other;

And the very ports they blow,

All the quarters that they know

I' th' shipman's card.

I'll drain him dry as hay:

Sleep shall neither night nor day

Hang upon his pent-house lid;

He shall live a man forbid;

Weary sev'nights, nine times nine,

Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine.

Though his bark cannot be lost,

Yet it shall be tempest-tost.

Look what I have.

2 Witch. Show me, show me.

1 Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb,
Wreck'd as homeward he did come. [Drum withi

3 Witch. A drum, a drum!

Macbeth doth come.

All. The Weird Sisters, hand in hand,

Posters of the sea and land,

Thus do go about, about;

Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,

And thrice again, to make up nine.

Peace! The charm's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have n
seen.

Ban. How far is't call'd to Forres? Wh
are these,

So wither'd, and so wild in their attire,
That look not like th' inhabitants o' t
earth,

And yet are on't? Live you, or are yo
aught

That man may question? You seem understand me,

By each at once her choppy finger laying

Upon her skinny lips. You should be
women, 45

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can. What are you ?

1 Witch. All hail, Macbeth ! Hail to thee,
Thane of Glamis !

2 Witch. All hail, Macbeth ! Hail to thee,
Thane of Cawdor !

3 Witch. All hail, Macbeth, that shalt be King hereafter ! 50

Ban. Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear

Things that do sound so fair ? I' th' name of truth,

Are ye fantastical, or that indeed
Which outwardly ye show ? My noble partner

You greet with present grace and great prediction 55

Of noble having and of royal hope,
That he seems rapt withal. To me you speak not.

If you can look into the seeds of time
And say which grain will grow and which will not,

Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear
Your favours nor your hate. 61

1 Witch. Hail !

2 Witch. Hail !

3 Witch. Hail !

1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and
greater. 65

2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

3 Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none.

So, all hail, Macbeth and Banquo !

1 Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, all hail !

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more. 70

By Sinel's death I know I am Thane of Glamis ;

But how of Cawdor ? The Thane of Cawdor
lives,

A prosperous gentleman ; and to be King
Stands not within the prospect of belief, No more than to be Cawdor. Say from whence 75

You owe this strange intelligence, or why
Upon this blasted heath you stop our way With such prophetic greeting ? Speak, I charge you. [Witches vanish.]

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,

And these are of them. Whither are they vanish'd ? 80

Macb. Into the air ; and what seem'd corporal melted

As breath into the wind. Would they had stay'd !

Ban. Were such things here as we do speak about ?

Or have we eaten on the insane root
That takes the reason prisoner ? 85

Macb. Your children shall be kings.

Ban. You shall be King.

Macb. And Thane of Cawdor too ; went it not so ?

Ban. To th' self-same tune and words.
Who's here ?

Enter Ross and ANGUS.

Ross. The King hath happily receiv'd,
Macbeth,

The news of thy success ; and when he reads 90

Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,
His wonders and his praises do contend Which should be thine or his. Silenc'd with
that,

In viewing o'er the rest o' th' self-same day,
He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks,
Nothing afraid of what thyself didst make, Strange images of death. As thick as tale

Came post with post, and every one did
bear

Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent 100
To give thee, from our royal master,
thanks ;

Only to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee.

Ross. And, for an earnest of a greater
honour,

He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor ; 105

In which addition, hail, most worthy Thane !

For it is thine.

Ban. What, can the devil speak true ?

Macb. The Thane of Cawdor lives ; why do you dress me

In borrowed robes ?

Ang. Who was the Thane lives yet ;
But under heavy judgment bears that life Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was combin'd 111

With those of Norway, or did line the rebel With hidden help and vantage, or that with both

He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know
not ;

But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,
Have overthrown him.

Macb. [Aside] Glamis, and Thane of Cawdor ! 116

The greatest is behind.—Thanks for your pains.

[Aside to Banquo] Do you not hope your children shall be kings,

When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor
to me

Promis'd no less to them ?

Ban. [Aside to Macbeth] That, trusted
home, 120

Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,

Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange ;

And oftentimes to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths,
Win us with honest trifles, to betray's ¹²⁵
In deepest consequence.—

Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. [Aside] Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme.—I thank you,
gentlemen.

[Aside] This supernatural soliciting ¹³⁰ Cannot be ill ; cannot be good. If ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,
Commencing in a truth ? I am Thane of Cawdor.

If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair ¹³⁵
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs

Against the use of nature ? Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings.
My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,

Shakes so my single state of man
That function is smother'd in surmise, ¹⁴⁰
And nothing is but what is not.

Ban. Look how our partner's rapt.

Macb. [Aside] If chance will have me
King, why, chance may crown me,
Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him, Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould ¹⁴⁵

But with the aid of use.

Macb. [Aside] Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour. My dull brain was wrought
With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your pains ¹⁵⁰

Are regist'ed where every day I turn
The leaf to read them. Let us toward the King.

[Aside to Banquo] Think upon what hath chanc'd ; and, at more time,
The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak ¹⁵⁴

Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. [Aside to Macbeth] Very gladly.

Macb. [Aside to Banquo] Till then, enough.—Come, friends. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Forres. The palace.

Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DON-ALBAIN, LENNOX and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor ? Are
not

Those in commission yet return'd ?

Mal.

My liege,

They are not yet come back. But I have spoke

With one that saw him die ; who did report
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons, Implor'd your Highness' pardon, and set forth ⁶

A deep repentance. Nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it : he died
As one that had been studied in his death
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd ¹⁰
As 'twere a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face.
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSS, and ANGUS.

O worthiest cousin !
The sin of my ingratitude even now ¹⁵
Was heavy on me. Thou art so far before
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst less deserv'd,

That the proportion both of thanks and payment

Might have been mine ! Only I have left to say, ²⁰

More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it, pays itself. Your Highness' ^{part}

Is to receive our duties ; and our duties Are to your throne and state children and servants, ²⁵

Which do but what they should by doing everything

Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither.
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing. Noble
Banquo,

That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known ³⁰

No less to have done so, let me infold thee
And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow. Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, ³⁶
know

We will establish our estate upon Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter

The Prince of Cumberland ; which honour must

Not unaccompanied invest him only, ⁴⁰
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deservers. From hence to Inverness,
And bind us further to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us'd for you.

I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful 45

The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor !

Macb. [Aside] The Prince of Cumberland !

That is a step,

On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap,
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires ; 50

Let not light see my black and deep desires.
The eye wink at the hand ; yet let that be
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see.

[Exit.

Dun. True, worthy Banquo : he is full so valiant ;

And in his commendations I am fed ; 55
It is a banquet to me. Let's after him, Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome.

It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V. Inverness. Macbeth's castle.

Enter LADY MACBETH, reading a letter.

Lady M. ' They met me in the day of success ; and I have learn'd by the perfect'st report they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burn'd in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanish'd.
Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the King, who all-hail'd me " Thane of Cawdor " ; by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referr'd me to the coming on of time, with " Hail, king that shalt be ! " This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness, that thou mightst not lose the dues of rejoicing by being ignorant of what greatness is promis'd thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.'
Glamis thou art, and Cawdor ; and shalt be What thou art promis'd. Yet do I fear thy
nature ;

It is too full o' th' milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way. Thou wouldst be great ; 15

Art not without ambition, but without The illness should attend it. What thou wouldst highly,

That wouldst thou holily ; wouldst not play false,

And yet wouldst wrongly win.

Thou'dst have, great Glamis, that which cries

' Thus thou must do ' if thou have it ; 20
And that which rather thou dost fear to do Than wishest should be undone. Hie thee
hither,

That I may pour my spirits in thine ear,
And chastise with the valour of my tongue
All that impedes thee from the golden
round 25

Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withal.

Enter a Messenger.

What is your tidings ?

Mess. The King comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it.
Is not thy master with him ? who, were't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation. 30

Mess. So please you, it is true. Our Thane is coming.

One of my fellows had the speed of him,
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely
more

Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending :

He brings great news. [Exit Messenger.

The raven himself is hoarse 35
That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, you spirits That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me
here ;

And fill me, from the crown to the toe,
top-full

Of direst cruelty. Make thick my blood, 40
Stop up th' access and passage to remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of nature Shake my fell purpose nor keep peace between

Th' effect and it. Come to my woman's breasts,

And take my milk for gall, you murd'ring
ministers, 45

Wherever in your sightless substances
You wait on nature's mischief. Come, thick
night,

And pall thee in the dunest smoke of
hell,

That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,

Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark 50

To cry ' Hold, hold '.

Enter MACBETH.

Great Glamis ! Worthy Cawdor !
Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter !
Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love, 55
Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence ?

Macb. To-morrow—as he purposes.

Lady M. O, never Shall sun that morrow see !

Your face, my thane, is as a book where
men

May read strange matters. To beguile the
time, 60

Look like the time ; bear welcome in your
eye,

Your hand, your tongue ; look like th'
innocent flower,

But be the serpent under't. He that's coming
Must be provided for ; and you shall put This night's great business into my dispatch ; 65
Which shall to all our nights and days to
come
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.
Macb. We will speak further.
Lady M. Only look up clear.
To alter favour ever is to fear. 69
Leave all the rest to me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Inverness. Before Macbeth's castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, BANQUO, LENNOX, MACDUFF, ROSS, ANGUS, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat ;
the air
Nimble and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.
Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve
By his lov'd mansionry that the heaven's
breath 5
Smells wooingly here ; no jutty, frieze,
Buttress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird Hath made her pendent bed and procreant
cradle.
Where they most breed and haunt, I have observ'd
The air is delicate.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Dun. See, see, our honour'd hostess ! 10
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach
you
How you shall bid God 'ield us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service
In every point twice done, and then done double, 15
Were poor and single business to contend Against those honours deep and broad wherewith
Your Majesty loads our house ; for those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the Thane of Cawdor ?
We cours'd him at the heels and had a
purpose 21
To be his purveyor ; but he rides well,
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath help him
To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess, 24
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs,
in compt,
To make their audit at your Highness'
pleasure,
Still to return your own.
Dun. Give me your hand ; Conduct me to mine host. We love him highly, 29
And shall continue our graces towards him.
By your leave, hostess. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Inverness. Macbeth's castle.

Hautboys, torches. Enter a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service over the stage. Then enter MACBETH.

Macb. If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well
It were done quickly. If th' assassination Could trammel up the consequence, and catch,
With his surcease, success ; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here— 5
But here upon this bank and shoal of time—We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases
We still have judgment here, that we but teach Bloody instructions, which being taught return
To plague th' inventor. This even-handed justice 10
Commends th' ingredience of our poison'd
chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double trust :
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject—Strong both against the deed ; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the
door, 15
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this
Duncan
Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongu'd, against
The deep damnation of his taking-off ; 20
And pity, like a naked new-born babe, Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin
hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air, Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur 25
To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition, which o'er-leaps itself,
And falls on th' other.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

How now ! What news ?
Lady M. He has almost supp'd. Why have you left the chamber ? 29

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me ?

Lady M. Know you not he has ?

Macb. We will proceed no further in this business.

He hath honour'd me of late ; and I have bought

Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,

Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk 35
Wherein you dress'd yourself ? Hath it slept since,

And wakes it now to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely ? From this time
Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid
To be the same in thine own act and valour
As thou art in desire ? Wouldst thou have that 41

Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem,
Letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would',
Like the poor cat i' th' adage ?

Macb. Prithee, peace ; 45
I dare do all that may become a man ;
Who dares do more is none.

Lady M. What beast was't then
That made you break this enterprise to me ?
When you durst do it, then you were a man ;

And to be more than what you were, you would 50

Be so much more the man. Nor time nor place

Did then adhere, and yet you would make both ;

They have made themselves, and that their fitness now

Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know

How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me— 55

I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums,

And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn
As you have done to this.

Macb. If we should fail ?

Lady M. We fail !

But screw your courage to the sticking place, 60

And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep—

Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey

Soundly invite him—his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassail so convince

That memory, the warder of the brain, 65
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbec only. When in swinish sleep

Their drenched natures lie as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon

Th' unguarded Duncan ? what not put upon 70

His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt

Of our great quell ?

Macb. Bring forth men-children only ;
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd,
When we have mark'd with blood those 75
sleepy two

Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers,

That they have done 't ?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar

Upon his death ?

Macb. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat. 80
Away, and mock the time with fairest show ;
False face must hide what the false heart doth know. [Exeunt.

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Inverness. Court of Macbeth's castle.

Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE with a torch before him.

Ban. How goes the night, boy ?

Fle. The moon is down ; I have not heard the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Fle. I take 't, 'tis later, sir.

Ban. Hold, take my sword. There's husbandry in heaven ;

Their candles are all out. Take thee that too. 5

A heavy summons lies like lead upon me.
And yet I would not sleep. Merciful powers

Restrain in me the cursed thoughts that nature

Gives way to in repose !

Enter MACBETH and a Servant with a torch.

Give me my sword. 10

Who's there ?

Macb. A friend.

Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest ? The king's a-bed.

He hath been in unusual pleasure, and Sent forth great largess to your offices.

This diamond he greets your wife withal, 15
By the name of most kind hostess ; and shut up

In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepar'd,
Our will became the servant to defect ;
Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. All's well.

I dreamt last night of the three Weird Sisters. 20

To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them ;
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,

We would spend it in some words upon that business,

If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind'st leisure.

Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent, when 'tis,

It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none
In seeking to augment it, but still keep My bosom franchis'd and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsell'd.

Macb. Good repose the while !

Ban. Thanks, sir ; the like to you !
[Exeunt Banquo and Fleance.]

Macb. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready,
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.

[Exit Servant.]

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand ? Come, let me clutch thee.

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight ? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain ?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable
As this which now I draw.

Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going ;

And such an instrument I was to use.
Mine eyes are made the fools o' th' other senses,

Or else worth all the rest. I see thee still ;
And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of
blood,

Which was not so before. There's no such thing :

It is the bloody business which informs Thus to mine eyes. Now o'er the one half-
world

Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse

The curtain'd sleep ; now witchcraft celebrates

Pale Hecate's offerings ; and wither'd
murder,

Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf, Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,

With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his design

Moves like a ghost. Thou sure and firm-set earth,

Hear not my steps which way they walk,
for fear

Thy very stones prate of my whereabouts
And take the present horror from the time, Which now suits with it. Whiles I threat,
he lives ;

Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.

I go, and it is done ; the bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncan, for it is a knell

1006

That summons thee to heaven or to hell.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. Inverness. Macbeth's castle.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold ;
What hath quench'd them hath given me fire. Hark ! Peace !

It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bell-
man,

Which gives the stern'st good-night. He is about it.

The doors are open ; and the surfeited grooms

Do mock their charge with snores. I have drugg'd their possets,

That death and nature do contend about
them,

Whether they live or die.

Macb. [Within] Who's there ! What, ho !

Lady M. Alack ! I am afraid they have
awak'd,

And 'tis not done. Th' attempt, and not the deed,

Confounds us. Hark ! I laid their daggers
ready ;

He could not miss 'em. Had he not resembled

My father as he slept, I had done't.

Enter MACBETH.

My husband !

Macb. I have done the deed. Didst thou not hear a noise ?

Lady M. I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry.

Did not you speak ?

Macb. When ?

Lady M. Now.

Macb. As I descended ?

Lady M. Ay.

Macb. Hark !

Who lies i' th' second chamber ?

Lady M. Donalbain.

Macb. This is a sorry sight.

[Looking on his hands.]

Lady M. A foolish thought to say a sorry
sight.

Macb. There's one did laugh in's sleep, and one cried ' Murder ! '

That they did wake each other. I stood and heard them ;

But they did say their prayers, and address'd them

Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodg'd together.

Macb. One cried ' God bless us ', and
' Amen ' the other,

As they had seen me with these hangman's
hands.

List'ning their fear, I could not say
' Amen '

When they did say 'God bless us!'

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply. 30

Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce 'Amen'?

I had most need of blessing, and 'Amen' stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought

After these ways: so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought I heard a voice cry 'Sleep no more'; 35

Macbeth does murder sleep—the innocent sleep,

Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,

The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,

Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course, 39

Chief nourisher in life's feast.

Lady M. What do you mean?

Macb. Still it cried 'Sleep no more' to all the house;

'Glamis hath murder'd sleep; and therefore Cawdor

Shall sleep no more—Macbeth shall sleep no more'.

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried?

Why, worthy Thane,

You do unbend your noble strength to think 45

So brainsickly of things. Go get some water

And wash this filthy witness from your hand.

Why did you bring these daggers from the place?

They must lie there. Go carry them, and smear

The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I'll go no more: 50

I am afraid to think what I have done; Look on't again I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!

Give me the daggers. The sleeping and the dead

Are but as pictures; 'tis the eye of childhood 54

That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed, I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal,

For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking within.]

Macb. Whence is that knocking?

How is't with me, when every noise appals me?

What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out mine eyes.

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood 60

Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine, Making the green one red.

Re-enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour; but I shame

To wear a heart so white. [Knock] I hear a knocking 65

At the south entry; retire we to our chamber.

A little water clears us of this deed.

How easy is it then! Your constancy hath left you unattended. [Knock] Hark!

more knocking. Get on your nightgown, lest occasion call 70 us And show us to be watchers. Be not lost So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed, 'twere best not know myself. [Knock.]

Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would thou couldst! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Inverness. Macbeth's castle.

Knocking within. Enter a Porter.

Porter. Here's a knocking indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old turning the key. [Knock] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there, i' th' name of Beelzebub? Here's a farmer that hang'd himself on th' expectation of plenty. Come in time; have napkins enow about you; here you'll sweat for't. [Knock] Knock, knock! Who's there, i' th' other devil's name? Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven. O, come in, equivocator. [Knock] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there? Faith, here's an English tailor come hither for stealing out of a French hose. Come in, tailor, here you may roast your goose. [Knock] Knock, knock; never at quiet! What are you? But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further. I had thought to have let in some of all professions that go the primrose way to th' everlasting bonfire. [Knock] Anon, anon! [Opens the gate] I pray you remember the porter.

Enter MACDUFF and LENNOX.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed, that you do lie so late? 22

Port. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock; and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke? 26

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes and unprovokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much drink may be said to be an equivo-

cator with lechery : it makes him, and it mars him ; it sets him on, and it takes him off ; it persuades him, and disheartens him ; makes him stand to, and not stand to ; in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe drink gave thee the lie last night. 35

Port. That it did, sir, i' the very throat on me ; but I requited him for his lie ; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring ? 40

Enter MACBETH.

Our knocking has awak'd him ; here he comes.

Len. Good morrow, noble sir !

Macb. Good morrow, both !

Macd. Is the King stirring, worthy Thane ?

Macb. Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him ;

I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I'll bring you to him. 45

Macd. I know this is a joyful trouble to you ;

But yet 'tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight in physics pain.

This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so bold to call, 49
For 'tis my limited service. [Exit Macduff.]

Len. Goes the King hence to-day ?

Macb. He does : he did appoint so.

Len. The night has been unruly. Where we lay,

Our chimneys were blown down ; and, as they say,

Lamentings heard i' th' air, strange screams of death,

And prophesying, with accents terrible, 55
Of dire combustion and confus'd events

New hatch'd to th' woeful time ; the obscure bird

Clamour'd the livelong night. Some say the earth

Was feverous and did shake.

Macb. 'Twas a rough night.

Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel 60

A fellow to it.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. O horror, horror, horror ! Tongue nor heart

Cannot conceive nor name thee.

Macb. } What's the matter ?
Len. }

Macd. Confusion now hath made his masterpiece.

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope 1008

The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence

The life o' th' building.

Macb. What is't you say—the life ?

Len. Mean you his Majesty ?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight 69

With a new Gorgon. Do not bid me speak ; See, and then speak yourselves.

[Exeunt Macbeth and Lennox.]

Awake, awake !

Ring the alarum bell. Murder and treason ! Banquo and Donalbain ! Malcolm ! awake !

Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeits, 74

And look on death itself. Up, up, and see The great doom's image ! Malcolm !

Banquo !

As from your graves rise up and walk like sprites

To countenance this horror ! Ring the bell. [Bell rings.]

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. What's the business, 79

That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley The sleepers of the house ? Speak, speak !

Macd. O gentle lady,

'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak ! The repetition in a woman's ear

Would murder as it fell.

Enter BANQUO.

O Banquo, Banquo,

Our royal master's murder'd !

Lady M.

Woe, alas ! 85

What, in our house ?

Ban.

Too cruel any where.

Dear Duff, I prithee contradict thyself, And say it is not so.

Re-enter MACBETH, LENNOX, with ROSS.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance,

I had liv'd a blessed time ; for, from this instant, 90

There's nothing serious in mortality— All is but toys ; renown and grace is dead ;

The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees

Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

Don. What is amiss ?

Macb. You are, and do not know't. 95
The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood,

Is stopp'd ; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macd. Your royal father's murder'd.

Mal. O, by whom ?

Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done't.

Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood ; 100

So were their daggers, which unwip'd we found

Upon their pillows. They star'd and were distracted ;

No man's life was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury
That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so ?

Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temp'rate, and furious, 107

Loyal and neutral, in a moment ? No man.
The expedition of my violent love

Outrun the pauser reason. Here lay
Duncan, 110

His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood ;
And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature

For ruin's wasteful entrance : there, the murderers,

Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers

Unmannerly breech'd with gore. Who could refrain, 115

That had a heart to love, and in that heart
Courage to make's love known ?

Lady M. Help me hence, ho !

Macd. Look to the lady.

Mal. [Aside to Donalbain] Why do we hold our tongues that most may claim

This argument for ours ?

Don. [Aside to Malcolm] What should be spoken

Here, where our fate, hid in an auger-hole,
May rush and seize us ? Let's away.

Our tears are not yet brew'd.

Mal. [Aside to Donalbain] Nor our strong
sorrow

Upon the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady.

[Lady Macbeth is carried out.]

And when we have our naked frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet, 126

And question this most bloody piece of
work,

To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us.

In the great hand of God I stand, and thence

Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight 130
Of treasonous malice.

Macd. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness

And meet i' th' hall together.

All. Well contented.

[Exeunt all but Malcolm and Donalbain.]

Mal. What will you do ? Let's not consort with them.

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office 135
Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland I ; our separated
fortune

Shall keep us both the safer. Where we are, There's daggers in men's smiles ; the near in blood, 139

The nearer bloody.

Mal. This murderous shaft that's shot
Hath not yet lighted ; and our safest way

Is to avoid the aim. Therefore to horse ;
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,

But shift away. There's warrant in that theft 144

Which steals itself, when there's no mercy left. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Inverness. Without Macbeth's castle.

Enter Ross with an Old Man.

Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember well ;

Within the volume of which time I have
seen

Hours dreadful and things strange ; but this sore night

Hath trifled former knowings.

Ross. Ah, good father, Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act, 5

Threatens his bloody stage. By th' clock
'tis day,

And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp.

Is't night's predominance, or the day's
shame,

That darkness does the face of earth en-
tomb,

When living light should kiss it ?

Old M. 'Tis unnatural, 10
Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday
last,

A falcon, tow'ring in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.

Ross. And Duncan's horses—a thing most strange and certain—

Beautous and swift, the minions of their race, 15

Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls,
flung out,

Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would make

War with mankind.

Old M. 'Tis said they eat each other.

Ross. They did so ; to the amazement of mine eyes, 19

That look'd upon't.

Enter MACDUFF.

Here comes the good Macduff.
How goes the world, sir, now ?

Macd. Why, see you not ?

Ross. Is't known who did this more than bloody deed ?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.

Ross. Alas, the day !
What good could they pretend ?

Macd. They were suborn'd.
Malcolm and Donalbain, the King's two sons, 25
Are stol'n away and fled ; which puts upon
them

Suspicion of the deed.
Ross. 'Gainst nature still.
Thriftless ambition, that wilt ravin up Thine own life's means ! Then 'tis most like
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth. 30

Macd. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone
To be invested.

Ross. Where is Duncan's body ?
Macd. Carried to Colmekill,
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors
And guardian of their bones.

Ross. Will you to Scone ? 35
Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

Ross. Well, I will thither.
Macd. Well, may you see things well done there ! Adieu,

Lest our old robes sit easier than our new.
Ross. Farewell, father.

Old M. God's benison go with you, and with those 40
That would make good of bad, and friends of foes. [Exeunt.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. Forres. The palace.

Enter BANQUO.

Ban. Thou hast it now—King, Cawdor, Glamis, all
As the weird women promis'd ; and I fear Thou play'dst most foully for't ; yet it was said
It should not stand in thy posterity ;
But that myself should be the root and
father 5
Of many kings. If there come truth from
them—
As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine—
Why, by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my oracles as well
And set me up in hope ? But, hush, no
more. 10

Sennet sounded. Enter MACBETH as King, LADY MACBETH as Queen ; LENNOX, ROSS, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief guest.
Lady M. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all-things unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper,
sir,
And I'll request your presence.

Ban. Let your Highness 15 Command upon me ; to the which my duties

Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon ?

Ban. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice— 20

Which still hath been both grave and prosperous—
In this day's council ; but we'll take tomorrow.

Is't far you ride ?

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the
time

'Twixt this and supper. Go not my horse
the better, 25
I must become a borrower of the night
For a dark hour or twain.

Macb. Fail not our feast.

Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear our bloody cousins are bestow'd 29
In England and in Ireland, not confessing
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers With strange invention ; but of that tomorrow,

When therewithal we shall have cause of
state

Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse ;
adieu,

Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with
you ? 35

Ban. Ay, my good lord ; our time does call upon's.

Macb. I wish your horses swift and sure of foot,

And so I do commend you to their backs.
Farewell. [Exit Banquo.]

Let every man be master of his time 40
Till seven at night ; to make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself Till supper-time alone. While then, God be
with you !

[Exeunt all but Macbeth and a Servant.]
Sirrah, a word with you. Attend those men our pleasure ? 45

Serv. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us.

[Exit Servant.]
To be thus is nothing,

But to be safely thus. Our fears in Banquo
Stick deep ; and in his royalty of nature Reigns that which would be fear'd. 'Tis much he dares, 50

And to that dauntless temper of his mind
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour

To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear ; and under him
My Genius is rebuk'd, as it is said 55
Mark Antony's was by Cæsar. He chid the Sisters

When first they put the name of King upon
me,

And bade them speak to him; then,
 prophet-like,
 They hail'd him father to a line of kings.
 Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown
 And put a barren sceptre in my gripe, 61
 Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal
 hand,

No son of mine succeeding. If't be so,
 For Banquo's issue have I fil'd my mind;
 For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd; 65

Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
 Only for them, and mine eternal jewel
 Given to the common enemy of man
 To make them kings—the seeds of Banquo
 kings!

Rather than so, come, Fate, into the list, 70
 And champion me to th' utterance! Who's there?

Re-enter Servant and two Murderers.

Now go to the door and stay there till we call. [Exit Servant.]

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

1 Mur. It was, so please your Highness.

Macb. Well then, now
 Have you consider'd of my speeches?
 Know 75

That it was he, in the times past, which held you

So under fortune; which you thought had been

Our innocent self. This I made good to
 you

In our last conference, pass'd in probation
 with you,

How you were borne in hand, how cross'd,
 the instruments, 80

Who wrought with them, and all things else that might

To half a soul and to a notion craz'd

Say 'Thus did Banquo'.

1 Mur. You made it known to us.

Macb. I did so; and went further, which is now 84

Our point of second meeting. Do you find Your patience so predominant in your
 nature

That you can let this go? Are you so gospel'd,

To pray for this good man and for his issue, Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave

And beggar'd yours for ever?

1 Mur. We are men, my liege. 90

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men;
 As hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels,
 spaniels, curs,

Shoughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are clept

All by the name of dogs. The valued file Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle, 95

The house-keeper, the hunter, every one

According to the gift which bounteous
 nature

Hath in him clos'd; whereby he does receive

Particular addition, from the bill 99

That writes them all alike; and so of men.

Now, if you have a station in the file,

Not i' th' worst rank of manhood, say't;

And I will put that business in your bosoms

Whose execution takes your enemy off,

Grapples you to the heart and love of us,

Who wear our health but sickly in his life,

Which in his death were perfect.

2 Mur. I am one, my liege,

Whom the vile blows and buffets of the
 world

Hath so incens'd that I am reckless what I do to spite the world.

1 Mur. And I another, 110

So weary with disasters, tugg'd with
 fortune,

That I would set my life on any chance,
 To mend it or be rid on't.

Macb. Both of you

Know Banquo was your enemy.

Both Mur. True, my lord.

Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance 115

That every minute of his being thrusts Against my near'st of life; and though I could

With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my
 sight,

And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not,
 For certain friends that are both his and

mine, 120
 Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his
 fall

Who I myself struck down. And thence
 it is

That I to your assistance do make love,
 Masking the business from the common eye

For sundry weighty reasons.

2 Mur. We shall, my lord, 125

Perform what you command us.

1 Mur. Though our lives—

Macb. Your spirits shine through you.

Within this hour at most,

I will advise you where to plant yourselves,
 Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' th'

time,
 The moment on't; for 't must be done to-
 night, 130

And something from the palace; always thought

That I require a clearness; and with him,
 To leave no rubs nor botches in the work,

Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
 Whose absence is no less material to me 135

Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
 Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart;

 I'll come to you anon.

Both Mur. We are resolv'd, my lord.

Macb. I'll call upon you straight ; abide within. [Exeunt Murderers.
It is concluded : Banquo, thy soul's flight
If it find heaven must find it out to-night.
[Exit.]

SCENE II. Forres. The palace.

Enter LADY MACBETH and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court ?

Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.

Lady M. Say to the King I would attend his leisure

For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content. 5
'Tis safer to be that which we destroy,
Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord ! Why do you keep alone,

Of sorriest fancies your companions making,
Using those thoughts which should indeed have died 10

With them they think on ? Things without all remedy

Should be without regard. What's done is done.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it ;

She'll close, and be herself, whilst our poor malice

Remains in danger of her former tooth. 15
But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer,

Ere we will eat our meal in fear and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible dreams
That shake us nightly. Better be with the dead,

Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to peace, 20

Than on the torture of the mind to lie
In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave ;
After life's fitful fever he sleeps well ;
Treason has done his worst ; nor steel, nor poison,

Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing, 25
Can touch him further.

Lady M. Come on.

Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks ;

Be bright and jovial among your guests to-night.

Macb. So shall I, love ; and so, I pray, be you. 29

Let your remembrance apply to Banquo ;
Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue—

Unsafe the while, that we Must lave our honours in these flattering streams,

And make our faces vizards to our hearts,

Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.

Macb. O, full of scorpions is my mind,
dear wife ! 36

Thou know'st that Banquo, and his Fleance, lives.

Lady M. But in them nature's copy's not eterne.

Macb. There's comfort yet ; they are assailable.

Then be thou jocund. Ere the bat hath flown 40

His cloister'd flight ; ere to black Hecate's summons

The shard-borne beetle with his drowsy hums

Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done

A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done ?

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck, 45

Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling night,

Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day,
And with thy bloody and invisible hand

Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond
Which keeps me pale. Light thickens, and 50

Makes wing to th' rooky wood ;

Good things of day begin to droop and drowse,

Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rouse.

Thou marvell'st at my words ; but hold thee still :

Things bad begun make strong themselves by ill. 55

So, prithee go with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Forres. The approaches to the palace.

Enter three Murderers.

1 Mur. But who did bid thee join with us ?

3 Mur. Macbeth.

2 Mur. He needs not our mistrust, since he delivers

Our offices, and what we have to do,
To the direction just.

1 Mur. Then stand with us.

The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day ; 5

Now spurs the lated traveller apace
To gain the timely inn, and near approaches

The subject of our watch.

3 Mur. Hark ! I hear horses.
Ban. [Within] Give us a light there, ho !

2 Mur. Then 'tis he ; the rest
That are within the note of expectation 10

Already are i' th' court.

1 Mur. His horses go about.

3 Mur. Almost a mile ; but he does usually,

So all men do, from hence to th' palace gate
Make it their walk.

Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE with a torch.

2 Mur. A light, a light !

3 Mur. 'Tis he.

1 Mur. Stand to 't.

Ban. It will be rain to-night.

1 Mur. Let it come down.

[Stabs Banquo.]

Ban. O, treachery ! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly.

Thou mayst revenge. O slave !

[Dies. Fleance escapes.]

3 Mur. Who did strike out the light ?

1 Mur. Was't not the way ?

3 Mur. There's but one down ; the son
is fled.

2 Mur. We have lost
Best half of our affair.

1 Mur. Well, let's away,
And say how much is done. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Forres. The palace.

Banquet prepar'd. Enter MACBETH, LADY MACBETH, ROSS, LENNOX, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees, sit
down.

At first and last the hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your Majesty.

Macb. Our self will mingle with society
And play the humble host.

Our hostess keeps her state ; but in best
time

We will require her welcome.

Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends ;

For my heart speaks they are welcome.

Enter First Murderer to the door.

Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks.

Both sides are even ; here I'll sit i' th' midst.

Be large in mirth ; anon we'll drink a measure

The table round. [Going to the door.]
There's blood upon thy face.

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.

Macb. 'Tis better thee without than he within.

Is he despatch'd ?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut ;
That I did for him.

Macb. Thou art the best o' th' cut-
throats ;

Yet he's good that did the like for Fleance.
If thou didst it, thou art the nonpareil.

Mur. Most royal sir—Fleance is 'scap'd.

Macb. Then comes my fit again. I had else been perfect,

Whole as the marble, founded as the rock,
As broad and general as the casing air,
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in

To saucy doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe ?

Mur. Ay, my good lord. Safe in a ditch
he bides,

With twenty trenched gashes on his head,
The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that.

There the grown serpent lies ; the worm
that's fled

Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for th' present. Get thee gone ;

to-morrow

We'll hear, ourselves, again.

[Exit Murderer.]

Lady M. My royal lord,
You do not give the cheer ; the feast is sold

That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making,

'Tis given with welcome. To feed were best
at home :

From thence the sauce to meat is ceremony ;
Meeting were bare without it.

Enter the Ghost of BANQUO and sits in Macbeth's place.

Macb. Sweet remembrancer !
Now good digestion wait on appetite,

And health on both !

Len. May't please your Highness sit ?

Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd,

Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present ;

Who may I rather challenge for unkindness
Than pity for mischance.

Ross. His absence, sir, Lays blame upon his promise. Please 't your Highness

To grace us with your royal company.

Macb. The table 's full.

Len. Here is a place reserv'd, sir.

Macb. Where ?

Len. Here, my good lord.

What is't that moves your Highness ?

Macb. Which of you have done this ?

Lords. What, my good lord ?

Macb. Thou canst not say I did it ; never shake

Thy gory locks at me.

Ross. Gentlemen, rise ; his Highness is not well.

Lady M. Sit, worthy friends. My lord is
